METAMORPHOSIS OF ITALIANS

Contrast of Newly Arrived Immigrant and Their Americanized Relations.

There was a meeting outside the barge office. A batch of immigrants had come in, and Giulia and her man were in waiting to receive some newly arrived relatives. Giulia was brave in her finest and most gorgeous raiment, combining a reckless love of bright colors with an ardent desire to look American. Her hat was a marvel of Third avenue millinery. Her bright dress was after the most approved autumn model, always, of course, from the Third avenue standpoint, and the pendant earrings, great yellow brooch, and jingling bracelets were dazzling to behold. To crown all, and as an irresistible finish, she had squeezed her plump hands into a pair of yellow kid gloves, momentarily threatening to burst. Pietro's scarlet necktie, generous expanse of shirt front, low-cut mottled waistcoat, and highly gilded watch chain limited his powers of self-adornment, but his little wife cheerfully made up for all he lacked. Shrill cries of "Ecco! Ecco!" turned the dull eyes of three persons in their direction, and, extricating themselves from the excited crowd, they withdrew to contemplate each other at their leisure. The contrast was painful on one side, pathetically ludicrous on the other. Francisco and his sisters gazed blankly at their changed and resplendent relations. The man had on tight breeches of homespun, a gray flannel shirt with a red cotton handkerchief knotted at the throat, and was a picturesque specimen of Tuscan manhood. The women were bare-headed; covert glances had been exchanged over Giulia's startling headgear. They wore huge, roughly cobbled boots, and short petticoats displaying striped blue and yellow stockings, and knit worsted shawls of variegated colors were tightly drawn about the shoulders and fastened at the opened throat with monstrous coral brooches, the crowning glory of their attire. But Giulia! Truly she was a queen in comparison! Never mind! Americanisms are quickly acquired, and if the brother is lucky six months may see their metamorphosis. —New York Sun.

SAMPLES OF DUTCH SPIRIT.

Let me here tell you two anecdotes showing the spirit of the Dutch, says the London Post. One comes from Newcastle where the Dutch reformed church is too small for the congregation. At the beginning of the year subscriptions were collected for a new church, and some £500 was raised, principally from Englishmen. An architect was employed, tenders were invited and a contractor was selected. Suddenly the contract was suspended. There was a town hall in Newcastle, built in commemoration of the diamond jubilee, and one of the elders announced that after the war the town hall would be the Dutch reformed church. You cannot persuade a Dutchman that the Transvaal will be beaten. An old man, also in Newcastle, was being warned of the might of England. He was told that 30,000 troops would be sent out. "We will shoot them all," he said. He was told that England would continue to send 30,000 after 30,000 for twelve years if need were. "Allemaghte," he replied, "am I to go on shooting Englishmen for twelve years?" That is the spirit, and, as I have already observed, the spirit is inflamed by the women, who are infinitely more bitter than the men. Olive Schreiner may talk about the fusion of races. No matter the race of man she marries, a Dutch woman always brings forth Dutch children.

This Snug Throne Went Begging.

(From the Youth's Companion.)

Queen Victoria's sons have inherited from their father, the Prince Consort, a pretty principality and throne in Germany. This is Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, a duchy with a territory of about 750 square miles—three-fourths of the area of Rhode Island—and a population exceeding 200,000. It is not a stronghold of power and influence, but a good deal of money goes with it, and makes it worth while to keep it in the family. The prince of Wales renounced his rights to the duchy because he was heir to the English throne. The duke of Edinburgh accepted the inheritance, but he has no son to succeed him. The duke of Connaught was the next in line, but he and his son have renounced their rights. The heir to the throne is the son of the late duke of Albany, the queen's fourth son. He is a schoolboy, in his fifteenth year, and has no prospects in England. He will now go to Germany to finish his education, and will cease to be an English prince. He will owe allegiance to the German emperor, and will probably serve his time in the army. The inheritance has been arranged by Queen Victoria, whose will is law in the English royal family. She has provided for one of her favorite grandsons a snug and comfortable little throne on the continent, where he will have little to do, and where his income will be large.

TALK IS NOT CHEAP.

The Long-Distance Telephone Contradicts the Old Saying.

The telephone contradicts the saying that talk is cheap, says the New York Commercial Advertiser. Political candidates often find out the dearness of talk; but the ordinary citizen is most impressed with it when he tries to 'phone over 1,000 miles of wire. The recently completed line to Kansas City, for example, costs $2 a minute, and even 2 cents a minute, the ordinary rate for short distances, is more than it costs to have a cab standing outside the door while one pays a call—in this case very appropriately called "paying" a call. A frugal man, if ever the force of circumstances contrives to have him pay such a call, loses much of the pleasure of the visit, especially those effective pauses the novelists love to dwell on, by the thought of the cab outside with its growing unearned increment. And similarly, whether it be for the same reasons or because of the hypnotizing effect of the little box one speaks into, one can take no pleasure in talking socially through a telephone with a friend, even if one has not seen him for a year or two. However, in a business way, talking through a 'phone, even at $2 a minute, is far cheaper in time and money than going to the other end of the wire, so talk may be considered relatively cheap, after all.

STRICTLY DEFINITIVE.

She Gave Two Illustrations of the Words' Meanings.

Mrs. May Wright Sewall, the new president of the International Council of Women, became generally known a few years ago through her participation in the general federation of women's clubs, which resulted in the international council, says the Philadelphia Post. She has frequently represented American women abroad and has long been a prominent figure in the important national conventions. Mrs. Sewall, who is the head of a classical school for girls in Indianapolis, could contribute a readable sequel to English as she is taught, for the pupils in a girls' classical school are not above the amusing blunders which characterize the efforts of their young sisters in the public schools. On one occasion Mrs. Sewall was instructing a class in physics. Force was the subject, and she made plain to the girls the difference between the centrifugal and centripetal force. "Centrifugal," said Mrs. Sewall, "is a force whose direction is from the center, and centripetal force is a force whose direction is toward the center. Do you all understand that?" The class chorused assent. "Now, will some girl give me an illustration?" continued Mrs. Sewall. "The domestic virtues are centripetal," replied a small girl, "because they keep a man in the center of his home, and a centrifugal force is —is—well, a saloon is a centrifugal force."

IN SOUTH AFRICA.

It is more than doubtful if any of the soldiers in South Africa have seen as much actual war service as Melton Prior, who goes out as a war correspondent. In that capacity he is a veteran of twenty-one campaigns. During the fifteen years beginning in 1872 he saw actual fighting in every year but one. In addition, it is not likely that any officer in Sir Redvers Buller's command has as thorough a knowledge of South Africa as this same noncombatant. Mr. Prior went all through the Boer war of 1881 and in addition has been at the front during Kaffir, Zulu and Basuto wars in South Africa. He has been twice around the world, has explored Iceland, and knows all Europe as most men know the square on which they live. In addition to being an accomplished writer Mr. Prior is a talented artist. He represents in South Africa the oldest illustrated paper in the world.

MELTON PRIOR.

No Frogs' Legs.

Great quantities of crabs and lobsters are annually canned in Russia, yet oysters are in little favor, and frogs' legs are regarded with horror. A woman who sold large quantities of crabs, upon being asked for some frogs' legs, replied that she "would not touch one of the horrid things for a ruble." Wherever there is water in Russia the frogs abound in such quantities that one is reminded of the noblemen of other days who used to send their slaves out to beat the marshes, so that they could sleep. Russians never eat rabbits, as they say they nest with rats, nor will they touch snails or turtles, which are found in great quantities all over the country. Only the aristocrats eat kidneys, and then only those of the sheep or lamb. Goose flesh is little esteemed, though the fat is used for culinary purposes.

Evolution of Ketchup.

One of the trials of our younger days was to spell the name of the sauce that was and still is pronounced "ketchup." Such as had mastered "c-a-t-s-u-p" were on the top shelf of culture. From catsup we filtered down to katsup, then to catchup and finally to ketchup. A man over in New Jersey made a million at bottling tomatoes, and married his daughter to a real prince. Now comes along a man up in the interior of the Empire state of New York who offers "grape catchup" as the finest modern relish. It is made from "selected Catawba grapes," and beats the old-fashioned home-made tomato catsup to death.—New York Press.

NEXT YEAR'S NEWS.

An Almanac Which Predicts Nothing but Dire Things.

The stars in their courses appear singularly determined to fight against the well being of our planet at the close of this wonderful century, and but for the faint belief that prophets sometimes remain to bless those whom they come to curse readers of Zadkiel's almanac for 1900 might well consider the advisability of immediately following the desperate example of Horace Walpole's lady, who, it will be remembered, had made up her mind that when the end of the world arrived she would set out for China, says the London Globe. January opens happily, but, like a fair deceiver, this good nature is not to last. Early in the month there are to be "startling fluctuations on change." In February things grow worse. Destructive fires will be numerous, accidents rife; there will be trouble in the Bombay presidency, and in Bulgaria and Macedonia there are to be "violent outbreaks." During March insanity will be "more than usually prevalent" in America. Greece is threatened in April. Religious disputants are to be hard at it in May. June is to witness avenging anarchism in Austria, Germany, Russia, Turkey and Greece. Spain is to have her turn in July; and what is left of her, together with Italy and France, is to be shaken by earthquake in August. The sultan is to be visited with rebellion in September and France and Italy are to feel the scourging power of war in October. Colonial difficulties for England and disturbance in France, Italy, Afghanistan and Persia mark the passing of November, and December concludes with more trouble for the sultan, fires and public excitement in Paris and a danger of railway accidents in England. Surely after all this the twentieth century must come in like a lamb.

Royal Dress Allowances.

People sometimes wonder what sum is put aside for dress by the daughters of royal houses. An interesting fashion writer tells us that before her marriage the Duchess of Fife had a very small dress allowance—about $1,500 a year. Besides yachting and everyday dresses and all the usual costumes required by a girl of the upper class, royal princesses have also to wear the costly and elaborate dresses which their rank demands at the weddings of their near relations. They are, however, fortunate in having stores of beautiful laces, priceless furs and marvelous jewels, all of which can be used again and again. On the whole, it may be asserted that a frugal princess may spend as little as $5,000 a year on her dress, while her more wealthy and extravagant sister may find her dress bills amount to ten times that sum. Age has nothing to do with the matter, for the Queen of Italy spends far more than does her beautiful young daughter-in-law, the Crown Princess of Naples. The Empress of Russia, who, more than any other European Princess is able to indulge her wildest fancies, dresses with the greatest simplicity. In the daytime she mostly wears tailor-made coats and skirts and in the evening favors the purest white materials.

A Fatal Error.

Every engaged girl makes the mistake of imagining that she now has him too secure to be scared away by appearing in curl papers.

BOER ARTILLERY IS ACTIVE.

British Camps at Ladysmith and Other Points Shelled.

RESULTS NOT YET KNOWN.

Sir George White Sends Word He Can Hold Out Two Months—Methuen Says He Is Safe—Rumor That Lord Salisbury Is to Retire.

London, Dec. 30.—Ladysmith was heavily bombarded again Wednesday. The results are as yet unknown, but the report that Sir George S. White is supplied with two months' rations and has improved his field fortifications materially, relieves some of the fears regarding the safety of the besieged town. Yet no one need be much surprised if the news comes that Ladysmith has fallen.

Methuen's camp was also bombarded on Tuesday night, but no casualties are reported. Lord Methuen claims that he has plenty of food, but intimates that the Boers' assumption of the defensive, by bringing long-range guns to bear on his camp, is somewhat annoying.

In spite of Col. Baden-Powell's clever notes to the Boer general, reports indicate that the Boer shells are becoming increasingly dangerous. The fall of Mafeking would not be surprising either.

In view of the apparent supineness of the British commanders in preventing the daily strengthening and extending of the Boer positions along the Tugela and Modder rivers, which are now considered to be practically impregnable, many experts here are coming to the conclusion that the British have given up the idea of carrying these positions by assault, and will await the transport and cavalry required to give their forces the necessary mobility, when they hope to be in a position to besiege the Boers in their respective Plevnas, while Gen. Roberts carries out the original plan of campaign, that of advancing straight north on [illegible]fontein, the other generals [illegible] sufficient mobile troops to [illegible] goals by circuitous routes. [illegible] nothing in the official or [illegible]est independent reports to indicate that the beleaguered garrisons are in any special straits calling for immediate relief. The latest advices from Kimberley, where a shortage is most feared, report plenty of food.

London, Dec. 30.—A correspondent of the Standard at Lourenco Marques says:

"Delagoa bay is the residence of Herr Pott, a Hollander, who is consul general for the Transvaal and consul for the Netherlands. Pott is the principal medium between Pretoria and Dr. Leyds in Europe. He controls the Netherlands railway through the Transvaal and is the head of the Transvaal customs office. He is also head of the Dutch East Africa company and has the ear of the Portuguese governor as well as the chief of each department.

"It is openly asserted that Pott has a private wire to the frontier and knows twenty-four hours before others what is happening. About him gather all the other consuls, the Portuguese officials and the German forwarding agents.

"If Delagoa bay is closed the Boers will retaliate by raiding Portuguese territory."

Boers Were Ready to Quit.

Cape Town, Dec. 29.—Col. Reesard, commanding the Canadian contingent of troops, is to join the staff of Gen. Buller, all the members of which are proceeding to Natal, indicating that Gen. Buller's sphere will shortly be confined to Natal.

A man named Green, a former sergeant-major of the British balloon department, is among the Boer prisoners captured at Magersfontein. Green, who deserted from Aldershot in 1893, admitted that he had been some time in the service of the Boers and had instructed them in trenching. He says there were 23,000 Boers at Magersfontein, 21,000 of whom were engaged the day of the battle. The Boer losses, he also asserts, were very heavy, the trenches being full of dead. Breen further declares that if the attack had been pressed the Boers would have yielded. He says the Boer horses have to be taken to the Modder river, as water is scarce at Magersfontein.

Durban, Natal, Dec. 29.—Harry Escombe, former premier of Natal, died suddenly on the street this afternoon.

Lord Salisbury May Retire.

London, Dec. 30.—The announcement that the chief private secretary of the prime minister is going to the front as a volunteer has led to a revival of the rumor that Lord Salisbury is soon to retire. Some correspondents of provincial papers are making much of the story. One insists that the premier intended to retire early in the next year, and discussed the matter with the pueen, but decided to postpone his withdrawal when the Transvaal trouble was imminent, and that he will remain at the head of the cabinet now until the end of the war, but will certainly leave, says the correspondent, before another apeal is made to the country. The duke of Devonshire is picked as his most probable successor.

War Council in Paris.

Paris, Dec. 30.—There was a long conference at the Elysee Thursday between President Loubet, Premier Waldeck-Rousseau, and the ministers of war, marine and the colonies relative to the necessary protective measures for the defense of the coasts and the colonies. The conference is a hint that France is getting ready for any eventualities growing out of the South African war or the ratification of the English-German convention. Capt. Demanche has received orders to start for the Transvaal to follow the Boer army for the purpose of making military observations.

Berlin, Dec. 30.—The German press continues to comment upon the war in South Africa. The Militair Wochenblatt, the military organ, contains a severe criticism by a high officer, in which the writer claims that hitherto Boers, both leaders and men, have proved far more efficient in every way than the British. The National Zeitung publishes a similarly severe article. The Kreuz Zeitung says editorially: "The best solution for Germany would be a peace guaranteeing the Boers their independence and securing the future—that is, creating a state whose frontier touches the sea, in order to enable it to adapt itself to the new times upon which Africa is entering. That must be the policy of the Boers. We do not desire the British to be expelled wholly from Africa, but we do not see the necessity for making the entire African continent British. The ideas of Cecil Rhodes will split upon the rock of Boer courage."

Willing to Accept Assistance.

London, Dec. 30.—The British government now evinces a marked change from its attitude in the early stages of the war and shows a disposition to accept assistance from any quarter. The imperial yeomanry committee has issued a statement to the effect that the government considers the formation and dispatch of yeomanry as one of the most pressing needs of the situation and has intimated that it is now prepared to accept from 8,000 to 10,000 yeomanry, instead of the 3,000 originally asked for. It is expected the first contingent of 1,000 will sail about the middle of January.

Kruger Now Confident.

Durban, Natal, Dec. 23.—Winston Churchill, on arriving here after his escape from the Boers, received a tremendous ovation. He says that from conversations with members of the Transvaal executive at Pretoria he learned that the Boers began the war with trepidation, but that President Kruger is now confident Great Britain will soon sue for peace.

May Patrol the Atlantic.

Halifax, N. S., Dec. 30.—Great Britain is apparently preparing to patrol the Atlantic. One of the officials of the navy yard here says arrangements are being made for the dispatch of at least two vessels to do patrol duty on the south and north Atlantic coast. The cruisers will sail immediately after receipt of final orders.

Parliament Will Meet Feb. 1.

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 30.—It is officially announced that parliament has been called for Feb. 1. The principal business will be the voting of money for the military contingents sent to South Africa, and the adoption of motions indorsing the action of the government.

Effect of Lyddite Shells.

Chieveley, Dec. 30.—The naval guns continue the bombardment of the Boer trenches and advanced pickets are able to watch the effect from the Chieveley camp. In several trenches previously filled with Boers, after lyddite shells are dropped, the men are rendered lifeless.

What War Will Cost.

London, Dec. 30.—It is now estimated that the war will cost at least £60,000,000 ($300,000,000), and it is suggested that the sinking fund of the national debt should be suspended for five or six years in order to defray the cost.

Lord Roberts at Madeira.

Funchall, Madeira, Dec. 30.—The Dunotter Castle, with Lord Roberts and Kitchener on board, has arrived here. All well. Gen. Roberts is in improved health and spirits. He expects to arrive at Cape Town Jan. 10 or 11.

Asks Berlin for Funds.

Berlin, Dec. 30.—The Johannesburg committee representing the families of the members of the German legion fighting with the Boers against the British publishes an urgent call for financial assistance.

Gov. Mount Denounces Trusts.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 30.—Gov. Mount, in a speech before the Indiana Hotel-Keepers' association, denounced trusts. "I am in favor," said he, "of removing all tariff protection from such industries as may combine to destroy competition." Gov. Mount said the argument that trusts cheapen articles is misleading. He took the case of the Standard Oil company, and held that great corporations had not been beneficial. Another potent danger to the public weal, he said, is the political influence of those great aggregations of capital.

Illinois State Horticultural Election.

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 30.—The State Horticultural society adjourned Thursday after re-electing the following officers: President, Henry M. Dunlap, Savoy; vice-president, H. A. Aldrich, Neoga; secretary, L. R. Bryant, Princeton; treasurer, J. W. Stanton, Richview.

Nation Plans More Deposits.

Washington, Dec. 30.—The secretary of the treasury has designated several additional national banks as government depositories to receive internal revenue receipts, and, it is said, will continue to do so until the total sum so deposited amounts to $30,000,000 or $40,000,000.

Claims of Gear Managers.

Des Moines, Iowa, Dec. 30.—The Gear managers in the senatorial fight here have issued an official statement in which they claim seventy-six votes in the joint caucus. Fifty-nine votes will nominate.

MINERS SEEK HIGHER WAGES

General Demand to Be Made at National Convention.

OFFICERS MAY BE CHANGED.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 30.—At the national convention of the United Mine Workers of America, which meets here Jan. 15, there will be a candidate against John Mitchell for president. Miles Daugherty of Shamokin, Pa., is the man. The following candidates are in the field for vice-presidents: William D. Van Horne, Terre Haute, Ind.; John P. Reese, Albia, Iowa; John Fahy, Pottsville, Pa.; William H. Raney, Delcarbo, Ind.; W. R. Cassado, Pine Knot, Ky.; John H. Morgan, Diamond, Ind.; W. B. Kissinger, Central City, Ky.; Frances Farrell, Scranton, Pa.; William Clelland, Clark City, Ill.

Secretary W. C. Pearce will find opposition in H. J. Short of Knightsville, Ind. There are scores of candidates for membership in the executive board and for the auditorship and other offices. Under the rules of the order all candidates must be known and their names sent two weeks in advance to every local order, which instructs its delegates how to vote in the convention. By this means electioneering is avoided, and the delegates simply follow instructions.

Delegates from all the district organizations are still here in secret session, and it is now believed here the meeting is for the purpose of making a general demand for higher wages to be backed up by the entire organization. It is given out that it is only to arrange for the national convention.

IS NO REASON FOR PROTEST.

Complications Between America and Britain Over Seizure Unlikely.

New York, Dec. 30.—Some misapprehension appears to have arisen out of the cabled reports of the seizure by the British government of flour sold in New York and consigned to Delagoa bay. I was said at first that flour was not ordinarily considered contraband of war, and that protest might issue from this government against such an act by the British imperial authorities. Then a story gained currency that the flour was really not American property, but was owned by British subjects in South Africa, who had bought it here and paid for it; that it was transported in British ships by British forwarding and transportation agents. It is apparent from the conversation of shipping agents downtown that there is no likelihood of any diplomatic protest from this government, and no reason for it, but rather that if this government is called upon to act at all it may be in the way of seeing that remuneration is meted to the American sellers of the merchandise, if it shall appear that they are still legally the owners of it.

Will Make Fight Upon Bynum.

Washington, Dec. 30.—The Post says: "In a few days charges will be filed before the finance committee of the senate against the confirmation of ex-Representative William D. Bynum of Indiana as democratic appointee for the New York board of appraisers. The minority of that committee are determined to resist the installment of Mr. Bynum in that position. They will do so on the ground that he is not a democrat, but has openly affiliated himself with the republican party."

Demands $100,000 Damages.

Milwaukee, Dec. 30.—Suit has been brought by Charles F. Pfister against the Indianapolis Press and the Milwaukee Sentinel. Damages to the amount of $100,000 are claimed. The suit grows out of an article relating to the street railway franchise fight published in the Indianapolis paper reflecting on Mr. Pfister and Mr. Payne, which article was reprinted in the Sentinel. It was stated today that Mr. Payne would also bring suit for the same amount as demanded by Mr. Pfister.

Aurora Man Chosen President.

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 29.—At Thursday's session of Illinois State Teachers' association the committee on nominations reported the following officers for the ensuing year, and the report was adopted: President, A. V. Greeman, Aurora; first vice-president, F. N. Tracy, Kankakee; second vice-president, William M. Roberts, Chicago; third vice-president, J. E. Bangs, Pontiac; secretary, Joel M. Bowlby, Carbondale; treasurer, William R. Hatfield, Pittsfield.

Fishery Troubles May Arise.

St. John's, N. F., Dec. 30.—The modus vivendi respecting the Newfoundland shore lobster fishery will expire Dec. 31. Serious trouble may arise on the coast if this agreement is not renewed. The British government is now anxious regarding the action the colonial authorities propose to take. It is likely that the colony will agree to compromise the question in view of the British difficulties in South Africa.

Votes for Civic Ownership.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 30.—In special session Thursday the common council listened to a message from Mayor Maybury advocating the passage of a resolution requesting the legislature to submit an amendment to the constitution permitting municipalities to own and operate street car lines. Then the resolution was passed by a vote of 26 to 3.

STATUS OF DELAGOA BAY.

Berlin Story Is Both Affirmed and Denied.

Berlin, Dec. 30.—The semi-official telegraph agency has made little impression with its sweeping denial of the Lokal Anzeiger's story that the Portuguese colonies had been divided between Germany and Great Britain under a recent secret treaty.

It is quite possible that the agency is right in declaring the agreement an arbitrary and fictitious combination. This could be said of any story not correct in every detail.

Well-informed circles in Berlin doubt, however, whether Germany will consent to the publication of the treaty before the present war in South Africa is ended, as public sentiment here does not approve of German connivance at the seizure of Delagoa bay for war purposes.

Washington, Dec. 29.—Officials of the state department say they have absolutely no trustworthy information in regard to the movements of Great Britain and Germany, looking towards the partition of the Portuguese territory in South Africa. They have taken it for granted the British would secure the Portuguese dominion south of Zambesi, not by a seizure, but by virtue of the old option, under which they could secure possession of Delagoa bay.

The state department is inclined to view the reports from Berlin as somewhat exaggerated, but, at the same time, it believed Germany will offer no opposition to the British occupation of the south end of Portuguese Africa.

London, Dec. 29.—The Standard says no credit should be given to the rumor from Berlin of a secret Anglo-German-Portuguese treaty for the partition of the colonies of Portugal.

Creditors Will Get Nothing.

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 29.—The committee appointed by creditors to investigate the accounts of Stahl & Straub, brokers, who failed Nov. 29, report that not a dollar's worth of available resources were found. The total liabilities amount to $1,221,308 and the total assets $927,478, leaving a deficiency of $293,829. These figures mean that creditors, the banks only excepted, can never hope to realize a dollar on the amounts due them from the firm.

Indiana Teachers Elect.

Indianapolis, Dec. 29.—The Indiana State Teachers' association Thursday elected officers as follows for the ensuing year: President, Robert I. Hamilton, Huntington; chairman executive committee, F. P. Hart, Covington; permanent secretary and treasurer, J. R. Hart, Lebanon; recording secretary, Miss Lelia Vaught, Martinsville. Vice presidents and an executive committee were also elected.

Fire in Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Dec. 29.—The three-story building on Washington street, between Meridian and Illinois streets, occupied by Brosnan Brothers, dry goods, was gutted by fire Thursday. The firm loses about $65,000, two-thirds of which is covered by insurance. The building was owned by Edward Sc[illegible]mann and was damaged to the ex[illegible] of several thousand dollars.

Russia Issues New Notes.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 29.—An imperial decree, just made public, directs the issue of two new series of notes, bearing 3 per cent interest, and dated Jan. 2, 1900, in substitution for notes of the imperial bank amounting to 55,516,000 roubles, which are subject to redemption. While the treasurer and state bank will receive the new notes for all payments, the public will not be bound to accept them.

Congress of India Objects.

Bombay, Dec. 30.—The Indian congress has declared its dissatisfaction with the currency measures of the government, alleging that they have the effect of depreciating the value of the savings of the masses, virtually enhancing rents and indebtedness and injuriously affecting manufacturers.

Transport Tartar Arrives Safely.

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 30.—After a tempestuous voyage of one month's duration, at one time narrowly escaping being wrecked, the transport Tartar came into port Thursday from Manila. The Tartar left Manila Nov. 28. It was roughly used by the weather much of the way.

Civil War in New Guinea.

Victoria, B. C., Dec. 29.—News has been received by the steamer Aorangi of a bloody civil war which has been raging among the natives of Kiriwani, New Guinea. In the fighting the head chief was defeated and eleven villages in all were destroyed, with heavy slaughter.

MAKING THE OCEANS.

GREAT DESERTS WILL YET BE FLOODED.

How a Curious Law of Nature Works Out—The End of the Next Century Will Probably See the Great Sahara Sea.

London Mail: Few persons realize how completely of late years the surface aspect of this weazened old globe of ours has been altered and improved. The world of today, in fact, differs from the world of our ancestors, much as a society lady, in all the glory of fold and frill and furbelow, differs from her savage sister running wild in pestilential woods. As art has transformed the one, so it has the other. Only the "Mme. Rachael", who has made the earth, if not exactly "beautiful forever," at least a pleasant and healthful place wherein to dwell, is no charlatan with a dray-load of cosmetics and a glib tongue, but a civil engineer, owning nothing more harmful than a few mysterious-looking instruments and a measuring tape. And the marvel of it all is this—that what has been done is but an infinitesimal fraction of that which may, and doubtless will, be done. Who can doubt, for instance, that the great Sahara desert—that mole upon the world's face—will one day be but a memory? It was an inland sea once. It would not be a very difficult matter to convert it into one again. A canal sixty miles long, connecting with the Atlantic the vast depression which runs close up to the coast nearly midway between the twentieth and thirtieth parallels of latitude, would do the business beautifully. The water would not, of course, cover the entire surface of the desert. Here and there are portions lying above sea level. These would become the islands of the new Sahara ocean. What would be the results that would ensue upon this stupendous transformation? Some would be good, and some bad. Among the latter may be mentioned the probable destruction of the vineyards of southern Europe, which depend for their existence upon the warm, dry winds from the great African desert. As some compensation for this, however, the mercantile marines of the nations affected would be enabled to gain immediate and easy access to vast regions now given over to barbarism, and a series of more or less flourishing seaport towns would spring up along the southern borders of Morocco and Algeria, where the western watershed of the Nile sinks into the desert, and on the northern frontier of the Congo Free state. In a similar manner the greater portion of the central Australian desert, covering an area of fully 1,000,000 square miles, might be flooded. The island continent would then be converted into a gigantic oval dish, of which the depressed central portion would be covered with water, and only the "rim" inhabited.

BOYS WHO BECAME FAMOUS.

In Sweden a boy fell out of a window and was picked up severely hurt, but with tightened lips he kept back the cry of pain. King Gustavus Adolphus, who saw the accident, prophesied that the boy who had such self-control would make a man for emergencies. He was right, for the lad became the famous Gen. Bauer.

An Italian woman fell into a dock and would have been drowned but for the courage of a boy who sprang in after her and managed to keep her afloat till a boat came to the rescue. The spectators admired the boy's promptness and kindness of heart, but commented on his recklessness, which, they said, might have cost him his life. The boy was Garibaldi, and in considering his life one finds that these were his characteristics all through. He was so alert that no one could tell when he would make an attack with his red-shirted soldiers; so brave and magnanimous that the world rang with his praises; and withal so indiscreet as to make his fellow-patriots wish he were in Guinea.

A little boy used to crush flowers to obtain their color, and would then paint all sorts of pictures on the white walls of his father's cottage in the Tyrol. He became known to the world later on as the great artist Titian.

From the Argonaut: A grand wedding was being solemnized at St. Peter's, Eaton square, London. On each side of the strip of carpet that extended from the church door to the curb was a crowd of people watching the guests arrive. In the wake of a procession of equipages of the most aristocratic and well appointed character came a four-wheeled cab, dingy and disreputable beyond belief. "Here, here!" shouted the policeman in charge, "you can't stop here! We're waiting for the bishop of ——." The cabman regarded the officer with a triumphant leer, as he climbed down from his seat and threw a ragged blanket over his skeleton steed. "It's all right, guv'nor," he said. "I've got the old buffer inside!"

Built the Wall as Per Instructions.

Anxious to preserve the famous castle of the O'Neills, on the Castlereagh hills, near Belffast, the late Marquis of Downshire directed his land steward to have a wall built around the ancient and historic fortress. The order was carried out and a large circular wall was built around the apex of the hill. The marquis was informed that the work was done, and he rode out to see how the ruins looked. He found the wall, but no castle. The contractor had utilized the ruins of the castle to build the preserving wall.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. HIS WORD OF HONOR.

A Tale of the Blue and the Gray.

BY E. WERNER.

Copyright, 1894, by Robert Bonner's Sons.

CHAPTER I.

A Soldier's Honor.

The rays of the noonday sun were beating down with the scorching glow known only to the South. In the hot, quivering air every object seemed steeped in radiant light, and even the forest afforded no coolness, for it, too, was pervaded by the sultry atmosphere, and beneath the huge trees the burning breath of noon was still felt.

Under one of these trees, whose branches, heavy with foliage, extended a long distance, two young men had flung themselves on the ground, apparently for a short rest.

Both wore the uniform of the Union army, one being a lieutenant and the other a surgeon. The latter, who had a slender figure somewhat below the middle height, expressive features and dark hair, lay in a comfortable attitude on the turf, listening calmly to his companion, who had started up and was pacing hurriedly to and fro. The powerful form, thick, fair hair and blue eyes unmistakably revealed German ancestry; but a cloud shadowed the frank, youthful face, and the voice trembled with passionate emotion.

"I must go, cost what it may! Since I knew that Harrison and his daughter were on the plantation, I have had no rest. Say what you please, John, I am going!"

"My dear William, you are on the eve of doing a very foolish thing," said the surgeon, without changing his comfortable position. "I advise you, as a friend, to drop it; the affair may be your death."

"What do I care for that! Certainty I will have at any cost. A brisk ride will bring me there in two hours, and I can return before sunset. I'll venture it at any peril."

"And risk a bullet through your brain. You have probably forgotten that we are engaged in a war and that it is desertion for an officer to be absent from his regiment without leave. Court-martials are sometimes disagreeable in such cases, and it would be unfortunate if Lieutenant Roland should go out of the world by lynch-law."

The sarcasm of these words succeeded in producing an impression where sensible arguments might have failed. William Roland started and answered more quietly:

"What fancy have you taken into your head? Of course, I don't mean to go without leave. The colonel will not refuse it; we are doing nothing here. I must see and speak to Florence once more, even though I hazard my life to do it!"

"You lovers are always ready to risk your lives," said the young surgeon, carelessly. "Your feelings are forever at the boiling point. A strange condition of affairs. Let me feel your pulse!"

"Cease this jesting!" cried William, furiously. "Can't you curb your spirit of mockery even here? But how could I expect sympathy or appreciation from you where affairs of the heart are concerned!"

"From the heartless American!" retorted John. "Of course, heart and feeling are the prerogatives of the German. You have taken out a patent on them, and consider yourselves actually insulted if other people claim a little of the article, too. Here we are back again at the old point of dispute, over which we wrangled sufficiently as boys—the honor of our different nationalities."

"In which you usually came off worst."

"Yes; you had an abominable way of cudgeling German supremacy into me; and as you were the stronger, I generally yielded to your palpable arguments. But when there was anything which required brains and reflection, John Maxwell was summoned. Then you submitted to my authority, and, at the utmost, appeared on the scene when there was a drubbing to be given. Don't look so gloomy, Will; let us discuss the matter sensibly. What do you really expect to accomplish by this wild ride into the enemy's country? You don't even know whether Miss Harrison wishes to see you—whether she did not agree when her father dismissed you so unceremoniously."

"No, no!" William impetuously retorted. "Florence has been deceived—forced; she has not received any of my letters, as I have not had a single line from her. Her father was always opposed to our engagement; we fairly extorted his consent. He gave it reluctantly, and promptly availed himself of the excuse afforded by the war to recall his promise."

"Well, you can hardly blame him! He, a secessionist and slave-baron, and you with your humanistic ideas! You harmonize like fire and water, and you were always a thorn in the flesh of his nephew, the charming Edward. You stole from under his very eyes the wife on whom he had set his heart. He'll never forgive you. Conditions were imposed at the outbreak of the war?"

"Yes—shameful ones! I was to deny my convictions, desert and betray the cause I serve and fight in the ranks of the enemy against our army. I rejected the dishonorable demand as it deserved."

"With the most reckless bluntness to the millionaire and future father-in-law. The Harrisons really are not so very much to blame. You would be an extremely troublesome son-in-law. I should have considered the matter a little. Where a bride and a fortune are at stake——"

"You would have practiced treason? John, don't make yourself worse than you are. Even you would have been incapable of it."

"Who talks of treason! You merely needed to have remained passive and not fought at all, either for or against the Union; that would have been the wisest course."

"And a cowardly, pitiful one into the bargain! Am I alone to lag behind, when every one springs to arms? Let us drop the subject. Our views on this point are very widely sundered."

"They are on all points," said Maxwell, dryly. "I stick to it—this visit to the plantation is as useless as it is dangerous, but I don't flatter myself in the least with the hope of detaining you. You'll have your own way under all circumstances."

"Of course, I shall. I'm going to the colonel at once to ask for leave of absence. Will you accompany me?"

The young surgeon sighed. He was probably loath to resign his comfortable resting place, yet he rose slowly.

"I wish Colonel Burney would put you under arrest for three days, instead of giving you leave of absence," he said, emphatically. "But unfortunately, you are a favorite, and besides, it's an established fact that, if a man wants to commit a folloy, everybody hastens to help him. So let us go!"

The regiment to which the young men belonged was stationed in the next village. After severe battles and arduous marches a short respite had been granted, but the men were to move in a few days. Constant bustle pervaded the usually quiet hamlet and was specially noticeable around the colonel's quarters. When Roland and Maxwell entered, they found several officers there. The commander himself, a man advanced in years, with a grave but kindly face, stood among a group of his subordinates, apparently discussing something with them.

"I am glad you have come, doctor!" he said to the surgeon. "I was just going to send for you. Lieutenant Davis has reported that two of his men are ill, and the symptoms appear very grave; he fears fever, and begs to have medical assistance as soon as possible. You will ride over to the outposts."

"I'll go at once," replied Maxwell. "I hope it will prove a false alarm, as has happened several times, but we'll soon ascertain."

"WILL YOU ACCOMPANY ME?"

"Certainly. I am especially anxious to have reliable information concerning the nature of the disease. The outbreak of an epidemic would be extremely inconvenient just now. When do you expect to be back?"

"In three hours, if necessary. But I had intended to ask leave of absence until evening on account of another matter, which I should like to attend to at the same time."

"Of course, if you wish," said Burney, absently. "Only send me some good news."

"The best in my power. At any rate, there is no time to lose. I will go at once."

The colonel nodded assent, and the other officers now joined in the conversation. The subject was discussed in all its bearings. If these cases were really the first in an impending epidemic, the matter was very serious.

"Do you still persist in your resolve?" he asked, under his breath.

"Certainly. As soon as I get my leave I shall ride over."

"And perhaps be shot on the way! Good luck to you!"

"Thanks for the kind wish," said William, angrily. "Perhaps it will be fulfilled."

"Hardly. Men who, like you, are forever butting their heads against a wall, generally have uncommonly good fortune. Where the rest of us crack our skulls, they push the stone apart. Farewell, Will!"

He left the room. Doctor Maxwell did not spoil his friend by pretty speeches; that was evident. He took leave of the young officer who might "perhaps be shot on the way" as carelessly as if there was nothing in prospect save an ordinary ride. William scarcely heeded it; his mind was filled with other thoughts, and he availed himself of the first pause in the conversation to approach the colonel and request a brief private interview.

Burney opened the door of a small room adjoining, and the two men entered.

"Well, Lieutenant Roland, have you anything important to ask?" said the colonel, when they were alone.

"I merely wished to request a short leave of absence," replied the young man, with apparent calmness. "There is a family matter to be arranged which is of the utmost importance to me."

"And which you can arrange while on the march?"

"At least I hope so. I intend to visit relatives who live on a plantation only a few miles from here. I have just learned that I was in their immediate neighborhood."

The request was not singular, and was easily granted, yet something in the young man's face attracted the colonel's attention, and he inquired:

"What is the name of the plantation you desire to visit?"

William hesitated a moment, then slowly answered:

"Springfield."

Burney started.

"Springfield? That is beyond our outposts. Are you not aware that it is in the enemy's country?"

"I know it."

"And yet you wish to go there? It won't do. I cannot permit it."

"I took a similar and far more dangerous ride a week ago on staff duty," replied William.

"That was in the service; duty required it: but this is a private affair, and I cannot permit one of my officers to risk his life for such a matter. No, Lieutenant Roland."

WHEN MEN MISS SUCCESS.

Idleness and Incompetency Keep the Business Novice Down.

Walter P. Phillips, the founder of the national newsgathering corporation known as the United Press, and the inventor of Phillips' telegraphic code, a typical, energetic American, who has put many young men in the newsgathering business, believes that the cause of failure everywhere among young business beginners lies in incompetence. Nine-tenths of the young men who are struggling for a name and place in the world are unfitted for the callings they have picked out for themselves. Besides an unlimited supply of energy and whole-heartedness in the work before him, the successful man of the future must know his business from A to Z. The next greatest drawback to success is idleness. Nothing worth while is accomplished without work, and plenty of it. Things do not happen without a cause, and behind every great life there are years of concentrated energy and tireless industry. Idleness will make any man a failure; intelligent work will land any man among the successful. It is all so simple and so trite that one hesitates to put the fact down in cold blood, and yet how few men recognize or, recognizing, live up to the axiom, that labor conquers all things! Idleness and the consciousness of incompetency should make any man ashamed of himself and drive him to do something that is worth the doing. It is within the grasp of every one to learn some one thing that will yield both pleasure and profit. Success comes only to those who seek it. The young man who is really in earnest will not have to be advised how to succeed. He may learn much by studying the failures of others, however, and he will always find, after a survey of the great legion of the unsuccessful, that two causes have brought them to their present misery—idleness and incompetency.—Saturday Evening Post.

A Boston Man Pleased.

In conversation with some friends, a prominent Boston man told of his sufferings from rheumatism and nervousness, and one of his friends gave him some advice, which will be mentioned later, and which has proven to be of incalculable value.

To successfully act on the advice, it was necessary to make a trip of over 2,000 miles, but he undertook it, and now thanks his friend for the advice, as he finds himself fully relieved of his old trouble and has returned to his home feeling able to cope with his business demands, a new man.

The advice given was to go to Hot Springs, South Dakota, and there take the baths and enjoy the finest climate of any health resort in America.

If this man was satisfied after making a long trip, those residing within a few hundred miles and similarly afflicted can certainly afford to try it, or rather can't afford to neglect to try it.

Death Of William Stille Sr.

The community was shocked last Saturday when the news came that Wm. Stille Sr. was dead. It was known that he was very sick for several days, bu few realized that the end was so near. His illness was of but a weeks duration, but the disease, inflamation of the bowels, took such a firm hold on his system that medical aid was of no avail and he passed away Friday evening.

William Stille was universally respected, as a man of honesty and integrity, and a prominent member of the German M. E. Church. He has been a resident of this county for nearly 25 years, most of this time being spent on a ferm in German township. The last few years were spent in Klemme, his health being such that he could not continue the heavy work on the farm. The funeral occured from the Germantown church at 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon, and his remains laid to rest in the Germantown cemetery. A loving wife, two sons and two daughters survive him.

The sympathy of all our readers goes out to the sorrowing relatives in their hour of bereavement. (We have been unable at this writing to give sketch of his life, but will endeavor to do so next week. Ed.)

A Splendid Offer.

All our farmer readers should take advantage of the unprecedented clubbing offer we this year make, which include with this paper, The Iowa Homestead, its Special Farmers' Institute editions, The Poultry Farmer and The Farmers' Mutual Insurance Journal. These four publications are the best of their clasr and should be in every farm home. To them we add for local, county and general news our own paper and wake the price for the five for one year $1.40. Never before was so much superior reading matter offered for so small amount of money.

The four papers named which we club with our own are well known throughout the West and commend themselves to the reader's favorable attention upon mere mention. The Homestead is the great agricultural and live stock paper of the West; The Poultry Farmer is the most practical poultry paper for the farmer published in the country; The Farmers' Mutual Insurance Journal is the special advocate of farmers' co-operative associations, and the Special Farmers' Institute editions are the most practical publications for the promotion of good farming ever published. Take advantage of this great offer. This offer is good until January 1st. Our representative will call on you soon.

NEW CHAIR CAR SERVICE.

Between Watertown, Ellsworth and Chicago via. B. C. R. & N. Ry. Commencing Sunday Nov. 19th, a free reclining chair car will be placed on trains Nos. 608 and 605 between Watertown and Chicago by the Burlington Cedar Rapids & Northern Ry. This car leaves Watertown daily, except Sunday at 11:15 a. m. arriving at Chicago 7:59 the following morning. This car runs to and from Sioux Falls Sundays, thus giving daily chair car service between Ellsworth and Chicago. Passengers going east from Chicago will have ample time to make any transfers to connect with all morning eastern trains.

These trains are very fast, and, with this new additional service, passengers can feel assured of first class accommodations. JNO. G. FARMER,

John R. Cline, the founder and first editor of the TIMES passed through Klemme last Monday evening on his way to Goodell. John is now a resident of Mitchell, S. D., and is looking for men with money to invest in cheap good land. If you want information as to crop conditions in Dakota write him at the above address, and he will give you full particulars.

George Wellemeyer and wife, of the Klemme (Iowa) TIMES, passed through Harris, on the noon passenger Tuesday, enroute for their home. They had been at Sibley to spend Christmas with editor Sage and family, of whom Mrs. Wellemeyer is the older daughter. Both Mr. and Mrs. W. are printers of more than ordinary ability and are giving the citizens of Klemme a paper that they might well feel proud of.—Harris (Iowa) Bee.

An entire regiment of soldiers is said to be en route from the Dutch colony in Sioux county to join the Boers in the Transvaal. The organizers of the force are not attempting to send the entire body to the seat of war at once, but are content to ship them out three or four at a time by differt routes. The recruits were not all gathered in Sioux county, but the money to hire and equip them was all raised in or near Orange City and Sioux Center. It is said that only picked men have been accepted.

Because many New Year reformations are transient is no reason for not trying to make yours permanent.

F. B. Thirkield, Health Inspector of Chicago, says, "Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cannot be recommended too highly. It cured me of severe dyspepsia." It digests what you eat and cures indigestion, heart burn and all forms of dyspepsia.—J. L. Harr.

George Dewey was 62 years young Christmas day. May he continue to feel younger each birthday.

L. T. Travis, Agent Southern R. R. Selina, Ga., writes, "I cannot say too much in praise of One Minute Cough Cure. In my case it worked like a charm." The only harmless remedy that gives immediate results. Cures coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles.—J. L. Harr.

The actors who are compelled by their health to "take a rest" are usually the very ones that will be missed.

J. I. Bevry, Loganton, Pa., writes, "I am willing to take my oath that I was cured of pneumonia entirely by the use of One Minute Cough Cure after doctors failed. It also cured my children of whooping cough." Quickly relieves and cures coughs, colds, croup grippe and throat and lung troubles. Children all like it. Mothers endorse it.—J. L. Harr.

"I am indebted to One Minute Cough Cure for my health and life. It cured me of lung trouble following grippe." Thousands owe their lives to the prompt action of this never failing remedy. It cures coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis, pneumonia, grippe and throat and lung troubles. Its early use prevents consumption. It is the only harmless remedy that gives immediate results.—J. L. Harr.

Bankers who went through "runs" recently have no doubts as to what ought to be "sworn off" by depositors on New Year.

OLD PEOPLE MADE YOUNG.

J. C. Sherman, the veteran editor of the Vermontville (Mich.) Echo, has discovered the remarkable secret of keeping old people young. For years he has avoided nervousness, sleeplessness, indigestion, heart trouble, constipation and rheumatism by using Electric Bitters, and he writes: "It can't be praised too highly. It gently stimulates the kidneys, tones the stomach, aids digestion and gives a splendid appetite. It has worked wonders for my wife and me. It's a marvelous remedy for old people's complaints." Only 50c at Harr's drug store.

Expansion doesn't appear to be a party question in Alabama, Arkansas and Tennessee, where prominent democrats are advocating it.

HIS WIFE SAVED HIM.

My wifes good advice saved my life writes F. M. Ross, of Winfield, Tenn., for I had such a bad cough that I could hardly breathe, I steadily grew worse under doctors treatment, but my wife urged me to use Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, which completely cured me." Coughs, colds bronchitis, lagrippe, pneumonia, asthma, hay fever and all maladies of chest, throat and lungs are positively cured by this marvelous medicine. 50c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottles free at Harr's drug store.

The suicide of a writer of jokes for minstrels and comedians furnishes another proof that the occupation of a professional "funny" man is a dangerous one.

Montana's supreme court has disbarred J. B. Wellcome, a lawyer, for bribery in connection with the election of W. A. Clarke to the U. S. Senate. It is now up to the Senate.

TRADING OF ISLANDS.

RECKLESS DEALING IN OTHER PEOPLE'S PROPERTY.

How Germany and England Swap Vast Areas of Land Belonging to the Blacks — Settling of the Samoan Dispute.

(Special Letter.)

In return for the title to the Samoan Islands, with the exception of Tutuila, which goes to the United States, Germany has ceded to England the Tonga Islands, Savage Islands, and the two largest of the Solomon Islands. The Tonga Islands lie in the south Pacific, and are close to Fiji Islands, which are already under British control. They comprise seven larger islands, with many low-lying and small islets about them. The population, which is almost exclusively made up of natives, is estimated to be 25,000. English missionaries have converted most of the inhabitants to Christianity. The islands are nominally ruled by George II., a black king, though the German government has maintained officials in the archipelago who had the real authority. Savage Island is a beautiful island, thirty miles in circumference, lying half way between the Tonga Islands and Samoa. It has a population of 6,000, all of them being converts to Christianity. Unlike most of the islands of the south Pacific, Savage is densely wooded. The Solomon Islands, of which two of the largest are ceded to England, lie north of New Guinea and form part of the so-called Bismarck Archipelago.

After an absense of nearly six weeks, our Ell Center correspondent is with us again. We have now a good correspondent at Goodell and Garner, but none from Germantown. Who will be the good Samaritan to furnish us the news from that locality. Don't all speak at once.

The contest of L. C. Smith against Mr. Ward of Wesley for the office of treasurer of Kossuth county was financially settled when the referees gave Mr. Ward the office by seventy-six majority. The regular official count of the votes by the Board of Supervisors gave the office to the Wesley man by eighteen votes, and stories of miscounts in various townships together with the urging of numerous of the faithful who had money bet caused Mr. Smith to institue a contest. The result is not dissimilar to the Sweigard-Reed contest in this county. When you monkey with the buzz-saw, first take off the belt. You are then not nearly so apt to be injured.

The year 1900 will not be a leap year, for although it is not divisable by four it is not divisible by 400. The length of the year is 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes, and 46 seconds. But for these odd hours and minutes a day is added every four years; but it will be seen that the addition of 24 hours every four years is a little too much—so a further correction is made by dropping out the extra day in three out of every 400 years and another once in 4,000 years. So the year 4,000 will not be a leap year although it will be divisible by 4 and 400. The chronologists have a lot o trouble keeping the dates right.

KOERNER BROS. & CO.,

KLEMME, IOWA.

We forgot to mention last week that Nels Palmer and wife spent Christmas at Algona. They report a very pleasant time.

The lengthy article of withdrawal from the contest for office of county treasurer as published by the Democrat a few weeks ago, is good campaign timber for two years hence.

We are of the opinion that next year will be another building year. Incidently we have learned that several large lumber bills have been contracted and work will go on just as soon as weather will permit.

Bro. Wellemeyer, of the Klemme TIMES, was doing Belmond last Friday. The TIMES is now enlarged to a six column quarto and is well filled with newsy items and up-to-date advertisements.—Belmond Herald.

H. W. Schoper has increased his advertising space and makes a bid for your patronage. You should read his advertisement and call on him for anything in the line of wagons, buggies, implements of all kind.

Frank Carlson and Frank Diebler have completed arrangements for a turkey shoot to take place next Saturday, commencing at nine o'clock. Shot guns and clay birds, rifles and targets will be used. Everybody invited to come and participate.

Some of the insignificant little towns around us are reporting shipments of grain and live stock as extrordinary happenings. As an item of news we will state that in one day our dealers loaded out 19 cars of grain, just to empty a few bins. It is no unusual thing for either of our buyers to take in 10,000 bushels in a single day.

There is a certain young lady in Garner who says she has never seen the new year come in. She has been told that the cattle kneel down, that the horses bow their head and paw industriously and hens cackle and roosters crow. She says she is going to roost with the geese next year and find out how it is.

Thus far we have allowed the question of U. S. Senator to go by default. We have had numerous letters from the leaders on both sides, soliciting our aid and influence. We thank these gentlemen, but out of a personal regard for both Gear and Cummins, must decline to say one word either for or against either party.

Carl Wellemeyer, our nephew, who successfully taught the Center school in German township last winter and the three months just past, has been elected by the Garner educational board as one of the teachers in the Garner high school. We believe the promotion is deserved. His sister, Elisabeth has charge of one of the rooms in the Britt school.

We are in receipt of a very neat little booklet from the Warren Featherbone Co., of Three Oaks, Mich., entitled "Quills and Feathers," which is brim full of information regarding the care of turkey feathers. This company buys the whole fleece as it comes from the turkey, and anyone who may be interested may have their booklet by calling at this office.

Voters have learned a lesson by the contest just completed. Many will know how to vote next time that threw away their ballot by improper markings last November. Republicans have learned that it does not pay to allow personal regard to superceed party loyalty. "Stick to your creed" will be the text and no sermon will be more complete than future returns in election matters in this county.

A Nebraska farmer threw his daughter's lover over the transom and was arrested by the victim. The justice decided the case as follows: "It appears that this young fellar was a-courtin' of the defendant's gal in the defendant's parlor; that the defendant intruded and threw the plaintiff out into the cold heartless world. Courtin' is necessary, therefore the law uv Nebraska will hold that no parent has a right in any room where courtin' is a-goin' on. Defenant is fined $5 and costs, and if he interferes ag'in in plaintiff's right he will be fined $100 and be given thirty days work on the stone pile."

Publishers Greeting.

It is exceedingly gratifying to the editor, the way our friends have responded and come in and paid their subscription during the past month. As we stated some time ago in the columns, the price will be for the next year $1.25. We have opened a new subscription book, and those who are paid in advance, we will continue to the time of expiration at the old rate. Those who are in arrears will expect to pay $1.25 beginning with this issue. If you feel that we are charging too much, after looking over this issue, you will, indeed, be hard to please. That the year just begun will be a prosperous and happy one to all, is our wish.

We believe from the indications of the past three months that our lines have fallen in pleasant places, and hope that this year will meet with our fullest expectations. We thank you in advance for the future favors and continued patronage.

About Good Roads.

Much has been said and written about this subject, and yet there is scope and plenty of it, for it is a question of vital importance in every community. Important—because it touches the interests of every property owner. On next Friday, January 5, there will be held at the court house, a meeting of delegates from each road district to discuss this subject. A question that is liable to come up is this. "Can we not have more and better work on our highways with the cash tax system, as mentioned in these columns last week, or, we derive more benefit from the present method of working the roads? That we do not, under the present system, get the full benefit of the time and money expended, no one will deny. We have talked with a number of our best farmers on the subject, and with one accord they favored the cash tax plan. Compare the amount of money expended by the county and work accomplished. with the amount of work accomplished under our system of working out the tax and you cannot fail to see that the county gets twice the work for the same money. Working the road is now considered by many as a sort of holiday, and it is not uncommon to see a game of cards going in the shade of the wagon, or a wrestling match for township championship, but it is uncommon to see a full day's work put in. It is time the system was abolished. Let them pay the the tax in cash, and let the work by contract—no work, no pay. If you feel interested in this movment. go tomorrow and talk it over. Some action will probably be taken in this matter by the legislative body now in session.

"Old Glory" floated from the flag staff at Ell Center school house last Monday morning in honor of the beginning of a new century.

Although the weather was very cold and the roads rough, it did not keep the crowd away from the literary society last Thursday evening, as some came eight miles to attend.

Lewis Deusen and wife of Forest City, who have been visiting friends in Franklin county and Butler county, stopped at J. W. Allen's on their return home. They report plenty of snow and good sleighing in Franklin and Butler Counties.

The editor of the Nelson Republican while lost in deep reverie wondering at the whyness of the whichness, ground out the following ebolution of wit: "Into the cow-lot bright and gay, the milkmaid hustles from day to day, and gathers the lacteal fluid white, while the morning sun is out of sight. And e'en when the evening sunlight falls, again she hustles up her pails, and seeks in the cow with the brindle tail that fount of wealth seldom known to fail. Hot winds may blow and the grasshoppers hop, bugs and blizzards may gather the crop, but so long as the flow of milk dont stop, the cow and the milkmaid will come out on top.

Absent-mindedness has seldom been a fame or money making venture to its possessor. Nevertheless, the poem, "The Absent-Minded Beggar," which Mr. Kipling contributed to a London newspaper for sale, has already brought in a fund of $50,000 for the needy families of the soldiers sent to South Africa. The poem is recited nightly at ten music halls, and sung to Sir Arthur Sullivan's music at half a dozen more.

Ignatius Donnelly, the man who discovered that Bacon wrote Shakespeare, has come forward again with another book upon the Baconian cipher. Any fair-minded critic who reads Mr. Donnelly's book will be convinced that a clear interpretation of the mystic tramas can be obtained by reading them with the book held upside down, multiplying the total number of letters by the cubic root of the commas, and then sleeping over night with Mr. Donnelly's explanation under the pillow.

It is reported that an English firm has erected a large plant at Fargo, N. D., in which to reduce flax straw before it is sent east for manufacture into Manila paper. Farmers of that state are said to have harvested an immense crop of flax this year, and, in view of their present success, it is thought that the acreage devoted to flax culture will be greatly augmented next season, all of which means less wheat, but, then, North Dakota is making strenuous efforts to get ahead in the production of flax fiber, linseed oil and starch. With this end in view, circulars have been sent to eastern capitalists calling attention to the bounty law which goes into operation next April, and which provides for the payment of a bounty on all the starch made and flax fiber reduced in the state during and after that month.

One of the Japanese delegates now in this country for the purpose of having the tax rate of 10 cents a pound on tea imported to this country modified, gives it as his opinion that the trade between the two countries is greatly hampered, if not threatened, by the present tax rate, resulting as it does, says the delegate, in the greatest hardships to tea merchants in Japan. Last year the average price of tea in the Japanese markets was $12.50 per 133 pounds, while the tax on tea is now $13.30 for the same amount, so that the tax amounts to more than the original price of the tea. While the United States is imposing this tax on tea, he said, Japan is admitting American cotton free. Last year the Japanese took about $7,500,000 of our cotton, and during the first six months of this year the imports of cotton from the United States amounted to about $5,000,000, all of which came in free of duty. While the Japanese government has levied a heavy tax on tobacco, that was done as a measure of financial exigency, and tobacco does not form an item of special importance in the Japan-American trade.

The Sioux City National bank has applied to Collector Patterson for a $1,000 revenue stamp to affix to the deed for the sale of the Sioux City & Northern railroad.

The Hon. H. G. Curtis, of Atlantic, is a candidate for the federal judgeship made vacant by the death of Judge Woolson. Mr. Curtis is at present a member of the supreme court of Porto Rico.

The state board of health is in receipt of information to the effect that there are two additional cases of smallpox (in infected families) at Coalville, and one in Silver Lake township, Worth county.

The J. Porter general store at Reinbeck was badly burned recently. The fire originated in the show window. The stock is almost an entire loss. The stock was valued at $12,000, with a $4,000 insurance. The building is badly damaged.

The State Society of the Sons of the American Revolution will meet in Des Moines February 21. The date and place were fixed by the executive committee which met a few days ago. W. H. Baily and E. D. Hadley, of Des Moines, and President F. H. Loring, of Waterloo, are the committee. It will issue a programme for the annual meeting shortly.

Fire at Burlington recently destroyed the big wholesale building of Biklen Winzer Grocery Co., and caused a complete loss to the stock. The loss on the building was $30,000; insurance, $13,000; loss on stock, $105,000; insurance, $84,500. The intense cold interfered with the work of the firemen, who had difficulty in confining the fire to the one building. The firemen were slightly hurt. The company will rebuild at once. It is one of the best known firms in Iowa.

The sensational election contest in Webster county for the office of county treasurer has again come up. This contest arose from the tie vote given J. A. Lindquist, republican, and E. H. Cox, democrat. The count by the board of supervisors gave the office to Lindquist by thirty-one votes. Mr. Cox has now served notice that he will appeal the matter to the district court, and from there may go to the supreme court. The contest hinges on the interpretation of what shall be considered a defective ballot, and the decision of the court will be of the greatest importance in interpreting election laws.

The State Teachers Association, at its meeting at Des Moines, elected the following officers: President, W. O. Riddell, principal of the West Des Moines high school; first vice-president, George I. Miller, city superintendent, Boone; second vice-president, A. R. Sale, city superintendent, Mason City; third vice-president, William Bell, principal high school, Creston; executive committee, Superintendent Inez Kelso, Wayne county; educational council, A. B. Noble, State College, C. H. Carson, Marengo, President Blakeslee, Iowa Wesleyan University, H. B. Hayden Council Bluffs, W. W. Gist, Coe College, C. F. Schell, Hancock.

Articles of incorporation of the Iowa Sugar company have been filed for record with the county recorder of Polk county. This is the company that proposes to erect a beet sugar factory in Des Moines during the coming year. The incorporators are John S. Emery, Fred C. Hubbell, Robert Fullerton, W. G. Jordan and N. T. Guernsey. Mr. Guernsey is president and Mr. Hubbell secretary of the company. The vice president and treasurer are to be selected later. The incorporators also constitute the provisional board of directors. The authorized capital stock of the company is $1,000,000 and business is to be commenced when $250,000 of the stock is paid in.

Judge Prouty, of the district court of Polk county has ruled that appeal from the assessments fixed by the county assessor can not be taken directly to the courts, but must first be made to the board of review, and then, if satisfaction is not secured, the petitioner may appeal to the courts. The decision was rendered in ruling on the cases of J. K. and W. H. Gilcrest and Henrietta Cole against the city of Des Moines. Both parties appealed directly to the court without laying their cases before the board of review. The court held that the assessments were undoubtedly too high, but that it had no authority to lower them, unless an appeal had first been made to the board of review. In case fraud had been practiced in any way, as by a statement being made to the owner that the assessment was less than it really was, then the court might intervene directly, but in the ordinary case, the board of review must pass upon the case. The fact that the board had met before the party knew of the raise in the assessment was held to make no difference.

The contest for the office of county treasurer, of Kossuth county, which has been going on at Algona, ended rather abruptly by the contestant dismissing the case. On the face of the returns John H. Ward, republican had a majority of 17 over L. C. Smith, democrat. Near the close of the recount Mr. Ward's majority had increased from 17 to 76, which fact probably had something to do with the dismissal. One of the peculiar features of the contest was the fact that during the recount 471 ballots were thrown out altogether as being in one way or another defective. Both parties were represented by able counsel.

Articles of incorporation have been filed in the office of the secretary of state by the Chicago, Dubuque & Omaha railway company. Capital stock, $25,000. C. H. Meyer, S. M. Griffith and G. R. Struble, are the incorporators.

The Sac county supervisors have completed the canvass of the saloon statement of consent, filed Dec. 6, 1899. They found the statement insufficient as filed. It contained 18 more names than the required 65 per cent, but the board decided 73 signatures, against which the anti-saloon forces protested, to be illegal, leaving the statement short 54 names.

The 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William North, living on their farm two miles west of Monroe, was instantly killed by the team running away. The child was alone in the wagon when the team started to run. The wagon overturned on a pile of cobs, catching the child's head on the edge of the wagon bed and dragging him several rods, dislocating his neck.

George W. Goodrich, of Webster City, carried a $2,000 policy in the Ancient Order of United Workmen. Three months before his death his physician was dismissed and Christian Science treatment substituted. The order now refuses to settle unless a physician's proof of death is submitted or the body is disinterred and a post mortem held. The physician refuses to certify. A lodge of Modern Woodmen of America in a Nebraska town recently refused to pay a policy, setting up the same condition.

William J. Teague, of Clarke county, Iowa, who confessed to the crime of forgery a few weeks ago, and was given an indeterminate sentence in the Michigan City, Ind., prison, is an applicant for a pardon before the board of parole of the prison. Teague has made the unique proposition to serve one year for his self-confessed crime, at the expiration of which time he wants a pardon. He has enlisted a number of influential Iowa men to supplement his appeal for executive clemency with their influence. Teague is prominently connected in Clarke county, where, prior to his downfall, he was a leading business man.

In the district court of Wapello county, Judge F. W. Eichelberger, of the district bench, decided that the Iowa paving statute is unconstitutional, as being in contravention of the doctrine of the fourteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States. The statute is the one relating to the assessment and collection of paving tax by the front foot rule. It is the first time the question has been passed upon by the courts of Iowa, but is in line with the holdings of the supreme and federal courts of the United States. The question was raised in the case of A. H. Hamilton, et al. vs. the Assyrian Asphalt company, of Chicago. The case will go to the supreme court on demurrer.

Federal Judge Shiras has handed down a lengthy opinion in the Indian case from Tama county reservation. The case is one in which the husband of an Indian girl, Lelah-Puc-Ka-Chee, applied for a writ of habeas corpus to secure her release from the Indian agent. The agent had had himself appointed guardian of the girl by the district court of Tama county and by virtue of the appointment restrained her against her will and against the will of her relatives and compelled her to attend an Indian school. Her attorney claimed the state had no authority over Indians, that the court cannot appoint guardians, and that the agent had no authority to compel her attendance at school. Judge Shiras sustains the Indians at every point and censures the agent; he also severely censures the whites who interferred.

What has proved to be one of the best laid and smoothest plans at jail breaking in the history of Cerro Gordo county, has just been unearthed by the officers at Mason City. The three persons who planned the deal and came near carrying it into execution are F. E. Baily, who is confined on a charge of horse stealing, Charles Mitchell and J. D. Miller, both held on a charge of larceny. It would be difficult to improve on the plans and preparations of the trio and the man who invented the crude tools with which they intended to bore and saw through the walls and bars of the jail, is certainly an inventive genius. Some assistance was given from the outside, but the greater part of the tools were the work of the men on the inside, and the collection is a sight to behold. Just how long these tools have been in their possession is not known, but they certainly have been at work some time, as the twenty-nine holes in the steel lining of the jail corridors attest.

T. E. Clark has been appointed manager for the Iowa Central railroad. Mr. Clark was general superintendent of the Minneapolis and St. Louis road, with which he has been associated for eighteen years.

The river closed at Dubuque a few days ago. A firm ice bridge is now established across the river above the bridge. This is one of the latest closings known for years. Last year the river was closed on November 26, with firm ice bridge at Eagle Point. The stage of water is unusually high at this time of year, being 2.3 feet.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Attorney General Remley has given an opinion to the fish and game warden in answer to a question as to the legality of offering quail for sale during the open quail season in the state. Section 2551 of the code provides that during the open quail season, between November 1 and January 1, quail may be killed, providing not more than twenty-five per day are killed by any one hunter, and that none are trapped, or taken for purposes of traffic. The state fish and game warden has had trouble with the buying and selling of this species of game, and believed that the persons doing so violated the statutes. The attorney holds that, however guilty the one who kills the quail, there seems to be nothing in the law prohibiting the buying and selling of the same during the open season after it is caught, even though the hunter is prohibited from trafficking.

It is probable that the subject which will create the principal interest and result in the widest range of discussion at the coming session of the legislature will be proposals to change the system of caring for the insane of the state. There are three branches to the present system: Counties care for their insane either in asylums or in poor houses; private institutions care for insane; and the state at its state hospitals cares for and cures the insane. The board of control is against the county system and it would favor the enactment of a law preventing further investment in county asylums, and requiring the removal of all insane patients in counties having no asylums or hospitals to the state institutions. This means the removal of about 600 patients, sufficient to fill Cherokee, about. In view of this possibility the board asks for $350,000 to finish the Cherokee hospital. The board does not recommend the removal of patients from county asylums to the state hospitals, but would stop the extension of county care further than the present.

Secretary Kennedy, of the state board of health is in receipt of reports from further outbreaks of small-pox in the state. One case is reported at Jesup, Buchanan county; another is in Washington township, Buchanan county, and a third has been reported at Independence. The reports indicate that the best quarantine measures have been adopted, but do not state whether the cases are of a malignant type. Another new case was reported from Monroe county. Several have previously been reported at Coalfield, and yesterday's report locates a case in Mantua township. It has been quarantined. Previous to this, cases have been reported at four places in Buena Vista county, at Storm Lake, Marathon, Sioux Rapids and in Providence township. Then there are cases in Northwood, Worth county; in Silver Lake township, Worth county; at Alvord and Doon, Lyon county, and at Corning, Adams county. In all, fifty-seven cases are now known to exsist in the state, most of them convalescent. There have been three deaths. This year's outbreak proves more malignant. In 1898 there were 259 cases reported in the state and only two deaths.

A dispatch from Houston, Texas, reads as follows: An Iowa syndicate headed by D. B. Hurd and A. H. McVey, of Des Moines, secured options on 10,424 acres of land in Jefferson county, for which they agreed to pay $185,000. The same parties also secured a ninety-day option on another tract, which makes the total transaction amount to a purchase of 14,264 acres, which is to cost them $225,000. The gentlemen act as trustees for a syndicate now being organized in Iowa to go into the rice business on a large scale. This syndicate is projected with a paid up capital of $500,000, and in addition to raising rice, it is to be be cleaned and graded on the farm. The plan has progressed so far that the trustees say options on the land were necessary to a completion of the organization. Farmers from Iowa are to be brought to Texas to do the work, and they will be stockholders. Certified checks have been deposited for 5 per cent of the purchase money.

Adjutant General Byers, since his return from Washington, has received information which leaves him confident that the Iowa war claims against the federal government, amounting now to about $56,000, will be paid before the close of the present session of congress. Congressman Hull has agreed to push the bill vigorously.

The Iowa Mexican Plantation company, a New Jersey corporation that desires to do business in Iowa, has filed amendment articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The The concern is capitalized at $1,087,500. The filing fee amounts to $1,106.10. This corporation is the one that took exceptions to the secretary of state's ruling in the matter of fees, but finally decided to comply with the requirement in every respect and through its local attorney put an end to the controversy that had been going on for some time by presenting its check for the amount demanded by the secretary.

How Boers Are Warned.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—The Modder river correspondent of the Daily Chronicle gives an explanation of a sudden rifle fire inexplicably opened from the Boer trenches. He says:

"The Boers have wires stretched along the ground in front of the trenches and connected with lamps. If a wire be touched a lamp is extinguished, thus giving warning. One night a high wind extinguished a lamp, which resulted in a false warning. The fire ceased when the Boers discovered that the alarm was false."

Tanner Not a Candidate.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., Dec. 29.—At the gathering of Illinois republicans for their annual lor feast a bomb-shell was exploded by the declaration of Governor John R. Tanner that he was not a candidate for re-election This declaration was made at a special meeting of the governor's political friends called by himself. He said: "I have not been a candidate for governor from the time that I entered office and I am not now a candidate for re-election."

ALLEGED FENIAN ORGANIZATION.

Said to Propose the Invasion of Canada in the Near Future.

BUFFALO, Dec. 27.—A Dunkirk, N. Y., special says: "The Fenians are said to be organized here for the invasion of Canada. A man known to have knowledge of the condition of Fenian affairs in Dunkirk says this city has been called upon to raise six hundred men to form part of New York's quota of 125,000 men to be enrolled throughout the country. At present five hundred men are known to be mustered with the Fenians here, and the remaining hundred will be obtained with little difficulty. It is currently reported and extensively credited that the Fenians have two car loads of arms and munitions of war in concealment in or near this city. This material is said to have been in possession of the Dunkirk Fenians for some years."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—The British ambassador has made no protest to the authorities here relative the reported organized movements in various parts of the country in behalf of the Boers, including the alleged Fenian movement, although these matters were subjects for discussion between Secretary Hay and the ambassador as late as yesterday afternoon. The only attention which the embassy is giving to these reports is to keep advised through British consuls at various points as to any movement of importance. Thus far, however, nothing has come from the consuls to indicate that any of the movements were more than local and trifling.

NEW PLAN OF DEMOCRATS.

Making Political Capital Out of the War in the Transvaal.

CHICAGO, Dec. 30.—In a dispatch to the Times-Herald, Walter Wellman, the Washington correspondent says: Is the war in South Africa to have its effect upon American politics? That it will, and that the effect will be unfavorable to the republicans, is the belief of many leading democrats here in Washington. Moreover, there are signs of coming efforts in democratic circles to help along the growth of public feeling with this end in view. What is going on in the country now is a tremendous outburst of anti-English sentiment. It does not come from the masses of the people, but it does come from a sufficient number to make a serious impression at the national capital. Senators and representatives are getting by every mail denunciations of England and expressions of sympathy for the Boers. The communications of this tenor outnumber the other fifty to one, and while it is true that most of these pro-Boer letters come from men of two races—Dutch and Irish—they are by no means confined to these elements. Many come from citizens of German descent, and native Americans are by no means unrepresented. The traditional hatred of England which has existed in this country for a century is far from being extinct, and it is manifesting itself just now in ways which cause it to be seen and felt here. As yet it is too early to gain an adequate notion of what the affect of this agitation is to be, but already it has become a factor which must be dealt with.

FAITH IN BULLER.

Churchill Says the British Forces Trust Him Implicitly.

LONDON, Dec. 29. — The morning Post has received the following from Mr. Churchill under the date of Dec. 26, telegraphed from Chieveley Camp, where he has arrived: "All ranks have complete confidence in Sir Redvers Buller, and there is a stern determination to succeed next time at all costs. A painful impression was caused by the announcement of the change of the commander-in-chief, and the soldiers here are resolved to vindicate their trusted leader. The situation nevertheless, is difficult, the Boer position being one of extraordinary strength, with high hills lined tier on tier with trenches and galleries, rising from an almost unfordable river, and with a smooth plain in front. The enemy have all the ranges marked and many powerful guns dominate the various points of the river, while the drifts are commanded by converging musketry fire from probably 12,000 Boers. There are sixteen miles of wild, broken country before reaching Ladysmith, which demands early relief."

Arrested for Enlisting.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 30.—Monsieur Pierot, on the charge of acting as a recruiting officer for the Boers, was brought before United States Attorney Bundy today. He claimed he was enlisting men for the hospital corps, and not for enlistment in the army. Bundy advised him that he must stop or be punished.

Gatacre Evidently Busy.

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 30.—A dispatch from Cradrock reports heavy firing in the direction of Stormberg. It is supposed this is connected with General Gatacre's attempt to reopen communication with the Indwe collieries.

Teachers Want Language Simplified.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 28.—The Teachers' association memorialized the National Educational asociatison to appropriate $1,000 a year for five years to be expended in simplifying the English spelling.

Gomez AssureS Wood.

HAVANA, Dec. 25.—General Gomez has assured Gen. Wood that he will co-operate with him in obtaining a successful administration and in preparing Cuba for independence.

Money talks—but it converses only with the favored few.

GEN. METHUEN REPORTS.

Boers Make Another Attack—Milk Station Established by British.

"At 9:30 yesterday evening, the Boers on the south side of Magersfontein, opened a very heavy fire for some time. This morning the naval brigade fired at the enemy at the west part of Magersfontein, the cavalry brigade were reconnoitering in a northeasterly direction. Lieut. Masters made an extended reconnaissance westward and northward to Enslein and reports all is well. The farmers were glad to see our men. They are suffering from want of food. I have established a market here where I can purchase fresh milk and vegetables, selling to the farmers tea and other articles, which they cannot otherwise purchase. A heavy rain fell last night."

The latest from Ladysmith:

"The field fortification would now withstand any organized attack the enemy is likely to deliver. There is sufficient food for two months. The question of forage might be troublesome, but since the rains there has been some grazing within the British lines. There is no horse sickness. Casualties caused by our shell fire are increasing and the Boers are reported as becoming nervous. They fear night sorties and constantly open heavy fusiades on imaginary attacks. German officials have promptly stopped the Boers from recruiting in Damarland. Neither men nor horses are permitted to cross the border."

Gatacre and French report no change in the situation.

Baden-Powell reports all well, December 12.

IMPORTANT MOVE HINTED.

Buller May Again Move to the Relief of Ladysmith.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—The latest special dispatches from Chievely Camp hint darkly at some important movement as imminent. This is interpreted, with some misgivings, to mean that General Buller contemplates a renewal of his attempt to relieve Ladysmith. It is reported by the same dispatches that the Boers have now retired to the north bank of the Tugela river, being afraid that the swollen river may bar their retreat. They are also moving their laagers nearer Ladysmith, probably with the intention of putting further pressure on the garrison, which now seems to be suffering pretty heavily from bombardment. It is difficult however, to conceive that General Buller would make another frontal attack, especially now that the river is rising, and an additional indication that this is not his purpose is the fact that he has removed his headquarters back to Frere. The Boer movement northward from the Tulega is quite in keeping with the enemy's usual plan of securing a safe line of retreat.

HAY DEMANDS AN EXPLANATION.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28. — Secretary of State John Hay has communicated with United States Ambassador Choate in London, regarding the seizure off the coast of South Africa of three vessels loaded with American goods and consigned to merchants in Lorenzo Marquez, Delagoa Bay. R. W. Geldart, an export merchant of South William street, is one of the sufferers by the confiscation of goods, consisting of flour, beef and lard, in transit, and he has laid the facts before Secretary Hay. Mr. Geldart says:

"I informed Mr. Hay about the seizure, and in reply he sent me a letter saying he had communicated with the United States ambassador in London. I am going to have the matter brought up in congress and see what redress Americans have for these seizures. The proceeding was a most high-handed one and without precedent, I believe."

WAR COUP BY BRITAIN.

Claimed That Delagoa Bay Has Been Secured Under Secret Treaty.

LONDON, Dec. 29. — Announcement by the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger that under the secret stipulations of the treaty Germany will take Portugal's Asiatic colonies and the territory north of the Zambesi and England Delagoa Bay is the most startling news of the day. The authority is not official, and the statement of concerted action by the two powers against French and Russian occupation must be accepted with reserve until the foreign officers confirm it. The alleged payment of 25,000,000 marks for Germany's share in this territorial trade also seems doubtful. Some disclosures of this kind has been expected in diplomatic circles for several weeks, since the necessity for shutting off the supplies of arms and ammunition from the Transvaal has become apparent with the prolongation of the war."

Unsuccessful Sortie From Kimberley.

KIMBERLEY, Dec. 21.—At 2:30 o'clock yesterday morning mounted detachments under Colonel Peakman, with three Maxims and three 7 pounders under Major May, advanced on Toll Pan. The Boer pickets fired and our Maxims replied, the Boers disappearing over the ridges. Our guns then began to shell Toll Pan at a range of 2,500 yards. A Boer gun dropped four shells near our men, but did no damage. As the Boers were strongly entrenched we withdrew. Their guns are well placed.

PIETERMARITZBURG, Dec. 30. — A Ladysmith dispatch of December 22 says:

"The Boers have mounted another Howitzer on Surprise Hill, replacing the guns recaptured in a sortie of a rifle brigade. While they watch us nightly with a searchlight, and bombard the place daily, they show no signs of assaulting the town. They probably think they can starve us out, but we have plenty of provisions. The total casualties since the siege began are 70 killed and 236 wounded."

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

THE GLORIOUS GOSPEL AND ITS HEAVENLY LIGHT.

The Text Chosen Being: "According to the Glorious Gospel of the Most Blessed God Which Was Committed to My Trust"—Tim. 1:11.

The greatest novelty of our time is the gospel. It is so old that it is new. As potters and artists are now attempting to fashion pitchers and cups and curious ware like those of 1,900 years ago recently brought up from buried Pompeii, and such cups and pitchers and curious ware are universally admired, so any one who can unshovel the real gospel from the mountains of stuff under which it has been buried, will be able to present something that will attraot the gaze and admiration and adoption of all the people. It is amazing what substitutes have been presented for what my text calls "The Glorious Gospel." There has been a hemispheric apostasy. There are many people in this and all other large assemblages who have no more idea of what the gospel really is than they have of what is contained in the fourteenth chapter of Zend-Avesta, the bible of the Hindoo, the first copy of which I ever saw I purchased in Calcutta, India, last September. The old gospel is fifty feet under and the work has been done by the shovels of those who have been trying to contrive the philosophy of religion. There is no philosophy about it. It is a plain matter of bible statement and of child-like faith. Some of the theological seminaries have been hotbeds of infidelity, because they have tried to teach the "philosophy of religion." By the time that many a theological student gets half through his preparatory course he is so filled with doubts about plenary inspiration and the divinity of Christ and the questions of eternal destiny that he is more fit for the lowest branch in the infant class of a Sunday school than to become a teacher and leader of the people. The ablest theological professor is a Christian mother, who, out of her own experience, can tell the 4-year-old how beautiful Christ was on earth and how beautiful he is in heaven and how dearly he loves little folks, and then she kneels down and puts one arm around the boy, and with her somewhat faded cheek against the roseate cheek of the little one, consecrates him for time and eternity to Him who said, "Suffer them to come unto me." What an awful work Paul made with the D. D.'s and the LL. D.'s and the F. R. S.'s when he cleared the decks of the old gospel ship by saying: "Not many wise men, not many noble, are called, but God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the mighty."

There sits the dear old theologian with his table piled up with all the great books on inspiration and exegesis and apologetics for the Almighty and writing out his own elaborate work on the philosophy of religion, and his little grandchild, coming up to him for a good-night kiss, he accidentally knocks off the biggest book from the table and it falls on the head of the child, of whom Christ himself said: "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise." Ah! my friends, the bible wants no apologetics. The throne of the last judgment wants no apologetics. Eternity wants no apologetics. Scientists may tell us that the natural light is the "propagation of undulations in an elastic medium, and thus set in vibratory motion by the action of luminous bodies"; but no one knows what gospel light is until his own blind eyes, by the touch of the Divine Spirit, have opened to see the noonday of pardon and peace. Scientists may tell us that natural sound is "the effect of an impression made on the organs of hearing by an impulse of the air, caused by a collision of bodies or by some other means"; but those only know what the gospel sound is who have heard the voice of Christ directly saying: "Thy sins are forgiven thee; go in peace." The theological dude unrolls upon the plush of an exquisitely carved pulpit a learned discourse showing that the garden of Eden was an allegory, and Solomon's song rather an indelicate love ditty, and the book of Job a drama in which Satan was the star actor, and that Renan was three-quarters right about the miracles of Jesus, and that the bible was gradually evoluted and the best thought of the different ages, Moses and David and Paul doing the best they could under the circumstances, and therefore to be encouraged. Lord of heaven and earth, get us out of the London fog of higher criticism!

The night is dark and the way is rough, and we have a lantern which God has put in our hands; but instead of employing the lantern to show ourselves and others the right way we are discussing lanterns, their shape, their size, their material and which is the better light—kerosene, lamp oil or candle; and while we discuss it, we stand all around the lantern so that we shut out the light from the multitudes who are stumbling on in the dark mountains of sin and death. Twelve hundred dead birds were found one morning around Bartholdi's statue in New York harbor. They had dashed their life out against the lighthouse the night before. Poor things! And the great lighthouse of the gospel—how many high-soaring thinkers have beaten all their religious life out against it, while it was intended for only one thing, and that to show all nations the way into the harbor of God's mercy, and to the crystalline wharves of the heavenly city, where the immortals are waiting for new arrivals. Dead skylarks, when they might have been flying seraphs.

Here also come, covering up the old gospel, some who think they can by law and exposure of crime save the world, and from Portland, Maine, across to San Francisco and back again to New Orleans and Savannah, many of the ministers have gone into the detective business. Worldly reform by all means; but unless it be also gospel reform, it will be dead failure. In New York its chief work has been to give us a change of bosses.

The glorious gospel of the blessed God as spoken of in my text will have more drawing power, and when that gospel gets full swing it will have a momentum and power mightier than that of the Atlantic ocean when, under the force of the September equinox, it strikes the highlands of the Navesink. The meaning of the word "gospel" is "good news," and my text says it is glorious news, and we must tell it in our churches and over our dry goods counters and in our factories and over our threshing machines and behind our plows and on our ships' decks and in our parlors, our nurseries and kitchens, as though it were glorious good news, and not with a dismal drawl in our voice and a dismal look in our faces, as though religion were a rheumatic twinge or a dyspeptic pang or a malarial chill or an attack of nervous prostration. With nine "blesseds" or "happys," Christ began his sermon on the mount: Blessed are the poor, blessed the mourner, blessed the meek, blessed the hungry, blessed the merciful, blessed the pure, blessed the peace makers, blessed the persecuted, blessed the reviled, blessed, blessed, blessed; happy, happy, happy. Glorious good news for the young, as through Christ they may have their coming years ennobled, and for a life time all the angels of God their coadjutors and all the armies of heaven their allies. Glorious good news for the middle aged, as through Christ they may have their perplexities disentangled and their courage rallied, and their victory over all obstacles and hindrances made forever sure. Glorious good news for the aged, as they may have the sympathy of him of whom St. John wrote: "His head and his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow," and the defense of the everlasting arms. Glorious good news for the dying, as they may have ministering spirits to escort them and opening gates to receive them and a sweep of eternal glories to encircle them and the welcome of a loving God to embosom them.

Oh, my text is right when it speaks of the glorious gospel. It is an invitation from the most radient being that ever trod the earth or ascended the heavens, to you and to me, to come and be made happy, and then take after that a royal castle for everlasting residence, the angels of God our cupbearers. The price paid for all of this on the cliff of limestone about as high as this house, about seven minutes' walk from the wall of Jerusalem, where with an agony that with one hand tore down the rocks and with the other drew down a midnight blackness over the heavens, our Lord set us forever free. Making no apology for any one of the million sins of our life, but confessing all of them, we can point to that cliff of limestone and say, "There was paid our indebtedness and God never collects a bill twice. Glad am I that all the Christian poets have exerted their pen in extolling the matchless one of this gospel. Isaac Watts, how do you feel concerning him? And he writes, "I am not ashamed to own my Lord." Newton, what do you think of this gospel? And he writes, "Amazing grace, how sweet the sound." Cowper, what do you think of him? And the answer comes, "There is a fountain filled with blood." Charles Wesley, what do you think of him? And he answers, "Jesus, lover of my soul." Horatius Bonar, what do you think of him? And he responds, "I lay my sins on Jesus." Ray Palmer, what do you think of him? And he writes, "My faith looks up to thee." Fannie Crosby, what do you think of him? And she writes, "Blessed assurance, Jesus is mine." But I take higher testimony: Solomon, what do you think of him? And the answer is, "Lily of the valley." Ezekiel, what do you think of him? And the answer is, "Plant of renown." David, what do you think of him? And the answer is, "My shepherd." St. John, what do you think of him? And the answer is, "Bright and morning star." St. Paul, what do you think of him? And the answer comes, "Christ is all in all." Do you think as well of him, O man, O woman, of the blood-bought immortal spirit? Yes, Paul was right when he styled it "The Glorious Gospel." And then as a druggist, while you are waiting for him to make up the doctor's prescription, puts into a bottle so many grains of this and so many grains of that, and so many drops of this and so many drops of that, and the intermixture taken, though sour and bitter, restores the health, so Christ, the Divine Physician, prepares this trouble of our life time and that disappointment and this persecution, and that hardship and that tear, and we must take the intermixture, yet though it be a bitter draught, under the divine prescription it administers to our restoration and spiritual health, "all things working together for good." Glorious gospel!

And then the royal castle into which we step out of this life without so much as soiling our foot with the upturned earth of the grave. "They shall reign forever and ever." Does not that mean that you are, if saved, to be kings and queens, and do not kings and queens have castles? But the one that you are offered was for thirty-three years an abandoned castle, though now gloriously inhabited. There is an abandoned royal castle at Amber, India. One hundred and seventy years ago a king moved out of it never to return. But the castle still stands in indescribable grandeur, and you go through brazen doorway after brazen doorway, and carved room after carved room, and under embellished ceiling after embellished ceiling, and through precious-stoned into wider halls precious-stoned, and on that hill are pavilions deeply dyed and tasseled and arched, the fire of colored gardens cooled by the snow of white architecture; birds in arabesque so natural to life that while you cannot hear their voices you imagine you see the flutter of their wings while you are passing; walls pictured with triumphal procession; rooms that were called "Alcove of Light" and "Hall of Victory"; marble, white and black, like a mixture of morn and night; alabaster and mother-of-pearl and lacquer work. Standing before it, the eye climbs from step to latticed balcony, and from latticed balcony to oriel, and from oriel to arch, and from arch to roof, and then descends on ladder of all colors and by stairs of perfect lines to tropical gardens of pomegranite and pineapple. Seven stories of resplendent architecture! But the royal castle provided for you, if you will only take it on the prescribed terms, is grander than all that, and though an abandoned castle while Christ was here achieving your redemption, is again occupied by the "Chief among ten thousand," and some of your own kindred who have gone up and, waiting for you, are leaning from the balcony. The windows of that castle look off on the king's gardens, where immortals walk, linked in eternal friendship; and the banquet hall of that castle has princes and princesses at the table; and the wine is the "new wine of the kingdom," and the supper is the marriage supper of the lamb; and there are fountains into which no tear ever fell, and there is music that trembles with no grief, and the light that falls upon the scene is never beclouded, and there is the kiss of those united after long separation. More nerve we will have there than now, or we would swoon away under the raptures. Stronger vision will we have there than now, or our eyesight would be blinded by the brilliance. Stronger ear will we have there than now, or under the roll of that minstrelsy and the clapping of that acclamation and the boom of that hallelujah we would be deafened. Glorious gospel! You thought religion was a straight-jacket, and it put you on the limits, and thereafter you must go cowed down. No, no, no. It is to be castellated. By the cleansing power of the shed blood of Golgotha, set your faces toward the shining pinnacles. Oh, it does not matter much what becomes of us here—for at the longest our stay is short—if we can only land there. You see there are so many I want to meet there. Joshua, my favorite prophet; and John among the evangelists; and Paul among the apostles, and Wycliffe among the martyrs, and Bourdaloue among the preachers, and Dante among the poets, and Havelock among the heroes, and our loved ones whom we have so much missed since they left us, so many darlings of the heart, their absence sometimes almost unbearable; and, mentioned in this sentence last of all, because I want the thought climacteric, our blessed Lord, without whom we could never reach the old castle at all. He took our place. He purchased our ransom. He wept our woes. He suffered our stripes. He died our death. He assured our resurrection. Blessed be his glorious name forever! Surging to his ear be all the anthems! Facing him be all the thrones!

And then from that vastest audience ever established in all the universe there will go up the shout, "Crown him! Crown him! Crown him!" and the Father, who long ago promised his only begotten Son, "I will give thee the heathen for thy inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession," shall set the crown upon the forehead yet scarred with crucifixion bramble, and the hosts of heaven, down on the levels and up in the galleries, will drop on their knees crying, "Hail, king of earth! King of heaven! King of saints! King of seraphs! Thy kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and to thy dominions there shall be no end! Amen and Amen! Amen and Amen!"

A British School at Rome.

A movement, supported by a strong general committee, for the establishment at Rome of a British school similar to that which has existed for thirteen years at Athens, Germany, France, Austria, and the United States already possess institutions of the kind in Rome, but Great Britain, almost alone among European nations, is unrepresented. The need is recognized in that city of a British center of study and research, offering to British students the advantages enjoyed by members of other nationalities. The formation of such a center would be welcomed by the commitee of the Athens school, as a means of enabling students to complete in Rome the training they have received in Athens, though the work done in both cities would be of a similar character. The school in Rome, like that in Athens, would be a training ground for students fresh from the universities or other institutions, as well as a place where more mature students could gather, to the stimulation of intercourse and sympathy and the achievement of more concerted and continuous work.—London Echo.

A Five-Legged Frog.

A five-legged frog has come all the way from Connecticut and taken up his abode in the New York aquarium. He did not hop here—even a frog with five legs could not do that—but traveled in a box with some wet moss to keep him cool. When he was transferred to a tank he uttered a graceful chirrup and blinked his golden-rimmed eyes. At first glance this newcomer seems to carry his extra leg so gracefullly that the beholder is tempted to think that all frogs ought to have three front legs. Closer examination, however, shows that the middle leg is really an excrescence from one of the others, and is not of much service to its proprietor. He does not use it in swimming or hopping, but it imparts a certain dignity to his aspect.—New York World.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON I—JANUARY 7—LUKE 2: 1-16.

The Birth of Jesus—"Thou Shalt Call His Name Jesus: For He Shall Save His People from Their Sins"—Matt. 1: 21.

1. "And it came to pass in those days." After the birth of John and before the birth of Jesus. A decree from "Caesar Augustus," the emperor of Rome. "That all the world." Nearly the whole known world then was included in the Roman empire. "Should be taxed." Rather, "enrolled." "The verb refers to writing off, copying, or entering the names, professions, fortunes and families of subjects in the public register, generally with a view to taxation."

2. "And this taxing," etc. Read as in R. V., "This was the first enrolment made," or "This took place as a first enrolment when Quirinius was governor of Syria."

3. "His own city." The city of his ancestors, where the family records were kept.—Am. Com.

4. "And Joseph also went up . . . unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem." The mother of Jesus lived in Nazareth of Galilee, but the prophet had foretold that the Messiah should be born in Bethlehem, the city of David (Mic. 5: 2), and this was the only fitting place, for he was the heir to David's kingdom, in whom should be fulfilled the promises to him that his house and his throne should be established forever (2 Sam. 7: 16); for the Messiah's kingdom was to be the completion and fruition of David's kingdom.

5. "With Mary," who also was of the lineage of David. In a Roman census women were not obliged to come in person, though they paid the poll tax.

6. "And . . . while they were there." In Bethlehem.

7. "Wrapped him in swaddling clothes." Not clothes regularly made, but strips of cloth three or four inches wide and several feet long, wound around the child. "And laid him in a manger," etc. "The animals were out at the time, and the manger was not being used."—Int. Crit. Com. "No room for them." Because so many others had come for the same purpose, or other business. "Inn." Caravansary.

8. "Shepherds abiding in the field." Near Bethlehem. "It was in these pastures that David spent his youth and fought the lion and the bear" (I Sam. 17: 34, 35).—Int. Crit. Com. "Keeping watch over their flock by night." Thieves, wild beasts, and the dangers of the rough precipices form the chief reasons for a night-watch over the flock.—Prof. Isaac Hall.

9. "And, lo, the angel," not "the" but "an" angel, "of the Lord," one sent from heaven, "came upon them." Rather, as R. V., "stood by them." "And the glory of the Lord." The radiant brightness which in all ages has been the best symbol and manifestation of God's nature, expressing wisdom, love, power, purity, mystery, eternity, omnipresence. "The light that never was on sea or land." This accompanied the angel, and showed him to be the authorized divine messenger. "And they were sore afraid." Literally, feared a great fear.

10. "Good tidings." The word from which our "gospel" comes. They announced the best news the world had ever heard, the news of the Saviour who would fill the whole world with heavenly glory, like that then shining on the field of Bethlehem. "To all people." To all ages, all nations, all classes, all colors. The gospel is the universal religion, as broad as the human race; and the joy is more intense to each one because it is for all.

11. "For unto you is born . . . a Saviour." One who should save them from their sins, their worst and most dangerous enemies. "Jesus" means Saviour. "Christ." "The Anointed One," the Messiah, whom they had long been hoping and praying for. He is called "Anointed" because he had been divinely set apart for this work, as kings and high priests were set apart by anointing with oil. "The Lord." The King of kings and Lord of lords.

12. "And this shall be a sign unto you," that the words spoken were true; and a guiding sign, like the sign to the wise men, showing how they might know what child was the one referred to.

13. "And suddenly," as when the eyes of Elisha's servant were opened to see the mountains around him filled with angelic chariots and horses of fire. "A multitude of the heavenly host." The angelic choirs, the cherubim and seraphim, who knew most about the value of the salvation brought to men. All heaven was moved with joy.

14. "Glory to God." For the coming of Jesus was the highest expression of God's glory, the fulness of his nature, his love, his goodness, which passed before Moses when he asked to see God's glory. "In the highest." (1) In the highest strains. Only the most exquisite music and song are worthy to express this theme. "And on earth peace." Including all welfare and prosperity and blessing. That which belongs to heaven, which makes heaven what it is, all conceivable good to body and to soul, is coming to earth through Jesus Christ, and has come in no small degree. "Good will toward men." Jesus expresses God's feelings toward men. He does not hate them for their sins; he is not repelled by their abominations so repulsive to his nature; but he loves them in spite of all, and does all that divine love and wisdom and power can do to save them from sin and its consequences.

SAYINGS FROM VICAR OF WAKEFIELD.

I chose my wife as she did her wedding gown, not for a fine, glossy surface, but for such qualities as would wear well.

As some men gaze with admiration at the colors of a tulip or the wings of a butterfly, so I was by nature an admirer of happy human faces.

The hours we pass with happy prospects in view are more pleasing than those crowned with fruition.

The single effort with which we stop short in the down-hill path to perdition is itself a greater exertion of virtue than a hundred acts of justice.

Those relations which describe the tricks and vices of mankind, by increasing our suspicion of life, retard our success.

That melancholy which is excited by objects of pleasure or inspired by sounds of harmony, soothes the heart instead of corroding it.

MAINE VICTIMS AT ARLINGTON.

Simple Religious Services and Honors of War Mark Reinterment.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—Upon the heights of Arlington cemetery the Maine dead brought from Havana by the battleship Texas yesterday were laid away in their final resting place with simple religious services and the impressive honors of war in the presence of the president, members of his cabinet, officers of the army and navy, and other representatives of the government. The caskets interred ranged row on row. Over each was spread an American ensign, upon which lay a wreath of galax leaves. Around the enclosure, shoulder to shoulder, were drawn up the cavalry of Fort Myer, to the right was a batallion of marines from the navy yard, to the left a detatchment of jackies from the Texas, in the flag-draped stand in the rear the president and his cabinet, Admiral Dewey, Major General miles and a distinguished group of officers of the army and navy, in their showy uniforms; while all around pressed the throng of people who had braved the snow and biting cold to pay their last tribute to the dead. There was a tender appropriateness in the fact that Captain Sigsbee, who was in command of the Maine when she was blown up, had charge of the ceremonies in honor of his men and that Father Chidwick, who was chaplain of the Maine, was there to perform the last rites.

KAISER PROFITS BY WAR.

Believed He Will Secure Territory in East Africa.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—The Anglo-German agreement remains a mystery, The Berlin Lokal Anzeiger's version having been quashed by official denial. All well informed diplomatists are convinced, however, that Germany will enlarge her colonial possessions in some quarter at the end of the war, and will have a free hand when she wants it in the future, in Asia Minor or elsewhere. It is not considered probable that Lord Salisbury has consented to the sale of Goa, Macao and Damao to Germany, but the future of East African possessions of Portugal was discussed without doubt at the foreign office with the German ambassador a year ago. The German emperor and Mr. Chamberlain are known to have held a prolonged consultation at Windsor a few weeks ago, and by the process of exclusion the diplomats have reached the conclusion that East Africa was the subject which interested them. It may be premature or unsafe to carry out these arrangements at present, in view of Russian reprisals in Herat and of French intrigues in Morocco, but the shrewdest observers in diplomatic circles forcast the ultimate occupation of Delagoa Bay by Great Britain and the enlargement of German East Africa southward to the Zambesi.

Russians Fighting With Boers.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—The Marseilles correspondent of the Daily Mail, telegraphing the substance of an interview with the Rus ian general, Gourko, eldest son of the famous Gourko, who is now about to start for Pretoria, says that the Russian officer made the following statement:

"I have been offered the command of a Boer army corps. In my own mind I am absolutely confident of the success of the Boers. You may take my word for it that thousands of Russians are now fighting under General Joubert."

Kaffirs are in Rebellion.

PRETORIA, Dec. 26, via Lorenzo Marquez, Dec. 30.—Commandant Swart reports from the laager at Alowyn's kop, near Zeorust, that he had an engagement on Friday, Dec. 22, with kaffirs, in the neighborhood of Derdorpoort. The kaffirs occupied a strongly fortified ridge and were well prepared for emergencies. After heavy fighting the burghers captured the kaffirs' position, losing three killed and five wounded.

Important Inventions.

DES MOINES, Dec. 28.—Patents have been allowed upon applications prepared and prosecuted by us for interesting subjects as follows:

To C. W. Cross, of Grinnell, for an auxiliary air heater adapted to be connected with a stove in such a manner that it will receive and direct the products of combustion and aid in warming and circulating air in a room, as required to maintain a uniform temperature, by admitting cool air at its bottom, heating it and discharging it at its top. An undivided half is assigned to W. S. Moore of the same place.

To J. Morgan, of Atlantic, for a plant-planting machine adapted to be advanced across a field by horses to set out cabbage and tobacco plants in rows at regular distances apart. A boy on the machine hands plants in succession to automatic plant holders on a wheel and as the wheel revolves it places the plants in a furrow opened in advance of the wheel by a furrow opener and a furrow closer immediately covers the roots and rollers pack the ground around the roots. An undivided half has been assigned to E. Whitney, of Chicago.

Disease Worse Than Guns.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—A dispatch to the Tribune from London says: "The Ladysmith list shows that typhoid fever and dysentry are more effective than the Boer artillery in reducing the strength of the garrison day by day. It is clear that General Buller will renew the attempt to relieve Ladysmith while Lord Roberts is on the sea. He is receiving reinforcements and fresh batteries and ought to be in a position to reopen hostilities in a week or ten days, unless he waits for the siege train.

Brood Sows in Heat.

To most of us it does not seem so very long ago since the heavy horses imported from France were grey in color and even the quality of grey that turns white with age. It was about this time too that Shorthorn cattle had to be solid red in color to be considered fashionable and worthy of a place in the pedigreed herds of the country. But how the fashions do change to be sure! Almost instantly in answer to the demand for light French horses the imported Percheron assumed a jet black coat such as old Brilliant and the grey horse seemed to be a back number. Just about then, too, the red Shorthorns were encountered by good old fashioned colored Scotch Shorthorns of red, roan and white coats and routed, too, and since then the solid red color has practically ceased to be considered an imperative necessity. This was a common sense move for it should always be remembered that a good beast is always a good color, whereas a fashionable coat may and does often hide a multitude of evils in beast and body alike. We cannot say that a good French horse was a better horse when black skinned than was his grey colored equal, and now we are glad to see that the Clydesdale folk have decided to admit to registry grey colored Clydesdale mares, many of which by the way were in every way equal to their bay and brown sisters as proved in plow and wagon. We presume that this change of policy as regards grey Clydes is partly due to the fact that in Great Britain just at present grey horses are in demand and scarce, although it is but a few years since a grey carriage horse was quite vulgar in the estimation of the "upper strata" of society who are the descendants of the good old-fashioned couples who simply would not have thought of driving to church on their wedding day behind anything except a pair of four-in-hand of dapple greys. Grey horses, too, are in demand for cavalry purposes in the British army and this may have had something to do with the return of grey into favor among breeders and dealers who are also not so particular now to reject a horse because he is some shade of chestnut or so-called "sorrel." Practical results are after all the main objects of the breeder of any class of animals and in our opinion color should not be set up as a barrier to progress so long as one particular color or combination of color (as with Aberdeen-Angus and Hereford cattle) is not the recognized peculiar characteristic of the breed.

We welcome the grey horse back to favor and will ever congratulate breeders who see above and beyond the mere fad of color.

Poultry Notes.

One of the essentials in the keeping of fowls healthy is to have the house dry. This is particularly the case in the winter, when the fowls have to be indoors for weeks at a time. A wet house is bad enough in the summer, when the fowls have to stay in it at night, but in the winter time it should never be tolerated, partly for the reason that the sun seldom has power enough in winter time to dry up moisture in the poultry house.

Science is all the time finding new ways to take care of surplus perishable products. Desiccating eggs promises to be a favorite way of disposing of them at times of the year when they are too cheap to pay a reasonable profit at retail. New machines for doing this work are from time to time being invented, and perhaps the day is not far distant when the price of eggs will be about uniform throughout the year. If the men that are doing this kind of work will simply be satisfied with what they can get for the eggs as treated naturally, it will be ultimately a great gain to the poultry interests. Unfortunately we may expect that the manufacturers of preservatives will get after the desiccators of eggs and persuade them that nothing will so ensure the keeping qualities of the eggs as a little preservative added. The result of that will be that the public will find it out and curtail their purchases in that direction. But the honest employment of methods of drying might greatly relieve the market at times of oversupply. Sooner or later the farmers' wife will learn to apply the method and the farmers' table will be cheaply supplied with eggs in the winter as in the summer.

Statistics of Cheese Factories.—Cheese inquiries are now occupying the attention of some of the force employed at the census office. Circulars and letters are being sent to managers, directors and owners of cheese factories and creameries of such character as will aid enumerators in compiling useful and accurate information regarding this important branch of dairying. Heretofore the changes in managers at the close of a season has rendered the making of a reliable report impossible. Director Merriam suggests that as this is the season when the factories close, those in charge prepare a detailed statement of the quantity of milk or cream purchased and the amount paid over it; the amount of butter or cheese produced; the amount received from the sale of each; the amount of capital invested in plant and machinery; and the amount paid in wages. The items should be varied properly to fit cases where factories or creameries are cooperative. In an interview the director stated, "This information will not be gathered before June 1, 1900, and as it must cover the year 1899, it is hoped that factory managers or owners will preserve the statements until the enumerators shall arrive to use them, next June."

CHILD OF WYOMING.

ROMANTIC HISTORY OF UNFORTUNATE FRANCES SLOCUM.

Stolen in 1778, When an Infant, by the Marauding Indians—Nearly Sixty Years Elapse Before Friends Trace Her—Would Not Go Home.

(Wabash, Ind., Letter.)

Charles E. Slocum, a banker of Defiance, Ohio, has determined to erect a monument to the memory of Frances Slocum, known to history as "the lost child of Wyoming." This unfortunate woman possesses a history as romantic as any that ever was known in this or any other country. As a child she was stolen by Indians and carried away into the wilderness in the early days of the republic. She was not discovered by her anxious relatives for nearly sixty years. Banker Slocum is a grand-nephew of Frances and recently visited the lonely little cemetery eleven miles west of this city where the dust of the lost child reposes.

The Slocums came over from England in the early days of settlement on these western shores. As early as 1637 there is record of one of them, Anthony Slocum, purchasing land near what is now Taunton, Mass. His son, Giles, was a member of the Society of Friends of Portsmouth, R. I., in 1638. Giles had a great-grandson, Joseph, who lived in the Wyoming valley, Pennsylvania, in the latter half of the eighteenth century. It was July 3, 1778, that the Indians, incited by the British, scattered death and destruction throughout the valley, shooting, scalping and burning. Most of the surviving members fled toward the Delaware river. Joseph Slocum and his family remained to face the danger.

On Nov. 2 of the same year four Indians from the Delaware tribe came toward the house. Two boys named Kingsley, who had escaped from Indian captivity, were standing near the door. One of these was shot and scalped. Mrs. Slocum was the only grown person in the house, as Jonathan Slocum and his father-in-law, Isaac Tripp, were absent from home. She seized her baby and rushed to the woods. Little Mary, her 12-year-old daughter, picked up Joseph, aged 2 years, and ran after her mother. Little Frances, aged 5, hid under the stairway, but the Indians spied her feet sticking out and dragged her from her hiding place. Ebenezer Slocum and the other Kingsley boy were also seized.

Then the mother ran from her retreat with tears pouring down her cheeks and besought the Indians to spare her children. Ebenezer, she said, could do them no good, as he was a cripple. So they dropped the boys and kept Frances only. A searching party was at once organized and it scoured the country for the lost child, but with no success. So the weary weeks passed into months and no tidings came of the little girl. The frantic mother lived in uncertainly as to her fate. Six weeks afterward Jonathan Slocum and Isaac Tripp were shot and scalped by the Indians and the little home was left in mourning.

The search for little Frances, the "lost child of Wyoming," was taken up by the brothers of the poor girl. In 1784 they went as far as Niagara in the hope of finding some trace of her and again in 1788 as far west as the wilderness of Ohio. The next year a council of all the Indians was called at Tioga point and the mother walked the entire distance thither to try to find her child. In 1797 the four brothers started again in search of their sister, driving cattle to cover up the purpose of their expedition. One of them, Isaac, came through the wilds of Canada as far as Detroit, where he arrived, nearly dead for want of food and exhausted with his long journey. In 1798 the brothers made another trip, but like the former one it was unavailing. In 1807 the mother died, leaving as a heritage the charge to her sons that the search be kept up. For twenty years they kept it up finally locating her near here. When a little girl Frances had accidentally had one of her fingers smashed by a hammer in the hands of one of her brothers. The brothers and their sister, Mrs. Towne, noticed that the aged Indian woman had an injured finger and asked her how it had been hurt. Then she told them that her little brother had let a hammer fall on her finger when she was a little girl in the home of her father. So they knew that this was their long-lost sister.

She told them that on the day when she was carried away the Indians had taken her to a cave in the mountains, where she cried all night until she went to sleep. The next day she saw her father's party hunting for her, but an Indian stood over her with a knife and threatened to kill her if she uttered a sound. The Indians then took her to Niagara, where the chief had her face painted, her hair dyed and she was dressed in Indian fashion. After two winters the Indians went to Detroit, where they lived for three years. Then they moved to Fort Wayne and lived there twenty years. Later Frances was taken to live near Peru, Ind. She was married to a Delaware Indian, but afterward became the wife of the Miami chief She-fan-can-oh. She was given the name of Mahconequa, or "Young Bear," and she had two daughters and two sons. By her strength of character and purity she gained great influence among the Indians and they venerated her as their queen.

The emotions of the brothers and Mrs. Towne on beholding their sister was intense, but Frances Slocum was a hardened, stoical, emotionless Indian woman. In reply to their entreaties to go home with them she replied: "I cannot, I cannot; I am an old tree. I cannot move about. I was a sapplin when they took me away. I am afraid I should die and never come back. I shall die here and lie in that graveyard. I am glad to see my white relatives, but I cannot go, I cannot go. I have done." This she said in her Indian tongue, as she had forgotten the use of English. She did pay a visit later to her old home, but returned and died March 9, 1847, at the age of 75 years. She said she had always received good treatment at the hands of the Indians and she took loving care of her children. Now the descendants of her father's family are going to erect a stone to mark her grave.

LINGUISTIC PRODIGIES.

Learned Men Who Master Fifty Different Tongues.

When one considers the difficulty of acquiring even a "nodding acquaintance" with two or three languages, it seems almost incredible that some men should be able to speak with all the fluency of a native in twenty, and even fifty, strange tongues. It is only a few months since Dr. Gottlieb Loitner, the most famous linguist of this generation, died at Bonn, in Germany. Dr. Leitner, who acted as interpreter to an army in the Crimean war, could speak with equal facility in no fewer than fifty languages; and many of the more abstruse eastern tongues he knew as intimately as his native German. But there have been phenomenal linguists in all ages, from the far-away days of Mithridates, king of Pontus, who could converse with the subjects in each of their twenty-five tongues; and from the days of Cleopatra, who never used an interpreter in her relations with the world's ambassadors. Pico della Mirandola, a learned Italian of the fifteenth century, was eloquent in twenty-two languages, and M. Fulgence Fresnel was familiar with twenty, and in the seventeenth century Nicholas Schmid, a German peasant, translated the Lord's Prayer into as many languages as there are weeks in a year. The greatest linguist of all time, however, was Cardinal Mezzofanti, who died half a century ago. Mezzofanti's linguistic range was so great that he could have conversed in a different tongue every week for two years without exhausting his vocabulary. In all he was familiar with 114 languages and dialects, and in most of them he could speak with such accuracy and purity of accent that he might have been, and often was, mistaken for a native.

She says she has spent six years in this work, and in her travels has visited the Holy Land, Italy, Egypt and England. She came here from Chicago, where she has been at work for the last two months.

A Famous Hindu Dead.

Swami Bhaskarananda, the famous Hindu Ascetic, of Benares, is dead. This devout Brahmin, who kept himself naked and self-immured, was visited by nearly all the Indian tourists during their stay at Benares, including the Prince of Wales. He spent his life in a rigid posture, giving no heed to his visitors, and patiently waited for death in the holy city, which, according to Hindu belief, means life everlasting. Although Swami was a celebrity little was learned by his visitors of his actual life or of the beliefs that dictated his peculiar asceticism.

We Eat to Please Ourselves
We Dress To Please Others

IT is one of the signs of civilization that a man is judged by his clothes and rightly so. Outward appearances are the first means by which we express consideration and respect for those with whom we come in contact. Under modern conditions it is a positive affront to good taste to appear in ill-fitting, poorly made apparel. This doesn't mean that a man must be continually on dress parade; on the contrary, this is common sense economy talk.

DIDN'T HIT BOB TOOMBS.

How a Big Georgia Politician Unwittingly Saved His Own Life.

Dan Bain gave me a new Toombs story recently, says the Atlanta Constitution. I call it new because it has never been printed. One night, when the legislature was in session, the old Markham house was crowded with statesmen and loungers. Gen. Toombs was there. Something had gone wrong at the capitol and he was mad. As usual, he took no pains to conceal his sentiments. When Bain entered the hotel he found the general talking excitedly with a crowd around him. Toombs objected to something said or done in the legislature and proceeded to "cuss out" the whole body. The eloquent talker was perfectly reckless. He threw off brilliant epigrams, epithets and outbursts of profanity until he almost equaled a volcano in the force, fury and fire of his eruptions. The loungers listened and laughed. They enjoyed it tremendously and looked at the politicians to see how they stood it. Among those present was a member from a middle Georgia county. He was a giant in stature, tall, broadshouldered and muscular. He was not in a good humor and Toombs irritated him. Finally he resented the general's remarks. "I'll be d——d if I stand your talk any longer," he said. "You are too personal, and if you repeat your statement I'll hit you!" This interested the crowd. The legislator towered over everybody, ready to strike the general. Toombs, in his fearless way, was about to say something when several of his friends gently drew him into the elevator and took him to his room. "I was just about to hit him," remarked the legislator. Just then a very small, delicate-looking man, with a pale face and mild blue eyes, walked up to the big politician. "Yes," said the little man, quietly, "I saw that you were about to hit him. That's why I came up." "I don't understand," replied the other. "I got close to you," continued the little man, "because I was going to kill you if you struck Gen. Toombs. I am fixed for it, and if you had touched him I would have shot you through the heart!" Saying this he tapped his hip pocket. The tall legislator in some confusion said something apologetic and explanatory and remembered an engagement elsewhere. "That little man," said Bain in conclusion, "was Col. John S. Hart, one of the bravest cavalry officers in the confederate service. He was afraid of nothing, and he meant just what he said. He would have killed that man if he had struck Toombs."

Gift of a Famous Flag.

One of the most interesting characters in Martha's Vineyard, Mass., is Mrs. Harriet Rebecca Stafford, or "Mother Stafford," now 80 years old, says the Boston Globe. In her cottage is a room devoted to patriotic relics and antiques. But the pride of her museum—the ensign of the Bon Homme Richard—is there no more, for she has presented the precious flag to the United States government. One of her heirlooms is a gold wedding ring worn by her grandmother 118 years ago. Harriet Rebecca wore this ring herself in 1855, when she became Mrs. John Barnum Ames, and the ring is of such potent virtue that she couldn't resist wearing it again when James Stafford proposed to her. James Stafford was the son of Lieut. Stafford, who rescued the flag from the British in the fight between the Bon Homme Richard and the Serapis, when the intrepid Jones told the British captain to sink him if he could, adding, by the way of emphasis: "If I must go to the devil I had rather strike to him than to you." It was through the marriage with Mr. Stafford that this genial old lady came into possession of the flag.

Book-Loving Children.

A child's literary life is a secret no adult can ever wholly penetrate, says the Woman's Home Companion. But when an enthusiastic temperament takes books as intimate companions there is reason for watching the result with anxiety. What is read and thought by day enters into dreams, works into the deepest recesses of our being, and becomes part of our brain itself. If a child talks seldom of what he reads, he thinks the more. Secretiveness sometimes hides a turbulent mental activity, and a shy exterior can conceal strange broodings. But an omniverous taste, which is very common, should not be left without some subtle, unobtrusive guidance. Most of us who have lived much with books are influenced today more than we should probably like to acknowledge by reminiscences of our childish literary life.

President Kruger's Father.

The bitter feeling which Paul Kruger cherishes toward the British is certainly not lessened by the memory that his own father was the man who fired the first shot at the English troops at Boomplatz in 1848, and by the further thought that he was one of those who were driven by the English to take part in the great "trek" of 1836. Again, in 1854, when the Boers petitioned the queen to be allowed to remain under the protection of the British flag, the elder Kruger was one of its signers. The answer of the duke of Newcastle, who returned the petition with the remark that it could not be entertained and that England had already extended its rule too far in Africa, has always been remembered by Kruger and his associates as an undying insult.

QUEER FOSSIL.

Jaw of a Huge Unclassified Animal Found in New Mexico.

Santa Fe New Mexican: The fossil remains of a strange prehistoric animal were discovered recently at Postmaster Nusbaum's ranch, at Teseuque. Alphonso Dockweiler, who has charge of digging a ditch through a ridge on the ranch, picked up a piece of petrified bone the shape of a large tongue, but with a row of twelve teeth along what seemed to be the tip of the tongue. He dug a little further and found the remainder of what seemed to be the jaw of an animal that was part ichthyosaurus and part plesiosaurus, with some of the characteristics of the pterodactyl, perhaps. The jaw consisted of about twenty layers of bone in the shape of a tongue, and each layer was armed with a dozen teeth, which showed that the animal was herbivorous and not carnivorous. These twenty layers were evidently the upper jaw of the animal. Mr. Dockweiler expects to find the lower jaw and perhaps all of the remains of the strange animal. As much as he has found he will bring to this city and from here ship it to the Smithsonian institution in Washington. Two layers of the jaw were brought to the city by J. G. Schumann and shown to friends, who were all puzzled by their unusual shape. It is well known that the surroundings of Santa Fe abound with submarine fossil remains, which seem to prove that in long-gone-by ages the site of the city was covered by a sea. Only half a mile up the arroyo and canyon that branch off Palace avenue, near the old brewery, pretty petrified seashells are to be found. At many other places there are unmistakable signs of the erosion of the waves and footprints of gigantic prehistoric amphibians, who made their home both in the water and on the land in the days when the highest peaks of the Rocky mountain range were only islands in a vast ocean.

Psalterium, Printed in Gutenberg's Shop, Worth Even More.

Fabulous sums are paid for copies of the earliest printed Bibles on account of their rarity. Yet it is known that many more were manufactured than have ever come to light, and every now and then we hear of another copy having been found in some garret or cellar amid the rubbish. The famous "Mazarin Bible" has been sold for more than $20,000, and this is called cheap, as it is one of the finest specimens of the printer's art ever produced, and, most interesting of all, was set up and published by Gutenberg in 1455, after three years of continuous labor. He printed only 100 copies, but eighty-five of these have never been found. It is called the Mazarin because the first copy to be discovered in modern times was in the library of Cardinal Mazarin. But there is another part of the Bible, called the "Psalterium," because it contains the Psalms only, which commands even a higher price, having been sold for $25,000, for but six copies are known to be in existence. It was printed by John Faust and Peter Schoeffer on parchment in Gutenberg's shop, and is the first printed book bearing the year and day of its publication on the title page. This inscription reads, "1457, on the eve of Ascension." Of course, all of the earliest Bibles were printed in Latin. The first complete Latin Bible with a date appeared in 1462, and is valued at $7,000. After that time many editions of the Bible appeared in all languages—German, English, French and Greek—and in 1514-1517 was the first polyglot Bible, one in which the Bible appeared in various languages side by side. The most valuable Bibles all date from the fifteenth or sixteenth centuries. After that no special value is attached to them.

Will Develop Japanese Mines.

The Japanese government intends to introduce in the next session of the diet a law freeing foreigners from all restrictions in regard to the mining business in Japan. The existing law prohibits them from becoming shareholders or partners in any mining company. By the new law such provision will be entirely done away with. It is evident that the government is beginning to realize that foreign capital will not come into the country unless foreign ownership privileges are first conceded. Mining enterprises requiring especially large amounts of capital, such privileges will now probably be granted. And it is likely that they will ultimately be extended to cover foreign ownership of real estate and industrial shares. It is quite evident that the mining resources of the empire are in an undeveloped state, and that they are arousing a growing interest and attention.

An Ancient Coin.

One of the prized curios of the Philadelphia mint is a coin which is 2,000 years old, and which was coined at the ancient mint of that other Philadelphia of the far east mentioned in the Bible. It is still in good condition, and the inscription is perfectly legible. The design on the face of the coin bears a striking resemblance to the Goddess of Liberty of our own currency, and underneath is the one word "Demus," which means "the people." On the other side is the figure of Diana, with her bow arched, and the inscription, "Diana, Friend of the Philadelphians." When this coin was struck off Philadelphia was the most important city of Lydia.

ANOTHER AIRSHIP.

Inventor Declares It Will Remain in Air a Week at a Time.

The Swiss newspapers announce the forthcoming "launch" of a new airship over—not on—the Lake of Constance, says the London News. Its inventor is Count von Zeppelin, a retired German officer, who has for many years studied the question of steering balloons. He now claims to have solved the problem of the light motor. An aeroplane built by him is reported to have developed sufficient power to tow a boat on the River Inn at a speed of nine miles an hour. To minimize the risks of an unforeseen fall the count has selected the Lake of Constance as the scene of his decisive experiment. Its area of over 300 square miles, will, he believes, be sufficient to enable him to execute all necessary evolutions. The vessel is "moored" at Friedrichshafen and is supported by sixty pontoons. There is a gas works in the vicinity. The inventor keeps the mechanism of his airship secret and has taken stringent precautions to warn off the curious. All that is known is that the vessel's proportions are immense—over 550 feet long and nearly fifty feet in diameter. It is cylindrical, with conical extremities, and is divided internally by strong partitions. The "hull" is of silk, stretched over a skeleton of aluminum. The power is supplied by two motors, placed beneath the cylinder, one at each end. The propelling principle is the ordinary screw, but there are three special devices for steering. Count von Zeppelin declares that his machine will be able to rise to a height of over 3,000 feet, lift a weight of nearly two tons, travel at a speed of ten yards a second, and remain in the air for a week at a time.

Meteors Prefer Morning.

An interesting and significant fact is that the average hourly number of meteors is only half as great in the evening as in the morning, and in the evening their velocity is lower, says Prof. C. A. Young in the New Lippincott for November. The reason is that at sunset we have before us the point in the heavens from which we are movin in our orbital journey around the sun, while in the morning we face the point toward which we are advancing; in the evening we are in the rear of the earth, at sunrise in front. This increase in the numbers and speed of the morning meteors is just what ought to happen if they are bodies moving indiscriminately in all directions under the sun's attraction, and with the velocity (about twenty-six miles a second) which a body would acquire in falling toward the sun from a distance very great as compared with the size of our planetary orbits.

A strange experience recently befell George Dietz, formerly a resident of Chester, Pa., but at the present time in the jewelry business in Honolulu. Mr. Dietz has recovered a watch which he lost over thirty years ago at Gettysburg. He was fighting for the north on that bloody battlefield when he dropped it. The watch was recently brought into the jeweler's shop by Harry Ellis of the Kansas volunteers. The soldier, who was bound to Manila, wanted to sell it. On being asked where he got it he said his father, who had found it on the battlefield of Gettysburg, had given it to him. The jeweler opened it and saw his name scratched on it. He lost no time in making a trade with the soldier.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

TALK ABOUT WOMAN'S USEFULNESS.

There Are Dangerous Allurements or Traps That Must Ever Be Avoided —"She Shall Be Called Woman"—Gen. II: 23.

God, who can make no mistake, made man and woman for a specific work and to move in particular spheres—man to be regnant in his realm; woman to be dominant in hers. The boundary line between Italy and Switzerland, between England and Scotland, is not more thoroughly marked than this distinction between the empire masculine and the empire feminine. So entirely dissimilar are the fields to which God called them, that you can no more compare them than you can oxygen and hydrogen, water and grass, trees and stars. All this talk about the superiority of one sex to the other is an everlasting waste of ink and speech. A jeweler may have a scale so delicate that he can weigh the dust of diamonds; but where are the scales so delicate that you can weigh in them affection against affection, sentiment against sentiment, thought against thought, soul against soul, a man's world against a woman's world? You come out with your stereotyped remark that a man is superior to woman in intellect; and then I open on my desk the swarthy, irontyped, thunder-bolted writings of Harriet Martineau and Elizabeth Browning and George Eliot. You come on with your stereotyped remark about woman's superiority to man in the item of affection; but I ask you where was there more capacity to love than in John the disciple—and Matthew Simpson the bishop and Henry Martyn, the missionary? The heart of those men was so large, that after you had rolled it into two hemispheres, there was room still left to marshal the hosts of heaven, and set up the throne of the eternal Jehovah. I deny to man the throne intellectual. I deny to woman the throne affectional. No human phraseology will ever decline the spheres; while there is an intuition by which we know when a man is in his realm, and when a woman is in her realm, and when either of them is out of it. No bungling legislature ought to attempt to make a definition, or to say: "This is the line and that is the line." My theory is, that if a woman wants to vote she ought to vote, and that if a man wants to embroider and keep house, he ought to be allowed to embroider and keep house. There are masculine women and there are effeminate men. My theory is that you have no right to interfere with any one's doing anything that is righteous. Albany and Washington might as well decree by legislation how a brown-thresher should fly, or how deep a trout should plunge, as to try to seek out the height and depth of woman's duty. The question of capricity will settle finally the whole question, the whole subject. When a woman is prepared to preach, she will preach, and neither conference nor presbytery can hinedr her. When a woman is prepared to move in highest commercial spheres, she will have gerat influence on exchange, and no boards of trade can hinder her. I want woman to understand that heart and brain can overfly any barrier that politicians may set up, and that nothing can keep her back or keep her down but the question of incapacity.

My chief anxiety is, not that woman have other rights accorded her; but that she, by the grace of God, rise up to the appreciation of the glorious rights she already possesses. First, she has the right to make home happy. That realm no one has ever disputed with her. Men may come home at noon or at night, and then tarry a comparatively little while; but she all day long governs it, beautifies it, sanctifies it. It is within her power to make it the most attractive place on earth. It is the only calm harbor in the world. You know as well as I do, that this outside world and the business world are a long scene of jostle and contention. The man who has a dollar struggles to keep it; the man who has it not struggles to get it. Prices up. Prices down. Losses. Gains. Misrepresentations. Underselling. Buyers depreciating; salesmen exaggerating. Tenants seeking less rent; landlords demanding more. Struggles about office. Men who are in trying to keep in; men out trying to get in. Slips. Tumbles. Defalcations. Panics. Catastrophes. Oh, woman! thank God you have a home and that you may be queen in it. Better be there than wear a Victoria's coronet. Better be there than carry the purse of a princess. Your abode may be humble, but you can, by your faith in God, and your cheerfulness of demeanor, gild it with splendors such as an upholsterer's hand never yet kindled. There are abodes in every city—humble, two stories; four plain, unpapered rooms; undesirable neighborhood; and yet there is a man who would die on the threshold rather than surrender. Why? It is home. Whenever he thinks of it he sees angels of God hovering about it. The ladders of heaven are let down to that house. Over the child's rough crib there are the chantings of angels that broke over Bethlehem. It is home. These children may come up after awhile, and they may win high position, and they may have an affluent residence; but they will not until their dying day forget that humble roof, under which their father rested, and their mother sang, and their sisters played. Oh, if you would gather up all tender memories, all the lights and shades of the heart, all banquetings and reunions, all filial, fraternal, paternal and conjugal affections, and you had only just four letters with which to spell out that height, and depth, and length, and breadth, and magnitude, and eternity of meaning, you would, with streaming eyes, and trembling voice, and agitated hand, write it out in those four living capitals, H-O-M-E.

When you want to get your grandest idea of a queen, you do not think of Catherine of Russia, or of Anne of England, or of Marie Theresa of Germany; but when you want to get your grandest idea of a queen, you think of the plain woman who sat opposite your father at the table, or walked with him arm-in-arm down life's pathway; sometimes to the thanksgiving banquet, sometimes to the grave, but always together—soothing your petty griefs, correcting your childish waywardness, joining in your infantile sports, listening to your evening prayers, toiling for you with needle or at the spinning wheel, and on cold nights wrapping you up snug and warm. And then at last on that day when she lay in the back room dying, and you saw her take those thin hands with which she had toiled for you so long, and put them together in a dying prayer that commended you to the God whom she had taught you to trust—Oh, she was the queen! The chariots of God came down to fetch her; and as she went up all heaven rose up. You cannot think of her now without a rush of tenderness that stirs the deep foundations of your soul, and you feel as much a child again as when you cried on her lap; and if you could bring her back again to speak just once more your name, as tenderly as she used to speak it, you would be willing to throw yourself on the ground and kiss the sod that covers her, crying: "Mother! mother!" Ah, she was the queen—she was the queen! Now, can you tell me how many thousand miles a woman like that would have to travel down before she got to the ballot box? Compared with this work of training kings and queens for God and eternity, how insignificant seems all this work of voting for alderman and common councilmen, and sheriffs, and constables, and mayors, and presidents! To make one such grand woman as I have described, how many thousands would you want of those people who go in the round of fashion and dissipation, going as far toward disgraceful apparel as they dare go, so as not to be arrested by the police—their behavior a sorrow to the good and a carricature to the vicious, and an insult to that God who made them women and not gorgons, and tramping on, down through a frivolous and dissipated life, to temporal and eternal damnation.

Oh, woman, with the lightning of your soul, strike dead at your feet all these allurements to dissipation and to fashion. Your immortal soul cannot be fed on such garbage. God calls you up to empire and dominion. Will you have it? Oh, give God your heart, give to God all your best energies; give to God all your culture; give to God all your refinement; give yourself to him for this world and the next. Soon all these bright eyes will be quenched, and these voices will be hushed. For the last time you will look upon this fair earth. Father's hand, mother's hand, sister's hand will no longer be in yours. It will be night, and there will come up a cold wind from the Jordan, and you will start. Will it be a lone woman on a trackless moor? Ah, no! Jesus will come up in that hour and offer his hand, and he will say: "You stood by me when you were well; now I will not desert you when you are sick." One wave of his hand, and the storm will drop; and another wave of his hand and midnight will break into midnoon; and another wave of his hand and the chamberlains of God will come down from the treasure-houses of heaven, with robes lustrous, blood-washed and heaven-glinted, in which you will array yourself for the marriage supper of the Lamb. And then with Mariam, who struck the timbrel of the Red sea; and with Deborah, who led the Lord's host into the fight; and with Hannah, who gave her Samuel to the Lord; and with Mary who rocked Jesus to sleep while there were angels singing in the air; and with the sisters of charity, who bound up the battle-wounds of the Crimea, you will, from the challice of God, drink to the soul's eternal rescue.

Your dominion is home, O woman! What a brave fight for home the women of Ohio made some ten or fifteen years ago, when they banded together and in many of the towns and cities of that state marched in procession, and by prayer and Christian songs shut up more places of dissipation than were ever counted. Were they opened again? Oh, yes. But is it not a good thing to shut up the gates of hell for two or three months? It seemed that men engaged in the business of destroying others did not know how to cope with this kind of warfare. They knew how to fight the Maine liquor law, and they knew how to fight the National Temperance society, and they knew how to fight the Sons of Temperance and Good Samaritans; but when Deborah appeared upon the scene, Sisera took to his feet and got to the mountains. It seems that they did not know how to contend against "Coronation," and "Old Hundred," and "Brattle Street," and "Bethany," they were so very intangible. These men found they could not accomplish much against that kind of warfare, and in one of the cities a regiment was brought out all armed to disperse the women. They came down in battle array; but oh, what poor success! for that regiment was made up of gentlemen, and gentlemen do not like to shoot women with hymn books in their hands. Oh, they found that gunning for female prayer-meetings was a very poor business! No real damage was done, although there was threat of violence after threat of violence all over the land. I really think if the women of the east had as much faith in God as their sisters of the west had, and the same recklessness of human criticism, I really believe that in one month three-fourths of the grog-shops of our cities would be closed, and there would be running through the gutters of the streets Burgundy, and Cognac, and Heidsieck, and old Port, and Schiedam Schnapps, and lager beer, and you would save your fathers, and your husbands, and your sons, first, from a drunkard's grave, and second, from a drunkard's hell! To this battle for home let all women rouse themselves. Thank God for our early home. Thank God for our present home. Thank God for the coming home in heaven.

One twilight, after I had been playing with the children for some time, I lay down on the lounge to rest. The children said, play more. Children always want to play more. And, half asleep and half awake, I seemed to dream this dream: It seemed to me that I was in a far-distant land—not in Persia, although more than oriental luxuriance crowned the cities; nor the tropics—although more than tropical fruitfulness filled the gardens; nor in Italy—although more than Italian softness filled the air. And I wandered around, looking for thorns and nettles, but I found none of them grew there. And I walked forth, and I saw the sun rise, and I said: "When will it set again?" and the sun sank not. And I saw the people in holiday apparel, and I said: "When do they put on workingman's garb again, and delve in the mine, and swelter at the forge?" but neither the garments nor the robes did they put off. And I wandered in the suburbs, and I said: "Where do they bury the dead of this great city?" and I looked along by the hills where it would be most beautiful for the dead to sleep, and I saw castles and towns and battlements; but not a mausoleum nor monument nor white slab could I see. And I went into the great chapel of the town and I said: "Where do the poor worship? where are the benches on which they sit?" and a voice answered: "We have no poor in this great city." And I wandered out, seeking to find the place where were the hovels of the destitute; and I found mansions of amber and ivory and gold, but no tear did I see or sigh hear. I was bewildered, and I sat under the shadow of a great tree, and I said: "What am I, and whence comes all this?" And at that moment there came from among the leaves, skipping up the flowery paths and across the sparkling waters, a very bright and sparkling group; and when I saw their step I knew it, and when I heard their voices I thought I knew them; but their apparel was so different from anything I had ever seen, I bowed a stranger to strangers. But after awhile, when they had clapped their hands and shouted: "Welcome! welcome!" the mystery was solved, and I saw that time had passed and eternity had come, and that God had gathered us up into a higher home; and I said: "Are we all here?" and the voices of innumerable generations answered: "All here;" and while tears of gladness were raining down our cheeks, and the branches of Lebanon cedars were clapping their hands, and the towers of the great city were chiming their welcome, we began to laugh, and sing, and leap, and shout: "Home! home! home!"

And then I felt a child's hand on my face, and it woke me up. The children wanted more play. Children always want to play more.

STRANGE PROPHECIES.

Molay, the Grand Master of the Templars, Predicted Truly.

Clement V. and Philip IV. procured the condemnation of Molay, the grand master of the templars, to the stake, says Chamber's Journal. As he was led to execution Molay cited his persecutors to appear before God's throne, the king within forty weeks and the pope within forty days. Within these respective times both died. Rienzi, the last of the tribunes, condemned to death Fra Moriale. When he pronounced the sentence the culprit summoned the judge to meet death himself within the month, and within the month Rienzi was assassinated. In 1575 Nanning Koppezoon, a Roman catholic, tortured to death during the religious strife in the Netherlands, recanted his extorted confession when on the way to the scaffold. A clergyman, Jurian Epeszoon, tried to drown his voice by clamorous prayer. The victim summoned him to meet him within three days at the bar of God, and Epeszoon went home and died within that time. While at the stake Wishart openly denounced Cardinal Beaton: "He shall be brought low, even to the ground, before the trees which have supplied these fagots have shed their leaves." The trees were but in the bravery of their May foliage when the bleeding body of the cardinal was hung by his murderers over the battlements of St. Andrew's.

Good Fortune.

The following story is classed under "True Animal Stories," but is really a fish story: Not long ago a hawk caught a fish in Long Island Sound, but while flying with it to the woods to devour it at leisure, the fish floundered from the hawk's hold and dropped into a farmer's yard, where a big mastiff was sitting. The dog caught the fish as it came down, and the hawk swooped after it, but the dog turned and ran into the house, placing his trophy, yet alive, at the feet of his mistress. It proved to be a large bluefish, and it was served up that night to an appreciative family. The dog ever since has been seen to sit in the same place at the same time, evidently impressed with the belief that his good fortune may be repeated.

NIGHT ATTACK REPULSED.

Boers Fail in Attempt to Drive British from Colesberg.

FIFTY KILLED AND WOUNDED.

Rensburg, Jan. 4.—About daybreak 1,000 Boers, supposed to be re-enforcements, advanced on the left from Norval's Pont and came in contact with the pickets of the Inniskilling dragoons. Our men retired at first, but rallied and charged on the Boers, killing several and wounding many. The enemy fled to sheltered kopjes and opened a terrible rifle fire. The Berkshires and Suffolks replied, and there was a lengthy fusillade.

The horse artillery advanced with four guns and opened a deadly shell fire on the Boer riflemen, who retired. Then there was an artillery duel, the Boers using four guns and two Maxims.

The Tenth hussars then advanced, supported by a section of the horse artillery. The Boers on the right retired, leaving 200 men to hold the hill and protect their retreat.

Our artillery thoroughly searched the hill, while 150 mounted infantry dismounted and advanced under cover of the fire of the guns. They stormed and carried the hill, killing and wounding fifty, while nineteen were taken prisoners. We suffered no losses.

During the fighting the Inniskilling dragoons effected a surprise movement and charged on the retreating Boers. They killed seven and cut their way clear through.

Two British officers, who mistook the Boers for the New Zealanders, were captured.

The Boer attack on the position was very gallant and determined, but it was frustrated by the British vigilance. The Boers gained and held a small kopje and commenced a turning movement. The British then opened a withering fire, which the burghers were unable to withstand, and they broke away. The Tenth hussars started in pursuit of the Boers. Major Harvey, commanding the hussars, was killed while leading his men, and Major Alexander, the second in command, was wounded.

Gen. French has been re-enforced with a battery of field artillery and a battalion of infantry.

"The Boers appear to fear that their retreat is being cut off. The road toward the bridges across the Orange river is commanded by three British guns."

London, Jan. 6.—A dispatch to the Daily Telegraph from Frere camp, dated Friday, Jan. 5, says:

"A strong cavalry reconnaissance under Lord Dundonald proceeded westward this morning toward Springfield, where firing is proceeding.

"There is a revival of the report that the Boers are short of provisions. Gen. Buller's army is eager for the advance.

"There has been firing today at Ladysmith and at Colenso."

Gen. Gatacre's report of the Molteno affair shows it was merely a determined attack on a police outpost, which was first announced from Pretoria, December 30. The Mafeking dispatch says: "There was a sortie today, with the view of capturing the Boer earthworks, but it was unsuccessful. The works were crowded with Boers awaiting the assault, and a hail of bullets forced the British to retire, killing and wounding a number."

The British storming party numbered eighty men, of which number twenty-one were killed and thirty-three wounded.

No Need of Foreign Gunners.

Amsterdam, Jan. 8.—At an interview Dr. Leyds, the diplomatic representative of the Transvaal, said the German steamer Bundesrath, which was seized a few days ago by the British, certainly did not carry contraband of war ordered by the Transvaal. If German artillerymen were on board the vessel, as alleged by the British, they must have been voyaging for their own purposes. He knew nothing about them.

The Transvaal, he added, did not need foreign gunners. The reports concerning the number of foreign artillerymen in the Boer army were grossly exaggerated. The only two employed were ex-non-commissioned officers of the Netherlands army.

Dr. Leyds said in conclusion that he believed the United States would possibly be induced to intervene in the South African war under the influence of public opinion in that country.

Free-Staters Tired of War.

London, Jan. 8.—The Daily Mail has the following dispatch from Rensburg, dated Jan. 4: "Some Free-Staters sent a petition to President Steyn asking to return home. He replied that they had crossed the border without permission, and, as they had no money to pay the damage done, they must pay for it with their blood."

Tells of a Kaffir Uprising.

Rotterdam, Jan. 8.—The Nieuve Rotterdamische Courant has a sensational story from Africa that the Kaffirs on the northeast frontier of the Transvaal, instigated by the British, have murdered Boer women and children.

To Report for Duty.

Berlin, Jan. 8.—The Hamburg Lokal Blatt announced that the navy department had ordered all the marines now on furlough to report for duty at once at their respective stations in Kiel and Wilhelmshaven.

The report that Germany will send warships to South Africa or make any other naval demonstration is contradicted here, though it is officially stated that Germany is prepared for any emergency.

Chamberlain Is Accused.

Brussels, Jan. 8.—The Independence Belge prints the first installment of what purports to be correspondence that was suppressed by the British parliamentary commission that investigated Dr. Jameson's raid into the Transvaal. The correspondence, according to the newspaper, establishes Colonial Secretary Chamberlain's complicity in the raid.

Award Has Not Been Decided.

Berlin, Jan. 8.—The rumor that the Swiss arbitration tribunal has decided to award £20,000,000 ($100,000,000) to the British claimants in the Delagoa railroad case is received here with ridicule, since the total amount demanded by all concerned does not exceed £4,000,000.

It is said the rendering of a decision in the case cannot possibly be looked for before February.

No News from Buller.

London, Jan. 6.—There is still no important news from the front, but the silence which has descended on Gen. Buller's huge force at the Tugela river is believed to be the prelude of another attempt to reach Ladysmith. Meanwhile the extraordinary tenacity the Boers are displaying around Colesberg, where they even assume the offensive, tends to detract from the success Gen. French is supposed to have achieved.

Britain Will Reply at Once.

Washington, Jan. 8.—Ambassador Choate cabled to the state department Friday that Lord Salisbury would give "an immediate consideration and reply" to this country's representation in the matter of the seizure of flour on board the Mashona, Beatrice and Marie near Delagoa bay. The definite answer is expected within forty-eight hours.

Elude the Boers.

Frere Camp, Natal, Jan. 4.—The lieutenant, sergeant and five men who were reported missing from Capt. Thornycroft's patrol, which found the enemy in some force at the Little Tugela bridge Jan. 3, when their presence was discovered by the Boer scouts, having been hotly chased, eluded the Boers and returned to camp.

Vast Shipments of Food.

New York, Jan. 8.—Shippers at this port are sending unusually large quantities of provisions to South Africa to help supply the big British army there. It is said that there are munitions of war aboard some of the ships, but the agents deny it.

Boer Guns Wrecked.

Frere Camp, Jan. 8.—A native who has arrived here reports that two of the Boer guns at Tugela river have been knocked over by the British naval guns. One of the wrecked guns is a forty-pounder.

Boers Reoccupy Dordrecht.

Cape Town, Jan. 8.—A dispatch from Cala, Cape Colony, to the Cape Times states that 700 Boers have reoccupied Dordrecht. The Boers blew up a railway bridge and culvert.

Webster Davis at Cape Town.

Cape Town, Jan. 8.—Webster Davis, United States assistant secretary of the interior, is visiting the several centers of South Africa.

Victory for Baden-Powell.

London, Jan. 6.—It is rumored at Cape Town that Col. Baden-Powell has again defeated the Boers at Mafeking.

LISBON APPEALS TO THE POWERS.

Portugal Sends Note to Governments of Europe.

Berlin, Jan. 8.—The Portuguese minister at Berlin, the Vicomte de Pindella, in an interview Friday stated that Portugal, on learning of the seizure of the German mail steamer Bundesrath, immediately directed a note to all the powers taking a strong position on Great Britain's action.

A Zurich telegram states that the arbitrators of the English-Portuguese dispute are not ready to announce their decision, and that both sides are endeavoring to prolong the case for another year by raising new issues.

No Ally for Germany.

Cologne, Jan. 8.—The Berlin correspondent of the Magdeburg Zeitung, who has access to semi-official information, repudiates the charge made by the newspapers that the government is acting in a weak-kneed manner in the present difficulty with Great Britain. The correspondent adds: "Those who advocate sharp action ignore the fact that Germany, in entering into a conflict with Great Britain, would stand alone, and that France is eagerly awaiting a more serious Anglo-German dispute."

Hint at Anti-British Coalition

Berlin, Jan. 8.—The seizure of the Bundesrath remains the dominant topic of the German press. Influential papers like the Berliner Tageblatt, Cologne Volks Zeitung, Berliner Neueste Nachrichten, Hamburger Correspondenz and the semi-official Berliner Post strongly hint at the possibility of Germany's forming an anti-British coalition with Russia and France.

In Tokio, there are seven crematories and the cost of cremation is so low that several of the old-style undertakers have been forced out of business.

Half a Bottle Cured Me

"About thirty years ago I bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor to stop my hair from falling out. One-half a bottle cured me. A few days ago my hair began to fall out again. I went to the medicine shelf and found the old bottle of Hair Vigor just as good as when I bought it."—J. C. Baxter, Braidwood, Ill., Sept. 27, 1899.

Keeps Thirty Years

Ayer's Hair Vigor is certainly the most economical preparation of its kind on the market. A little of it goes a long way. And then, what you don't need now you can use some other time just as well.

It doesn't take much of it to stop falling of the hair, restore color to gray hair, cure dandruff, and keep the hair soft and glossy. There's a great deal of good and an immense amount of satisfaction in every bottle of it.

The Boston Transcript tells a story of a man who has a class of boys in natural history. One of the subjects which he took up was butterflies and moths, and he told the children a good deal about the chrysalides and cocoons. After he had got the boys well instructed, he showed one of the smallest of them one of the cocoons, and asked: "What butterfly is this the cocoon of?" Then the little boy looked up and said, slowly and respectfully: "My papa says that all cocoons look alike to him!"

A Boston Man Pleased.

In conversation with some friends, a prominent Boston man told of his sufferings from rheumatism and nervousness, and one of his friends gave him some advice, which will be mentioned later, and which has proven to be of incalculable value.

To successfully act on the advice, it was necessary to make a trip of over 2,000 miles, but he undertook it, and now thanks his friend for the advice, as he finds himself fully relieved of his old trouble and has returned to his home feeling able to cope with his business demands, a new man.

The advice given was to go to Hot Springs, South Dakota, and there take the baths and enjoy the finest climate of any health resort in America.

If this man was satisfied after making a long trip, those residing within a few hundred miles and similarly afflicted can certainly afford to try it, or rather can't afford to neglect to try it.

When Henry Clay was stumping Kentucky for re-election, at one of his mass-meetings an old hunter of wide political influence said: "Well, Harry, I've always been for you, but because of that vote" (which he named,) "I'm goin' agin you." "Let me see your rifle," said Clay. It was handed up to him. "Is she a good rifle?" "Yes." "Did she ever miss fire?" "Well, yes, once." "Why didn't you throw her away?" "The old hunter thought a moment and then said, "Harry, I'll try you agin." And Harry was elected.

A New Star.

Big resourceful Texas is famed for its great undertakings. The newest and brightest star which has shot athwart its horizon is the wonderful town of La Porte, located on Galveston Bay midway between Houston and Galveston in the celebrated Coast Country of Texas. A happy trinity of pluck, brains and capital is here found at work building up a great deepwater seaport city. Extensive public work is under way including wharfs, docks and water front shipping facilities. The U. S. Government is soon to deepen the channel, thus enabling the largest ocean vessels to receive and discharge cargoes at La Porte.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

FARM AND GARDEN.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture, Viticulture and Floriculture.

Horticultural Observations.

The question of whether bees puncture grapes has been discussed from various standpoints for a good many years, and the conclusions reached by most thinkers and investigators on the subject are that bees do not puncture grapes, but suck the juice of grapes only after they have burst open or been bitten by birds. Prof. R. L. Taylor of the Michigan Experiment Station has conducted some experiments that would seem to put the question at rest. His observations were that the bees worked only on the Delaware and Lady grapes, varieties that burst open badly in wet seasons. Prof. Taylor placed 1,000 sacks on clusters of thirteen different varieties of grapes so that the bees could not get at them. Toward the close of the experiment it was found that the grapes inclosed in sacks were suffering more than those that were left uncovered, and many of the grapes had burst open. The experimenter concluded that the sucking away of the juice of the grapes by the bees is a direct benefit rather than an injury, in that these juices are prevented from flowing upon sound grapes, and thus increasing the amount of the injury by the cracking of the skin.

The question of reforesting burned-over areas is of importance to all interested in forestry and incidentally in horticulture. When large areas are burned over it takes many years to cover them with anything, even with grasses. When a small space only is covered, the heat is not so intense as to destroy all plant germs in the soil, but in the case of great fires even the fertility, with all seeds in the soil, is destroyed. Some recent investigations in Colorado showed that regions that had been burned over in 1881 had not begun to show any kind of tree growth till six years afterward, and that thirteen years afterward small pines only were found, and though these trees were found on investigation to be seven years old, they had attained a height of only twenty inches. To fully comprehend what this means one should measure off twenty inches in height from any object—the floor or ground—and remember that this height represents seven years of growth. At such a rate, how long will it take to cover that region with a fair-sized forest? Another region was burned over in 1890, and four years afterward not a sign of vegetation had appeared, except here and there a straggling blade of grass or sedge. Forest fires not only destroy immense supplies of timber, but destroy the humus in the soil to such an extent that it is rendered nearly sterile for generations. Fires are the greatest foes to forests, and their prevention should engage the best efforts of the government.

A New Industry.

From Farmers' Review: Favorable conditions for the growth of what is known as the Holland bulbs have been discovered in the western part of the state of Washington, in San Juan county. This county is unique in that it consists almost entirely of islands, some 200 in number, surrounded by water which never reaches a lower temperature than 43 degrees Fahrenheit in winter, nor higher than 54 degrees in summer. This equable temperature, together with the copious rains of that region, make it possible to achieve results in the raising of bulbs which long-continued experiments in other parts of the United States have not been able to produce.

Mr. George Gibbs of Orcus island, after carefully studying the soil, climate and temperature of San Juan county for several years, in the fall of 1892 planted a quantity of bulbs which he allowed to remain in their beds until the summer of 1894, when he found an enormous increase in all varieties. Not only was there a phenomenal increase in numbers, but the bulbs had also attained an unusual size, some tulip bulbs measuring seven and one-half inches in circumference. The blooms obtained from these bulbs are exceptionally fine and well developed, and are ready for the market two weeks earlier than those raised on the mainland.

About 400 tulip and hyacinth bulbs are now planted in Lincoln park, Chicago, which have been sent there by Mr. Gibbs from Washington, and their development is being watched with much interest by those in charge.

Preserving Fence Posts.

The lime treatment is as good as any, and the cheapest. The only effect of an antiseptic for preserving timber is to remove the acids of the wood, and to fill the cells with an indestructible mineral deposit, thus preventing decay, says H. S. in Rural New Yorker. After much practice with the various timber preservatives for use in such special cases, as in mines, and for bridges, I have not learned of any material better than common lime. It has been found so effective in this way, that ships are now in existence and seaworthy in every way, which are over a century old, and have been all that time carrying lime as their principal cargoes. Timber has been found in ancient buildings, perfectly sound after centuries of burial in lime or cement mortar. From some experience, I am satisfied that the lime treatment, simple and cheap as it is, is equally effective as the various other treatments by much more expensive materials.

How to Use It.—My method has been to saturate the timber which has been put into bridges, cross ties on railroads, and in mines for posts, in hot lime in this way: A pit is dug large enough to hold a convenient lot of posts set on end, fresh quicklime is laid in the bottom six inches deep. The timber is laid or set on end in this pit—for fence posts, this way is most convenient. The spaces between the posts are filled with the small broken lime, room being left for the lime to swell as it slakes, and when the pit is filled, water is thrown on to slake the lime into a paste, as if for mortar. The lime, in expanding, fills in tightly between the posts, and making a great heat, drives the moisture out of the timber, and seasons it. Water is added as the lime slakes, until it is a semi-liquid mass. Then as the lime and the heated timber cool, the vacuum created in the timber by the previous heating, is immediately filled by the lime water, and the cellulose, with all the acids which are neutralized in this way, becomes mineralized, and decay of the timber is prevented. There is nothing new in this way, any more than there was in the advice given to the leper to "go wash and be clean." But it is quite as effective a way as any of the more costly chemical methods of treating timber to increase its durability or prevent its decay. Of course, it is necessary to immerse the posts in the pit deep enough to treat them as far as, or something more than, the timber will be set in the ground, and the timber should be stripped of the bark.

Carpet Grass.

We herewith illustrate paspalum compressum, better known as Carpet grass. A government report says of it: This is apparently indigenous along the coast, and is slowly spreading northward, being now somewhat common in Mississippi and Alabama. It is undoubtedly one of the best pasture grasses for sandy soils, and it will bear more hard trampling and close grazing than any other species. On heavy soils it is often crowded out by Bermuda grass and other species, but on light soils of even moderate fertility it will soon cover the ground to the exclusion of all others. It is a grass that soon comes in when sandy soils are pastured closely, and will choke out the broom sedge and other less desirable sorts. It is easily destroyed by plowing and never becomes a weed. It rarely grows large enough to be cut for hay, though on the prairies of southwestern Louisiana, where it is known as "petit gazon," it reaches a height of two feet or more and covers a large part of the native meadows. The seed is rarely found in the market, but the plant is easily propagated by mowing when the seed is ripe and scattering the hay over the field where the grass is wanted. Even if but few plants should appear the first year, the seed will soon be spread by stock so as to cover the entire field. It bears heavy frost without injury, and so affords considerable grazing during the winter. It is often used as lawn grass on soils too light and sandy for Bermuda, and is excellent for that purpose, though its rather light color makes it less attractive than a grass having a richer green.

Grasses as Sand Soil Binders.

A government report says: The large areas of drifting sands along the Atlantic, Pacific, and Gulf coasts and also about the Great Lakes and along some of our larger rivers, which, because of their unstable character, are a serious menace to life and property, could in many cases be reclaimed and converted into valuable pasture and meadow lands. The study of the grasses suitable for binding these sands has been extended along the Atlantic coast as far south as Florida, also to various points on the Pacific coast and along the Columbia River in Washington and Oregon. Several native sand binders of great promise have been discovered, and their utilization in a practical way has been undertaken. The seaside blue grass, a native of the sand dunes along the Oregon coast, where it grows abundantly, is said to be a good forage grass as well as an excellent sand binder, and has been successfully introduced along the sand dunes of Lake Michigan. The binding of drifting sands and embankments about fortifications along the coast is a serious problem which confronts the authorities of the war department.

U. S. SENATOR ROACH

Says Peruna, the Catarrh Cure, Gives Strength and Appetite.

Hon. W. N. Roach, United States Senator from North Dakota.

Hon. W. N. Roach, United States Senator from North Dakota, personally endorses Peruna, the great catarrh cure and tonic. In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Company, at Columbus, Ohio, written from Washington, D. C., Senator Roach says:

"Persuaded by a friend, I have used Peruna as a tonic, and I am glad to testify that it has greatly helped me in strength, vigor and appetite. I have been advised by friends that it is remarkably efficacious as a cure for the almost universal complaint of catarrh."

Peruna is not a guess, nor an experiment; it is an absolute, scientific certainty. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. Peruna has no substitutes—no rivals. Insist upon having Peruna. Let no one persuade you that some other remedy will do nearly as well. There is no other systematic remedy for catarrh but Peruna. Address the Peruna Medicine Company, Columbus, Ohio, for a free book on catarrh, written by Dr. Hartman.

AN APPEAL TO HUMANITY GENERALLY

We need your assistance in announcing to the world the GREATEST REMEDY that Science has ever produced, and you need our assistance to secure relief for yourself and friends through SWANSON'S "5 DROPS."

A REMEDY SUPREME As surely as the American Navy has conquered and will conquer all that opposes it, so will "5 DROPS" unfailingly conquer all diseases like Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Catarrh of all kinds, ASTHMA, Dyspepsia, Backache, Sleeplessness, Nervousness, Heart Weakness, Toothache, Earache, Creeping Numbness, Bronchitis, Liver and Kidney Troubles, etc., etc., or any disease for which we recommend it. "5 DROPS" is the name and the dose. "5 DROPS" is perfectly harmless. It does not contain Salicylate of Soda nor Opiates in any form. The Child can use it as well as the Adult.

5 DROPS [TRADE MARK]

Read carefully what Mr. L. R. Smith, of El Dorado Springs, Mo., writes us under date of Nov. 27, 1899, also Martan Bowers, of Caraghar, Ohio, under date of Dec. 16th, 1899:

NEURALGIA

I do not know how to express how wonderful I think your "5 DROPS" medicine is. I was suffering intensely with NEURALGIA and thought for a month that I would have to die. One day a lady called to see me and brought me an advertisement of your "5 DROPS." I resolved to try it and sent for a sample bottle. Have been taking it for three weeks and have not had an attack of suffering since I took the first dose. I believe it has saved my life. This statement is positively true. I shall also take pleasure in recommending your "5 DROPS" for the cure of NEURALGIA.
L. R. SMITH,

RHEUMATISM Your "5 DROPS" came to hand on the 11th of last month and was glad to receive it for I was suffering at the time with untold agonies. The first dose helped me out of my pain on short notice. Bless the name of God for it. It will do all you say it will and more too. I had severe pains all over my body, when night came I could not sleep. The worst pain was in my left leg. I could not put my foot to the floor without suffering great pain. Have used four different kinds of medicine for RHEUMATISM and got no relief until I got your "5 DROPS," which gave me immediate relief as above stated. MARTAN BOWERS, Box 83, Caraghar, Ohio, Dec. 16, 1899.

30 DAYS to enable suffers to give "5 DROPS" at least a trial, we will send a sample bottle, prepaid by mail for 25c. A sample bottle will convince you. Also, large bottles (300 doses) $1.00, 6 bottles for $5. Sold by us and agents. AGENTS WANTED in New Territory. Don't wait! Write now!

IT is one of the signs of civilization that a man is judged by his clothes and rightly so. Outward appearances are the first means by which we express consideration and respect for those with whom we come in contact. Under modern conditions it is a positive affront to good taste to appear in ill-fitting, poorly made apparel. This doesn't mean that a man must be continually on dress parade; on the contrary, this is common sense economy talk.

How the Last Man May Die.

Astronomers tell us that the day must come when the earth will, like the moon, wheel through the heavens a dead and barren mass of matter—airless, waterless, lifeless. But long, long before that time man will be extinct, will have disappeared so utterly that not so much as the blackened skeleton of a human being will be visiable on the millions of square miles of surface of this planet. Unless by some huge and universal cataclysm the whole race is swept at once into eternity, it is but reasonable to suppose that man, like any other race of animals, will disappear slowly, and that eventually there will be but a single individual left—some old, old man, gray headed and bearded, and left to wander alone in solitude that can be imagined but not described. How will he die, this last relic of the teeming millions that once transformed the face of the globe and ruled undisputed master of every other living thing? There are many fates that may befall him. He may go mad with the horror of lonliness and himself end his own miserable existence. He may be eaten by the vast reptiles or giant insects which will then probably ifest the solitudes. But his fate may be far weirded and more dreadful. Scientists say that as we burn the coal and timber we are so richly supplied with, we loose into the atmosphere an ever increasing volume of carbonic acid gas. Much of this is taken up by plants, but not all. It must increase and eventually poison the breathable air, filling the valleys and slowly mounting to the hill-tops, where the last remains of animal life are striving for existence. The last man will climb higher and higher, but effectually the suffocating invisiable fluid will reach and dround him.

Again, it is said the earth as it grows older is cracking like dry mud. These cracks will increase until at last they will let the waters of ocean and rivers sink into the fiery crater of the globe. Then will occur an explosion so terrible as may startle inhabitants of neighboring worlds. The last man in this case will probably be some arctic explorer or Eskimo, whom the vast plains of ice will save instant death and live to grill a few moments till the ice continents are swallowed by red hot gases and steam. Suppose these earth cracks develope more slowly, they may suck away the water without devasting explosions. Then the last man's fate may be the worst describable. He will die of thirst. The scene of his death will probably be the great valley in the bed of the Atlantic ocean, on the Brazilian coast, half way between Rio Janeiro and the cape, where now six miles of green water lie between the steamer's kneel and the abysmal slime beneath.

There hopelessly digging in the ever drying mud, he must perish and leave his bones to parch on a waterless planet. The antarctic polar ice cap has been growing thicker and heavier for uncouted ages. The distance from the south pole the edge of this ice cap is 1400 miles. The ice rises steadly from the edge to the center. At that center it cannot be less then twelve miles in thickness--twice as thick as Mt. Everest is high. Suppose it splits. Imagine the gigantic mass of water and ice that will come sweeping up north over the ocean and continent of the earth. Where, then, will the last man breathe his final gasp? High up in the snows of some great range he will perish miserably of cold and stavation, looking down on a huge shallow sea beneath whese tossing waters will lie the whole of the race of the world.

Or, last, and perhaps dreariest fate of, all the human race may outlive all other animals and last until the sun. as some day it must, grow dull and cold and vegetation dies from the chilled earth. The miserable remnaet of earth's people must then slowly die out after ages of an existence to which that of the Eskimo of today is a Paradise.—London Answers.

The large and increasing circulation of The Iowa Homestead in this county is a matter for congratlation to the publishers and to good farming, for, of all the papers of its class in the country, it is easily the best and most helpful. Its Special Farmers' Iustitute edition, issued with regular edition the first week in each month, have been for years the admiration of all practical farmers. Written wholly by farmers, they are full of actual experience and smell of the soil. We have been fortunate enough this season to secure terms for The Homestead and its Special Farmers' Institute Editions together with The Poultry Famer and The Farmers' Mutual Insurance Journal, four of the most valuable farm publications in the country, that enable us to offer the four in connection with our own paper for $1.65 for the enter five, one year. This is emphatically a good thing, and no farmer in this counld fail to take advantage of the offer. For a large line of throughly practical farm reading nothing has ever been offered befored hat equals it. A country paper, a farm paper, a poultry paper, a farm insurance paper and the Special Farmers' Institute, all for $1.65. Come in and order them.

J. I. Bevry, Loganton, Pa., writes, "I am willing to take my oath that I was cured of pneumonia entirely by the use of One Minute Cough Cure after doctors failed. It also cured my children of whooping cough." Quickly relieves and cures coughs, colds, croup grippe and throat and lung troubles. Children all like it. Mothers endorse it.—J. L. Harr.

"I am indebted to One Minute Cough Cure for my health and life. It cured me of lung trouble following grippe." Thousands owe their lives to the prompt action of this never failing remedy. It cures coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis, pneumonia, grippe and throat and lung troubles. Its early use prevents consumption. It is the only harmless remedy that gives immediate results.—J. L. Harr.

The Scientific American vouches for the following treatment for diphtheria: At the first indication of diphtheria in the throat, make the room close then take a tin cup and pour into it equeal quantities of tar and turpentine and held the cup over the fire, so that the fumes will fill the room. The patient on inhaling the fumes, will cough out membraneous matter and diphtheria will pass off. The fumes of the tar and turpentine looses the throat and affords a relief that has baffled the skill of the best physician.

Dentist E. H. Goodsell will be at Klemme Hotel for four days dating from Jan. 16. Do not wait untll the last day, come the first.

Oscar Gartin, of Goodell, E. J. Bauman's efficient helper in the hardware store, was doing Klemme in a business way on Friday.

W. R. Bloom made a business trip to Thornton, Monday, where he has an elevator. He reports business good at that end of the line.

C. M. Best, of Gary, S. D. a brother of Mrs. Chas. Bracher visited in Klemme over Sunday. He thinks our little town a hummer, and he mistakes not.

Bert Martin, a young man who worked for B. F. Schriver, of Britt, appropriated two of Ben's hogs, and is now a star boarder in the Cerro Gordo county jail.

The first church in Kanawha, the Methodist, was formerly dedicated last Sunday. Rev. Jesse Cole, of Sioux City, Iowa, preached the dedicatory sermon.

Chan. Bartholomew was on the sick list the fore part of the week but is better now. V. D. Merrill was chief Jehu and looked after Chan's business.

Editor Geo. Hall was a pleasant caller at our sanctum Saturday. Hall & Kinney are giving the Goodell people a good paper and we are glad to see them doing well.

Last week our ad setter made Shafer & Dow's advertisement read 10 bars of laundry soap for $1.00. It should have been 10 bars for 25c and 8 bars of toilet soap for 25c.

'How is the Milk maid?' asked a Klemme youth of a country girl. 'We don't make it, we get it from the cow," was her reply. They were selecting their furniture yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Hamilton returned Monday from a two weeks visit with friends and relatives at Estherville, Buffalo Center and Crystal Lake. They report a very pleasant trip.

Do not fail to read the real-estate ads in this issue. You will find either firm reliable and if you have a desire to invest in Western land, call on or address either firm at the home office.

The turkey shoot last Saturday was well attended, and all the turkeys were disposed of. Wm. Lau and Oscar Carlson secured the greater number of birds to the credit of their good marksmanship.

The Goodell Globe has advanced its subscription price to $1.25 per year. Messrs. Hall & Kinney are giving the Goodell people a paper that is worth $1.25and they should have $1.50 Next year we will charge $1.50 for the TIMES. A good paper can not be put out for $1.00 in a small country town.

The Belmond Herald made a trial for the county printing before the Board of Supervisors of Wright county at the January meeting, but was short one subscriber. Bro. Pierce, unless you can bust the Clarion ring, you are liable to always be one short. Why not contest that (1) and make them "show up?" Or don't you come from Missouri?

W. A. Draper left Tuesday for Eldora with his car of stock and household goods. The family have lived in this vicinity for nearly ten years and the best wishes of a host of friends accompany them. Mr. Draper still believes we live in the garden spot of Iowa and fortells a good future for the town and country. —Kanawha Record.

While moving Charles Bailey's large safe into his new office rooms at Garner, Saturday, a rope gave way and the safe started down stairs on the jump. It crashed through the floor of the landing and done not a little damage. One of the workmen, so it is reported, had one hand badly bruised and crushed.

W. W. Read, near Corwith, cultivated two acres of broom corn last year and harvested two tons of broom material. It is worth at present prices abput $200. per ton. He will plant ten acres this year. Broom corn is a paying crop. and we wonder that more of our thrifty farmers do not grow it. It is easily cultivated and almost a sure crop nearly every season.

What in blazes young girls can find to amuse themselves, gadding the streets after dark, is more than we can understand. Poor, young, giddy things. Don't they know that such conduct, no matter if onlv for a little harmless flirtation, makes them liable to the slurs of a class of people who hold the honor of women less than nothing. Don't do it girls, it's dangerous.

Farmers everywhere should remember that 1900 is the year for taking the twelfth census, that it is the crops of this year which are to furnish the figures for agriculture, and in order to help along in getting a real census and the true figures, special care should be taken to keep crop records this year, and thus help in this great co-operative work of counting our people and our industries.

Miss Ione Bartholomew entertained about twenty-five of her young friends last Friday evening at her home. The evening was spent with games of various kinds, and at a late hour refreshments were served. It is a pleasant way to enjoy life, among friends in this manner. Miss Ione is a charming hostess, and the young friends all expressed themselves as having spent a very pleasant evening.

Quite a large number of farmers were present at the "Good Roads" meeting, held at the court house last Friday and the question of paying all road and poll tax in cash was intelligently discussed. It was the sense of the meeting that it procured far better service if this plan was persued. The Board of Supervisors will have control of half of the funds and the township trustees the balance. And it will be their duty to see that the roads are properly worked, and value received for the money. Hurrah for good roads!

Corwith is to have another local telephone exhange. This will make three telephone lines and now they want electric lights. Corwith people evidently believe in expansion in the fullest sense of the word.

Geo. Lein, of Fulton, Ill., Distaict organizer of the Mystic Workers of the World, was installing officers for the order in Klemme Saturday evening and remained several days, to secure new applications. The lodge now has a membership of about 50 and is in good working order.

Everyone is cordially invited to attend the literary on Thursday, Jan. 11. An excellent program has been prepared and after recess Supt. Schell will deliver a lecture.

Miss Nellie Belt led the league at Beulah last Sabbath evening. Topic, Prayer. The topic made quite a bit of discussion which was very beneficial to the young members.

Mrs. John Hammill of Britt, formerly Miss Richards has not forgotten her pupils at Ell Center as she sent them some of her photographs as a souvenir. They are greatly appreciated by her pupils.

One of the pleasant events of the season was the surprise party at T. Gauley's last Wednesday evening. Mr. G. had been to town and did not return home until late in the evening. Imagine his surprise on driving into the yard to find every available space occupied by horses and vehicles. Upon entering the house he found the teams had not come alone as the house was filled with young people who were enjoying themselves exceedingly well.

Kill Garter or Rabbit?

Rabbit foot garters are now the rage. They must be killed at midnight in a lonely cemetery by a bald-head-cross-eyed negro to prove a mascot to the wearer. —Britt Tribune.

Small Thing to Quarrell About.

There seems to be considerable rivalry between the Signal and Democrat of Garner as to which paper contains the most local matter. At present it is a stand off.—Britt Tribune.

Hancock Too!

Mitchell County has sent sixteen of its citizens to the penitentary the past year. This is to her credit rather than otherwise, as about that per cent of the people should be sent there from every county each year.

They Got The Rabbit.

There are rabbit stories and rabbit stories. Jake Kauffman and Bash Nissen started out after "jacks" Monday, and on a plowed field north west of town "jumped" one up. Jake had the gun and blazed away. At the unusual noise Mr. John Rabbit sat up and seemed to say "come again". Again the terrible gun belched forth its contents of flame and lead. Mr. John Rabbit thought that was getting too much of a good thing—the noise gave him the headache—and started off for new scenes. Here Bash took a hand in the fracas, and being a sprinter of no mean ability gave chase. It was nip and tuck for about a mile but endurance and speed was the victor and Bash came triumphantly back with the rabbit. Yes, there are rabbit hunters galore, but we yield the palm to Bash and Jake—The dog is yours.

LAFAYETTE DOLLAR.

The Lafayette dollar (fifty thousand in number) authorized by Congress in aid of the Lafayette monument, to be erected in Paris in the name of the American school youth, are now in the hands of this Commission and ready for distribution.

This coin, which is a legal tender dollar, bears upon its face in bas-relief, a double medallion of the heads of Washington and Lafayette and upon its reverse a miniature reproduction of the equestrian statue of Lafayette used for the monument. It is pronounced the most artistic coin turned out by the United States Mint.

The Lafayette dollar thus serves not only to aid the Memorial work but forms a new and beautiful tie between the two great republics of Europe and America, and therefore the coin must be regarded as an international emblem. It constitutes a most desirable souvenir and memento of the Children's Monument to the "Knight of Liberty" and the Universal Exposition of 1900. The limited number issued, it is thought, will make these coins extremely rare and in very great demand.

The first coin to be struck of the 50,000 will be presented, in a beautiful casket, to the President of the French Republic by President McKinley.

The price of the coins is $2.00 each. It is the purpose of the commission to distribute the dollars as generally as possible, but orders for as many as 500 will be filled until the first 40,000 are disposed of, 15,000 having been ordered and paid for in advance.

OLD PEOPLE MADE YOUNG.

J. C. Sherman, the veteran editor of the Vermontville (Mich.) Echo, has discovered the remarkable secret of keeping old people young. For years he has avoided nervousness, sleeplessness, indigestion, heart trouble, constipation and rheumatism by using Electric Bitters, and he writes: "It can't be praised too highly. It gently stimulates the kidneys, tones the stomach, aids digestion and gives a splendid appetite. It has worked wonders for my wife and me. It's a marvelous remedy for old people's complaints." Only 50c at Harr's drug store.

DES MOINES, Jan. 8, 1900.

Governor Shaw will submit to the legislature the cases of but four convicts asking for pardon. They are: Thomas Kelly, sentenced in Lucas county in 1886; John Bellew, sentenced in Dubuque county in 1878 and Jasper Mason, sentenced in Dallas county in 1876. Twelve or fifteen life convicts petitioned for executive and legislative clemency. Among them were the Rainsbarger brothers who were sent to prison from Marshall county, and concerning whose expected effort to secure pardon from the legislature much sensational matter has been printed. John Wesley Elkins was also another petitioner. He is the boy who killed his mother and father when he was 11 years old. These and the other petitioners, except the four named, Governor Shaw determined not to present to the legislature. A curious looseness of expression obtains in the law relating to the pardon of life convicts in Iowa. It provides that the governor shall not pardon such convicts until their petitions are referred to the legislature. Every governor has construed this to mean that the governor cannot pardon until the legislature recommends to him that those whose petitions are submitted to it shall be pardoned. But the law plainly does not require the executive either to await the recommendation of the legislature or to observe its recommendations; nor does it prevent the governor from pardoning persons whose pardon the legislature refuses to recommend. It is probable that an effort will be made to have the law made clearer.

Frank F. Merriam, state auditor of Iowa, is dangerously ill at San Francisco, and serious fears are entertained for him. He left Iowa ten days ago on a business trip to the coast, and before arriving in San Francisco was ill. He was soon after taken to Mount Zion hospital in that city, where he now is. Constant telegraphic communications have been kept up and he is reported suffering from typhoid fever. His relatives and friends are seriously alarmed, though he has wired for his family to remain in Des Moines. He has, however, sent for his family physician to come at once.

The Ministerial Association has given up hope of securing its counter saloon petition. A few canvassers are at work, but matters are not being pushed. At the last association meeting Attorney E. B. Evans was authorized to inspect the new petition of consent, which the Polk Directory Company has filed with the board of supervisors, and to challenge any names he found which he considered should not be allowed. The ministers claim there are a large number of names on the new consent petition which will not stand a test.

The proposed change of the Iowa constitution, to inaugurate a system of biennial elections in future, is beginning to attract a good deal of attention. There are only nine states in the union which now hold state elections every year, and Iowa is one of them. Half of the state officers are elected each year, for a two-year's term and similarly with county officers. At the last session of the legislature Senator G. M. Titus, of Muscatine, introduced the Titus resolution, looking to a change in the constitution by which all elections should be made biennial, in the even numbered years. Thus the necessity of elections in the odd numbered years would be done away with. The Titus amendment passed the last legislature by overwhelming majorities in both houses. If it now passes the coming session it will be ready for a vote of the people at the general election next November. If at that time it receives a majority of the votes cast on it, it will become part of the constitution. If the amendment passes there will be no election in 1901. Those officers, either state or county, whose terms expire under the present law with the year 1901, will have their terms extended one year so that they may expire at the close of 1902 and be succeeded by officers elected in November, 1902.

Judge Kinne, of the state board of control, has written descriptions of two more county insane asylums, and they are fully as interesting as his previous productions along this line. The report on Muscatine county's institution indicates that it is among the worst of its kind in the state. Tama county comes off better but it is pretty severely criticised. The members of the board have been criticized for their reports of the county asylums, it being charged by some that they have been prejudiced against them by reason of their desire to secure the passage of a law giving the board complete charge of the insane of the state. The members deny this absolutely and say that they have taken special pains to present everything in favor of the county institutions.

The state board of railway commissioners met in the headquarters of the commission at the state house and perfected their organization for the year of 1900. Colonel D. J. Palmer was made chairman, Dwight Lewis secretary, and C. L. Boylan clerk.

American Prisoners Released.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—General Otis telegraphs that Col. Hare has released all the American prisoners in the hands of the Filipinos, including Lieutenant Gilmore.

Boers Claim Victory at Colesburg.

PRETORIA, Jan. 1.—Last night (Sunday) the British in great force attacked Commandant Schoeman's commando in the Colesburg district and tried to storm the position. They repeated the attack this morning, but were forced to retreat, the Boers holding the position. The loss of the British is not known, but it is reported to have been heavy. The Boers consider it a great compliment to the Transvaal that Lord Roberts should have been selected to the supreme command of the British forces.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

MILWAUKEE DEFENDANT.

Suit for $15,000 Damages for the Death of T. H. Quinn.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Jan. 5.—Ellen Quinn, administratrix of the estate of T. H. Quinn, has brought suit against the Milwaukee through Attorneys Redmond & Stewart for $15,000. She alleges for cause of action as follows: That Quinn died July 20, 1898, from injuries inflicted on him by the company through the negligence of its employes on January 18 and July 19 of the same year. That by the gross negligence of the conductor of a train on which Quinn was riding, he was put off at Madrid, the wrong station from that called for in his transportation. That he was put on the caboose of a freight train to be carried from Madrid to his proper destination, and that in making a violent and dangerous coupling to the caboose the head and body of Quinn were cast against the inside of the caboose, causing a wound and subsequent death. That afterwards in attempting to treat and remedy the wound it was aggravated by the employes of the company, who were grossly careless in the treatment of the same, thereby causing further aggravation and death.

SMALLPOX AT EARLHAM.

More Than a Dozen Cases Reported at That Place.

DES MOINES, Jan. 8.—Smallpox is within thirty miles of Des Moines. Dr. J. H. Kennedy, who was summoned to Earlham, a town on the Rock Island road in Madison county, about thirty miles southwest of Des Moines, reports from twelve to fifteen cases in the town and surrounding country. The disease is supposed to have been carried into Earlham by some student in the academy at that place, as it first broke out in the school when it had taken up after the holiday vacation. It was at first thought to be chicken-pox, but Dr. Kennedy was called and pronounced it smallpox. As a result the academy and public schools have been shut up. The exposure has been great, but the health officers expect to subdue the disease in the near future. There are at least six cases in one family.

SALOON MEN HAVE PLANS.

Will Ask Legislature to Amend Liquor Laws.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Jan. 5.—The retail liquor dealers of Cedar Rapids, who organized some months ago, have been discussing a measure which they propose to have introduced before the general assembly at its coming session. It will ask that the law relative to closing on legal holidays be amended, giving the dealers several days more of business each year. The local liquor men are a unit in favor of Sunday closing and the proposed measure will provide for a strict enforcement of this law. It will also provide that all saloons shall be closed on Decoration Day and Thanksgiving, but will give the Fourth of July, Labor Day, Christmas and New Year's as open days. The bill will also provide that all saloons shall be closed until 6 o'clock p. m. on election days.

Mitchellville Girls in Des Moines.

DES MOINES, Jan. 6.—Three girls from the Mitchellville reform school were arrested in company with three male companions in a house in Whitechapel. The girls pleaded guilty to the charge of being found in a disorderly house, when arraigned in police court and when the judge imposed a sentence of 30 days in jail for the offense, they thanked him for the respite it would afford them from the duties and punishments of the reform school.

Cassatt Pardoned.

DES MOINES, Jan. 6.—President McKinley, according to dispatches from Washington to persons at Knoxville, has pardoned E. R. Cassatt, former president of a national bank at Pella, who was sentenced to nine years in the penitentiary for looting the institution. He has served four years and nine months and is in badly broken health. He was a member of the state senate and a prominent man in the state.

State Auditor Rests Easy.

DES MOINES, Jan. 6.—From last reports State Auditor Merriam is resting easily in the hospital in San Francisco, where he is suffering from an attack of typhoid fever. His family physician, from Hopkinton, Iowa, is with him, and everything is being done for his comfort, and the fears of his friends have been materially allayed by reports, though it is not known at what time a change may come, as the crisis is not yet passed.

Few Getting Married.

AMES, Jan. 6.—The number of marriages in Story county has fallen off at an alarming rate during this year. The recent report of the county clerk shows that the number of marriage licenses issued during 1899 was 188 as against 238 in 1898, a falling off of fifty for the last year.

Serious Runaway Accident.

EXIRA, Jan. 3.—While Jens P. Jenson, a Danish gentleman, and his wife were driving home from Brayton, his team took fright and ran away, throwing him out and so injuring him that he died. His wife is now in a very precarious condition.

New Shops for Waterloo.

WATERLOO, Jan. 5.—A local paper is authority for the statement that the Illinois Central is about to begin the expenditure of $700,000 in Waterloo, in the way of improvements, erection of new shops, etc.

BOWEN CHOSEN SPEAKER

House Republicans Select Him by a Vote of 43 to 38 for Eaton.

DES MOINES, Jan. 8.—Dr. D. H. Bowen, of Allamakee county, was chosen speaker of the house in the Twenty-eighth general assembly by a caucus of republicans held at the state house Saturday night. W. L. Eaton, of Mitchell, was the opposing candidate. The ballot was open, the members responding to the roll call. The vote was 43 to 38 for Eaton. A contest arose over the question of an open or a secret ballot, the Cummins men being in favor of the latter, but their amendment was defeated by a vote of 42 to 38. Other officers nominated were as follows: Chief clerk, S. M. Cart, Indianola; first assistant clerk, John A. Cook, Hampton; second assistant clerk, W. J. Hanlon, Chickasaw; engrossing clerk, Mrs. Mollie G. Heist, Wayne; enrolling clerk, Miss Clara Keller, Louisa; journal clerk, A. U. Swan, Warren; assistant journal clerk, Roy Burns, Clarke; assistant postmistress, Jennie Brice, Palo Alto; file clerk, A. W. Parsons, Sioux; bill clerk, Bessie Conger, Washington; sergeant-at-arms, P. G. Greer, Page; chief doorkeeper, Thad B. Maxson, Cedar; speaker pro tem, M. L. Temple; temporary clerk, J. D. Rowen.

WILL OFFER A REWARD.

Governor Will Offer $500 for Capture of Murder of Robson.

DES MOINES, Jan. 6.—The brutal murder of John E. Robson, a prominent and highly respected business man of Sioux City, has stirred the people of that community as they have not been stirred since the lamented George C. Haddock fell before the assassin's bullet; and as the people of Des Moines were stirred by the mysterious death of Mabel Schofield a few months ago. Inquiries were at once made as to whether Governor Shaw would offer a reward for the capture of the man who committed the dark deed. The governor says he is only awaiting the action of the coroner's jury. If that body returns a finding to the effect that John E. Robson was murdered a reward of $500 will be immediately offered for the apprehension of the murderer.

New Factory for Des Moines.

DES MOINES, Jan. 5.—Local farm machine men, assisted by some outside capital, have about completed the organization of a company to engage in the manufacture of threshing machines in Des Moines. The project has been under consideration for the past six months and the plan submitted to a number of machine men and men of means with a view to interesting them. Indications now are that the undertaking will materialize and that a factory will be established this year.

BREVITIES.

In a decision handed down by Judge Eichelberger, of the Wapello county district court, in the case of the state against the owners of the dam at Bonaparte, asking for the abatement of a nuisance which it is alleged the defendants are maintaining, by obstructing with a dam the Des Moines river at Bonaparte, not provided with a fishway to afford free passage for fish up and down said river, the petition of the attorney general is refused. The case may be carried to the supreme court.

Orange City dispatch: An entire regiment of soldiers is said to be en route from the Dutch colony in this (Sioux) county to join the Boers in the Transvaal. If seemingly well authenticated accounts are to be believed, the organizers of the force are not attempting to send the entire body to the seat of war at once, but are content to ship them out three or four at a time by different routes. The recruits were not all gathered in Sioux county, but the money to hire and equip them was all raised in or near Orange City and Sioux Center. That drilling has been in progress in remote parts of the county for some time is certain, though much secrecy was observed. It is said that only picked men have been accepted.

Federal Judge Shiras, of Dubuque, recently handed down an opinion in the Indian case from Tama county reservation. The case was that in which the husband of an Indian girl, Lelah-Puc-Ka-Chee, sued for a writ of habeas corpus to secure her release from the Indian agent. The agent had had himself appointed guardian of the girl by the district court of Tama county, and by virtue of the appointment restrained her against her will and against the wish of her relatives, and compelled her to attend the Indian school. Her attorney claimed the state had no authority over the Indians, that the local court cannot appoint guardians, and the agent had no authority to compel her attendance at school. Judge Shiras sustains the Indians at every point and censures the agent; he also severely censures the whites who interfered.

E. J. FISKE, of Boone, one of the veteran engineers of the Northwestern, died in a Cedar Rapids hospital a few days ago from the effects of injuries received a few nights previous. In some unknown manner he fell or was thrown from his engine near Mechanicsville, while the train was running fifty miles an hour. The train ran fifty miles without a pilot, before the fireman noticed that the engineer was missing. He stopped the train at Bertram and the alarm was at once given. Fiske was found a couple of hours later unconscious. He died without regaining consciousness.

NEWS IN GENERAL

UNDER SUSPICION.

German Vessel Overhauled by British Troops at Aden.

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—The imperial mail steamer General has been detained at Aden, which is occupied by the British troops, with the object of searching the cargo. The General is owned by the German East African line, the owners of the Bundesrath, recently captured by the British off Delagoa bay. Although the manifests of the steamer show no war material on board, she was compelled to discharge her cargo.

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—The seizure of the imperial mail steamer General has considerably aggravated the situation here, and the indignation against England is intensified. The government is still earnestly endeavoring to preserve correct official relations, but England will do well to hasten to make the amende honorable to Germany. On absolutely reliable authority the Associated Press learns that Emperor William is now thoroughly aroused by the repeated seizures of vessels, not one of which, he has been assured, is guilty of carrying contraband. He regards the seizures as high-handed proceedings which England would not have dared to undertake if the Germany navy was more powerful than it is. His majesty is said to be particularly incensed, because information has reached him showing that the seizures were not due to the blundering of British naval officers, but to strict orders from headquarters which the officers are merely carrying out. He has, therefore, instructed Count Von Buelow, the foreign secretary, to demand exact and full reparation for the outrage done to the German flag.

BOERS HOLD COLESBURG.

Their Troops Attacked the British and Were Repulsed.

RENSBURG, Cape Colony, Jan. 5.—Colesburg has not yet been occupied. The Boers unexpectedly attacked the British left at daybreak yesterday morning, but were repulsed. They occupied the hills to the north of the town, but were eventually driven out of their positions after an hour's shelling by our guns. They still hold, however, the hills immediately surrounding the town, thus preventing the British from advancing along the railway. The British loss in yesterday's engagement was light, while the Boers are reported to have lost 100, including twenty prisoners, who were taken by the mounted infantry about midday.

SITUATION AT MODDER RIVER.

London Papers Say Each Side Wants to Be Attacked.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The Morning Post's military critic discusses the details of General French's and General Gatacre's skirmishes and operations, and declares that both need reinforcements. He adds: "Each side of the Mudder river, where General Methuen is, wants to be attacked but neither cares to make the attack. The consequence is there is likely to be a pause until the arrival of reinforcements. These will reach the British first if General Buller wins a battle in Natal. If not, they may come first to the Boers, who, in case of their second success at Tugela river, could spare men to go to Magersfontein."

TOOK COMMANCHE.

Captain Conhauser Captured and Burned the Town.

MANILLA, Jan. 8.—Advices from Magalang, province of Pampanga, report that Captain Conhauser, with three companies of the Twenty-fifth regiment, captured the insurgent stronghold, Commanche, on Mount Arayat. Three Americans were wounded, but the enemy's loss is not known. Three members of the Ninth and two of the Twelfth regiment, whom the insurgents held as prisoners, were shot and horribly mutilated. Three of them are dead and the other two are recovering. Captain Conhauser set fire to the barracks and town.

BOERS ATTACK LADYSMITH.

Battle Was in Progress at Caesar's Camp Saturday.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—A Cape Town special says: "It is rumored that French has entered Colesburg."

The war office has issued the following:

"From Buller, Frere Camp, Jan. 6.—The following telegram was received from General White January 6, 9 a. m.: 'The enemy attacked Cæsar's camp at 2:45 a. m.; considerable force. The enemy was everywhere repulsed, but the fighting still continues.'"

Another Boer Victory.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—A Mafeking dispatch, date Dec. 26, says: There was a sortie to-day with a view of capturing the Boer earthworks, but it was unsuccessful. The works were crowded with Boers awaiting the assault and the hail of bullets forced the British to retire, killing and wounding a number. The British storming party numbered eighty, of which twenty-one were killed and thirty-three wounded.

German Vessel Released.

BERLIN, Jan 8.—A dispatch from Aden says: The British authorities have renounced further search of the German mail steamer General, detained under suspicion of having goods contraband of war on board. The steamer will resume her voyage in a few days.

Gilmore at Manila.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—General Otis cables: The prisoners en route from Vigan have arrived here. Lieutenant Gilmore is among the number.

WILSON'S VIEWS.

"Open Door" Policy With China Good for United States.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Secretary Wilson, in an interview, emphasized the great commercial significance of an "open door" concert of powers respecting China. Responding to an interview he said that but for this action the United States would have been shut out from trade advantages in any province which other nations might see fit to take advantage of. He said: "Anything produced in the United States will now permanently find its way into all parts of the celestial empire. Our trade relations there in the future are secured. Not of the least importance is the fact that the permanency of the cotton market in China is secured. The trade in cotton goods has been very heavy in Manchuria and other northern provinces. Our interests generally, our dairy, poultry and other products from the farms of the United States, now have an assurance of permanent markets in all the provinces throughout the Chinese empire where such things are in demand and this demand is growing and will continue to grow.

EXPECT HEAVY BATTLE.

Boer Intrenchments Stretch Away for Miles at All Points.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—It is fully expected that next week will see a heavy battle on the Tugela river, which is now the real pivot of the campaign. The Boers appear to be working incessantly with shovel and pick. Lord Methuen's cavalry scouting has developed the fact that the Boer intrenchments extend some forty miles, far overlapping the British positions and making flank movements extremely difficult. Military analysis affirms that the Boer trenches confronting General Buller stretch away some seventeen miles and that work on them is pushed unremittingly. While the advance is delayed, flank movements are rendered most difficult, because long marches are not done with celerity, and it is hard to time an attack with certainty. The extent of the Dutch rising may now be measured by taking a line from Prieska on the west to Herchel or Barkley on the east. The whole of this line, except at points actually occupied by the British, the population seems for the most part hostile.

DEROULEDE FOUND GUILTY.

Charge of Conspiracy Sustained by High Court.

PARIS, Jan. 5.—The conspiracy trial before the senate, sitting as the high court, has come to an end, except for the sentences in the case of those convicted. Out of the seventy-five alleged conspirators who were thrown into prison five months ago and who have since been released in batches, owing to want of evidence, only Deroulede, Guerin and Buffet have been found guilty, and these three are accorded "extenuating circumstances," which reduces their punishment to detention in a fortress or banishment. It is understood that the sentence will vary between five and ten years' detention. President Loubet may extend pardons, in accordance with the Berringer law in favor of first offenders.

PARIS, Jan. 5.—The senate, sitting as a high court, condemned Buffet and Deroulede to ten years' banishment each. Guerin was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment in a fortified place. Saluces was sentenced to ten years' banishment.

YELLOW FEVER IN HAVANA.

Eighty-three Deaths Since the Report in August Last.

HAVANA, Jan. 5.—The yellow fever report for 1899 shows 103 deaths in Havana, which means that eighty-three persons have died of the disease since General Ludlow's report was issued at the end of August last. During the month of December there were seventy new cases, of whom twenty-two died. On January 1 of this year there were twenty-five cases under treatment. To-day there are seventeen. The cold weather will probably diminish the number. This record does not compare favorably with the record prior to the revolution, although the sanitary authorities claim that the increase of mortality is due to the fact that an unusually large number of Spanish immigrants have arrived during the last few months.

CHINESE ROUT THE FRENCH.

Fierce Battle Near Wang Chaun, in Which the Gauls Lost Thirty Killed.

VICTORIA, B. C. Jan. 6.—News has reached Canton that a battle occurred between natives near Wang Chaun and the French forces stationed there. It is said that the Chinese routed the French and pursued them for some distance. The French loss was thirty killed. The Chinese losses are not stated. The battle occurred December 10 and 11. On hearing of the affair the viceroy dispatched three gunboats with 1,000 soldiers to restore order. The viceroy also wired the tsung li yamen asking what steps are to be taken, as he is unable to carry out delimitation to the satisfaction of the French.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 3.—After four years of retirement, Former Senator Joseph Clay Stiles Blackburn was unanimously chosen last night by the joint caucus of the democratic members of the legislature as the successor of Senator William Lindsay in the United States senate.

Goebel Democrats in Control.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 2.—The Goebel democrats have organized both the senate and the house. Open charges of bribery have been made against the anti-Goebel democrats.

CONGRESS.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 3.—Chandler of New Hampshire offered an amendment to the financial bill, declaring it the existing policy of the United States to continue the use of both gold and silver as standard money, to coin both gold and silver into money of equal intrinsic and exchangeable value; such equality to be secured through international agreement, or by such safeguards of legislation as will insure a maintainance of parity in the value of the coins of the two metals, and equal power of every dollar at all times in the markets and for payment of debts." Allen presented a resolution similar to that of Sulzer in the house. It went over. Pettigrew offered a resolution asking the war department for information as to how hostilities began between the United States and Filipinos at Manila. Consideration objected to. Hoar protested against what he termed an attempt to throttle senators in their efforts to obtain information concerning the "deplorable conditions" which have existed in the Philippines. Adjourned.

HOUSE.

Sulzer, dem., of New York, offered a resolution calling on the secretary of the treasury for a detailed statement concerning the relations of the department with the National City Bank and Hanover National Bank of New York in the matter of depositing public funds therein or other relations or business transactions between them and the government. Immediate consideration was objected to and the resolution was sent to the committee on ways and means. McRae of Arkansas, introduced a resolution to the effect that the United States declare its purpose in the matter of the Philippines is to secure to the inhabitants thereof as soon as practicable after the suppression of the existing rebellion, a free and independent government, republican in form, and that the United States guarantee the inhabitants protection against foreign invasion. Adjourned.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Beveridge of Indiana, presented the following resolution: "That the Philippine islands are a territory belonging to the United States, and that it is the intention of the United States to retain as such and establish and maintain such governmental control throughout the archipelago as the situation may demand." Mr. Beveridge will speak upon it next Tuesday. The committee on foreign relations reported a form of government for Hawaii. A message was received from the president transmitting the testimony taken by the commission appointed to investigate the conduct of the war department. Allen's resolution asking for information as to the treasury relations with the National City and the Hanover National banks was modified and passed. Pettigrew presented a resolution asking the secretary of the navy for the report of Dewey of April 13, 1898, in which he said he could take Manila at any time. It went over. Aldrich opened the discussion of the financial bill with a speech in explanation of the senate substitute for the house bill. The speech was carefully prepared and was read from manuscript. Adjourned until Monday.

HOUSE.

The committee on ways and means reported the resolution presented yesterday by Sulzer calling on the secretary for full information relative to the department's relations with the National City and Hanover National banks of New York, with amendments extending the scope of the inquiry. Mr. Levy, dem., of New York, offered a further amendment asking the secretary's reasons for delaying deposits in national banks until the panic occurred. The speaker ruled the amendment out of order and the resolution was passed as reported. Adjourned till Monday.

QUAY MUST QUIT.

Privileges and Elections Committee Reports Against Him.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The senate committee on privileges and elections decided, 4 to 3, to make adverse report on the resolution to seat Quay, holding an appointment from the governor of Pennsylvania. Chandler, Hoar and McComas voted in favor of seating him, Burrows, Caffrey, Pettus and Harris against.

British Reconnaissance.

FRERE CAMP, Natal, Jan. 6.—There was a reconnaissance in force from Chievely yesterday afternoon with 2,000 horse and two guns, the object being to locate the enemy on a hill south of Hlangwana hill. Several shells were fired, supplemented by the naval gun. The enemy replied at long range but did not touch the British. Lord Dundonald, perceiving a strong mounted force issuing beyond the range of the British guns, with the evident intention of working around our flank, directed the force to retire to Chieveley. The Boers' helio can be seen working from a ridge north of Colenso to the Boer camp at Umbulwane. During the cannon fire natives in the valley can be seen plowing complacently.

American Steamer to Be Released.

CAPETOWN, Jan. 6.—The supreme court has ordered that the British steamer Mashona, Captain Johnstone, which left New York on November 3 for Delagoa bay laden with flour for the Transvaal, and which was captured by the British gunboat Partridge, be delivered to the claimants, upon giving satisfactory surety, and that the portion of the cargo claimed as prize be stored in the custom house at Port Elizabeth, upon security approved by the authorities. The prize cargo consists of 17,000 bags of flour. The Mashona will proceed to other ports and discharge her unclaimed cargo.

The Lawton Fund.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The total subscriptions to the Lawton fund to date amount to $48,433.32. General Corbin says that although active efforts to increase the fund have ceased, voluntary contributions will be accepted up to the time of Mrs. Lawton's arrival at San Francisco about the first proximo.

France Will Enforce Claim.

PARIS, Jan. 6.—The government has ordered the commandant of the naval squadron in the Atlantic to proceed immediately to San Domingo and enforce the claim against the Republic due French citizens.

Six Hundred Lives Lost.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 5.—The latest reports from Achalkalek, in the government of Tiflis, show that 600 lives were lost during the earthquakes which visited that district on Monday.

Salisbury Will Speedily Decide.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Secretary Hay has received a cablegram from Ambassador Choate at London, stating that he had an eminently satisfactory interview with Lord Salisbury relative to the seizures of American goods by British warships. Lord Salisbury listened intently to the representations on this subject, made by Mr. Choate by direction of the state department, and took them under consideration, promising voluntarily to give the matter immediate attention and to return a speedy decision.

HIS WORD OF HONOR.

A Tale of the Blue and the Gray.

BY E. WERNER.

Copyright, 1894, by Robert Bonner's Sons.

CHAPTER II.

The young officer seemed to have expected this refusal. He advanced a step nearer and dropped the strictly formal tone used heretofore.

"Colonel, the interview I seek at Springfield is of infinite importance to me. I will be perfectly frank with you. I suppose you know the relation in which I stand to Mr. Harrison's family."

"The wealthy owner of the neighboring plantation, our most bitter enemy. Yes, I have heard of it. It was said that you were engaged to his daughter, and at the outbreak of the war made a sacrifice for your convictions."

"I did not make it; it was forced upon me. Mr. Harrison broke my engagement to his daughter, without permitting me even an explanation. The outbreak of hostilities prevented my hastening to my fiancee. I was forced to join my regiment. The letters I sent remained unanswered. I do not even know whether they reached her hands. For months I suffered the tortures of uncertainty. This morning an accident revealed that Miss Harrison, who, I supposed, had long since fled to some place of safety, was still in Springfield. It is the last, the only possibility of obtaining any certainty. I beseech you to grant it."

The colonel's eyes rested with evident sympathy on the young man, who was indeed his favorite, and whose ill-repressed emotion showed how keenly he suffered from this state of uncertainty; but he shook his head.

"Even should I grant you the leave of absence, and you reach the plantation unharmed, who will guarantee that Harrison, after what has occurred, will not see in you merely an officer in the enemy's service and deliver you up?"

"Deliver me up?" cried William, hotly. "The man who was betrothed to his daughter—the man whom he onced called son?"

"Everything is possible in these times. Surely you must know his character."

"I expect any act of hostility toward in his house. He is a southern gentleman, and a man of honor. I am safe with him."

"We will hope so; but another and graver peril threatens you there: If you are still regarded as the son of the house, every effort will be made to win you over to their cause. Suppose that—you should not return?"

William started as if an insult had been hurled in his face.

"Colonel, I am an honorable man."

"I know it; but you are human. You are young and passionately in love. Even the strongest natures succumb to such a conflict. At that time, you had no choice, you say. Probably it will be so now. And when the prize is before you, when your affianced wife weeps and pleads, and the whole happiness of your life depends on a single word—avoid the temptation, Lieutenant Roland. I advise you as a friend."

The young officer had turned pale, but his voice sounded firm and resolute as he replied:

"I beg you to grant me the leave of absence—on my word of honor."

Burney paced up and down the room several times in silence; at last he paused.

"At the utmost, I could grant you only the afternoon. You must return at sunset, and it is a long distance. You will have barely three hours at Springfield."

"A single one would suffice for the conversation on which my whole future depends—I repeat my request."

"So be it then. With caution, it may perhaps be possible to avoid the peril which threatens you on the way. I shall rely upon your prudence."

Burney approached the young man and, putting his hand on his shoulder, said with deep earnestness:

"Till sunset then! It is now noon. If Lieutenant Roland has not returned by eight o'clock this evening, I shall believe that he is either dead or dishonored."

William's eyes flashed, but they met his commanding officer's gaze, steadfastly.

"Believe the former! If I am alive at that hour, I will be here."

"Then go—on your word of honor."

"On my word of honor."

William saluted and left the room. The colonel gazed after him a few seconds, then said in low tone:

"Poor boy! I would ten times rather have sent him to meet the enemy than into this temptation."

CHAPTER III.

An Unexpected Visitor.

It was the afternoon of the same day. The sun was lower in the west, but the heat had not yet lessened, and all the blinds in the spacious mansion of Springfield were closed. The extensive estate had, as yet, been spared the devastation of war. It was in the immediate vicinity of one of the principal recruiting-stations in the South and owed it to this circumstance alone that, for the present at least, it could afford its inmates absolute safety.

A pleasant dusk pervaded the sitting-room, whose doors opened upon the wide terrace. The glaring sunlight in the garden outside could not find its way into the apartment, whose doorways were protected by blinds and curtains; and a little fountain, whose jet rose amid a circle of tropical plants, diffused its cool, glittering drops through the sultry atmosphere.

A young girl of perhaps eighteen was half reclining in a rocking-chair. Her little head with its wealth of dark hair was flung wearily back, her eyes were closed, and the long black lashes formed a sharp contrast to the pretty but somewhat pallid face. Her thin white dress, which, though intended only for house-wear, was trimmed with rich lace, harmonized with the costly furniture of the room. In the dreamy twilight, the dainty white-robed figure was as charming as one of the fragrant blossoms nodding over the edge of the fountain.

"THEN GO—ON YOUR WORD OF HONOR."

One of the doors leading into the interior of the house was softly opened, and an old negro appeared on the threshold.

Noiselessly closing it again, he cautiously approached his young mistress, but she started from her light slumber and sat erect.

"What is it, Ralph? Does my father want me?"

"No, miss, master is still asleep; but Mr. Harrison has come back and asks if he can see Miss Florence."

"Edward?" The young lady hesitated a moment, then, sinking into her former attitude, she said faintly: "Let him come."

Ralph withdrew; and directly after, a young man, fine-looking, but with an arrogant, self-conscious manner, entered the room.

"How is my uncle?" he asked quickly. "What I heard from the servants outside did not sound very consoling. Is he worse?"

"I fear so," replied Florence, softly. "He had a bad night, and the increased weakness is alarming. He fell asleep an hour ago, and I used the opportunity to get a little rest."

"Excuse me if I disturb you. I have just come from the city. My friend, Captain Wilson, accompanied me; and the justice of the peace, with the other witnesses, will arrive at the appointed time. All the preparations are made, so that the wedding can take place this evening."

A slight tremor ran through the young girl's frame, and there was a tone of fear in her voice as she asked:

"Today—must it be?"

"I thought we had arranged it. Surely you consented."

"Yes; but I hoped you would allow me a little time—a few months or weeks. What is the use of this fierce haste? Why should the wedding take place beside my father's sick-bed?"

"Because it is your father's last wish and will, as you know from his own lips. He wants to know that you will be safe and sheltered in a husband's arms when danger assails us, and he has my promise that I will protect you and his property to my last breath."

"As soon as it becomes yours—I don't doubt it."

Edward's brows contracted angrily. A dark frown shadowed his face.

"What does that mean, Florence? Do you doubt my love? You know that it is bestowed on you alone, not your estates, which, in the storms of war, may be destroyed, like so many which have already been ruined. You must trust me. I shall certainly not sacrifice you to any principle, as others have done."

The allusion was distinct enough. Florence's head drooped, but her tone betrayed rising indignation, as she replied:

"Was I sacrificed? You say so, and so does my father, but I have never heard it from William's lips, and you were always his enemy. I cannot understand his giving up the struggle so quickly, not even making an attempt to change my views, and sometimes I fear——"

She did not finish the sentence, but her eyes, which rested with unmistakable suspicion on her cousin's features, expressed the thought which she did not utter in words. But there was no change in his countenance, and the answer was equally unmoved and cold.

"Surely, you read the letter in which he broke with your father? Was not that plain enough? He knew the price that would enable him to possess you. It would have cost him only a single word to call you his; yet, instead, he delivered a political lecture on manly honor, duty, conviction and the rest of the set phrases. Well, he followed his conviction and—gave you up."

The young girl's pale face began to flush, and her lips were closely compressed. This was the goad which had conquered her resistance, forced her into the new bond; it produced its effect now.

"Yes, he gave me up," she repeated, bitterly. "Well—I have given him up, too."

"And cannot you yet shake off the memory? You have been candid with me, Florence, cruelly candid. I was forced to hear from your lips that that other still held the first place in your heart, that only filial duty won your consent to my suit. Be it so! I will venture the risk, even with this statement. I will cope with this arrogant German, who does not know what love is, who has never felt the full pulse of genuine passion. For me, no price is too high for the prize of possessing you. I would overthrow all that stood between us, were it even what I held highest. Resist as you may, I shall yet win you—you and your love."

There was really a touch of genuine passion in the words, and the ardent gaze which rested on the young girl proved that Edward Harrison was not playing a mere game of calculation. Florence unresistingly left the hand he had seized in his clasp. She was half-unconsciously under the thrall of this man, whom she feared, for whom no voice in her heart pleaded, yet who exerted an almost demoniacal power over her.

A Prehistoric Cemetery.

Workmen terracing King hill, an old landmark of northwestern Missouri, which is to be converted into a residence suburb of St. Joseph, have unearthed a prehistoric cemetery. The remains of a race of dwarfs, not allied with any tribe known to have inhabited this territory, and unaccounted for by Indian legendary, repose on the summit of King hill. A feature remarkable in itself and especially marked in connection with the dwarfish remnants of prehistoric man found in this summit is the discovery of human bones, evidently those of a giant, probably more than seven feet tall and big boned. Low, flat heads, with small intelligence and marked animal propensities, characterized this people. Heavy jaws and strong, well-preserved teeth carry the records of their lives forward. Brutes, human but inhumane, self-reliant, they are savages of a lower order than any we know today. Yet they honored their dead. Shells such as are found on the banks of many inland streams, plentiful on the sandbars of the Missouri, overlooked by King hill, and stones of unusual hues, worthless in the commercial marts of today, the playthings of children, were deposited in the graves.—Chicago Record.

With the Comma Left Out.

"Whenever she asks me to do anything," soliloquized Mr. Meeker, pensively, "I always go and do it, like a fool."

"Yes," said Mrs. Meeker, who happened along in time to overhear him, "whenever I ask you to do anything you always go and do it like a fool."—Chicago Tribune.

Knew What He Wanted.

Canvasser—"I have here a work—" Master of the House—"I can't read." Canvasser—"But your children——" Master of the House—"I have no children (triumphantly), nothing but a cat." Canvasser—"Well, you want something to throw at the cat." He took the book.

In life's battle one must either be a struggler or a straggler.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON II, JANUARY 14: LUKE 2: 41-52.

Jesus Visits Jerusalem—"And Jesus Increased in Wisdom and Stature, and in Favor with God and Man"—Luke 2: 52.

41. "His parents went to Jerusalem every year." This shows that his parents were devout, God-fearing people. They were very strict in performing their religious duties, and using their religious privileges. "The feast of the passover." The most important of the religious festivals of the Jews, the commemoration of their birth as a nation (Ex. 12, 13), which all male Israelites were commanded to attend each year (Ex. 23: 14-17; Deut. 16: 16).

42. "And when he was twelve years old." "A child of 12 was at that time in the East as well developed physically and intellectually as a child of 15 in our Western modern world." This was the age when, as a kind of turning point from childhood, a Jewish boy became a "son of the law," the age of responsibility, when he was bound to keep the law, and to go up to the festivals with his father, "after the custom of the feast," as it was the custom to go, or in the customary manner of traveling.

43. "And when they had fulfilled the days." The seven days of the Passover (Ex. 12: 15; Deut. 16: 2) "or the customary two days, for many pilgrims left after the sacrifices were over."—Plumptre. "The child Jesus." The word means "boy." Up to this point a diminutive term has been used.—Professor Riddle. "Tarried behind in Jerusalem." "The Greek for 'tarried' contains an idea of persistence and perseverance. The attraction of divine things held him fast in spite of the departure of his parents."—Int. Crit. Com. It is not at all probable that he remained behind on purpose, but he was so intensely interested in the teaching of the rabbis that he did not know when the caravan started on its homeward journey. "And Joseph and his mother knew not of it." This shows what perfect confidence they had in the boy. They willingly left him with the other boys of his age during the day, and took it for granted that he had joined the caravan with the rest. "The incident constantly occurs to this day in the annual expedition of the pilgrims to bathe in the fords of the Jordan."—Farrar.

44. "But they, supposing him to have been in the company." "The company that shared the journey."—M. R. Vincent. "And they sought him." "It was probably when the caravan halted for the night that he was first missed. At the present day the women commonly start first, and the men follow, the little children being with their mothers, and the older with either. If this was the case, then Mary might fancy that he was with Joseph, and Joseph that he was with Mary (Tristram, Eastern Customs in Bible Lands, p. 56)."—Int. Crit. Com.

45. "They turned back again." A single act. "Seeking him." A continued act lasting all the way to the city.

46. "After three days they found him." Reckoned from the departure of the caravan from Jerusalem: one for the journey out, one for the return, and one for the search in the city. "They found him in the temple." Not in the temple proper, but in one of the porches or chambers of the temple area, and belonging to the temple. "Sitting in the midst of the doctors," or teachers, as Paul sat at the feet of Gamaliel. "Both hearing them." Note that hearing is placed first. He came as a learner. "And asking them questions," in his desire to learn more. All this was done naturally and modestly.

47. "Were astonished at his understanding." His knowledge of the Scriptures, his insight into their true meaning, his penetration into the very spirit of the truth. His "answers" to their questions displayed these same qualities. Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected wisdom.

48. "They were amazed." They had not dreamed of such honor to be given to their boy, or of such wisdom, such thoughts in the active, obedient, modest, perhaps reticent boy in their household. It is often very difficult for older persons to realize the development of those growing up in their homes, till some stranger reveals the fact to them. "And his mother said unto him." "Privately; she could not rebuke after such a scene."—Van Doren. "Thy father and I." This form of speech was required by usage. It may, however, imply that Mary had never told her Son of the remarkable circumstances of his birth.—Revision Com.

49. "How is it that ye sought me?" You would naturally find me in my father's house. Why did you not come directly here? Or you might be sure that I was doing my duty. Why did you not trust me? "Wist." Knew. "I must be about my Father's business," or as R. V., "in my father's house." The noun for "house" or "business" is not given in the Greek. "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's . . . ?"

50. "And they understood not." Did not fully comprehend. There was a depth of meaning they could not fathom. The realization of what he was came gradually to them.

51. "Came to Nazareth," where he remained for eighteen years, "hidden years" of growth and preparation, till the time came, at 30 years of age, to enter upon his great mission. "And was subject unto them." The participle and finite verb denote habitual, continuous subjection.—M. R. Vincent. "His mother kept all these sayings in her heart." It was doubtless from the treasures of her memory that Luke obtained his knowledge of what he has written of Jesus' childhood. "Kept." "Only here and Acts 15: 29. The preposition through indicates close, faithful, persistent keeping, through all the circumstances which might have weakened the impression of the events. Compare Gen. 37:11."—M. R. Vincent.

52. "Increased." Rather, advanced. The word is derived from pioneers cutting down trees in the path of an advancing army. "In wisdom and stature." He grew like any other child. "In favor with God and man." He grew in favor as he grew older. He was such a young man as God had meant all men to be. The word favor here is the same as is translated grace in John 1: 14, "full of grace and truth." Jesus possessed "the beauty of holiness." He had not only goodness, but goodness in attractive, gracious, lovely forms. Heavenly goodness is attractive to all except bad men, whom it reproves, and whose life it interferes with.

MAN AND LIFE.

If we love only the lovable, we shall love very few.

We would rather say what we think than do what we say.

Responsibility subdues weakness and confirms strength.

Habits are the only chains which, in being worn, never wear out.

Nothing uses up strength physical and moral like never using them at all.

BRYAN AND JONES IN ACCORD.

Anti-Trust and Anti-Imperialism Issues Will Be Featured.

New York, Jan. 8.—Chairman Elliot Danforth of the democratic state committee denied that Senator Jones, chairman of the democratic national committee, and William J. Bryan have disagreed, and that consequently Senator Jones may be retired from the national chairmanship. Mr. Danforth said that Senator Jones and Col. Bryan are the best of friends, and that there is no reason to suppose that Senator Jones will retire.

Mr. Danforth also said that Col. Bryan will have two-thirds of the delegates to the national convention, and that he certainly will be nominated. He said that while democrats are not disposed to eliminate the free silver issue from the campaign, nevertheless there is a general desire to keep the anti-trust and anti-imperialism arguments well to the front.

WILL REPORT AGAINST QUAY.

Senate Elections Committee Decides Against Pennsylvania Appointee.

Washington, Jan. 6.—The senate committee on privileges and elections Friday decided, by a vote of 4 to 3, to make an adverse report upon the resolution to seat Senator Quay. The resolution was as follows: "Resolved, that Matthew S. Quay be admitted as a senator from the State of Pennsylvania, in accordance with his appointment, made April 29, 1899, by the governor of said state."

The members of the committee voting for the resolution were Senators Chandler, Hoar and McComas, and those opposing Senators Burrows, Caffery, Pettus and Harris. Senators Turley and Pritchard were paired, the latter for and the former against the resolution.

America Stands Aloof.

Washington, Jan. 8.—No overtures have been made to this government by the men who met at Brussels Thursday and determined to appeal to neutral nations to end the South African war. The United States will not become a party to any arrangement between nations to offer to mediate between Great Britain and the Transvaal. This policy was decided on before the war commenced, and will be adhered to. The only way in which the United States may be brought into an attempt to bring hostilities to a close will be through a request from both belligerants that this government tender its good offices to end the war.

To Aid Michigan Soldiers.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 6.—Gov. Pingree on Friday sent a special message to the house recommending the passage of a bill for the relief of the sick and indigent soldiers of the Spanish-American war, the $184,000, which had been appropriated for this purpose having become exhausted. A bill appropriating $75,000 for the purpose was immediately passed. The bill lacked one vote of the two-thirds necessary to give it immediate effect.

Caucus Is Called in Iowa.

Des Moines, Iowa, Jan. 8.—Calls for caucuses by the senate and house republicans were signed here Friday by both factions of the senatorial contest. The house caucus, which will nominate the candidate of the party for speaker, will meet in committee-room 1 at the capitol this evening at 8 o'clock. The senate caucus will meet at the same time in the senate chamber.

Implement Dealers Elect Officers.

Des Moines, Iowa, Jan. 8.—The Iowa Implement Dealers' association re-elected the following officers. President, J. L. Farrington of Iowa Falls; vice-president, Charles Gates, Jr., of Greene; directors, John Greer of Decorah, J. J. Gaston of Winterset and J. D. Walker of Eagle Grove.

Guilty of Inciting Riot.

Pana, Ill., Jan. 6.—A verdict of guilty was returned Friday in the case of Henry Stevens, colored, charged with having incited the riot on April 18, 1898, in which seven persons were killed and a number wounded. Sentence has not yet been passed on Stevens.

Will Hold Fusion Convention.

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 8.—At meetings of the state central committee of the democratic, populist and free silver representatives Friday it was agreed to hold all three state conventions to select delegates to the national convention at Lincoln on March 19.

Lynching at Newport News.

Newport News, Jan. 6.—W. W. Watt was taken from the station-house by a mob early on Friday and shot to death for criminally assaulting Mrs. T. M. Simpson, wife of an employe of the shipyard.

WARNING SENT ENGLAND.

Position of the United States as to Delagoa Bay Seizures.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—The state department has received from Ambassador Choate at London by cable a statement of the facts he had developed in connection with the seizure by British warships of American goods on the three merchant vessels, Beatrice, Mashona and Maria. The goods composed not only flour, but miscellaneous articles of common trade. They were shipped for Lorenzo Marquez in British and German ships, but our officials contend that they were not subject to seizure. They could not, however, tender representations on the subject until they were possessed of a knowledge of the facts, and as soon as Mr. Choate's statement came to hand an instruction was cabled to him to inform the British government that we could not admit the right of seizures in these cases. The instruction to Mr. Choate was not a demand for the release of the goods nor yet for indemnity, but rather a precautionary notice to the British government to save all of our rights in the case. The state department has not the slightest doubt that the British authorities will make full amends to the owners when the facts are all laid before them.

TEDDY TALKS TRUSTS.

Says Remedial Legislation Should Be Guarded.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Governor Roosevelt, in his annual message to the New York legislature, treats at considerable length the subject of modern industrial conditions and trusts. He expresses the opinion that a large majority of the fortunes that now exist in this country have been amassed not by injuring mankind, but as an incident to the conferring of great benefits on the community. He says great care should be exercised in the enactment of remedial legislation, lest its effects be the cause of more harm than the evil sought to be cured. He holds that many of them are the results of modern industrial conditions, and to absolutely prohibit them would be to stop the wheels of progress. For the regulation of trusts he urges publicity in order to prevent over capitalization, unscrupulous promotion, unfair competition, the oppression of wage earners and undue advance in prices.

BULLER MUST ACT.

Situation at Ladysmith is Becoming Alarming.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—There is a deepening sense of anxiety respecting Ladysmith, whence most disheartening reports of the prevalence of sickness are received. General White reported a list of nearly twenty deaths yesterday from enteric fever and dysentery and seventy-one serious cases in the hospital. Dr. Jamieson has all the work he can do in that fever nest. It is evident that the garrison cannot last long and that Sir Redvers Buller will not allow many day to pass before stiking a blow.

BIG INCREASE IN NAVY.

Hungarian Government Is Planning to Spend $100,000,000.

BUDA PESTH, Jan. 4.—The Pesti-Hirlap says that the Austro-Hungarian government contemplates spending £20,000,000 immediately for increasing the army and navy, in consequence of the grave European situation. The government also proposes to the Austrian and Hungarian parliaments an increase of the national grant for defensive purposes.

BOER ADVICES CONFIRMED.

British Story of Victory at Colesburg Was Unwarranted.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—An unexpected development of the situation has occurred at Colesburg. Late advices are that the Boers returned with reinforcements during the night and occupied the position from which they were driven by General French on Monday.

Anxious About Colonial Dutch.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The importance of both General French's and Colonel Pilcher's victories lies in the effect they are likely to have upon the colonial Dutch. The latest dispatch from Douglas confirms the earlier reports that the Boer laagers consisted chiefly of British subjects, who on the arrival of the small Free State commando, accepted, probably, an invitation to throw in their lot with the Boers, thus terrorizing the loyalists, who are now jubilant.

Bubonic Plague Reaches Manila.

MANILA, Jan. 4.—The health officers found a native with all the symptoms of bubonic plague in a house in the walled city where two suspicious deaths had occurred. The patient has been isolated and every precaution taken to prevent a spread of the disease.

Twenty-Two Drowned.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—A dispatch from Bristol announces that the steamer Borghese of Glasgow foundered off Cape Fister last Friday during a hurricane. Twenty-two of the crew were drowned. The survivors, nine in number, have just arrived in Bristol.

PORTUGAL MAKES DENIAL.

Says There Is No Treaty for the Disposal of Delagoa Bay.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—The Herald prints the following from Lisbon:

"The minister of finance declared to a friend that no treaty for the alienation of Delago Bay existed, nor would the government propose to the cortes any sale of Portuguese colonies."

German Cruiser to Lorenzo Marquez.

A ROMANCE COUNTED OUT.

Ensign "Joe" Powell, who followed after Hobson in a steam launch on the night the latter blew up the Merrimac in the narrows of Santiago harbor was married recently at Oswego, N. Y., to Miss Bertha Allen Osterhout. Both were born and reared in Oswego, but pretty much all northern New York took an interest in the event. Some months ago one of the New York Sunday papers printed a story about Ensign Powell being nursed back to life by Miss Osterhout in one of the military hospitals after the Santiago campaign, and founded the romance on this experience. This tale gave just and serious offense to the many friends of both parties, because it was untrue and grossly irreconcilable with the character of either the ensign or his bride. They were children together and just belonged, like Dick and Maisie, in Kipling's story. At least that is all the world knows about their romance, or is likely ever to know, for neither party has any sympathy with grandstand plays. Indeed, Powell's modesty is his strongest weakness. He has refused several offers from magazines to write the story of his experience on the night the Merrimac was sunk. The only authentic story yet published of that daring performance—more daring, some naval men have said, than Hobson's own—was incomplete, and it was wrung from the ensign almost without his consent, certainly without any encouragement from him. Ensign Powell belongs to the construction corps, having graduated number three in his class at Annapolis in 1898. He volunteered for the line when the war broke out, but has now gone back to his own department. Thus he will be able to spend his honeymoon in Glasgow, having been detailed for construction work on the Clyde for six months. One of the open secrets of the navy is that England and France, just before the war, withdrew from American naval graduates the ancient privilege of studying at their shipyards, for the reason that the Yankee boys had got into the habit of winning all the prizes. Lately, in pursuance of her friendly policy toward Uncle Sam, England has restored the courtesy, and Ensign Powell is one of the first Americans to profit by this freak of international comity.—Saturday Evening Post.

A New Woman. This.

A remarkable woman died in London a few days ago. Because of her death all of the conductors on the South London tramway lines wore mourning as a mark of reverence, for she was a practical leader of laborers. Her name was Miss Penman and she was the superintendent of the South London tramway system. She was the only woman who had ever held such a position. Miss Penman once held a position on the Glasgow tramways. Her ability in a sphere hitherto supposed to belong exclusively to men attracted attention in the United Kingdom, and several years ago she accepted the position of superintendent on the South London system. A few months ago that line, with others, went under municipal ownership. The London County Council "took over" all of the southern lines to be henceforth run by the people for the people, and many changes in management and working forces were made. Miss Penman, however, was continued in office.

'retty Heavy.

The duke and duchess of Connaught, on their visit to Egypt, met with several humorous experiences. One of them shows that even the Egyptians are not free from an unhappy weakness for saying just the wrong thing at a critical moment. After an inspection of the troops by the duke, outside of Omdurman, to which the duchess had accompanied him on horseback, the girths of her saddle suddenly gave way. There was no way of repairing them, and to enable her royal highness to get back with the least possible inconvenience a sort of sedan chair was improvised from a gun-carriage. On this she was carried by Egyptian gunners, who were in charge of a native officer. On the way the duchess said: "I hope your men will not be tired carrying me," and was surprised and amused to receive the ungallant reply: "Indeed, no, madame; you are no heavier than the gun they are accustomed to carry!"

Insect Pests of Spruce and Pine.

In a bulletin recently published by the West Virginia Agricultural Experiment station an account is given of investigations to determine the cause of the unhealthy conditions of the spruce and pine. Prof. Hopkins gives a list of 197 species of insects which infest these trees, about one-half being injurious, while the remainder are merely parasitic upon the pests, and are therefore either beneficial or indifferent. Most of the harm, however, seems to be done by wood-boring beetles, and many illustrations are given of their curious burrows. The destruction caused by these insect pests has resulted in the loss of many hundred thousand dollars' worth of the finest timber in the state of Virginia.

EASY LIFE IN NICARAGUA.

When the Family Is Out of Money Some Body Goes Out and Gets a Little Gold.

From the New Orleans Times-Democrat: "When I was in the Olancho district, in Nicaragua, last month,' said a visitor who is largely interesting in mining in Central America, "I had an opportunity of seeing how the lazy natives tap nature's till when they need some small change. Near our camp by the river was a hut occupied by a typical Honduranian family, consisting of husband and wife, grandfather and grandmother, and a dozen or so assorted children. The only one of the crowd who did anything except rest and smoke was the wife. At intervals of perhaps a week she would sally out with the family tin-pan, erstwhile used for cooking, and proceed to an old placer digging on the river bank. There she would squat, throw a few gourds full of dirt into the pan, fill it up with water and begin the usual circular motion of gold-washing. She was very skillful and would keep a little sheet of dirty water spraying over the edge like a miniature cataract. When the water was exhausted a few spoonsful of sand would be left in the bottom of the pan, and, spreading it out thin, with a bit of stick, she would go over it, grain by grain, looking for 'color.' Whenever she saw a speck of gold she moistened the stick upon her tongue and picked up the particle by adhesion. Each bit of the precious metal was stored away in a quill plugged with clay at the ends, and I have know her to take out as much as a quarter of an ounce in the course of a day. Usually her limit was about $2, and when she got that she stopped. Then the head of the house would arise languidly and start for the nearest store twelve miles away. Sometimes he would trade the whole amount for whiskey, but as a rule he brought back tobacco, salt, meal and calico. There are hundreds of native families who live in exactly the same manner in Olancho. Sometimes the woman will be lucky enough to strike a rich pocket, that will yield a dollar or more a pan, but they never dream of washing it out at once and getting a stake. It simply means that they can secure their usual amount with less work."

SMALL PIPES

And Mild Tobacco Satisfy the Desires of Japanese Smokers.

Washington Star: "You may have noticed that the Japanese who visit America are very moderate smokers," said a prominent Japanese now traveling in the United States. "Those of my countrymen who indulge in the weed mostly smoke cigarettes or preferably the smallest pipes filled with the mildest tobacco obtainable. Of course, there are Japanese who, like some Americans, have such a craving for tobacco that nothing less than the strongest cigar or the largest pipe will satisfy them. But such smokers are exceptionally few among the Japanese. As a rule, my countrymen, while at home and abroad, are satisfied with short smokes, such as a cigarette or a tiny pipe affords. The Japanese are moderate smokers, not so much because they are small people, but for the reason that up to within recent years but very little tobacco came into Japan and the tariff on it was very high. Being a poor but frugal race, the masses purchased only limited quantities of the weed, which, as a matter of economy, they have for generations been taught to smoke in only the tiniest of pipes. These pipes, the most popular of which hold about as much tobacco as would fill an ordinary thimble, are the survival of the days when money was scarce, tobacco dear and the tariff high. In another generation or two, when Japan shall have taken her place among the wealthy nations of the world, my countrymen will no doubt smoke large quantities of tobacco, and then the small pipes will be abandoned for big ones, such as Englishmen and Americans now smoke."

How Women Dress in Siberia.

Common-class women in Siberia wear shawls or kerchiefs on their heads while the rich women wear no head covering whatever. A traveler recently returned from that part of the world says that a Russian woman who is otherwise trim and modern in dress will go about with her hair dishevelled to the point of the ludicrous. Less attention is paid to the head and feet than to other parts of their toilet. "It is odd enough to see them," says this same writer, "defying dripping decks and muddy roads in the thinnest of heelless slippers, while the breezes play havoc with the loose tresses of their hair. Their shirtwaist is a feminine terror, with a broad turnover collar, fancy cuffs, cotton bows, many buttons and numerous frills, in place of the natty American shirtwaist."

A Theater for Workingmen.

Arthur Krupp, a cousin of the great German iron founder, erected a theater a year ago in Berndorf, Austria, for the benefit of the workmen employed in his great steel works at that place. It was to have been dedicated by the Empress Elizabeth, but her assassination occurred just before the time set for the ceremonies. Recently Emperor Francis Joseph formally opened it in the presence of a great crowd. The theater is small, seating but 500 but it is described as being very beautiful in its decorations and adornments and most complete for the purposes to which it is to be devoted.

MR. GRIZZLY ON THE RUN.

He May Look Awkward but When Hard Pressed He Can Git Up an' Git.

"Some people think that a grizzly can't run," said A. J. Daggs of Phoenix Ariz., at the National. "I want to state right now that while the bear is a clumsy beast, he can cover as much ground as the average saddle horse, and a man should be sure that he has a good mount before he tries to get out of the way of one which is angry. My brother was out in the mountains of the territory, among the sheep ranches, one day, when he saw, about 250 yards ahead of him, a big awkward silver tip. My brother had a rifle, but he was not certain that he could kill the bear if he shot, and he did not know how a race would turn out. He was mounted on one of the best horses in the country, for a man needed one in those days. He knew the bear would not fight unless wounded or cornered, and he thought he would like to see how he would run against his horse. He was pretty certain that the bear would run from him if he could once get him started in the opposite direction, and so he gave a regular cowboy yell. The bear looked up, and started shuffling off toward the mountain, about a mile and a half away. My brother spurred his horse and lit after the grizzly, at the same time keeping up the piercing 'Yeep-yeep' of the cowboy. The bear soon got into the running, and the way he got over that ground was a caution. My brother saw the brute was getting away from him, and he urged his horse to the utmost, but he did not gain ten yards in the whole mile and a half. That bear lumbered along with leaps equal to a greyhound, and his pursuer did not have the chance to cut him out from his retreat. I went over the course the next day to verify the story, for it sounded fishy to me. I found that the bear had made jumps from fifteen to twenty feet in length, and that the ground had been cut up by his claws so that it looked as if a harrow had been run over it. For that reason I would advise no man to try a foot race with a grizzly."

SIGNS OF THE ZODIAC.

An interesting feature of the familiar almanacs which have made their appearance for 1900 on the drugstore counters is the mysterious signs of the zodiac, which had their origin, as have all things astronomical, along the banks of the Nile. The earliest people to make a serious study of the stars seems to have been the shepherds, who by reason of their long wanderings far from the haunts of man, were most likely to study the natural phenomena around them. They soon came to recognize the fact that certain stars constantly recurred with certain seasons of the year. For instance, the heliacal rising of the bright star Sirius was found to coincide with the rising of the Nile, a season which to this day all Egypt eagerly watches for. But the most trusty watchers known to the shepherds were their own sheep dogs Hence the dog, their ready symbol of watchfulness, was identified with this star and translated to the heavens. Similarly, the shearing season was always ushered in by a certain star, while the appearance in the East of another constellation, the Pleiades, heralded the time for sowing their crops. Arguing upon the principal that what was sauce for the goose should be equally capable of serving the gander in a like capacity, the shepherds, who had thus identified the history of the stars with that of their daily life, began to trace the history of their daily life among the stars. Hence it is that we have such homely signs as Taurus (the bull), Capricornus (the goat), Aries (the ram), Scorpio (the dreaded scorpion of the rocky places), Leo (the equally dreaded lion of the desert), and os forth, all of which signs have remained to this day.

Coffee in Jamaica.

You see all those bushes with red berries strung along their branches? That is coffee, and the taller trees among which it is growing are pimentos, from which the world gets its "allspice," says Good Words. It looks like jungle, does it not? Yet many hundreds of pounds would not buy that one hill-slope. Among the lovely flowers humming birds sparkle as they fly and hover; butterflies as large as the birds dispute the honey with them. As you turn round the corner you surprise parties of tiny ground doves, and every now and again the larger pea doves flit across the road. Up from the valley below the sounds of voices and laughter. Stop your carriage and look down. Those are the work on a coffee estate, and those flat terraces partitioned off into squares are the "barbecues" upon which the berries are dried. You can see that some of the squares are a different color to the rest. The dark ones are those that are covered with coffee berries; the others are those which have not yet been filled

ANTIQUITY OF MAN.

With Special Reference to the Stone Age in Egypt.

Sir John Evans dealt with the antiquity of man, with special reference to the stone age in Egypt, in a presidential address delivered by him at the Birmingham and Midland institute recently, says the London Times. He said that forty years ago the almost universal belief of those who had but superficially approached the question was that a literal interpretation was to be placed on the opening chapters of the book of Genesis, and that the chronology of Archbishop Ussher and others in fixing the creation of man at the year 4004 B. C. was beyond all reasonable question. It was not until 1859, when the subject was investigated by the late Sir Joseph Prestwich himself and others, that the presence of objects of human workmanship in association with the remains of extinct mammals in beds of gravel, sand and loam was almost universally regarded as an established fact. The long-continued studies of Joseph Landon of Saltley college, Birmingham, had resulted in his discovery in the gravels of the valley of the Rew of an implement of the same general type as those from many other valley gravels in England and France, but formed from a brown quartzite pebble and not, as usual, chipped out of flint. If further discoveries of this kind were made our present views as to the northern limits of the existence of such implements would have to be materially modified, and the area over which discoveries of this character were made might be considerably extended. Assuming that the occupation of the earth by man had been continuous, there must at some time or other have been a transition from the paleolithic stage culture to the neolithic, but of such transition little trustworthy indications had as yet been found, and over a great part of Europe, at all events, there appeared to be "a great gulf fixed," which at present it was impossible to bridge over in a satisfactory manner.

POT HERBS.

The Wild Cabbage, Sea Beet and Mercury of England.

In its strict sense, as used by the early botanists, a pot herb is a "herbe that serves for the potte," and of these we have a considerable number in our native flora, says Longman's Magazine. Among them may be mentioned the wild cabbage, sea beet and mercury. The use of the wild cabbage, or sea colewort, is hardly extinct yet. It is still gathered by the peasants on the sea cliffs of Devonshire in hard winters when garden produce is scarce. This plant is the origin of our garden varieties, such as savoys and brussels sprouts and brocoli and cauliflower and has been cultivated from very early times. The great naturalist, John Ray, noticed it growing wild on Dover cliffs, where it still flourishes in remarkable abundance. Indeed, in summer time the white chalk cliffs from Dover to St. Margaret's bay are gay with the pale-yellow blossoms of this plant. It may also be seen in considerable plenty on the picturesque cliffs which command the entrance to Dartmouth harbor, in South Devon. In the Isle of Wight it was formerly abundant (A. D. 1665), especially on the Culver cliffs, between Bembridge and Sandown; but for some reason which it is difficult to discover the plant has become very scarce of late years. The sea beet (beta maritima), sometimes called sea spinach, the origin of our beet-root and mangold wurzel, is a common plant near the sea. It is mostly abundant in salt marshes and on banks and waste places along the shore. Fifty years ago the young leaves were regularly gathered by the poorer classes in the Isle of Wight and "boiled and eaten as greens with the pork or bacon which then formed so constant an article in the dietary of our Hampshire peasantry." Occasionally the plant is so used now, and it certainly forms an excellent substitute for spinach.

Edison's Religion.

This is what Thomas Edison said in reply to a question addressed him by an agnostic: "Why, after years of watching the processes of nature, I can no more doubt the existence of an intelligence that is running things than I do the existence of myself. Take, for example, the substance water that forms the crystal known as ice. Now, there are hundreds of combinations that form crystals, and every one of them save that of ice sinks in water. Ice, I say, doesn't. And it is rather luck for us mortals, for if it had done so we would all be dead. Why? Simply because if ice sank to the bottom of rivers, lakes an oceans as fast as it froze, those places would be frozen up, and there would be no water left. That is only one example out of thousands that to me prove beyond the possibility of a doubt that some vast intelligence is governing this and other planets." Enquirer.

AFRICA IN THE NEXT CENTURY

Dark Continent Is Undergoing a Wonderful Transformation.

From the Forum: The twentieth century Africa promises startling contrasts when compared with the Africa of the nineteenth century. With an area four times as great as that of the United States, a population of 150,000,000, a soil and climate capable of infinite variety of production, a rapidly expanding commerce, and the greatest known supplies of ivory, gold and diamonds, its development under the modern methods which are now being applied to it is practically assured The home of the oldest civilization, it is the last of the continents to yield to the touch of the newest civilization But yesterday enveloped in darkness of mystery without and ignorance within, it is today illuminated by the searchlight of modern methods, and as its importance and attractions are being recognized, with this recognition must come development. With 2,000,000 Europeans scattered over its vast area, acquainting themselves with its natural conditions and requirements with the steamer, the railroad, the telegraph and the telephone carrying light and knowledge and civilization to its darkest corner, Africa cannot long remain unknown or unknowing. It was only after the explorers—Livingstone, Speke, Stanley and others—had discovered, through persistent and heroic effects, that there existed vast navigable water ways above the falls near the mouths of the great streams which flow from the interior that European nations awoke to the physical and commercial possibilities of Africa, and then, in a twinkling, the dark continent was seized upon and divided up and became, as by magic, a vast European "hinterland." Between 1884 and 1898 an area two and a half times the size of the United States, and containing a population of 100,000,000, was parceled out by an agreement of the European powers. At present scarcely a foot of African territory remains unclaimed.

SMALL GOLDFISH.

Called Celestial Telescope, Worth Twelve Dollars an Ounce.

New York Evening Post: The ordinary housekeeper, who would consider 25 cents a pound an expensive price to pay for fish, may be made more contented by the knowledge that some kinds of fish are sold here which would bring hundreds of dollars if valued by the pound. One of these fish is now shown in an up-town aquarium store. It is called the "Celestrial Telescope," and though less than four inches long is priced at $12, without accessories. A four-inch fish weighs a trifle less than an ounce. At $12 an ounce, then, these fish would be worth $192 a pound, which is probably the highest price charged for any kind of fish in New York. The "Celestial Telescope" is a fancy variety of goldfish, and gets its name from its enormous goggle-eyes, which are set nearly or quite on the top of his head. It exemplifies perfectly, in fact, Edward Everett Hale's advice to "look up and not down." Most fish whose eyes are thus situated, the angler or the flounder, for example, are inclined to hug the bottom closely, and thus avoid the possibility of any unseen danger from below; this one, however, has never outgrown the free-swimming habits of its ancestor, the common goldfish, and generally keeps near the surface of the water. In this position it can see practically nothing except floating objects, and it often misses the most tempting morsel if they happen to be floating below it. Besides its extraordinary eyes, this fish possesses most of the other peculiarities sought after by the fish fanciers. In fact, it is the most "fancy" fish produced, and is intended to differ as much as possible from the natural goldfish. It has an enormous double "fan-tail," so fine and dainty as to be almost useless for swimming purposes; an extra large size of scales, and a color varied by irregular patches of black, none of which features are natural attributes of a goldfish.

Lives of Birds.

A French authority on the subject has just concluded some remarkable investigations into the lives of animals and birds. He finds that the average life of a swan ranges from 250 to 300 years. Eagles, kites and falcons live over 150 years. An eagle died at Berlin in 1819 which was taken captive in 1715, when it was evidently already many years old, and a white-headed kite died at the castle of Schoenbrun in 1824, which was captured in Austria in 1706, having thus passed 118 years in captivity. Sea and marsh dwelling birds live during several generations of humanity, and ducks and cuckoos are equally long-lived. Rooks and crows frequently exceed 100 years of life, and though magpies in captivity rarely live more than twenty or twenty-five years, they are thought to live, in freedom, to a great age.

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE

Governor Urges Liberal Treatment of Educational Institutions.

State Board of Control Is Strongly Commended—Is Opposed to Prize Fights.

DES MOINES, Jan. 10.—The governor's message was read to both houses of the legislature yesterday. It follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives of Iowa:

Iowa's Present Prosperity

In obedience to constitutional requirement, I have the pleasure of submitting to your honorable body the following statements concerning the condition of the state, together with some recommendations for legislative consideration.

Never in our history has labor found more ready employment or more liberal remunreation; never has agriculture generally been more prosperous or yielded better returns; never has business been more universally active or reasonable profits for invested capital more secure; and never were the finances of the state in a more satisfactory condition than at the present hour.

At the beginning of the last fiscal term, there were unpaid warrants outstanding to the amount of $447,500.73. At the same time there was cash in the treasury $36,672.96, leaving the net indebtedness of the state $410,827.77. Of the outstanding warrants, the sum of $363,834.84 was drawing interest, the accrued amount of which at that time increased this indebtedness by an unascertained sum. Moreover, there remained of special appropriations made by the Twenty-sixth and former general assemblies the following amount, against which warrants had not yet been drawn: $308,437.61. There was, therefore, to be paid out of the revenues of the then succeeding term $719,265.38, besides the interest on the outstanding warrants, in addition to the ordinary expenses of the biennial period and the extraordinary expenditures that the Twenty-seventh general assembly might authorize.

Condition of the Treasury

It is gratifying to know that the judicious provisions made by the Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh general assemblies, for the increase of public revenues on the one hand, and the reduction of expenditures on the other, enabled the state to meet all its obligations, past and current, and to accumulate in the treasury, at the end of the fiscal term under review, a surplus of $414,294.02 over and above all outstanding warrants, subject, however, to the yet unexpended appropriations of the Twenty-seventh and earlier general assemblies. Of these, less than $200,000 remained undrawn at the end of the fiscal term. With these amounts all expended, there will remain fully $220,000 to meet the expenditures of the current term.

The receipts of general revenues during the fiscal term from July 1, 1897, to July 1, 1899, aggregated	$5,079,403.29
Total revenues for the term	$5,116,076.25
Against this sum warrants were drawn during the term	$4,196,494.93
Deduct all outstanding warrants at the end of the term	$4,196,494.93
Warrants paid during the term	4,165,786.58
Add amount of outstanding warrants at beginning of term	447,500.73
Interest thereon paid	57,786.57
Treasury cash June 30, 1899	445,002.37
Total	$5,116,076.25

General revenue	$ 566,970.33
Outstanding warrants at that date	29,710.36
Net surplus	$ 537,259.97
On December 31, 1897, the outstanding warrants aggregated	579,966.00
Cash in treasury	108,645.47
Leaving a net indebtedness	$ 471,320.53

The treasury is thus in better condition than it was two years ago by $1,005,356.50.

The surplus of $537,259.97, shown above, is subject to reduction by the special appropriations yet undrawn of past general assemblies, amounting to less than $100,000.

A Million Dollars Available

The auditor of state estimates the receipts for the current term at $1,564,200; and the expenditures, without any special appropriations made by the Twenty-eighth general assembly, at $3,577,423; giving a surplus of receipts for the current term of $986,777. Adding to this sum the balance of $220,000 cash in the treasury at the end of the fiscal term in excess of outstanding demands and undrawn appropriations, gives fully $1,200,000, which this general assembly can safely appropriate for special purposes. The above estimate assumes the annual levy will be continued at the present rate. I believe, however, this can be reduced to at most two and one-half mills for general revenue, and three-tenths of a mill special levy for purposes of higher education, making an aggregate of two and eigth-tenths mills as against an even three mills at present. In view of the constantly increasing expenses of the state, incident to a rapidly growing population, and ever-multiplying number of wards of the state, coupled with a noticeable reduction in the aggregate assessments, the rate suggested is quite low—very considerably lower than in most states of the union.

Iowa's Banking Interests

Iowa is exceedingly fortunate in her banking interests. She has more banks than any other state in the union, and the condition of these institutions is very encouraging. At the date of the reports of incorporated banks nearest the first of October, 1897, the bank deposits of Iowa were as follows:

State and savings banks	$ 50,421,525.61
National banks	27,502,301.25
Private banks (estimated)	25,000,000.00
Total	$102,993,826.86

At the date of their last reports, the deposits were as follows:

National banks	42,238,769.18
Private banks (estimated)	40,000,000.00
Total	$163,715,560.85

An increase of over 55 per cent in two years.

Of the more than $110,000,000 held by national, state and private banks, investigation convinced me that certainly over one-half is owned by farmers; and the $51,000,000 on deposit in savings banks is held almost exclusively by wage earners and people of limited income. Unquestionably the proportion of unincumbered farms in the state exceeds that of any other period. In addition, the value of all agricultural lands and of farm animals has very materially appreciated within the last few years.

Favors Generous Appropriations

Under these favorable conditions, I think the Twenty-eighth general assembly will be justified in making somewhat more liberal appropriations than in former years. Great care, however, should be exercised, for it must be borne in mind that it is easier for a state, as well as for an individual, to incur a liability than to discharge one.

The ever-present temptation to plan only for today, and to build temporary sheds where permanent structures are needed, should so far as possible be repressed. Iowa will appear on the map of the world forever, and her population will multiply with the years. Wise planning for the future distinguishes the statesman from the mere politician. I think, therefore, in expending the somewhat more than a million dollars now or soon to be available, at least a portion should be so placed as to furnish enduring evidences of your wisdom.

State Board of Control

The Twenty-seventh general assembly made provision for a board of control, which, for nearly two years, has had the management of all our state institutions, excepting those purely educational. The policy thus inaugurated has resulted in a very considerable saving to the state, and in addition the service at most of the institutions, I am persuaded, has been improved. When the amount of work necessary to reorganize the operative force of thirteen state institutions and personally examine the practical operations of each institution separately and to all jointly, to install a main office at the capitol with its corps of untried clerks and assistants is considered, it must be conceded that the three men composing this board undertook, on July 1, 1898, an Herculean task. The results show more clearly than any words of mine how conscientiously this duty was undertaken and how earnestly, faithfully and untiringly it has been prosecuted. To justify the board of control system, it is not necessary to defend each separate act, or to indorse the policy of the board in every particular. If errors have been committed, the lessons taught thereby will not need repeating. Time will strengthen that which is weak, and experience will supply whatever may be wanting.

Not Too Much Economy

Great care should be exercised that the revenues of the state be not wasted; but, while this is true, the unfortunate inmates of our hospitals for the insane, the Institution for the Feeble-Minded, the College and the Industrial Home for the Blind, the School for the Deaf, the Soldiers' Orphans' home, and especially the Soldiers' home, should be cared for—not lavishly, but liberally. The people of the state will approve a policy that insures ample food and suitable clothing for the inmates of all these institutions, and the employment of teachers, where required, the equal in qualification and aptness with those engaged by public school boards to instruct the more fortunate. It is idle to suppose that equivalent talent can be obtained to teach the same branches to the deaf, the blind, and the feeble-minded at less wages than are paid amid more congenial surroundings. Intellectual ability and skill have a market value; and the state or individual that buys below current rates will receive corresponding service. The dominant sentiment of Iowa is favorable to good wages, and the state should not by example teach private corporations lessons in economy at the expense of labor. All that the people of the state of Iowa require is 100 cents in service for each dollar expended, and no one need ever expect more. The board of control will neither squander nor recklessly expend any appropriation the general assembly may place at its disposal.

Public Schools of Iowa

The public school system of Iowa has had many encomiums pronounced upon it, and needs none from me. To say that it was never better, or that no state in the union has ever pursued a wiser policy, is not equivalent to saying that ours cannot be improved. To say that it has accomplished great things for the people of our state does not imply that it cannot be made more efficient. Within the memory of persons now living, women were denied a college education and the first woman to be graduated from any coeducational institution of learning, if now living, is but little past the prime of life. A revolution has been wrought in these matters; and, while no one would return to former conditions, yet a system which results in the graduation of 1,839 young ladies from the high schools of Iowa the current year, and only 954 young gentlemen, is weak at a vital point. These graduations are from town and city schools, for rural districts do not generally afford high school privileges. That town and city schools are superior to those in rural districts will be readily observed as soon as the policy pursued by each is compared. As soon as a girl arrives at the age of 17, she finds ready employment as the mistress of a country public school. If she proves to be proficient, and possessed of aptness to teach, after a few terms in some summer school or perhaps a year of normal training, and after having attended a few county institutes, she may secure a position, at better wages, in an intermediate grade in town, where her efforts are supplemented by the supervision of a principal or a city superintendent of schools, whose talents command from $1,200 to $3,000 per annum. Here she has also the advantages of regular teachers' meetings, and association with advanced scholarship and skill. If she still improves, she may be promoted to the primary department at yet increased wages, for it is now recognized that the best talent is demanded in the primary teachers. Or, if after alternating in teaching and attending school she obtains a collegiate education, she may secure a position in a city high school. But if she makes little or no improvement she will continue in the rural districts, with no supervision other than a county superintendent, who, owing to his varied duties and extensive field, is necessarily unable to examine her work very often, if ever. Let this custom be continued, and boys will not remain in school, as in former generations, until past school age; and, so long as a majority of the teachers, in town and city schools, are women and girls, so long will a majority of the graduates be of the same sex.

Recommends Township System

In several counties of the state the experiment has been tried of maintaining a central township graded school, to and from which the pupils are conveyed in carriages, at public expense. Wherever this plan has been adopted the results have been most satisfactory. The enrollment has been thereby invariably increased, and the attendance has been more regular; better teachers have been employed, with correspondingly improved scholarship, and in addition the expenses have been very considerably reduced. This is the experience also of other states where the practice has become quite general. I am not prepared to advise that, at present, it be made universal. It is probable that the erection of no more single room subdistrict schoolhouse should be permitted. Some encouraging legislation should, I think, be enacted looking toward the establishment of graded schools within easy access of every farm in Iowa. This can be accomplished gradually, by replacing existing schoolhouses with central two or more room buildings, as fast as occasion to rebuild arises. The vocation of the farmer, which is so admirably adapted for rearing industrious, and therefore self-supporting, children, must not become offensive because of the want of school privileges. The generation now represented by the youth of Iowa corresponds in outward conditions to that from the Atlantic states which controlled the affairs of this nation—politically, educationally, professionally and commercially—a half century ago, and to the generation, reared in the states bordering the Alleghanies, which is now in control. The children of the Mississippi valley will be in command in turn, and they, like their predecessors, will be the sons of the first progressive, ambitious generation. They will have been bred, born and reared amid industrious and hopeful surroundings; and in the future, as in the past, a goodly percentage will be from the rural districts. It should be the privilege of the general assembly to make the best possible provision for the development of the intellectual resources of Iowa, which have never been equaled by any generation, and are not likely soon to be excelled.

Benefits of this Plan

In this and kindred matters economy is not the synonym for statesmanship. With a central graded school in each township, and with a superintendent of these schools at such a salary as will command the best talent in the market, to be selected by a board in the same manner as city's superintendents are chosen, and the employment of a corps of matured teachers, a fair proportion of whom should be men, would wonderfully augment the effectiveness of our educational system, and insure the retention in the schools of our boys as well as our girls.

State Normal Schools

The foregoing observations naturally lead to the question of normal schools. Iowa possesses one such institution under state control and management. This has facilities to reasonably accommodate six hundred pupils. During the last year the attendance has averaged over one thousand. A better class of students never congregated. They are not sent to the State Normal school in the fond hope that they may develop into something, at some time, but they come voluntarily and many of them at their own expense, with the settled purpose to make men and women of themselves, to take their places in the battle of life, and to bear their share of the world's burdens. The school is grossly overcrowded. I do not believe its capacity ought to be materially increased. There is a limit in number over which an instructor can exercise a personal influence. Until character is firmly established, and the bent of attainment and desire well fixed, the best results have ever been accomplished by comparatively small institutions, even when the equipment has been below the standard. Afterwards, the great university, with its thousands of students, has its place. From seven to eight hundred pupils is, in my opinion, the maximum for any one normal school.

Favors Four New Normal Schools

I should be glad to see a state normal established on each of the great trunk railways of Iowa. I think it would be better to locate them thus than to follow geographical divisions, for the reason that distance is not so important a factor as accessibility. It is frequently more difficult to compass thirty miles north and south than to cross the state from east to west. There are quite a number of localities ready, and anxious, to make to the state donation of spacious grounds and suitable buildings, already erected, adequate for a school with an attendance of from two to five hundred. Other communities are willing to donate grounds and subscribe the needed money to build. I think it would be both wise and prudent for the general assembly at this session to locate at least four normal schools. Forty or fifty thousand dollars in property can be secured as a donation with each school thus located. This would equal an appropriation of two hundred thousand dollars. It would cost less to put these schools in operation than to build the equivalent in additions to the existing plant and be much more advantageous to the patrons than one gigantic institution, where student influences are quite liable to overbalance that of teachers and instructors. Five normal schools will not be an oversupply for Iowa. Massachusetts has ten; New York twelve; Pennsylvania thirteen; Wisconsin, with a less population than Iowa, already maintains seven; while Minnesota and Missouri each has four; and Illinois is building her fifth.

University of Iowa

The general assembly will, of course, carefully examine the report and recommendations of the board of regents of the State University. Here increased appropriations are also asked, and are much needed. I think it can be safely said that no university has ever accomplished more with such limited means. Certainly, no money has been squandered, and the results have been phenomenal. In view of the existence of a large number of denominational institutions in the state, most of them furnishing excellent opportunities for the acquisition of what may be called a collegiate education, it would seem to me unwise to leave our State University a university in name only, but a college in fact. Professional departments do not differentiate a college and a university. The state should provide that which private enterprise and philanthropy do not. The State University should be made the center around which all public and denominational schools and colleges should cluster, and it should be able to furnish the graduates from all these institutions university advantages.

Liberal Treatment of State University

The Twenty-sixth general assembly directed the levy of a special tax of one-tenth of one mill per annum for five years for the improvement fund of the university. The Twenty-seventh general assembly continued this tax for one year. This enabled the board of regents to act intelligently and with full knowledge of the amount to be realized from the appropriation. The result is a much needed collegiate building, which, when completed, would be an honor to any educational institution in the United States. I think this special tax can be safely continued for an additional five years. Lest it appear excessive, it may be well to know that even with this special appropriation the University of Iowa is not being dealt with very liberally. The present income of this institution can be doubled and still be below the average of similar institutions in other states. Nebraska expends annually over $280,000 in support of its university; Minnesota and Illinois each expends over $350,000; Wisconsin over $400,000; and Michigan over $500,000; while the annual income of the State University of Iowa is $150,033. Iowa cannot compete with other states without fearlessly meeting the conditions.

Agriculture and Mechanic Arts

From information received from the highest authority, I am convinced that the College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts of Iowa comes nearer conforming to the purposes contemplated in the act of congress, appropriating land in aid thereof, than any similar institution in the United States. It is not easy to overestimate its value to the state and nation. The art of farming is quite well understood and practiced, but the science of agriculture is yet in its infancy. Modern invention has revolutionized methods, but it has not modified or affected the philosophy of animal or plant life. There are thousands of men in the state who have learned from observation and experience how to feed a steer, or a pig, so as to produce beef and pork at a profit of from ten to twenty-five per cent; a somewhat less number have learned in similar ways to feed a cow so as to produce milk and butter at a profit of from twenty to fifty per cent; but there are comparatively few who scientifically understand the essential elements required for the production of bone, and muscle, and fat and milk and butter; and fewer still who know how to feed the rich soils of Iowa so as to afford 100 per cent of profit on the cost of fertilization.

Within the century the older mothers of the neighborhood prescribed traditional remedies for all the more common maladies of our race; while ailments of stock were treated by ubiquitous and untutored jacks-of-all-trades who for instance, administered chunks of salt pork covered with soot to replace a supposed lost cud. Now both are placed in the care of men skilled in their profession and educated in schools for their special preparation. But while diseases of men and beasts are being studied and adequate remedies provided, who even professes to understand the pathology of plants, and who is prepared to treat scientifically diseased crops or diseased lands? These subjects are all taught and practically demonstrated at our College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts.

Future of Agriculture

The future of agriculture, therefore the future of Iowa, is most promising. A quarter of a century hence, and possibly in less time than that, the population of the United States will be sufficient to consume the present annual product of our farms. Our lands in the meantime will have materially appreciated in value; a more diversified system of agriculture will have been adopted, and the productiveness of our 56,000 square miles of land will, at least should, be increased fifty per cent. This can be accomplished only by a carfeul study of soils, of plant-life, and of animal husbandry, and by putting the scientific knowledge thus acquired into practical operation. Theory is not always practical, but truth is. Whatever is practical is philosophically correct, and whatever is scientifically true must of necessity be practical. An experiment station is maintained at our College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, where theories are put to practical tests, and the results are published for the information of the farmers of our state; thus benefiting not only the pupils, but all who will take the trouble to read the bulletins.

It was the avowed intent of Mr. Morrill, the originator of the measure, and of all friends of the grant of lands in aid of this institution, to establish a school for the special preparation of men and women for industrial pursuits. The departments of civil, mining, electrical and mechanical engineering, and many others similarly practical, evidence the good faith purpose of trustees and all connected with the institution, to make it what its name implies—a college, not only of agriculture, but of mechanic arts as well. All departments related to industrial pursuits demand and deserve favorable consideration by the general assembly.

Schools Should Not Be Rivals

I doubt the wisdom of duplicating unnecessarily the departments of our three great educational institutions. They should be in no sense rivals. The university should not be a school of polytechnics, but in fact a university. The normal schools, assuming we must have more than one, should not be colleges of liberal arts, and neither the university nor the College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts has place or room for chairs of pedagogy. Let the special field of each be kept distinct, and each perfected by liberal appropriations. Then all shall know where the object of their quest can be obtained, and the state will be able to furnish as good as the market affords.

Three-tenths of a Mill Tax

I think the recommendations of the board of trustees are conservative, and that a special tax of one-tenth of a mill per annum for five years for improvements can be safely granted. I have no question as to the wisdom of a special tax of three-tenths of a mill for purposes of advanced education. One-tenth of a mill each for normal schools, for the university, and for the College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, will place these schools in greatly improved condition at the end of five years, and will avoid appropriations in anticipation of revenues. This will annually yield something over $50,000 for each, and will impose a tax of only 42 cents per annum upon the average quarter-section of land. The effect is the same as repeated annual appropriations of a like amount, but is preferable for the reason that it enables the regents and trustees to act intelligently. Knowing what can be relied upon, permanent plans can be formulated with the certainty of consummation. Nothing worthy of Iowa can be accomplished so long as the executive officers of these institutions are left in doubt regarding the future policy of the state.

This recommendation need not prevent some considerable reduction in the aggregate annual levy. The proposition simply contemplates the establishment, so far as it is possible for one general assembly so to do, of a policy that shall insure permanent improvements and avoid large appropriations to be raised or expended in any single year.

Statement of Expenditures

In anticipation of the declaration of war against Spain, the Twenty-seventh general assembly, shortly before its adjournment, appropriated five hundred thousand dollars ($500,000), to be paid on the requisition of the governor "in the defense of the state and in aid of the national government in case of war." Of this sum, $149,484.01 was used in equipping and furnishing the troops hereinbefore referred to; in caring for the sick in hospitals at home and in distant camps; and in supplying comforts for the men while in the service. A detailed statement of these expenditures will be found in the report of the adjutant-general, to which your attention is respectfully directed.

In the expenditure of this money, a liberal construction was given to the language employed in the appropriation, and no request for supplies of any kind by officer or enlisted man, either in camp at Des Moines or while in the service, was ever denied. In addition, the several colonels were authorized to make expenditures, in the interest of the men of their command, at any time and to any amount provided only that the same should be indorsed and recommended by the surgeon of the regiment, and properly approved vouchers filed therefor.

In this connection it is proper to say that several organizations of women within the state, notably the Red Cross and the Iowa Sanitary Commission, rendered very valuable services in caring for the sick. The government opened a hospital at Des Moines, which was operated jointly under its management and that of the state. To expedite matters and insure prompt and ample services on the part of nurses and physicians, the state primarily paid the bills connected therewith, first seeing that they were approved and indorsed by the federal officer in charge. Of the $149,484.01 expended by the state, $91,483.78 has been refunded by the general government. The balance is now pending as a claim before the department, but it will require additional congressional legislation to authorize the payment of some considerable number of the items.

Contributions Which Were Made

Under the terms of the act of congress authorizing the organization of an army for service in the Spanish war, the Fifty-first Iowa was entitled to discharge upon the exchange of ratifications of the treaty of peace between Spain and the United States, which occurred on the 11th day of April, 1899. But at that time their services were needed in the Philippine islands, and both officers and men, with commendable patriotism, asked not to be discharged, as was their right but continued voluntarily in the service until congress had made provision therefor, and a new army had been organized to take their place. In recognition of this service, a plan was devised to bring the members of this regiment from San Francisco, Cal., where they were discharged, to their homes, primarily at private expense, but in the expectation that the state would reimburse. In pursuance of this plan, an opportunity was tendered the banks of Iowa to contribute to the cause, and in this way the requisite amount, $38,655.92, was secured and transportation home was furnished each officer and enlisted man of the regiment. Vouchers for these expenditures, together with a list and schedule of the banks and private individuals that contributed the funds, are on file in the executive office, and may be there examined, or copies will be furnished if it shall be your pleasure. The other regiments, with equal bravery, with equal fortitude, and with equal patriotism, stood ready to go anywhere at any time, and face any foe, but circumstances permitted their discharge within the limits of the time for which they were enlisted.

In Favor of Reimbursement

I recommend that the state make recognition of the patriotism manifested by the men of the Fifty-first regiment, in thus volunteering their services during the rainy season in a tropical climate, after they were entitled to their discharge under the terms of the act of congress which authorized their enlistment, and their consequent service in two wars, by reimbursing the several banks and private individuals who have so generously contributed; thereby, in fact, returning these sons of Iowa to their homes at the expense of the state.

Lest this may seem to show partiality for one regiment when all are equally worthy, I suggest that both the Fiftieth and Fifty-second regiments, while in camp at Des Moines, shortly before their discharge, were granted a furlough, and the men were issued tansportation to their homes and return at the expense of the state, and after muster-out transportation was again furnished both officers and men to their respective places of residence. I have assurances from the war department that travel-pay and ration allowance from Des Moines to their homes will yet be paid the members of these regiments. The Forty-ninth is the only regiment for which no gratuitous transportation was furnished when it was mustered into the service of the United States. If now paid what it would have cost the state to return them from Savannah, Ga., where discharged, to their homes, it would afford an evidence of appreciation of valuable services rendered beyond the United States.

Iowa National Guard

The experience of the last two years has demonstrated the wisdom of some modification in our national guard laws. Under the call made in 1898 the four regiments of the Iowa National guard were transferred to the United States service under their then existing organizations. This left two brigadier-generals and their staff officers unprovided for. These offices should, I think, be abolished. Otherwise, whoever is advanced to the highest position in the guard, will be left at home whenever the president makes requisition upon the state for regimental organizations.

No better regiments were probably ever mustered than the four contributed by Iowa to the Spanish war. At least two of the colonels were referred to, by different generals of high rank in the regular army, as the best volunteer officers they had ever seen. I have always insisted, and still believe, that if they could have been promptly sent to the front, in view of the training they had previously received, they would have made a record worthy of like organizations in the regular army. The discipline manifested in camp life, as well as the fortitude displayed during all the ordeals through which these several regiments passed, justifies the highest esteem for both officers and men. Nevertheless, they were without military reputation at the time the earlier brigades and corps were being formed, and were therefore left in camp while other regiments with experienced officers were selected for service. No corps, division, or brigade commander will ever choose a regiment with an unknown colonel, so long as he can make selection of officers who have had actual experience or professional military training.

Special Training for Service

The government, at no small expense, maintains a military academy at West Point for the express purpose of training men for service in the army. Either this school is a failure, or it is serviceable; and if the latter, then graduates therefrom may be safely presmued to be better qualified to command a regiment than men fresh from civil life. Iowa has never been slow to keep her full quota of cadets in this school; and the young men who are able to obtain admission thereto are not drones or weaklings, neither do they lose their citizenship by service in the regular army. I see no valid reason why Iowa should cease to respect, or fail to make use of, her specially trained sons to command her troops in case of war. I therefore recommend that the office of colonel be left vacant, to be filled by appointment in case of transfer to the United States service, or that a new election be ordered in case of a requisition from the president, and that the regiment be restricted by statute in its selection of a colonel to a graduate from the government school at West Point, or to an experienced field officer of a previous war. This should not be understood as a criticism of the officers who have so efficiently commanded the regiments recently furnished. It is not so intended. The proposition simply sugests the choice between sending a regiment forward under the command of an officer who is known to have had military training, and sending it under one of unknown ability.

Suppression of Tuberculosis

Some years ago the government effectually eradicated pleuro pneumonia among cattle. This was not accomplished, however, without much apparent loss to the owners of stock, but the result inured greatly to their benefit. More recent investigation has demonstrated the presence, to some considerable extent, of tuberculosis among all grades and conditions of cattle in this as well as in foreign countries. Some students of the disease insist that its eradication would successfully check the ravages of consumption in the human family. It is but natural, however, that others repudiate and scoff at these voices of warning. The disease is admittedly deceptive. Outward appearances seldom give any indication of its presence. Only in severe cases is the meat so affected as to render it unfit for food. Recently a herd belonging to the state and kept at one of our institutions was examined, and twenty-four out of thirty-eight gave evidence of disease, and were ordered killed. Out of this number, the government inspector, after examining the carcasses, condemned thirteen as wholly unfit for purposes other than the manufacture of fertilizers. Not long ago one of the principal packers of the country purchased a car load of apparently healthy steers, which bore no outward indications of disease, but when they were slaughtered the inspector condemned eleven of the car load to the fertilizer tank. Some quite startling results have followed the feeding of milk from cows affected with tuberculosis to pigs, and the injection of it into the veins of rodents. I have the promise that an extended series of experimentation along these and kindred lines will be prosecuted at the college of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts during the current biennial period. Until it shall be demonstrated that the offspring of cows thus affected is likely also to be diseased, I am not ready to advise the slaughter of breeding stock, at least of beef herds. I do, however, believe it not only wise but very important that the sale of milk from cows affected with tuberculosis be prohibited by statute, and adequate penalties provided for its violation. Whatever risks one may be willing to take himself in the use of untested milk, certainly none should hesitate to protect unsuspecting families and helpless children. Provision should be made, I think, for the annual examination of all cows from which milk is sold or offered for sale. A moderate fee should be fixed by statute for such examination. I think provision should also be made for the preservation, under quarantine regulations, of such animals as may be required for scientific experimentation.

Monuments to Civil War Heroes

On the 6th and 7th of April, 1862, a tremendous battle was fought near the Tennessee river, at a log church that was called the Shiloh meeting house. At that time Iowa had fifteen infantry regiments at the front. Eleven of these participated in this battle; and it is generally conceded [illegible] heroic [illegible] "The Hornets' Nest" [illegible] army from destruction [illegible] The severity of this battle [illegible] of by the fact that the Union army lost, in killed, wounded and missing, 13,047 men, of which 2,409 were from this state, 33 per cent of the combined Iowa forces participating. General Beauregard marched 40,000 men into that battle on the 6th, but returned to the encounter on the morning of the 7th with his remnant of 20,000. So says Grant in his memoirs. The government has purchased this battlefield for a national military park; and officially appointed representatives of the several Iowa orgalzations that took part in the engagement have located the position of their respective regiments.

In this connection, it may not be out of place to urge upon your attention the fact that the government has also made provision for a national park at Vicksburg, and the ground embraced within that memorable siege and battlefield is being purchased. I recommend that a commission be authorized to locate the position of the thirty-one regiments from Iowa which sustained the honor of the state, and the integrity of the nation, in that decisive conflict, and that an appropriation be made sufficient to pay their actual expenses, to the end that at the proper time suitable memorials may be there erected also.

More Ground for State

When the present capitol was built it was believed to be as commodious as the needs of the state would ever require. It has now been occupied sixteen years, and several of the departments are seriously congested. An arsenal is needed for the accommodation of the adjutant general's department. Storage of quartermaster supplies is now provided in a building rented for the purpose. It was found necessary to locate the board of control in committee rooms back of the senate chamber, which cannot well be spared from their designed use during the session of the general assembly. A warehouse, for the storage and proper distribution and reshipment of supplies for the various institutions under the management of the board of control, is much needed, and should be provided at an early date. A new building for the memorial, historical and art department has been erected, and partitions and changes in various offices have been found imperative to make room for the several departments connected with the state government. Evidently additional buildings will be needed in the near future, and these, when erected, should be fireproof and of substantial and presentable architecture, and should be so located as to improve and add dignity to the present capitol.

I recommend that the two blocks directly north of the capitol grounds be immediately purchased, or obtained under condemnation proceedings. Nothing will be saved by delay, and the erection of substantial buildings by the owners upon this property may materially add to the expense. Location of public buildings is a matter of prime importance, and I think it will be conceded that these two blocks are very desirable. No location is too good for Iowa, and none but the best should be considered.

Building and Loan Association

Insufficient protection for the people of our state, against reckless investments by non-resident building and loan associations is now afforded by our laws. Instances have repeatedly been brought to my attention where the holders of stock in these foreign associations have paid all their contracts require, and thereafter assessments have been made of more than 25 per cent of the withdrawal value. I think it would be well to safeguard our people by somewhat more advanced legislation on the subject.

There is now no provision for winding up the affairs of a solvent building and loan association, which may, for any reason, desire to go into voluntary liquidation. If a company be compelled to close out its business in detail, and in the order in which it was acquired, when there is no longer the incentive to economy which existed when the enterprise was launched, the assets will be exhausted long before the last share of stock matures.

It is not unlikely that existing associations may find it convenient and desirable to transfer their liabilities and assets to other companies, and provision therefor can be, I think, safely and advantageously made.

Interest on Endowment Fund

By the terms of the federal grant of lands in aid of a college of agriculture and mechanic arts, the proceeds of these lands were made a perpetual fund, and the state is required to make good any losses, and is charged with an annual income thereon of not less than 5 per cent per annum. The statutes of the state require that this money shall be loaned upon mortgages bearing not less than 6 per cent. The unexampled prosperity of the country, and the incident surplus of capital, have rendered it impossible to obtain the rate of interest fixed by law, and there is now in the state treasury more than $150,000 which the statutory restriction as to rates renders it impossible to invest, and on which the state is paying 5 per cent under the provisions of the federal statute.

I recommend that permission be granted to invest this fund at current rates of interest.

Favors Increase in Governor's Salary.

The salary fixed by law for the chief executive of the state is now $3,000. In addition, it has been customary for the general assembly to specially appropriate $500 per annum for work on the executive council, and $50 per month for room rent. This is manifestly below the necessary expenses of a family in the city of Des Moines maintained amid surroundings becoming the office. I question whether the people of the state would be satisfied to have their chief executive live in rooms that can be rented for $50 per month. Most of the states of the United States have executive residences, furnished and maintained largely at state expense. If this shall not be the policy of Iowa, sufficient should be provided, I think, to pay the rent of a suitable residence.

I recommend that the salary of the chief executive of Iowa be increased, and that such provision for a suitable residence be made as may seem to comport with the dignity of the state. This increase of salary, however, should begin January 1, 1902. It would be inappropriate to increase the salary of any officer during the term of office for which he has been elected; and if that were done in this instance the present incumbent would not accept the same.

Treasurer of the Board of Control

It is the present practice to examine quarterly the accounts of the state treasurer with special reference to the various institutions under the management of the board of control, as well as those connected with the general revenues. I think the recommendation of the treasurer of state that this should be made a statutory requirement is worthy of your consideration.

Last year in Vienna, S. L. Clemens (Mark Twain) sat talking with a Scotch barrister named Guthrie. "Do you you ever smoke?" asked Mr. Clemens of Mr. Guthrie. "Yes, Mr. Clemens," replied Mr. Guthrie, "when I am in bad company." "You are a lawyer, aren't you, Mr. Guthrie?" "Yes, I am." "Ah," said Mr. Clemens, "you must be a heavy smoker."

Upon one occasion, at Vienna, a Bavarian noble was uttering a Philippic against the Hungarian spelling and orthoepy. Dr. Maurus Jokai who was present, listened with grave attention until the noble had concluded. Then he arose, bowed, and remarked: "We do spell badly, and pronounce even worse, but, your excellency, that is a part of our national courtesy; we do it to give foreigners an excuse when they try to speak our beautiful language."

The following is told by the granddaughter of an old lady who lived in one of the southern states, and had been known throughout the neighborhood as one who had a keen sense of the ridiculous. After a long illness her final hour was supposed to have come, and her children and grandchildren gathered around for a last farewell, when suddenly she opened her eyes and seeing the mournful expression of those about her, remarked with all her old time vigor: "A watched pot never boils."

E. A. Sothern, of "Dundreary" fame, was once dining at Portsmouth at a regimental mess. After dinner one of the officers asked Sothern to give them a recitation. Now Sothern would not tolerate being treated as an entertainer when he was by way of being treated as a gentleman. He coldly declined. They pressed him. He hotly declined. Still they would take no denial. At last he said, in a manner which showed that he was nettled, but yet yielding: "Well, if you won't let me off, I must. I'll give you the dinner scene from 'David Garrick.'" He did. He had never acted it better. They were delighted until, springing to his feet, he made his wild tipsy exit, just as he did on the stage, and dragged the cloth off the table, and with it all the regiment's prized dessert china and decanters and glasses, etc. Thereupon he calmly resumed his seat, but thereafter Sothern dined no more with that regiment.

General F. V. Greene, when he arrived in Manila with reinforcements, went on board the Olympia to pay his respects to Admiral Dewey. After the two men had exchanged compliments, Dewey said: "Come into my cabin, general. I want to show you my family." In one corner of the cabin was a great pile of photographs, dozens upon dozens, and each was the picture of a baby boy. There were fat babies and lean babies, pretty babies and ugly babies, sad babies and smiling babies. "What in the world are these?" asked General Greene, somewhat bewildered. "Why," said Dewey, "it's just the family of my namesakes. They are Jonses, Smiths and Jenkinses, but every one's a George Dewey, and their parents want me to know it."

BEVERIDGE TO THE SENATE.

Eloquent Address Delivered by the Indiana Statesman.

MUST RETAIN PHILIPPINES.

America's Sacred Duty to Advance the Cause of Civilization—Filipinos Unfit for the Responsibility of Self-Government—Senator Hoar Replies.

Washington, Jan. 10.—At the conclusion of routine business in the senate Tuesday, Senator Beveridge was recognized for his speech on the Philippine question. The text of his address was a resolution which he offered a few days ago, which declares "that the Philippine islands are territory belonging to the United States; that it is the intention of the United States to retain them as such and to establish and maintain such governmental control throughout the archipelago as the situation may demand."

Mr. Beveridge said:

"The times call for candor. The Philippines are ours forever, 'territory belonging to the United States,' as the constitution calls them. And just beyond the Philippines are China's illimitable markets. We will not retreat from either. We will not repudiate our duty in the archipelago. We will not renounce our part in the mission of our race, trustee, under God, of the civilization of the world.

"Our largest trade henceforth must be with Asia. The Pacific is our ocean. More and more Europe will manufacture all it needs; secure from its colonies the most it consumes. Where shall we turn for consumers of our surplus? Geography answers the question. China is our natural customer. She is nearer to us than to England, Germany or Russia, the commercial powers of the present and the future. They have moved nearer to China by securing permanent bases on her borders. The Philippines give us a base at the door of all the east. The power that rules the Pacific is the power that rules the world, and, with the Philippines, that power is and will forever be the American republic."

After referring to the value of China's trade, the resources and immense size of the islands, the climate, the character of the people and to Aguinaldo, Senator Beveridge spoke of the military situation, defending Gen. Otis. The campaign, he said, had been as perfect as possible with the force at hand.

"A lasting peace can be secured only by overwhelming forces in ceaseless action until universal and absolutely final defeat is inflicted upon the enemy. Our mistake has not been cruelty, it has been kindness. There is not now, and never was, any possible course but ceaseless operations in the field and loyal support of the war at home."

The Filipinos, Senator Beveridge said, are children utterly incapable of self-government; the English or Dutch systems of government were impossible and a protectorate impracticable.

Senator Beveridge claimed that the nation's power to make rules and regulations for the government of its possessions was not confined to any given set of rules or regulations. It was not confined to any particular formula of laws of kind of government or type of administration.

"Our flag has never paused in its onward march. Who dares halt it now—now when history's largest events are carrying it forward; now when we are at last one people, though strong enough for any task, great enough for any glory destiny can bestow? Who would tear from that sacred banner the glorious legend of a single battle where it has waved on land or sea? What son of a soldier of the flag whose father fell beneath it on any field would surrender that proud record for the heraldry of a king? In the cause of civilization, in the service of the republic anywhere on earth, Americans consider wounds the noblest decorations man can win, and count the giving of their lives a glad and precious duty. Pray God that spirit never fails. Pray God the time may never come when American heroism is but a legend, like the story of the Cid; American faith in our mission and our might a dream dissolved and the glory of our mighty race departed.

"And that time will never come. We will renew our youth at the fountain of new and glorious deeds. We will exalt our reverence for the flag by carrying it to a noble future as well as by remembering its ineffable past. And so, senators, with reverent hearts, where dwells the fear of God, the American people move forward to the future of their hope and the doing of his work."

Concluding, the senator said:

"Mr. President and senators, adopt the resolution offered that peace may quickly come and that we may begin our saving regenerating and uplifting work. Adopt it and this bloodshed will cease when these deluded children of our islands learn that this is the final action of the representatives of the American people in congress assembled.

"Reject it, and the world, history and the American people will know where to forever fix the awful responsibility for the consequences that will surely follow such failure to do our manifest duty. How dare we delay when our soldiers' blood is flowing?"

Mr. Hoar congratulated the senator from Indiana on his speech. Yet, he said, he had listened in vain for those words which the American people have taken on their lips in solemn crises, the words "right, justice, duty and freedom" were absent from the eloquent address. Mr. Hoar declared that practically every statement of fact in the speech was refuted by government reports received from Admiral Dewey, Gen. Otis and from other sources. Where did Spain get the right to sell her rights in the Philippines? Mr. Hoar asked. Where did the United States get the right to buy and sell people like sheep? He was certain that for all the wealth and commerce and glory which he had eloquently depicted the senator from Indiana would not have great injustice done.

Mr. Hoar declared the Filipinos had the Spaniards hemmed in Manila and the latter were obliged to surrender. He thought it would be necessary to revise the constitution before those Filipinos could be bought and sold. He did not believe Mr. Beveridge would advise the American people to do this thing or to do anything so base as to strike down the infant Filipino republic.

Gen. Otis had promised, Mr. Hoar said, a government to the Filipinos in which they would be able to exercise a full measure of their individual rights. "Did he utter this promise to a people incapable of self-government—to half-savages and half-Spaniards?" demanded Mr. Hoar. He declared there had not been a time when, if Gen. Otis had been able to give assurances of independence to the Filipinos, the war would not have terminated.

Senator Hoar introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That the president be requested to communicate to the senate all communications that have been received by him, or by any department or officer, from Aguinaldo or any other person undertaking to represent the people in arms against the United States in the Philippine islands and all replies to such communications. Also the proclamations by him to be issued to the people of the Philippine islands, as actually directed by him to be issued, and the same as actually proclaimed by Gen. Otis, if in any respect it was altered or any part of it was omitted.

Also to inform the senate whether any approval or disapproval was expressed by his authority, or that of the war department, of such change, if any. Also all constitutions, forms of government, proclamations issued by Aguinaldo or any congress or legislative assembly or body claiming to be such, or convention of the people of the Philippine islands, or any part thereof, of which information may have come to him, or to any department of the government.

Mr. Hoar endeavored to secure immediate consideration for his resolution, but on objection it went over until today.

M'GOVERN IS THE WINNER.

Dixon Loses Featherweight Championship in Eight Rounds.

New York, Jan. 11.—Terrance McGovern of Brooklyn, in eight rounds of the swiftest punching, the fastest in-and-out give-and-take fighting ever seen in a Horton-law ring, lifted the featherweight championship of the world at the Broadway Athletic club Tuesday night from George Dixon. After holding the championship for a period even longer than the reign of John L. Sullivan among the giants, Dixon was saved the ignominy of being knocked out. Tom O'Rourke, his manager, threw up the sponge as Dixon lay conquered but still struggling in McGovern's corner.

It was the Dixon of old—fast, honest and game as a pebble—but youth, not to be denied, added another to its long list of victories over age, mature judgment and ring experience. At the conclusion of the battle McGovern was comparatively fresh, although he had gone through the hardest battle of his life. He is a fighting wonder, and Dixon, though defeated, can look back upon his long list of victories and feel no disgrace.

Kentucky Militia Gathering.

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 11.—The state militia is being assembled at Frankfort to protect Gov. Taylor, and to place the state under martial law when the occasion arrives. The men go in citizens' clothing, without orders from Gov. Taylor, although with his approval. One hundred rifles were sent to Frankfort this morning by express. The men will be furnished with ammunition at the arsenal there. It is estimated that Gov. Taylor will have ready to answer his command 200 soldiers. These will be backed by friends from various parts of the state, numbering probably 300.

Mysterious Tragedy Cleared Up.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—The mystery surrounding the identity of the man and woman who killed themselves in a rooming house at 145 West Madison street Monday was cleared up yesterday. The man was identified as A. J. Furtell of Jonesboro, Ind., and the woman as Mrs. Marguerite Hickey of Blairsville, the same state. The parents and relatives of both Furtell and Mrs. Hickey are well-to-do and respected. They eloped from Marion, Ind., last August.

Pulitzer's Home Is Burned.

New York, Jan. 11.—The residence of Joseph Pulitzer, publisher of the New York World, at 10 East Fifty-fifth street, was destroyed by fire Tuesday, and two women servants were suffocated or burned to death. The total loss is estimated at about $300,000; the insurance is $250,000. The victims of the fire were Mrs. Jellett, the housekeeper, and Miss Elizabeth Montgomery, a governess.

Street Railway Barns Burned.

Chicago, Jan. 10.—The barns of the South Chicago City Railway company at Holman and Sheffield avenues, Hammond, Ind., were destroyed by fire on Tuesday, causing a loss of about $130,000. The barn, a brick structure 75 by 225 feet, was burned, and thirty-two cars, including a number of motor cars, sweepers and sprinklers, and a large quantity of apparatus were reduced to ruins.

Old Officers Re-elected.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 11.—The state board of health met here in annual meeting. The old officers were re-elected for the ensuing year as follows: President, Dr. C. B. Johnson, Champaign; treasurer, Dr. R. F. Bennett, Litchfield; secretary, Dr. J. A. Egan; attorney, John A. Barnes, Chicago.

Dewey Gets Cup of Dimes.

Washington, Jan. 11.—The loving cup of silver made from the melted dimes contributed by over 70,000 Americans, the majority of whom were children, was presented to Admiral Dewey Tuesday. The ceremony took place in the parlors of the Dewey residence on Rhode Island avenue.

SALT LAKE CITY.

The Cleanest Town in the West.

There can be no doubt as to the physical cleanliness of the people of Salt Lake and surrounding country as evidenced by the recent gigantic shipment to that city of 45 carloads of Diamond "C" Soap by the Cudahy Pkg. Co. of South Omaha, Neb. This is the largest single shipment of Soap ever made by any concern and is an eloquent testimonial to the quality of their product and to the enterprise of the firm. The shipment was made over the "Burlington" and it required two of their most powerful locomotives to draw the load. The liberality of the Cudahy Pkg. Co. in giving away valuable prizes to users of Diamond "C" Soap has built up for them throughout the west an enormous trade in a comparatively short time.

After a man is 35 he should stop dreaming and go to work.

A New Sea Port.

There is a lusty young city growing up down in Texas which is attracting widespread attention. It is La Porte, located at the head of Galveston Bay. It is being made the great seaport of the Gulf of Mexico, the meeting place of rail and water ways for the vast commerce of the west. The saving to western shippers via this export outlet will run into millions annually. The city has the most magnificent natural port on the southern coast of the United States and one of the best in the world. The U. S. government is completing a deep water channel through the bay to the gulf, which will soon bring the largest ocean liners to La Porte docks and wharfs.

Yellow jackets made nests in the fire alarm boxes in Seattle, and damaged the signal system by clogging the wires with clay, which afterward hardened.

MURDEROUS MICROBES

Breeding and Feeding in Human Intestines.

Millions of microbes, bacteria, ptomaines, disease-germs of every kind live and breed and feed in the stomach and bowels.

For their propagation it is only necessary for the liver and intestines to become lazy and operate irregularly.

Modern science has been at work to find a means of killing microbes, and the most successful germ destroyer of all is Cascarets Candy Cathartic. They slaughter bacteria wherever they find them, are antiseptic, stop sour stomach, make the liver lively, the blood pure, the bowels regular, everything as it should be.

Go buy and try Cascarets to-day. It's what they do, not what we say they'll do, that proves their merit. All druggists, 10c, 25c, or 50c, or mailed for price. Send for booklet and free sample. Address, The Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago; Montreal, Can.; or New York.

We Dress To Please Others

IT is one of the signs of civilization that a man is judged by his clothes and rightly so. Outward appearances are the first means by which we express consideration and respect for those with whom we come in contact. Under modern conditions it is a positive affront to good taste to appear in ill-fitting, poorly made apparel. This doesn't mean that a man must be continually on dress parade; on the contrary, this is common sense economy talk.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

The large and increasing circulation of The Iowa Homestead in this county is a matter for congratlation to the publishers and to good farming, for, of all the papers of its class in the country, it is easily the best and most helpful. Its Special Farmers' Institute edition, issued with regular edition the first week in each month, have been for years the admiration of all practical farmers. Written wholly by farmers, they are full of actual experience and smell of the soil. We have been fortunate enough this season to secure terms for The Homestead and its Special Farmers' Institute Editions together with The Poultry Famer and The Farmers' Mutual Insurance Journal, four of the most valuable farm publications in the country, that enable us to offer the four in connection with our own paper for $1.65 for the enter five, one year. This is emphatically a good thing, and no farmer in this counld fail to take advantage of the offer. For a large line of throughly practical farm reading nothing has ever been offered befored hat equals it. A country paper, a farm paper, a poultry paper, a farm insurance paper and the Special Farmers' Institute, all for $1.65. Come in and order them.

NEW CHAIR CAR SERVICE.

Between Watertown, Ellsworth and Chicago via. B. C. R. & N. Ry. Commencing Sunday Nov. 19th, a free reclining chair car will be placed on trains Nos. 608 and 605 between Watertown and Chicago by the Burlington Cedar Rapids & Northern Ry. This car leaves Watertown daily, except Sunday at 11:15 a. m. arriving at Chicago 7:59 the following morning. This car runs to and from Sioux Falls Sundays, thus giving daily chair car service between Ellsworth and Chicago. Passengers going east from Chicago will have ample time to make any transfers to connect with all morning eastern trains.

These trains are very fast, and, with this new additional service, passengers can feel assured of first class accommodations. JNO. G. FARMER,

OLD PEOPLE MADE YOUNG.

J. C. Sherman, the veteran editor of the Vermontville (Mich.) Echo, has discovered the remarkable secret of keeping old people young. For years he has avoided nervousness, sleeplessness, indigestion, heart trouble, constipation and rheumatism by using Electric Bitters, and he writes: "It can't be praised too highly. It gently stimulates the kidneys, tones the stomach, aids digestion and gives a splendid appetite. It has worked wonders for my wife and me. It's a marvelous remedy for old people's complaints." HIS WIFE SAVED HIM.

My wifes good advice saved my life writes F. M. Ross, of Winfield, Tenn., for I had such a bad cough that I could hardly breathe, I steadily grew worse under doctors treatment, but my wife urged me to use Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, which completely cured me." Coughs, colds bronchitis, lagrippe, pneumonia, asthma, hay fever and all maladies of chest, throat and lungs are positively cured by this marvelous medicine. 50c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottles free at Harr's drug store.

A few evenings since a certain popular young business man called on his best girl to spend the evening. When about to return home the conversation chanced to turn to art, and the young lady said to him that he reminded her of the Venus de Milo, whereupon the young man was delighted, thinking surely it was his symmetrical form she alluded to. When he got home he consulted the encyclopedia, and to his deep chagrin and mortification found that the Venus de Milo had no arms. He went down in the cellar and tried to butt out his brains on a soft cabbage.

MADE YOUNG AGAIN.

"One of Dr. King's New Life Pills each night for two weeks has put me in my "teens" again" writes D. H. Turner, of Demseytown, Pa. They're the best in the world for liver, stomach and bowels. Purely vegetable. Never gripe. Only 25c at Harr's drug store.

Lewis Dennis, Salem, Ind., says, Kodol Dyspepsia Cure did me more good than anything I ever took." It digests what you eat and cannot help but cure dyspepsia and stomach troubles.—S. L. Harr.

A shy dollar is like Pats Flea when you put your finger on it, it isn't there. Every person having five dollars worth of dental work done at Dr. Spayde's office in Garner will get one of these dollar's of course.

Nerve and audacity compel admiration, even when exhibited by our enemies. The Filipino officer who went into Manila to try to raise a riot among the natives had plenty of both.

G. H. Appleton, justice of peace, Clarksburg, N. J., says, "De Witt's Little Early Risers are the best pills made for constipation. We use no others." Quickly cure all liver and bowel troubles.—J. L. Harr.

If the Boers had all the volunteers recruited for them in the U. S. by the yellow journals, they could sweep the English out of South Africa without the slightest trouble. But paper volunteers can't fight.

F. B. Thirkield, Health Inspector of Chicago, says, "Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cannot be recommended too highly. It cured me of severe dyspepsia." It digests what you eat and cures indigestion, heart burn and all forms of dyspepsia.—J. L. Harr.

It is announced that the revenues of Great Britian are increasing. A very large increase will be necessary to meet the heavy expenses of the war

L. T. Travis, Agent Southern R. R. Selma, Ga., writes, "I cannot say too much in praise of One Minute Cough Cure. In my case it worked like a charm." The only harmless remedy that gives immediate results. Cures coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles.—J. L. Harr.

There seems to be quite as much opposition in France to the reciprocity treaty with France as there is in this country, and for the same reason—fear that it will result in lessening the demand and prices for some home products.

J. I. Bevry, Loganton, Pa., writes, "I am willing to take my oath that I was cured of pneumonia entirely by the use of One Minute Cough Cure after doctors failed. It also cured my children of whooping cough." Quickly relieves and cures coughs, colds, croup grippe and throat and lung troubles. Children all like it. Mothers endorse it.—J. L. Harr.

Those who have said that the Boers are without the sense of humor will have to revise their opinions; they fired plugged schell, containing compliments of the season and chunks of plum pudding, into the British camp at Ladysmith, last week.

"I am indebted to One Minute Cough Cure for my health and life. It cured me of lung trouble following grippe." Thousands owe their lives to the prompt action of this never failing remedy. It cures coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis, pneumonia, grippe and throat and lung troubles. Its early use prevents consumption. It is the only harmless remedy that gives immediate results.—J. L. Harr.

What has become of the county Farmer's institute we wonder? So far we have not heard a word about a county meeting for this year.

From the appearance of things the board of health might as well get ready to have a continuons special session of about three weeks in the spring.

Henry Schlei, Frank Kluckhohn and Talbert Spooner, came down from Garner, Friday evening to spend Sunday with folks at home. They are attending the high school at Garner.

We understand that a number of the best farmers of German Township have formed a stock company and purchased an imported Clyde stallion of Messers. Downie & Upton of Garner.

Henry Peitzke, John Zook, Ed Dow and Louis Schultz went down to Goodell Tuesday evening to watch the Goodell Camp M. W. A. initiate a couple of candidates into the lodge. They report a pleasant trip.

Funny things happen during the ferreting out of delinquent taxes. One day last week a prominent Garner church member was being closely cross examined and becoming excited proceded to sulphurize the air with language not heard at a prayer meeting. It must be a serious thing, this tax-dodging business. When it will cause a pillar of the church to "cuss" so fluently—aye verily!

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Best of Germania, mother and father of Mrs. Chas. Bracher, arrived on the Friday evening train for a short visit with their daughter. They were on their way to Green this state, to visit with relatives and friends.

A son of the Rev. Jesse Cole was last week taken to the asylum at Independence, a hopeless wreck from the cigarette habit. There are about ten or a dozen sap headed, shallow pated boys in every town that are traveling the same route. Klemme is not an exception.

The item in last weeks TIMES regarding "gadding" has caused not a little comment. We had reference to no particular one. We are glad, however, that it brings to the notice of mothers the fact that the conduct of their children on the street, may not be what it should be.

Dr. G. W. Appleby, while visiting a friend, Dr. Hobson, at Hampton was asked to examine a sick baby, Dr. H. having been called away on another case. During the examination Dr. Appleby became suddenly violently insane, and with his hands crushed the life out of the helpless babe, before the terrified parents could prevent him.

The M. w. A. Lodge moved in to their new quaters over Grutzmaker Bros. store last Friday. when they get it fixed up and have the use of the entire upper floor of the building, they will have one of the finest lodge rooms in the county. This camp now numbers 60 members in good standing and new members are being taken in nearly every meeting. Let the good work go on.

A merry party of young people were invited out to the home of H. N. Merrick, last Friday evening. Social gatherings of this kind are getting to be the thing, and we venture to say that none was more enjoyable than the one at the Merrick home. Games of all kinds were indulged in, elegant refreshments were served, and a splendid time enjoyed by all.

With an epidemic of small pox threatening, would it not be a good idea to have the little ones. yes, and older ones as well vaccinated. True, it would make a little extra work for the doctors and cause a few sore arms, but never-the-less believe it would be a wise thing to do. Many of the towns around us have passed stringent ordinances governing such cases.

There are a few "would be" "hot sports", juvenile class, that think it is smart to hoot and slur at young girls as they pass along the street. Not only do they call the attention of the rabble to them, but it is a travesty on common decency, and an insult to the young ladies. If it was your sister, and the other fellow said mean things about her, you would be mad, wouldn't you? Be a gentleman—not a tough!

Farmers of German Township are about to organize a Township Farmers' Institute. The first meeting will be held next Saturday afternoon at the Center school house. The object of these meetings will be to discuss questions of interest, visit and become better acquainted with each as neighbors. The meetings will be a success, only as to the interest taken. Let every one take part and make the meeting one of mutual pleasure and bennfit.

Ever since the appointment of Jno. G. Farmer to the position of A. G. P. & T. A. of the B., C. R. & N. Ry. we have noticed several things. The service of the road is better. More attention given to the comfort of passengers enroute. More attention given to the special rate day, and a better class of advertising matter distributed. More attention given to the seemingly trifling matters, and we predict that he will soon be the most popular passenger and traffic manager the road has ever had.

It is about time for that leach from Lone Tree to put in a bid for your stationary. At the close of the annual business meeting, Fred Bock was elected as a member of the executive board. N. L. Palmer was hired for the next year, and we believe it was one of the good features ot the meeting. Mr. Palmer is a good buttermaker. He keeps up-to-date in the business. He is courteous a n d obliging, and being acquainted with all the patrons, will admirably fill the bill. The contract for putting up the ice was let to Fred Garwein, at $50. Board of directors:

When you note the standing of the officers of this company, it is not strange that the company's business is satisfactory to all parties who do business with them for they are the cream of our successful farmers. They make a success of their farming and joined together, they have made a signal success of the business of the creamery. we believe the next year will be better than the last, and if the figures above are a critirian, it will be good enough.

Americans are so fond of fighting that they can be found on both sides in the South African war.

If you want to buy a fine Ladies or Gents Gold or Silver Watch, go to Harr's. Prices reasonable.

The Kaiser is either ahead or a year behind the rest of the world: he has officially ushered in the twentieth century.

Without meaning anything personal it may be remarked that Congress resumed work with a sort of after-a-jag listlessness.

It used to be "Washington malaria" that was blamed when a congressman was knocked out by red-eye, now it is overwork.

Washington is said to have been flooded with "green goods" circulars recently, but no Congressman has acknowledged receiving one.

It is to be sincerly hoped that the Kentucky legislature will not connect with that very undesirable piece of hardware know as a Senatorial deadlock.

The modern and most effective cure for constipation and all liver troubles—the famous little pills known as DeWitt's Little Early Risers.—J. L. Harr.

If the New Yorkers had begun the New Year by swearing off, instead of attending a prize fight, it would have been more creditable to them and their town.

Continental Europe is not more unfriendly to England than it has been for years, but England reverses in South Africa have furnished an excuse for showing it.

Whether the Danish West Indies are a bargain at $4,000,000, the price they are alleged to have been offered to us for, depends largely upon the point of view.

The yellow newspapers which tried so hard to arrange a wholesale killing in connection with the Kentucky election, are now trying their hand on the Kentucky legislature.

The Boers also have yellow journals, one of which declares that British soldiers attacked an ambulance and tore the red cross from the hats and sleeves of the attendants.

Having received a car load of furniture and undertaking goods, I am in shape to supply you with anything in the line of furniture etc.

G. F. SCHULER, Garner, Ia.

Those politicians who are playing with, or upon, American sympathy for either of the beligerants in the South African war would better be very careful; they are handling political lyddite.

Doubtless it is true as a Washington editor said, that public life is reeking with impudent mediocrity. But can any one point out any branch of private life that is not in the same condition.

Congress is generally allowed to talk any old thing without protest from the people, but all the same its members should beware of the twentieth century dispute—the people are getting all they can stand of that now.

Bro. Wellemeyer, has enlarged his Klemme TIMES to a six column eight page paper and raised the price from $1 to $1.25 per year. If the TIMES was $1 per year before Mr. W. took charge it is easily worth three times that now. It is cheap at $1.25.—Dows Advocate.

Alden Times: The eyes of the three counties of Hardin, Franklin and Wright are directed to the movements of the county supervisors of Franklin just now, to see what will be the outcome of the efforts to force payment from tax dodgers. For the most part, the people hope the board will succeed. Here and there, it is probable, a man might be found hugging the hope that the board will be downed and the tax dodgers exhonorated. The town council of Hampton has passed a ringing resolution endorsing the action of the board and agreeing to lend a hand, and the voters are patting them on the back. We hope such news does not bring a "tired feeling" to any of the readers of the Times.

A Mr. Hjerleid met with an accident at Crystal Lake last Tuesday. He was helping put a large safe into the new bank building at that place, and in some way he fell and the safe came down on one of his legs and completely cut the limb off the body. * * * Two gentlemen were here from Kanawha a short time ago to inspect the central plan, but on their return home they did not give a very encouraging report. Through the influence of Dr. Phelps, who is a strong supporter of the central plan, two more members of the board will come up and make an investigation. As the two gentlemen who were here were predjudiced before they started, and instead of listening to the views of our people on the subject, told their opinion, it might be well for Kanawha people to see that the next delegation are unpredjudiced.—Buffalo Center Tribune.

STRANGE TALES TERSELY TOLD.

SHOCKING FISH STORY.

They say that on Moosehead Lake, Maine, an angler recently was fishing with a steel rod during a thunderstorm and struck a trout at the same instant that a thunderbolt dallied with his rod. The cork handle preventing the angler feeling anything more than a slight shock, but when he hauled it in he found the trout stone dead. He figured it out that the lightning bolt followed the rod and the enameled line down to where the trout had just taken hold of the hook, and there killed him.—New York Tribune.

FISHES FOR HIM.

A Minnesota man captured a king fisher when the bird was quite youny and made a pet of him and trained the bird to capture fish and lay them at his master's feet. In summer the bird is taken to the river where fish are know to abound and set at liberty. The bird poises high in the air, and suddenly dropping, grasps his victim and promptly delivers the fish to his master.—Goshen (Ind.) Times.

A WAPUK FISH STORY.

On the farm of Charley Shaffer, south of Wapakoneta, is a fine artesian well, the result of an unsuccessful attempt to bore for oil. Last week Mr. Shaffer pulled the plug and flooded acres of his dying pasture. In a few days he and his neighbor were astonished to see his temporary lake filled with myriads and myriads of fish from two to four inches long, which proved to be black bass of the finest kind: The origin is a mystery as there is not a creek, river or pool of water within two miles. and no one can explain their sudden appearance. The well flows 20,000 barrels of pure, clear water a day. and Mr. Shaffer has decided to dam his pasture and turn it into a permanent fish pond for the use of himself and friends.—Plain City (O.) Advocate.

BEATS THE WHALE STORY.

Two sailors once noticed a shark was following their ship on a voyage from America to England. Not knowing how to get rid of it, they threw a chair overboard. The shark swallowed it and still followed. The sailors, after considering what to do threw a box of oranges overboaad. The shark swallowed it and still followed. The men seemed completely beaten for a moment what to do until one suggested that they draw lots to see who had to satisfy the shark. It fell to an old woman, so they tossed her over and the shark ate her at one. This did not content the shark, who still followed, so the sailors harpooned it and dragged it on board. Opening it they found to their surprise, the old lady sitting on the chair selling oranges, "three for a penny."—Clifton (Ill.) Comet.

THE MOTHER'S FAVORITE.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the mother's favorite. It is pleasant and safe for children to take and always cure. It is intended especially for cough, cold, croup and whooping cough and is the best medicine made for these diseases. There is not the least danger in giving it to children for it contains no opium or other injurious drug and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by J. L. Harr.

A great deal of tom-foolery is being indulged in by newspaper writers about when the 20th century begins. Sam M. Clark, of the Keokuk Gate City, settles the question thusly: "The Chicago Times-Herald is trying to persuade itself that the 20th century began at midnight Dec. 31st of last year. That would be true if 99 years were a century, but it is not any more than $99 is $100. A century is ten times ten; it takes ten times ten to make it not nine times ten and nine. This is an old quibble among college boys as to when a century begins. Our chronology or calendar has nothing to do with the birth of Christ. He was accounted as born Dec. 25th or nearly at the years end. The A. D. means simply that we are living under the Christian dispensation. If the contention of the Times-Herald is right then Christ was born in the year A. D. 0—that is, the year nothing.

A PROMINENT CHICAGO WOMAN SPEAKS.

Prof. Roxa Tyler, of Chicago, Vice-President Illinois Woman's Alliance, in speaking of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, says: "I suffered with a severe cold this winter which threatened to run into pneumonia. I tried different remedies but I seemed to grow worse and the medicine upset my stomach. A friend advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and I found it was pleasant to take and it relieved me at once. I am now entirely recovered, saved a doctor's bill, time and suffering, and I will never be without this splendid medicine again. For sale by J. L. Harr.

INAUGURAL CEREMONIES.

Gov. Shaw and Lieut.-Gov. Milliman Again Take the Oath.

DES MOINES, Jan 12.—In the midst of patriotic decorations, with colors flying and bands playing, with the same military glitter and pretentious ceremony which usually attend such occasions, Governor Leslie M. Shaw yesterday afternoon at the Auditorium for the second time took the oath of office to support the state and national constitutions, and serve the people of Iowa to the best of his ability. By his side and taking the same oath was Lieutenant-Governor J. C. Milliman.

Lieutenant-Governor J. C. Milliman presided over the ceremonies, which opened at 2:30 p. m. with music by the Iowa State Military Band, followed by the singing of "America" by the Apollo club of this city. Rev. T. McK. Stuart, of Des Moines, offered the invocation, and again the Apollo club sang, this time "The Warrior Bold." Then came the important ceremony of the afternoon, the administering of the oath of office to Governor-elect Leslie M. Shaw and Lieutenant-Governor-elect J. C. Milliman by Chief Justice Charles T. Granger. Immediately following the administration of the oath, Governor Shaw was presented to the audience by the president of the day and proceeded with his inaugural address. In addressing the members of the general assembly and his other auditors, Governor Shaw not only treated subjects of state-wide interest, but entered into a discussion of several subjects bearing on national interests, including the money question and trusts. At the close of his address the Apollo club sang "Iowa," and the program closed with music by the band.

Washington, Jan. 13.—Special Plenipotentiary Kasson for the United States, and Senhor Duarte for Portugal, on Thursday signed a protocol intended to make operative the recent reciprocity arrangement entered into last spring between the two countries.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

OPPOSED TO ANY BONUSES.

Guard Officers Object to Repayment to Regiments.

DES MOINES, Jan. 14.—The Iowa National Guard association in annual meeting voted that the legislature shall be asked for no bounties for the Spanish war soldiers. A proposal from the legislative committee that the Forty-ninth, Fiftieth and Fifty-second regiments be each given a bounty equal to the amount which the state appropriated to pay for transporting the Fifty-first regiment home from San Francisco, brought up the matter. There was a lively discussion and it was unanimously voted to ask no such bounty, but to ask that the money be used for the better equipment of the guard. The guard association was reorganized, officers elected and a plan of action adopted, of which the most essential feature is to secure a more perfect equipment for the guard than it had in the past. Considerable discussion was had on this point, and it was agreed that when the militia of the United States was called into service it ought to be armed with something better than old fashioned Springfields with which to fight semi-savages armed with the best modern weapons. The association will assert all its influence to secure better equipment. Officers were elected as follows: President, James Rush Lincoln, Ames; vice president, Major A. C. Norris, Grinnell; recording secretary, Lieut. F. M. Jones, Des Moines; corresponding secretary and treasurer, Major John T. Hume, Des Moines.

NOW IN PERMANENT QUARTERS.

State Historical Department of Iowa Has Good Accommodations.

DES MOINES, Jan. 13.—The state historical department has moved into its handsome new building across the street diagonally northeast from the state house. The building is not finished and will not be entirely ready for occupancy for several weeks but room enough is ready to accommodate the department in a rough way. In the basement a large room will be used for the newspaper files. The department has at least two papers from every county, and they are bound in volumes, containing from one to three years. The current issues are also kept, so they are valuable references. On the first floor there is a general reading room and ladies' reception room, the curator's office and the general offices of the department, where books and papers are given out, and the large library room. On the second floor is the museum and autograph room, where the large cases containing the relics and ethnological and anthropological materials are stored. In this room may be found an interesting and unique collection of autographs and biographical matter, which formed the foundation of the department.

RENEW WAR ON IOWA SALOONS.

State League Is Planning to Secure More Stringent Laws.

DES MOINES, Jan. 14.—The Iowa Anti-Saloon League convention adopted a resolution favoring "the passage of a law at the present session of the legislature which shall prohibit the sale or manufacture of intoxicating liquors within five miles of any of the state institutions of learning, as a law of vital value to these institutions and a safeguard which the people of the state demand for their children sent out from the care of home. And we further favor such other temperance legislation as can be secured, pressing the demand from year to year, until Iowa is restored to that happy state in which the saloon shall be again an outlaw." A committee on legislation was appointed, headed by H. H. Abrams, state superintendent of the league. Rev. Mott R. Sawyers, of Centerville, was elected secretary to succeed Rev. C. F. Williams, of Des Moines. The other officers were re-elected.

WM. MUSSON DEAD.

Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Iowa Odd Fellows Passes Away.

DES MOINES, Jan. 12.—Wm. Musson, secretary of the Grand Lodge of Iowa Odd Fellows, died yesterday. His death resulted from an operation performed in the hope of saving his life from a virulent attack of liver complaint, resulting in abscess. The operation was performed in the morning and death came in about six hours. He passed away without pain, and surrounded by his entire family.

GIVES TO DRAKE UNIVERSITY.

Former Governor Drake Adds $32,500 to His Donation.

DES MOINES, Jan. 14.—Former Governor F. M. Drake, of Centerville, for whom Drake University, of Des Moines, is named, has increased his donations to that institution $32,500, which will be used in making immediate necessary improvements. He says he hopes to see the university have an endowment of $1,000,000, and expects to furnish at least one-fourth of that sum.

Dead With Wounds in Breast.

OTTUMWA, Jan. 9.—Phillip Dietz was found dead with three holes in his breast in a room over Wagner's saloon. His body was frozen, and he had probably been dead for some time, as he has been missing for a week. It is generally supposed to have been a case suicide.

Favorable to Post at Des Moines.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—The house committee on military affairs acted favorably on a bill establishing a military post at Des Moines.

UNANIMOUS FOR GEAR.

Cummins' Name Not Presented in Republican Caucus.

DES MOINES, Jan. 9.—Senator John Henry Gear was last evening nominated by acclamation, in the republican joint caucus, for a second term in the United States senate. Senator Gear was escorted to the speaker's platform and made a brief speech of acceptance. Bernard Murphy, of Vinton, was nominated for state printer, and Howard Tedford, of Ringgold, for state binder, by acclamation. The caucus was called to order in the house chamber, which was well filled, the gathering being public. The caucus was called to order by Senator Blanchard and Senator Junkin was made chairman. When the caucus proceeded to a selection of a candidate for senator, Senator Cheshire arose and in a brief speech withdrew the name of A. B. Cummins. Upon motion of Representative Scott, the nomination of Senator Gear was made unanimous by acclamation. Senator Gear made a brief speech thanking the caucus for the honors bestowed upon him.

KILLED 15 SALOON PETITIONS.

Supt. Abrams, of the Anti-Saloon League, So Reported to the Body.

DES MOINES, Jan 12.—The anti-saloon league reports that it has been successful during the past year in defeating saloon petitions in about fifteen counties in the state. This announcement was made in the course of Superintendent H. H. Abram's report at the opening of the annual meeting in Des Moines. Among the counties in which the petitions for saloons have been defeated, he reported, are Keokuk, Fayette, Cherokee, Tama, Appanoose, Mahaska, Johnson, Boone, Wright, Sac and Audubon.

Leg Cut Off by a Safe.

FOSEST CITY, Jan. 12.—A terrible accident occurred at Crystal Lake, in which a brother of C. M. Hyjerlied, the cashier of the bank at Crystal Lake, lost one of his legs. While assisting in unloading a heavy safe for the bank, the safe fell in such a way as to catch young Hjerlied and completely sever one of his legs from his body. When picked up the severed leg was at least ten feet from the body and was cut off as clean as though done with an axe. Young Hjerlied lives in Wisconsin and was on a visit to his brother. At last accounts he seemed in a fair way to pull through.

Iowa Agricultural Society Election.

DES MOINES, Jan. 12.—The State Agricultural Society elected the following officers: President, Robert Johnson, of Humboldt; vice-president, J. C. Frasier, of Bloomfield; secretary, George H. Van Houten. One new director, W. C. Brown, of Clarion, was elected, and four of the old directors were re-elected. The secretary's report showed $16,000 in the treasury. A resolution was adopted urging the legislature to make the society a state department, headed by a commisssoner.

Clarkson Out of the Race.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Senator Platt has announced to his republican associates in the senate that J. S. Clarkson will not be a candidate for clerk of the senate. He said further that Mr. Clarkson's name will not be presented to the caucus.

Fire at Iowa City.

IOWA CITY, Jan. 15.—Fire destroyed one of the principal business blocks. Loss, $150,000. The firms burned out are Price, Keith & Co., jewelers; J. S. Horna, dry goods, and G. W. Leners, grocer.

Fred White for Senator.

BREVITIES.

Smallpox has made its appearance at Youngstown, in the immediate vicinity of the Christy coal mine, four miles east of Des Moines. Four well defined cases of the disease are known to exist, while two more are expected to develop in another family.

It is stated that Burlington officials are preparing to spend $2,000,000 or more on improvements to the main line of the "Q" property in the central part of Southern Iowa. The proposed improvements contemplate a shortening of the line of about three miles between the towns of Creston and Murray, a marked reduction of many grades and an elimination of several dangerous curvatures.

Council Bluffs dispatch: The coroner's inquest over the death of Esther Yates, the girl from Tabor, who died as the result of the discharge of physicians and the employment of the services of a faith healer, has been completed. The jury returned a verdict to the effect that the mother of the girl and Silas James, an Omaha faith-cure, were responsible for the death of the girl. Dr. Ballinger testified that he was attending the girl and she was recovering, when her mother discharged him and substituted the faith healer. The latter denies that he advised the mother to discharge the regular physician and that he rendered his services merely as a minister of the gospel and at the request of the mother. He seeks to shift all the legal responsibility on the mother.

Sioux City's Murder Mystery.

SIOUX CITY, Jan. 12.—The coroner's jury was unable to solve the mystery of John E. Robson's murder, and returned a verdict that he came to his death by a hatchet in the hands of a person or persons unknown. The session of the jury promised startling developments, but no testimony of record throws the burden of the crime upon anyone. A score of witnesses were examined. The police have arrested no persons since the crime, December 29, who are accused of it. Three different clews are being followed.

NEWS IN GENERAL

BULLER MOVES FORWARD.

Wires That He Has Occupied the South Side of the Tugela River.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—Buller cables, dated Springfield, 9:20 Thursday evening.

"I occupied the south bank of the Tugela river at Potgieter's drift this morning and seized Pont. The river is in flood. The enemy is strongly intrenched four and a half miles north."

Buller's movement is obviously of a flanking character, but whether intended to push the advance home or only a feint to cover the attack on the Boer position at Hlangwana mountain remains to be seen. Springfield, whence Buller's dispatch was sent, is sixteen miles west of Frere. The last news from Springfield was that it was held by the Johannesburg corps under General Ben Vilgeen, and that the Boers had big guns in position at Potgeiters drift, apparently six or eight miles north of Springfield, across the Tugela. The possession of the drift and Pont is regarded as of great importance. It is reported that Buller submitted his plan of campaign to Roberts immediately after the latter landed and Roberts sanctioned it.

Believed to Be Behind Boer Lines.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—General Buller's twenty-eight words announcing his forward movement of Thursday is interpreted as meaning that he has passed around the western end of the Boer lines at Colenso and is now several miles behind them, and within fourteen miles of General White's outposts at Ladysmith.

WHAT DEWEY REALLY SAID.

Confident He Could Capture Spanish Navy and Manila in a Day.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Responding to the senate's resolution of inquiry, the secretary of the navy sent to the senate Admiral Dewey's report from Hong Kong, dated March 31, 1898, relative to the capture of Manila. The report was made in response to a telegram of inquiry from the secretary. The admiral gives in detail the names of the available vessels under his command and the list of Spain's vessels and other means of defense at Manila. He stated that his own squadron was in a high state of efficiency, and said the Spanish forces numbered 15,000 soldiers in all the islands, of which half were in the vicinity of Manila. "The islands are in a state of insurrection, and my informants state that even the Spanish soldiers, who constitute only a small part of the whole, are disaffected. Both the ships and the forts are in need of ammunition." To this statement he added the following: "I believe that I am not overconfident in stating that with the squadron under my command the vessels could be taken and the defenses of Manila reduced in one day. There is every reason to believe that with Manila taken or even blockaded, the rest of the islands would fall, either to the insurgents or ourselves, as they are only held through the support of the navy and are dependent upon Manila for supplies. Information has just reached me that there are 5,000 armed rebels in camp near Manila who are willing to assist us."

TO TAKE TO THE HILLS.

Cuban Generals Make Fierce Speeches at Santiago.

SANTIAGO, Cuba, Jan. 13.—The Cuban generals, Miro, Rabi and Castro, spoke to a large gathering at the San Carlos club. Each of them alluded to the conferences in Havana with Governor General Wood. Gen. Echevarria introduced the speakers, saying that they represented the true Cuban sentiment. The tenor of all the speeches was that every Cuban should work for the realization of the Cuban ideal of independence, and should equip himself for the time when the Americans, showing their real colors, should announce the annexation of the island. General Castro said: "We will take to the hills, from whence our strength comes. This is a question of whether the Cubans will succumb to the apparent superiority of the Americans or assert that superiority they have demonstrated on so many former occasions under Spanish rule." The hubbub caused by the speeches continued all night. Major Andrews will station a company of the Fifth regulars in the city to prevent any demonstration. Cubans generally are showing a disposition to resent American dominion. The papers are full of condemnations of the American system relative to the island. They declare that it is the evident intention to repudiate all the promises made by congress.

FRENCH'S LOSS GROWS.

The Total Now Reaches One Hundred and Sixty-One.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—Gen. French reports the situation at Colesburg practically unchanged. The casualities of the Suffolks were: killed, Colonel Watson, three lieutenants and 23 men; missing, three captains, three lieutenants and 107 men; wounded, 21 men.

England's Answer Satisfactory.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—At a meeting Secretary Hay read a reply of the British government to our representations regarding the flour seizures at Delagoa Bay. Members of the cabinet said after the meeting that the British answer was entirely satisfactory to this government.

Ship Burns at Sea.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Jan. 13.—A two-masted steamer of 3,000 tons, carrying a crew of probably sixty, was burned and wrecked in St. Mary's bay last evening. Not one of the crew or passengers was saved.

NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL

LEGISLATIVE PROCEEDINGS.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 8.—The senate was called to order at 10 o'clock by Lieutenant Governor Milliman. After the preliminaries of selecting temporary officers and the allotment of seats, Wilson, Garst, Cheshire, Hayward and Wallace were appointed a committee on credentials. The committee found no contests and the senate then elected its officers as follows: Secretary, Geo. A. Newman, of Cedar Falls; first assistant, S. D. Alexander, of Winterset; second assistant, T. B. Emmons, of Sumner; engrossing clerk, Lois M. Rigby, of Davenport; enrolling clerk, Olive Conger, of Wayne county; journal clerks, H. C. Lonsbury, of Hancock county and Cecil Dixon, of Calhoun county; sergeant-at-arms, T. C. Collins, of Hancock county; file clerk, D. H. Shenck, of Leon; bill clerk, Miss Lottie Holman, of Buchanan county; postmistress, Miss Viola S. Cook, of Carroll; chief doorkeeper, John N. Lerine, of Allamakee; janitors of the cloak room, Jeff Logan and W. J. Jones, of Des Moines; janitor of the toilet room, C. H. Comeley, of Webster City. On motion the president appointed the following committee of five to make arrangements for the coming inaugural ceremonies: Cheshire, Trewin, Smith, Emmert and Porter. After further routine work, adjournment was taken.

HOUSE.

Representative Stewart, of Polk county, called the house to order at 10 o'clock. After prayer the house effected temporary organization. Representative Temple, who had been elected temporary speaker, spoke briefly, after which Dunham, Santee, Harbert, Downing and Blume were named as a committee on credentials. After its report the members signed the constitution and took the oath. Proceeding to permanent organization Eaton nominated D. H. Bowen for speaker, and he was unanimously elected. On assuming the gavel Mr. Bowen spoke briefly, after which the republican caucus nominees for house offices were elected. Contests were announced from the Shelby, Ida-Monona and Plymouth districts. On motion of Temple, the contest in Shelby county, affecting H. W. Byers, was submitted to a special committee of seven, to be appointed by the speaker. Carr, Down, Letts, Henkle and Way were appointed a committee on inaugural ceremonies.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 9.—After some routine business of minor importance the president announced the reception of the governor's message and the secretary began to read the document. An interruption came in the way of a message from the house, and Senator Garst, of Carroll, took advantage of the opportunity to move that, in-as-much as the message was to be printed, its reading be discontinued. The motion carried by a vote of 21 to 20. The house message for a joint caucus to canvass the vote for governor and lieutenant governor at 2:30 was adopted. At 11:30 adjournment was taken till 2:30, when the senate met with the house in joint session.

HOUSE.

The governor's message was delivered by Private Secretary Fleming at 10:30, and upon motion of Prentis was ordered printed in the journal. This dispensed with the reading of the document. Without transacting any business of importance the house adjourned till the hour set for the joint session.

JOINT SESSION.

The house and senate met in joint session at 2:30 for the purpose of canvassing the vote for governor and lieutenant governor. The following was the result announced: Vote for governor—Shaw, 239,464; White, 184,003; Atwood, 7,631; Lloyd, 1,697; Kramer, 757; Heacock, 484; total, 428,026. Shaw's plurality, 55,461; Shaw's majority, 44,892. Vote for lieutenant governor—Milliman, 238,910; Bemis, 178,550; Pugsly, 7,625; Harney, 1,717; Cromer, 796; Leonard, 428; total, 428,026. Milliman's plurality, 60,360; Milliman's majority, 49,769. The tellers were Senator Hobart, of Cherokee, and Representative Edwards, of Butler. Upon the announcement of the vote Leslie M. Shaw and J. C. Milliman were declared duly elected governor and lieutenant governor respectively.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 10.—Bills were introduced as follows: By Titus, to prohibit the manufacture of pearl buttons in state penitentiaries; by Ball, providing for an appropriation of $50,000 for the State University, as well as a lesser one of $10,000 for a contingent fund; providing for the continuance of the present 1-10 mill tax for the period of five years; asking that the state remove the condition coupled to a recent grant of property to the university; by Lewis, for the building of permanent roads throughout the state, the expense to be borne, half by the county and half by the state; by Hayward, permitting savings banks to receive deposits equal to ten times their capital plus their surplus; by Titus, a joint resolution providing for such amendment to the constitution as will provide biennial elections. A bill relinquishing jurisdiction over grounds acquired by the United States for postoffice purposes in Clinton, Oskaloosa and Creston was passed.

HOUSE.

Bills to relinquish jurisdiction on grounds at Clinton, Oskaloosa and Creston passed. A bill to provide for the payment of necessary additional help for the legislature by appropriating $3,500 was also passed. No other business of importance was transacted.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 11.—The session was unimportant, the only action of interest being the selection of Senator Harriman of Franklin county, as president pro tem. After the inaugural ceremonies the senate reconvened and the standing committees were announced. Adjourned till Tuesday.

JOINT SESSION.

The house convened at 1:30 and the senate appearing the two houses went into joint session. The convention being declared legally formed, the members proceeded to the auditorium, where the inaugural ceremonies took place.

DISEASE WORSE THAN BULLETS.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—The death list from enteric fever and dysentery at Ladysmith, averaging from eight to ten daily, is considered more serious than the 420 casualties of Saturday's fight, as they indicate the frightful unsanitary condition of the beleaguered town. A letter from Ladysmith, dated December 7, says that even then 90 out of 540 men in the battalion of which the writer was a member were sick with dysentery or enteric fever, and according to a dispatch to the Daily Chronicle, dated January 8, the patients and attendants in Tombi Camp, where the hospital is, then numbered 2,800.

Boer Strength.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—An apparently well informed correspondent of the Morning Post says: "The Boer strength, originally 83,000 men is now heavily augmented by Cape Colonists and the enemy's fighting forces may be estimated fairly at 100,000 men and 200 guns. The Boers are not compelled to guard their communications. Their grass is good, the crops are growing, vegetables, cattle and sheep are plenty and game is abundant.

McGovern Whips Dixon.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Terry McGovern last night wrested the featherweight championship of the world from George Dixon, who had defended it for nearly nine years. To save Dixon from a knock-out, Tom O'Rourke, his manager, threw up the sponge in the eighth round, when the negro was staggering helplessly, bleeding and weak, but as game as the dying gladiator. The fight took place before a crowd that packed the Broadway Athletic Club and the victory decided the ownership of a $10,000 purse.

State institutions have asked the legislature for appropriations amounting to $1,318,512.68. Of this $360,000 is for Cherokee. Thirteen of these institutions are under the management of the board of control, which has recommended appropriations as follows:

Soldiers' Orphan's, Davenport	$ 30,800.00
Soldiers' Home, Marshalltown	18,000.00
College for Blind, Vinton	6,500.00
Home for Blind, Knoxville	20,000.00
School for Deaf, Council Bluffs	6,307.75
Feeble Minded, Glenwood	64,534.00
Industrial School, Eldora	37,950.00
Industrial School, Mitchellville	33,750.00
Hospital for Insane, Mt. Pleasant	62,600.00
Hospital at Independence	23,800.00
Hospital at Clarinda	25,800.00
Hospital at Independence	360,000.00
Penitentiary at Ft. Madison	14,040.00
Penitentiary at Anamosa	55,040.93
Total	$759,212.68

The board also recommends the purchase of land as follows:

Hospital at Independence	$ 22,000
Hospital at Clarinda	30,000
For Feeble Minded, Clarinda	22,000
Soldiers' Orphans' Home, Davenport	15,000
Total	$89,000

The educational institutions do not come under the supervision of the board of control, but the board has advisory powers. The trustees ask appropriations for these institutions as follows:

State University, Iowa City	$ 112,500
State Normal School, Cedar Falls	146,000
State Agricultural College, Ames	211,000

The amount asked by the State University and the State Agricultural College is to be derived in part by the continuation of the one-tenth mill tax, which now goes to them. Other appropriations mentioned are:

Arsenal	$30,000
Floyd Memorial	10,000
Historical department	10,000

Articles of incorporation of the Wilmar & Sioux Falls railroad have been filed with the secretary of state. The capital stock is $2,000,000. The law requires that the maximum fee for filing incorporation articles of this character shall be $2,000, which amount the company has paid. This is one of the roads of which the Great Northern is parent, and it is the first time that system has owned a road in Iowa. The Great Northern has recently purchased the Sioux City & Northern, which runs from Sioux City to Garretson, S. D., and the Pacific Short Line, which runs from Sioux City to O'Neil, Neb.

Notice has been served on Secretary of State Dobson by the sheriff of Cedar county to the effect that the state of Iowa has been sued for $175,000 damages by Philip Farrington. Farrington was convict No. 2,638 in the penitentiary and was sentenced to three years, on February 1, 1894. He was 53 years of age and served until July 31, 1896, when he was released on account of expiration of term, counting good time earned. He has threatened from time to time to sue the state to recover damages for false imprisonment, and the beginning of the suit was not a surprise. Farrington was sentenced for forgery, according to the books of the pardon clerk, and was sent up from Jones county.

Postmaster Schooler has been definitely instructed to begin the registration of letters by letter carriers in Des Moines January 15. This will be in the residence portion of the city only, and for the purpose of ascertaining whether the plan is practicable. If the experiment proves a success the service will be gradually extended over the entire city.

Governor Shaw has offered a reward of $500 for the apprehension of the murderers of John E. Robson, of Sioux City, who was killed in his office on the evening of December 29.

The Ministerial Alliance, at its recent meeting, decided to print the names appearing on the saloon petition, giving as their reasons that they believed the saloon men had used unfair means in securing the petitions now on file.

A campaign against tuberculosis is to be inaugurated in the state by the Iowa State Sanitary Association, which has been organized in Des Moines through the united efforts of a number of prominent veterinarians, surgeons, physicians and stock men of the state who are interested in securing proper sanitation to prevent the spreading of the disease by infection. In the constitution which was presented to the meeting at the Savery hotel for adoption the object of the association is said to be for the purpose of disseminating the principles of sanitary science and applying them to the prevention of tuberculosis in mankind and in the domestic animals. Dr. J. A. Scroggs, of Keokuk, was made president and Dr. George A. Johnson, of Sioux City, secretary. To spread the work of the association throughout the state, vice-presidents were named in each of the congressional districts, and it was decided that all should be done to awaken interest towards holding meetings at the same time as the live stock associations of the state every year.

To Aid British.

VICTORIA, B. C., Jan. 13.—Lord Strathorn has offered to equip a mounted corps of 300 Canadians for South African service, which if the offer is accepted will be composed of British Columbians.

The Lawton Fund.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The total subscriptions to the Lawton fund to date amount to $48,433.32. General Corbin says that although active efforts to increase the fund have ceased, voluntary contributions will be accepted up to the time of Mrs. Lawton's arrival in San Francisco about the first part of Release a German Steamer.

DURBAN, Jan. 11.—The British authorities have released the German steamer Herzog, which was seized January 6 while on its way to Delagoa Marquez.

HIS WORD OF HONOR.

A Tale of the Blue and the Gray.

BY E. WERNER.

Copyright, 1894, by Robert Bonner's Sons.

CHAPTER III.—(Continued.)

"I believe you, Edward," she said, in a low tone. "I will be ready this evening."

"Thanks! And now one favor more! Captain Wilson asks permission to pay his respects to you. Will you receive him?"

"Not now. I must go to my father. The captain will excuse me if I receive him later."

"As you please. And when may I see my uncle?"

"As soon as he wakes. I am expecting the doctor. He promised to come toward evening and bring Doctor Blackwood, who is to reach the city this morning. Perhaps he can give me hope."

"Hope? You know as well as I that it is only a question of time, a short addition to the days of life. The physicians have left us no doubt on that score. But I won't detain you from the sick-room now. Farewell! I shall hope to see my uncle in half an hour."

Florence remained alone. She, too, had risen, and now, slowly approaching the fountain, bent over its basin. The sultry air oppressed her till her breathing almost failed. Perhaps it was also the burden of dread of the coming hours and the torturing decision which they must bring.

The water leaped and plashed. The fragrance of the flowers stole softly and sweetly to her. While her eyes mechanically followed the falling drops, their pattering and the fragrance wove a dreamy haze of remembrance about her and led her back into the past—this last year, which at first had promised her so much happiness, only to bring such bitter suffering.

Even this brief period of bliss had at first cost a struggle. She was obliged to conquer a prejudice of her followed the former's serious illness father, who had long intended to wed her to his nephew and would hear of no other marriage. He considered the young officer who had won his daughter's love as an insolent intruder, who was destroying the peace of his household; and the political opinions of the two men, which were strongly opposed to each other, also threatened danger.

Nevertheless, for the time, Mr. Harrison, conquered by the tears and entreaties of his only child, yielded, though with reluctance; Edward, who had just returned from a long journey, found himself confronted with a fact against which his fierce jealousy was powerless. But he knew how to maintain his influence over his uncle, and never ceased to stimulate his aversion to the son-in-law who had been forced upon him.

CHAPTER IV.

At last, the outbreak of the war furnished the long-desired opportunity for an open breach. Harrison imposed conditions which he knew the young officer would never accept and, on his refusal, withdrew his promise. In this way he had a semblance of justice on his side, and Roland's refusal was described under the most hateful colors. Florence was neither energetic nor independent. She had been brave so long as William stood at her side and he was sure of his love and protection. Alone she was unable to contend with her father and Edward, and now Edward's passionate entreaties, the latter was determined to secure her hand at any cost. At last, supposing herself deserted by the man she loved, she yielded to these creatures and gave up her resistance.

The young girl was suddenly startled from her reverie by a broad, bright bar of sunshine. The blinds of the glass doors leading out upon the terrace had been opened, and a man appeared, in a light summer suit, with a broad-rimmed straw hat pulled so low over the brow that his features could scarcely be distinguished. The visitor, strange to say, came through the garden, instead of using the main entrance, and now, unannounced, hurriedly entered the drawing-room. The young lady involuntarily took a step toward the table, on which stood a bell.

"Florence!"

She started, for she recognized the voice, then the features, and with a cry of mingled fear and joy she held out both arms to him.

"William!"

He was already at her side and clasped her passionately in his arms, exclaiming with a deep sigh:

"Thank heaven! At least I have not lost you!"

Florence clung closely to him, as if seeking protection. Everything that had tortured her vanished in her lover's presence, in the delight of seeing him, and she eagerly exclaimed:

"Have you come at last? Why have you left me alone so long—so endlessly long? I despaired of your return."

"I could not hasten to you," replied William. "My regiment was one of the first to receive marching orders. Not a day, not an hour was granted me, and every march increased the distance between us. You know what it cost me to submit to this iron necessity; my letters told you."

"Your letters? You wrote to me?"

"Then you did not receive them? I suspected it when no answer came, yet I still tried every means of communicating with you. Florence, we have been shamefully treated. I have never had one line from your hand."

"From me? I did not write," said Florence, in a low, hesitating tone.

"You did not? You have not sent me a single line during the long months of our separation? You have not once attempted to elude the watch set on your movements? Yet you must have known that I would make every effort to send you tidings of me."

The reproach was felt, but at the same time the old sting also pierced her heart, and, with a touch of defiance, the young girl answered:

"Tidings of you did come, but they were not addressed to me—the letter in which you renounced me and all of us."

"Your father—not you. What other answer could I make to his shameful demand? Either he never knew me, or he could not have set such a choice before me—or he knew my decision in advance, and my refusal was to seal a separation on which he had long determined."

"Well, at least you made your choice promptly enough! You uttered the refusal, and—gave me up."

"No, Florence, no!" William impetuously answered. "I did not give you up, and never will, as long as breath remains in my body. I know that we are parted for the time, that there can be no thought of marriage while I am serving in the Union army. It would be expecting the impossible from your father if I were to ask his consent before the war is over. But my fear was not vain that the effort would be made to wrest you from me, that estrangement and distrust would come between us while I was absent. You have doubted me, I see, and it was to destroy this doubt that I took the dangerous ride here. But you will now believe in me and my love, my Florence, as firmly as I trust you. Will you not?"

The last words expressed the utmost tenderness. He believed so implicitly in the loyalty of his fiancee; and she—A sudden fear awoke in her with the memory of what had happened and was yet to come. William must know it, yet she could not force her lips to utter the confession.

She was to be spared the necessity. While still struggling to find the words with which to begin her story, Edward returned and paused on the threshold in astonishment, as he saw the stranger clasping the young girl's hand so familiarly in his own. At the first glance the civilian's dress and the dim light deceived him; but as the young officer, with a sudden movement, turned toward him, Harrison started back, exclaimingly furiously:

"Mr. Roland—is it you?"

"Certainly," replied the other, coldly, with a gloomy glance at the man whom he had long recognized as his foe. "You probably did not expect to find me here?"

Edward had already regained his self-control. He instantly perceived what threatened him and the peril involved by his rival's unexpected appearance. A few hours later, the latter would have had no power to cross his path; but now he must face the danger, and Harrison was not the man to shrink and give up the game as lost.

"No, indeed," he said, answering the last question. "So far as I am aware, the Union forces have not reached Springfield."

"Yet I am here, as you see."

"On hostile soil. And for what purpose?"

"Do I owe an account to you? You seem to be usurping the place of the master of the house, Mr. Harrison. I regret that I cannot acknowledge it; for I, too, have a son's privilege here, and will speak only to the father of my betrothed bride."

"My uncle will hardly be disposed to recognize your claim. At any rate, you must forego an interview with him."

"Will you prevent it?" demanded Roland, threateningly.

But Florence, who had anxiously noticed the rising wrath of the two men, now interposed.

"My father is ill, William," she said gently; "has been very ill for months. During the last few weeks his disease has assumed a dangerous phase, and yesterday the doctor prepared me for the worst."

Her voice was choked with tears. William listened in perplexity; whatever wrath he had cherished against his future father-in-law, this news disarmed him.

"I had no thought of this," he said, deeply moved. "My poor Florence!"

He put his arm around the weeping girl. But this movement, the quiet confidence with which he asserted the rights of a betrothed lover, enraged Harrison to the utmost; his hands clenched as if he longed to tear the couple apart, and his voice sounded hoarse, almost stifled.

"You don't seem to be aware of what has happened recently, Mr. Roland. I am compelled to inform you of it; I—"

"I know and suspect more than might be agreeable to you," interrupted the young officer, releasing Florence and approaching him. "I just heard from Miss Harrison that not one of my letters has reached her hands, though I used every precaution. Her father cannot have interfered, since for months he has been on a sickbed; yet an intrigue has been carried on which I see with tolerable distinctness. Perhaps I shall apply to the right person if I ask you for information. You will, of course, deny—"

"Who tells you so?" asked Edward, coldly. "The letters are in my hands."

William started back. This cold-blooded acknowledgment completely destroyed his self-command for a moment; but Florence exclaimed in consternation:

"Edward! You did that?"

"I think I can explain it. At first I acted only at your father's request, afterward on my own authority; but then I was simply exercising my rights, for you will remember that three weeks ago you consented to become my wife."

"That is a lie! A shameful slander!" cried William. "Speak, Florence! Defend yourself! You see I don't believe one word of the calumny."

Great Bells.

In the manufacture of great bells Russia has always taken the lead. The "Giant," which was cast in Moscow in the sixteenth century, weighed 288,000 pounds, and it required twenty-four men to ring it. It was broken by falling from its support, but was recast in 1654. On June 19, 1706, it again fell, and in 1732 the fragments were used, with new materials, in casting the "King of Bells," still to be seen in Moscow. This bell is nineteen feet three inches high, measures around the margin sixty feet nine inches, weighs about 443,732 pounds, and its estimated value in metal alone, is at least $300,000. St. Ivan's bell, also in Moscow, is forty feet nine inches in circumference, sixteen and a half inches thick, and weighs 127,830 pounds. The bells of China rank next to those of Russia in size. In Pekin there are seven bells, each is said to weigh 120,000 pounds. The weight of the leading great bells of the world are as follows: "Great Bell of Moscow," 443,732 pounds; St. Ivan's, Moscow, 127,830 pounds; Pekin, 120,000 pounds; Vienna, 40,200 pounds; Olmutz, Bohemia, 40,000 pounds; Rouen, France, 40,000 pounds; St. Paul's, London, 38,470 pounds; "Big Ben," Westminster, 30,350 pounds; Montreal, 28,560 pounds; St. Peter's Rome, 18,600 pounds.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON III, JANUARY 21: LUKE 3: 1-17.

The Preaching of St. John the Baptist —"Prepare Ye the Way of the Lord"—Luke 3: 4—A Temperance Lecture.

1. "In the fifteenth year of the reign." The Greek for "reign" "is a vague term applicable to the rule of emperor, king, or procurator" (governor) (Int. Crit. Com.), and hence would apply to the two years of the "reign of Tiberius Caesar" as co-regent, equally as well as to his sole reign. "Pontius Pilate being governor Judea," his first year. "And Herod." Antipas, son of Herod the Great, who slew the children of Bethlehem. "Being tetrarch." "Originally, as the name itself indicates, a governor of a fourth part of what had been a kingdom; now it designated a petty monarchi of a small country dependent on the general dominion of Rome."—Geo. R. Bliss, D. D.

2. "Annas," deposed by the Romans, but regarded by the Jews as the lawful high priest, "and Caiaphas," his son-in-law, the high priest appointed by the Romans, and acting in that capacity. "The word of God came." "The usual formula for the divine commission of the prophets" (Jer. 2: 1; Ezek. 6: 1). "In the wilderness" of Judea (Matt. 3: 1). The barren, wild, thinly populated regions west of the Dead Sea and the lower Jordan.

3. "The country about Jordan." Note that the population went out to John, not he to their cities and synagogues. There are two methods of evangelization, both of which are good. One is to go out to men; the other is to attract men to you. "Preaching." Proclaiming, heralding. He was the herald of the Messiah and of the new kingdom. "The baptism of repentance." Repentance openly confessed and pledged by baptism.

4. "Book . . . of Esaias." (Isa. 40: 3-5.) "The Voice." John is called "a voice" because: (1) He was the utterer of God's thought. "Of one crying." Heralding, proclaiming. "In the wilderness." The world, was, indeed, a moral wilderness when the time drew near for the coming of its king. "Prepare ye the way of the Lord." "In the mountain regions, the washing of the hillsides by the heavy winter rains destroys, each year, a large portion of the best laid roads.

5. "Every valley." Ravines. "Mountain and hill." All obstacles that made the road difficult or dangerous. Compare the way the road bed of a modern railway is prepared. "Crooked . . . be made straight." New and shorter roads shall be built. "Rough ways . . . smooth." By repairing the old roads.

6. "And all flesh." All persons. The work is for the whole race.

7. "To the multitude that came forth." This multitude included all classes—the people of all grades, the unbelieving Sadducees, the formal Pharisees, the disreputable publicans, and even soldiers, whether Jewish or Roman we know not. "To be baptized of him." Some of them apparently as a substitute for repentance. "O generation," offspring, brood, "of vipers." Their actions sprang from the viper nature of sin in their hearts. "Who hath warned you to flee." They had come to be baptized, not to repent, to go through a form, not to change their natures. "From the wrath to come." The punishment that must come upon the guilty nation.

8. "Bring forth therefore." Prove by your lives that your repentance is sincere and true. "Begin not to say within yourselves," as your secret hope and confidence. "We have Abraham to (as) our father." We must be saved because we belong to the race of Abraham and the kingdom he founded, and are inheritors of the promise to him and his children, even if we do not repent, and whatever our character. "God is able of these stones."

9. "The ax is laid (is lying) unto (at) the root of the trees," all ready to cut them down when the time came. Yet there was a brief respite, with the possibility of such a change into fruit bearing that the ax need not be used. "Bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down." Because it takes the place of something better.

10. "What shall we do then?" To show that they truly repented. What good fruit should they bear, so that they would not be hewn down and cast into the fire?

11. "He . . . saith unto them." To the multitudes in general as distinct from the particular classes mentioned in the next verses. "He that hath two coats." Tunics; "the under and less necessary garment, distinguished from the upper and almost indispensable 'cloak' of Luke 6: 29."—Int. Crit. Com.

12. "Came also publicans." Tax gatherers, collectors of the revenue. "Each of them was required to pay a certain sum to his superior, with the privilege of raising as much more as he pleased for his own profit." Thus there was abundant opportunity for extortion and oppression. See on publicans in Lesson II.

13. "Exact (extort) no more than that which is appointed you." Do not give up your business, but do it in the right and just way, no matter what others do, or what losses come from your honesty.

14. "And the soldiers." Omit the. Probably not Roman soldiers, but "armed men acting as police in Judea,"—a perfectly legitimate business. "Demanded." Too strong a word; rather "asked." Do violence to no man." They had large opportunity for robbery, violence, harassing, and blackmail. "Neither accuse any falsely"; i. e., in order to extort from him his property.—Bliss. "And be content with your wages." So as not to be tempted to make gain in unjust ways.

15. "Were in expectation." On the qui vive, all excitement and interest. "Mused." Reasoned, questioned, argued. "Whether he were the Christ." The Messiah. John was such a great prophet, the greatest of all prophets, with such noble and kingly qualities, that they questioned whether he were not actually the expected Messiah.

17. "Whose fan is in his hand." The fan is not a fan in our sense; it is a broad, light, wooden shovel, with which the grain is thrown up to the breeze, so that the wind may carry off the lighter chaff while the heavier grain sinks down clean. "And he will thoroughly purge." Cleanse, separate the good from the bad. "His floor." Threshing-floor, which is usually a circular area of beaten earth, surrounded by a low bank. "The wheat." The good, the true members of his kingdom. "Into his garner." Granary; the right place for the wheat; the kingdom of heaven.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF TRADE.

Business Conditions for the Coming Year Are Promising.

EASY MONETARY CONDITIONS.

Banks Tell of Increase in Per Cent of Commercial Loans—Bradstreet's Report Quietness in Demand, but Marked Steadiness—The Failures.

New York, Jan. 15.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

"The business of the new year begins well, though there is still much of the usual hesitation. In branches where last year's business was extraordinary and prices have risen greatly, some pause is natural though nothing indicates decrease of consuming disposition or purchasing power, but there is a continuing rise in wages to promote increase. Monetary conditions have grown easier with the return of $4,000,000 from the interior during the week and further deposits by the treasury and more liquidation in some speculative stocks has also helped. Banks report an increase in their per cent of commercial loans, and rates are generally more easy after the decline announced by European banks.

"Failures for the week have been 274 in the United States, against 318 last year, and 25 in Canada, against 24 last year.

Bradstreet's says:

"Quietness as to demand but marked steadiness as to prices is still the leading feature in trade lines, a condition, it might be remarked, not uncommon at this stage of the year, which is a sort of middle ground between stock-taking and inventory time and the actual opening of the spring season. Aggressive strength in prices is confined to a few staples, such as pork products. Tallow, cottonseed oil and similar products are sympathetically strong. Raw and refined sugars have both been advanced this week. Quite a flurry in coffee occurred as a result of reports of an outbreak of the plague at Rio. Raw wool is dull but firm, and speculation is naturally light.

"Wheat, including flour, shipments for the week aggregate 4,248,926 bushels, against 2,509,682 bushels last week. Corn exports for the week aggregate 3,314,576 bushels, against 4,019,036 bushels last week."

ALL VOTES GO TO CARROLL.

Labor Council at Milwaukee Re-elects Its President.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 15.—The third annual convention of the National Building Trades council adjourned Friday to meet Jan. 2, 1901, in Muncie, Ind. The convention has been successful beyond expectation. The result of the election follows: President, Edward Carroll, Chicago; first vice-president, T. S. Jones, Kansas City; second vice-president, E. L. Smith, East St. Louis; third vice-president, James F. Harvey, Milwaukee; fourth vice-president, John Mangan, Chicago; fifth vice-president, Milfred Spohn, Washington, D. C.; sixth vice-president, O. P. Shrum, Omaha; secretary and treasurer, H. W. Steinbiss, St. Louis.

The most important act of the last session was the adoption of the report of the committee on constitution empowering the executive committee to at any time levy an assessment of 5 cents per capita tax a week for a period not exceeding ten weeks on the affiliated organizations for the purpose of creating a defense fund. With the Building Trades council this would mean a weekly income of not less than $10,000 a week, and the proposition is designed as notice to employers that the building trades as a whole are prepared to stand by their affiliated organizations in case of strikes or lockouts.

St. Louis Citizens Win.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 15.—The refusal of the city council to furnish the city with proper lighting nearly caused a bloody riot at the city hall Friday afternoon. As early as 2 o'clock crowds began assembling at the municipal building. Soon the corridors and stair cases were packed with an angry throng, which kept on shouting, "Lynch the scoundrels." The moment the galleries were thrown open they were packed with excited people. When the house was called to order the gallery hurled cries of "Boodlers!" "Thieves!" at the obnoxious members.

A temporary lighting bill from the council was presented when Delegate Kelly arose and read a carefully prepared statement of the situation from the side of the majority, which at the same time was an abject apology, promising the people the speedy relief demanded. The house then adjourned till 11 o'clock today, when the council lighting bill will be read a second time, and on Monday will be passed with an emergency clause.

Censure on Ministers.

London, Jan. 15.—Sir Charles Dilke will upon the assembling of parliament, move an amendment to the address in reply to the queen's speech opening the session, regretting that the ministers failed to foresee the probability of war with the Transvaal and Orange Free State, and, notwithstanding the existence of ample means of information, erroneously estimated the extent and nature of the military operations necessary to the success of the British arms.

Gilmore Assigned to the Glacier

Washington, Jan. 15.—Lieut. Gilmore, formerly of the Yorktown, and for many months a prisoner in the hands of the Tagals, has been assigned to temporary duty on the Glacier.

CONGRESS.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 8.—Morgan spoke against the Pritchard resolution, which condemns racial restrictions on suffrage and attacks the new constitution of North Carolina. He declared the negro race to be inferior in every way to the white race and defended the whites in their treatment of the blacks, holding that it was self defense. Pettigrew offered a resolution authorizing the administration to offer mediation between Great Britain and the Transvaal. Allen offered a resolution calling upon each cabinet officer for an itemized statement of the amount of the $50,000,000 defense fund each department had expended. Adopted. Pettigrew's resolution calling upon the secretary of the navy for Admiral Dewey's report in which he made the statement that he could take Manilla any time, was adopted. Pettigrew's resolution calling upon the secretary of war for information as to the alleged interview between Gen. Torres, of the Filipino army, and Gen. Otis, was called up, and Pettigrew said he believed this government attacked its allies. Pettigrew's statement was warmly resented by Lodge.

HOUSE.

The house ordered an investigation by the committee on postoffices and postroads into the charge that two appointees of the president, Postmaster John T. Graham, of Provo City, Utah, and Postmaster Orsun Smith of Logan, Utah, are under indictments as polygamists and whether affidavits to that effect were on file at the time of their appointment. It also ordered a general investigation of the military committee into the conduct of General Merriam and the United States army officers during the Wardner, Idaho, riots, and subsequent thereto adjourned till Wednesday.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 9.—Beveridge, of Indiana, delivered his address upon the resolution declaring "that the Philippine islands are territory belonging to the United States; that it is the intention of the United States to retain them as such and to establish and maintain such government control throughout the archipelago as the situation may demand." The senate was crowded with listeners and all of the senators were in their seats to listen to the address of the young orator from Indiana. The speech was well received. Hoar followed in a speech in opposition to the resolution, after which adjournment was taken.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 10.—Gage's report on the relation of the treasury to the depository banks was presented and referred to the finance committee. Hale, of Maine, introduced a resolution asking for information regarding the seizure of American product in Delagoa bay, declaring it was detained unlawfully and unjustly. Upon the objection of Lodge the resolution went over. Butler, of North Carolina, offered a long resolution on trusts and gave notice that he would discuss it later. The remainder of the day was devoted to addresses in eulogy of the late Vice-President Hobart, addresses being made by Senators Sewall, Lodge, Keane, Daniel, Depew, Cockrell, Cullom, Davis, Morgan, Chandler, Caffery and Allen. As a token of additional respect, the senate at 3:15 adjourned.

HOUSE.

Miscellaneous business of minor importance occupied the attention of the house until 1 o'clock after which an hour was devoted to eulogies upon the life and public services of the late Representative Green of Nebraska. Adjourned till Friday.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 11.—Spooner, of Wisconsin, introduced a bill providing when the Philippine insurrection was suppressed that the government islands be invested in such person or persons as the president may direct, pending more definite action by congress. Pettigrew's resolution regarding the attempt to open negotiations with the Filipinos was taken up. Hoar offered a similar resolution, but of a broader scope. Lodge offered a further amendment to include any information regarding the plans of the Filipinos touching the uprising in Manila, for the destruction of foreign property, the massacre of the residents, also regarding the treatment of prisoners by the insurgents, also information touching on the dissemination of anti-imperialistic literature among the insurgents and soldiers serving in the Philippines. Stewart, of Nevada, took the floor and spoke on the financial bill.

HOUSE.

Washinton, Jan. 12.—Sulzer, of New York, presented a resolution for a special committee to investigate the relations of the secretary of the treasury with certain New York national banks, and the transactions in the matter of the sale of the New York custom house. Objection to consideration was made on the ground that the report of the secretary of the treasury met all charges in the resolutions.

CHINESE REBELS VICTORIOUS.

Eight Thousand Regulars Unable to Suppress the Ho-Nan Rebellion.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 15.—Eight thousand regular troops in the provinces of Kiang-Si and Ho-Nan, China, have proved inadequate to suppress the insurrection of the Ho-Nan veterans. So far the veterans have been defeated in every engagement, and the authorities have been compelled to call upon the viceroys of Hu-Kwang and and Liang-Kiang provinces for aid. Two bodies of Chinese soldiers have also been sent by Governors Sung and Yi to act with the regulars already in the field. The insurgents are well armed and both order and discipline are observed. They are led, it is said, by experienced army officers, who retired because of disgust at the treatment they received at the hands of the Chinese government. They claim that the government has used them in hours of danger, and then dismissed them without provision. On their part, the insurrection is a sort of protest at bad treatment. The government fears that there may be widespread dissatisfaction. It is said that the insurrection also menaces Kwang-Si province as well. The insurgents are well supplied with both guns and provisions.

DEMANDS PUNISHMENT.

Italian Government Says Lynchers Must Be Adequately Punished.

Washington, Jan. 15.—The Italian government has signified to the United States that the persons guilty of lynching five Italians at Talulah, La., last spring, must be punished. Heretofore, in the case of the lynching of Italians, the matter has been compromised by the payment of an indemnity, but this does not meet the present demands of the Italian government. As under the existing law the trial and prosecution of such cases are left entirely to the state authorities, the national government is well nigh helpless to meet the request of the Italian government.

Parliament Is Summoned.

London, Jan. 13.—The queen has proclaimed the meeting of parliament for January 30.

FILIPINOS ARE WORSTED.

Sustain Severe Losses in Brisk Fights With Americans Near Imus.

Manila, Jan. 9.—Reconnaissances out of Imus, Cavite province, resulted in the loss of three Americans killed and twenty wounded. The enemy's loss is estimated at sixty killed and eighty wounded. Colonel Birkhimer, with a battalion of the Twenty-eighth volunteer infantry, advanced toward Noveleta. Major Taggart, with two battalions of the same regiment, moved toward Perez das Merinas. A part of the Fourth infantry was engaged south of Imus.

An ingenuous Frenchman, M. Albert Jagot, has constructed a perpetual calendar, which indicates automatically without any attention save winding the day of the week, the date and the month. It shows the 29th of February every four years, besides suppressing it in the continuing years that are not leap years and showing it in those that are.

A German doctor has devised a plan for massaging rheumatic joints. He takes the patient's hand and puts it in a deep glass which is two-thirds full of quicksilver. The mercury exerts an equal pressure on every portion of the fingers and the pressure increases rapidly as the fingers sink further into it. The hand is alternately plunged and raised about twenty or thirty times at each treatment, and after a second visit there is a marked diminution of the swelling.

WHAT THE LAW DECIDES.

Constitutionality of attorney's fees allowed by statute for the successful establishment and enforcement of a mechanic's lien is sustained in Dell vs. Marvin (Fla.), 45 L. R. A. 201, on the ground that such claims may be made a class by themselves for such purpose.

Exclusion of citizens of other states from the right to dig claims for sale on certain flats, by a regulation restricting the right to residents of the town, is held, in Com. vs. Hilton (Mass.), 45 L. R. A. 475, not to be in violation of the constitutional privileges or immunities of citizens.

Determination of a commissioner appointed by the governor to ascertain the result of a popular vote on constitutional amendments is held, in State ex rel. Bott vs. Wruts (N. J.), 45 L. R. A. 251, to be reviewable by certiorari, notwithstanding a proclamation of the governor, based on their determination, declaring the amendment adopted.

A statute compelling the resignation of all herds of cattle of persons selling milk for consumption in cities, towns and villages and prohibiting the sale and shipment of milk in such places from unsanitary premises, is held, in State vs. Broadbelt (Md.), 45 L. R. A. 433, to be a valid exercise of the police power, and not to deny due process of law or the equal protection of the laws.

These trains are very fast, and, with this new additional service, passengers can feel assured of first class accommodations. JNO. G. FARMER, Cedar Rapids, Ia.

OLD PEOPLE MADE YOUNG.

J. C. Sherman, the veteran editor of the Vermontville (Mich.) Echo, has discovered the remarkable secret of keeping old people young. For years he has avoided nervousness, sleeplessness, indigestion, heart trouble, constipation and rheumatism by using Electric Bitters, and he writes: "It can't be praised too highly. It gently stimulates the kidneys, tones the stomach, aids digestion and gives a splendid appetite. It has worked wonders for my wife and me. It's a marvelous remedy for old people's complaints." THE MOTHER'S FAVORITE.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the mother's favorite. It is pleasant and safe for children to take and always cure. It is intended especially for cough, cold, croup and whooping cough and is the best medicine made for these diseases. There is not the least danger in giving it to children for it contains no opium or other injurious drug and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by J. L. Harr.

Buckhorn.

If you are a smoker and have not tried one, Gruetzmacher Bros. sell them.

Lewis Dennis, Salem, Ind., says, Kodol Dyspepsia Cure did me more good than anything I ever took." It digests what you eat and cannot help but cure dyspepsia and stomach troubles.—S. L. Harr.

The announcement that Richard Harding Davis had started for South Africa explain much; the combatants are waiting for time to arrive to witness their big battle—and describe it.

Just by way of keeping in the swim the French and the Chinese have been scrapping in Tonkin, and, after getting several drubbings, the French have come out on top.

G. H. Appleton, justice of peace, Clarksburg, N. J., says, "De Witt's Little Early Risers are the best pills made for constipation. We use no others." Quickly cure all liver and bowel troubles.—J. L. Harr.

Photographers do not have to ask Gov. Roosevelt to smile and look pleasant; if he was ever photographed without a smile, the picture was concealed from the public.

F. B. Thirkield, Health Inspector of Chicago, says, "Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cannot be recommended too highly. It cured me of severe dyspepsia." It digests what you eat and cures indigestion, heart burn and all forms of dyspepsia.—J. L. Harr.

That a great, perhaps a decisive battle will shortly be fought in South Africa is probable, but that is no reason for not tiring of the advance headlines of the event, which so constantly appear in the big papers.

L. T. Travis, Agent Southern R. R. Selina, Ga., writes, "I cannot say too much in praise of One Minute Cough Cure. In my case it worked like a charm." The only harmless remedy that gives immediate results. Cures coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles.—J. L. Harr.

The Senate has at last got the financial debate to moving. but it is one-sided, as the opponents of the financial bill are doing all the talking.

J. I. Bevry, Loganton, Pa., writes, "I am willing to take my oath that I was cured of pneumonia entirely by the use of One Minute Cough Cure after doctors failed. It also cured my children of whooping cough." Quickly relieves and cures coughs, colds, croup grippe and throat and lung troubles. Children all like it. Mothers endorse it.—J. L. Harr.

Hon. James S. Sherman, of N. Y., must be one of those who believes the Senate superior to the House, since he will resign his membership in the latter body to become Secretary to the Senate.

"I am indebted to One Minute Cough Cure for my health and life. It cured me of lung trouble following grippe." Thousands owe their lives to the prompt action of this never failing remedy. It cures coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis, pneumonia, grippe and throat and lung troubles. Its early use prevents consumption. It is the only harmless remedy that gives immediate results.—J. L. Harr.

The large and increasing circulation of The Iowa Homestead in this county is a matter for congratlation to the publishers and to good farming, for, of all the papers of its class in the country, it is easily the best and most helpful. Its Special Farmers' Iustitute edition, issued with regular edition the first week in each month, have been for years the admiration of all practical farmers. Written wholly by farmers, they are full of actual experience and smell of the soil. We have been fortunate enough this season to secure terms for The Homestead and its Special Farmers' Institute Editions together with The Poultry Famer and The Farmers' Mutual Insurance Journal, four of the most valuable farm publications in the country, that enable us to offer the four in connection with our own paper for $1.65 for the enter five, one year. This is emphatically a good thing, and no farmer in this counld fail to take advantage of the offer. For a large line of throughly practical farm reading nothing has ever been offered befored hat equals it. A country paper, a farm paper, a poultry paper, a farm insurance paper and the Special Farmers' Institute, all for $1.65. Come in and order them.

BULLER IS STRENGTHENED.

Each Day's Delay Brings Up Reinforcements and Supplies.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—A Durban special, dated Thursday night, says:

"It is reported here that Lord Dundonald has smashed a Boer convoy. General Buller is said to be within twelve miles of Ladysmith and General Warren to be about six miles to the rear."

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Every hour that General Buller delays his combined attack makes his position stronger Transports continue to arrive at Durban and fresh troops are being sent up the line to reinforce those at Colenso. It appears that General Buller's troops north of the Tugela number 22,000 and possibly 25,000, with fifty guns. His total forces, forming a great outer curve south and west of Ladysmith, probably number 40,000. While General Buller's forward operations, which began on January 10, develop rather leisurely, the Boers appear to be fully aware that they must meet a strenuous assault. Balloon observers have roughly estimated that 10,000 Boers are using spade and pick in artificially strengthening positions which nature has rendered easy of defense. Military critics in touch with the war office think that news that general fighting has begun may be expected at any hour. It is not thought that one day's fighting will settle the fate of Ladysmith, but rather that there will be two or three days of continuous fighting.

General Buller has telegraphed the war office from Spearman's camp under date of Thursday evening as follows:

"Lord Dundonald with a body of mounted troops came into action this afternoon with a force of Boers west of Acton Homes. After the fight he occupied several kopjes, which he is still holding. Field Cornet Heibrun and 20 Boers were killed and 15 prisoners taken. Two British soldiers were killed and two wounded."

HARD FIGHTING.

Buller's Forces Gradually Approaching Ladysmith.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—It is evident from General Buller's dispatch to the war office and the advices to the Associated Press from Spearman's camp that a big battle is now being fought. As far as can be gathered from these dispatches, the result remains undecided, and unless the Boers withdrew during the night, the engagement, on which hangs the fate of Ladysmith, and which may prove the turning point of the whole war, will be resumed this morning. The war office posted the following dispatch from General Buller, dated Spearman's camp, January 20, evening:

"General Clery, with a part of General Warren's force, has been in action from 6 a. m. till 7 p. m. to-day. By a judicious use of his artillery he has fought his way up, captuaing ridge after ridge, for about three miles. The troops are now bivouacking on the ground he has gained, but the main position is still in front of them. The casualties were not heavy. About 100 wounded had been brought in by 6:30 p. m. The number of killed has not yet been ascertained."

MAKES TREASON OF LYNCHING.

Representative White Introduces a Bill to Prevent Mob Violence.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Representative White, of North Carolina, the colored representative of the house, reported a bill for the "protection of all citizens of the United States against mob violence," etc. It provides that all persons shall be protected against being murdered, tortured or burned to death by mobs known as "lynching bees," whether spontaneous or premediated, and all parties participating, aiding or abetting in such affairs are made guilty of treason against the United States government and subject to prosecution in the United States courts.

ALARMING TO THE BRITISH.

Congress Said to Be Prepared to Ignore the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The Daily Chronicle says editorially today:

"According to advices we have received from Washington a canvass of the senate and house of represntatives has placed it beyond dispute that congress will not only pass the Nicaragua canal bill, but will pass it in a form directly at variance with the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. This is a statement of decidedly serious importance, and we hesitate to believe that the United States government will commit itself to a course which this country would have regarded as unfriendly.

Osman Digna Captured.

CAIRO, Jan. 21.—News has been received here that Osman Digna, principal general of the late Khalifa Abdullah, has been captured. It had been known that he was in the neighborhood of Tokar six days ago, and several expeditions were organized from Suakim under Captain Burgess, with the result that Osman Digna was taken unhurt in the hills.

Protection to Game Birds.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Representative Lacey, of Iowa, has reintroduced in the house his bill for the protection of game birds, modified, however, so as to make it unlawful to ship in interstate commerce game killed in violation of the law.

Thirteen Killed.

TURIN, Jan. 19.—It is announced that thirteen persons altogether were killed and forty others were wounded by the explosion of dynamite at Avigliana, fourteen miles from here.

The NEWS OF IOWA

Wilson Taylor, aged 14, was drowned at Des Moines a few days ago.

Several cases of smallpox of a mild form have developed in a house occupied by negroes in the central part of the city of Marshalltown. Two other families in different wards are reported affected. Strict quarantine regulations are being enforced and there is little apprehension of the disease spreading.

Judge Prouty, of the district court of Polk county, wants to reach the person or persons, who, it is alleged, offered a bribe to a member of the Polk county board of supervisors, in consideration of securing a contract for making the plans and for the erection of a new court house. He has especially charged the members of the grand jury to make inquiry into the matter and to return an indictment if they find the published statements sufficiently well grounded.

The Midland passenger train on the Illinois Central ran into a special stock train near Amber. Engineer Lee, Conductor Sherman, Brakeman Harding, Baggageman Hoskins and Engineer Shoemaker were all badly injured. The freight crew escaped injury. The freight left Anamosa intending passing the passenger at Amber. The conductor saw he could not reach the siding in time and stopped to flag the passenger, but was too late to avoid a collision as the passenger came around a curve.

Peter Rossman, through Judge S. H. Fairall, brought suit in the district court of Johnson county against the B. C. R. & N. Railroad company, claiming $7,850. Mr. Rossman is the father and administrator of the estate of Adolph Rossman, who was killed by cars at Lone Tree crossing, November 17. As administrator the plaintiff sues for $7,500, alleging that his son's death was due to culpable negligence on the part of the company. On his own account, Mr. Rossman says the company was similarly responsible for the death of his team of mules and the destruction of his wagon.

Mrs. P. B. Yates, of Tabor, against whom the grand jury of Pottawattamie county returned an indictment for manslaughter in connection with the death of her daughter Ethel in Council Bluffs January 5, was arrested at her home and is now in jail awaiting the perfecting of her bond in the sum of $3,000. "Divine Healer" James, of South Omaha, indicted along with Mrs. Yates, has disappeared. He has retained attorneys to defend him and will not come to Iowa without requisition papers. His defense is that he cannot be taken out of the state for an alleged crime committed in another state.

A dispatch from Des Moines says: The Rock Island road has practically completed arrangements for a new service between Des Moines and St. Paul and Minneapolis, to take the place of the service now operated over the Fort Dodge division and the Minneapolis & St. Louis roads. In providing this service it will also provide a line into Spirit Lake independent of the Milwaukee, whose tracks it is now using from Ruthven, via Spencer, to Spirit Lake. This arrangement will be provided by a ten to fifteen mile extension of the Des Moines and Ruthven division of the Rock Island and the use of Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern tracks. The extension will be built this season and the service to St. Paul established as soon as the Burlington road completes its new track into St. Paul. The Spirit Lake service will probably be established by the opening of the lake season in June.

A dispatch from Des Moines says: About thirty-five members of the legislature, composed of the house committee on industrial schools and members most interested in a change in the industrial school conditions, visited the institution at Mitchellville a few days ago. The school was thoroughly investigated and after supper a conference was held with the leading citizens of the town at the hotel, where an exchange of views took place. As a result of the visit, the members of the committee came back with the idea that they will make numerous recommendations for changes in the institution, endorsing largely those made by the board of control. At the conference the fact was brought out that the citizens of the town are incensed at the reports sent out about the institution and believe that they have been grossly misrepresented. Members of the committee expressed the opinion that such was the case, and that the citizens of the town are to be credited with every laudable effort in placing the school on a proper footing.

Forty-two lawyers were admitted to practice in the Iowa courts, as a result of the supreme court's examination of the law class a few days ago.

Edward Mark committed suicide by hanging. The body was found in an old house near his home, twelve miles southwest of Lacona. It appears that in the evening he told his wife he was going to see his brother, but would be back soon. When he failed to return search was made, with the above result. No cause is known for the act. He leaves a wife and one child.

William Holmes, of Brooklyn, has been appointed grand secretary of the Odd Fellows of the state to fill the unexpired term of William Musson, recently deceased. The appointment was made by Grand Master McIntyre, of Osceola.

W. D. Sansom, who, a short time ago, compelled, at the point of a revolver, the assistant cashier of a Sac City bank to hand over more than $500, was sentenced by Judge F. H. Helsell, of Sioux Rapids, to two years in the penitentiary. The defense sought in vain to prove that Sansom was insane.

The Clinton case of Langan vs. several insurance companies, which refused to pay him for losses sustained by fire, was decided by Judge Shiras in favor of plaintiff for the full amount, $20,000. The companies involved are the Aetna, Spring Garden, Palatine and Alliance. The case will be appealed to the supreme court.

Lloyd Orris, a farmer living near North Liberty, Johnson county, committed suicide by jumping into a well. He left his home about 6 o'clock and going to a distant part of his farm took off his coat and shoes and plunged in head foremost. Half an hour afterward his wife and children found the missing man and pulled his lifeless body from the watery grave. Orris was an old resident of the county, having lived there forty-nine years. No cause is given for his rash act.

A Des Moines dispatch says: Lee A. Curtis, civil engineer, reports that the survey of the new Duluth & New Orleans railroad has just been completed. It is also reported that the contract for the beginning of the construction of the road has been let. The line of the road, as marked out in the preliminary survey, runs north from Des Moines to Osage, passing through Cambridge, Nevada, McCallsburg, Hubbard, Iowa Falls, Hampton, and two miles east of Nora Springs.

At Chillicothe, Mo., a few days ago, the breach of promise case of Mrs. Martha Parker, of Moulton, Iowa, against T. R. Ballew, of Livingston county, Missouri, in which the plaintiff asked for $10,000 damages, was settled in the circuit court when the jury returned a verdict of $250 for the plaintiff. The case has been on trial for two days. Several love letters were read. The plaintiff is over 50 and the defendant 60 years old. Mrs. Parker's attorneys will ask for a new trial.

Frederick Berg, postmaster at Graettinger, has mysteriously disappeared and his present whereabouts are wholly unknown. One day recently he asked one of the sureties on his bond to look after the office for a short time, as he was going out. He put on his hat and overcoat and left the office, and since that time has failed to return. An examination of his books revealed the fact that his accounts were in perfect order and all the money the books called for was in the cash drawer of the office. Domestic troubles are supposed to be the sole cause of his disappearance.

Articles of incorporation for the Murray & Creston Railroad company have been filed for record at Burlington, the authorized capital stock of the corporation being $2,000,000. The incorporators are: C. P. Squires, W. N. McFarland, Wm. Carson, W. W. Baldwin and C. M. Levey, all stockholders and officers of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad. The new incorporation is to cover the new tracks to be built by the Burlington road between Murray and Creston, changing the present single track to a double track. The capital stock represents the amount of money to be spent in improvements by the Burlington system in addition to those already made.

Information has been received by the authorities at Sioux City that Henry Peters, a hackman, supposed to have been murdered and burned in a brewery, is living in Oklahoma. Peters' disappearance was one of the mysteries connected with the famous Haddock murder case in the latter 80's. Haddock was the Methodist preacher murdered in Sioux City for his relentless war on saloons. One of the principal witnesses desired by the prosecution was Henry Peters, a hackman, known to have driven the party of liquor dealers, of whom Arensdorf was one, about the city, a short time before Haddock was killed. But from the date of the murder Peters disappeared. A letter has been received from F. M. Tomlinson, now touring in Oklahoma, saying he knows where Peters can be found and offering more definite information.

A warrant has been issued for the arrest of David DeWitt, a well-to-do farmer of Providence township, Hardin county, charged with passing forged checks on the Hubbard bank to the amount of $216.

The company operating the woolen mill at Maquoketa has decided to close the same and will offer the machinery for sale. The mill is an old institution and has long been noted for its excellent work. Improved machinery of the later and larger mills has left it without a profit for several years, and the stockholders have decided to quit.

CONGRESS.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 15.—Berry, dem., of Arkansas, addressed the senate in support of the resolutions recently introduced by Bacon regarding the disposition of the Philippines. He was followed by Pettigrew in support of his resolution of inquiry. Pettigrew was very bitter in his attacks upon the administration. Wolcott, rep., of Colorado, replied to Pettigrew, scathingly arraigning the South Dakota senator for the attitude he had assumed on the Philippine question. Wolcott adverted also to the speech recently delivered by Beveridge, rep., of Indiana, sharply criticising it for the spirit of greed which seemed to animate the senator in making such a deliverance. At the conclusion of the Philippine discussion, Rawlins, dem., of Utah, addressed an elaborate argument to the senate in opposition to the proposed financial legislation.

HOUSE.

The session was limited to District of Columbia business.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Pettigrew's resolution of inquiry and Lodge's substitute for it were laid on the table and Hoar's general resolution of inquiry was taken up. An effort of Pettigrew to amend it so as to call for the president's instructions to the Paris peace commisioners led to a long debate. After the senate had considered the matter behind closed doors the amendment was rejected by a vote of 41 to 20. McLaurin of South Carolina spoke on an amendment which he had offered to the currency bill.

HOUSE.

The urgent deficiency appropriation bill was taken up in the house to-day under an agreement which limited the general debate to today Addresses were made by Cannon. McRae, Loud, Livingston, Griggs, Barney, Butler, Landid, Robinson, Davis, Richardson and Hopkins.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 17.—An agreement has been reached to take the final vote on the pending bill fixing gold as the standard of value in the United States on February 15. The drag-net resolution of inquiry regarding the conduct of the Philippine war was adopted. It was introduced by Hoar, of Massachusetts, and practically was adopted as a general substitute for resolutions of similar but less extended character offered by Pettigrew and Lodge. Beyond a vigorous speech by Pettigrew the resolution aroused no debate, as it is within the discretion of the president to send or not to send any of the information requested. The resolution offered by Hale, of Maine, as to the seizure of flour by the British authorities was adopted, but only after a spirited debate and after the resolution had been materially amended.

HOUSE.

During consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill Sulzer attacked Gage for his transactions in the sale of the New York custom house. Sibley defended the secretary and these two speeches resulted in a debate which lasted almost three hours. The bill passed with only one unimportant amendment.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 18.—Wellington, rep., of Maryland, addressed the senate, taking as his text the resolution he introduced last Tuesday, declaring that the United States should not take permanent possession of the archipelago, but after subduing the insurrection—which he sincerely deplored—should confer upon the Filipinos the right to govern themselves, affording them such protection as they might need. Teller resumed his speech on the financial bill, in the course of which he arraigned Secretary Gage for his negotiations with the National City Bank of New York. Allen offered a resolution asking if any one had been accredited to this government from the Transvaal, if he was officially accepted and if not, why not. It went over under objection. Ross offered a resolution reciting that the provisions of the constitution, unaided by an act of congress, do not extend over Porto Rico and the Philippines, and that a separate department of the government was demanded to take charge of all the outlying dependencies.

HOUSE.

The house passed the senate bill to extend the powers of the director of the census, after striking out the committee amendment to authorize the director to contract for extra printing with private contractors.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 19.—A speech, sensational in its interest and international in its importance, was delivered in the senate by Hale, of Maine. The occasion of the utterance was the simple question whether a resolution introduced by Allen calling for information as to the recognition by this country of diplomatic representation of the Transvaal republic should be directed to the president or to the secretary of state. Hale made the question the text of an impassioned speech, in which he declared that nine-tenths of the American people sympathized with the Boers in their gallant struggle for liberty against one of the greatest powers in the world. He denied that the American people were "in sympathy with Great Britain in the South African war to stamp out the liberty of a people," and when Mr. Balfour, in the house of commons, made such a statement, "he should be met with some disclaimer from this side of the Atlantic." Hale spoke with unusual force, decisiveness and earnestness, even for him, and his passionate eloquence claimed the closest attention of every auditor. The resolution, which previous to Hale's speech had caused a sharp colloquy between Allen and Spooner, was finally passed as amended.

HOUSE.

The pension appropriation bill, carrying $145,245,250, was passed by the house to-day. It was made the vehicle of an attack upon the commissioner of pensions by Curtis, rep., of Kansas, who was ably seconded by Lentz and Norton of Ohio and Roberts of Indiana and other northern democrats. All inveighed against lack of liberality in the administration of the pension laws. The commissioner was ably defended by a score of members from both sides of the house.

HOUSE.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Reports of the special committee of investigation in the case of Brigham H. Roberts, of Utah, were presented to the house to-day. The majority report, signed by Chairman Taylor and six of his associates, is a voluminous document and is accompanied by a summary of the law and facts. It gives the details of the hearings, the ample opportunities afforded to Mr. Roberts to present his case, his refusal to testify and the unanimous finding of facts, heretofore published, that Roberts is guilty of living in polygamy. A minority report favors swearing Roberts in as a member and then expelling him

DEATH OF JOHN RUSKIN.

Long Life of Famous Author and Art Critic Ended.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—John Ruskin died Saturday afternoon of influenza, aged 81. Ruskin had been for several years in a state of mental decline and had lived almost alone in his retreat. Prior to his collapse his long life had been one of unceasing altruistic activity. He was not only the greatest writer on art but the "pride of English literature." Ruskin's essentially effective work in this world was his constant battle against wrong and his constant efforts to establish, to uphold and to extend the right. John Ruskin was born in 1819, the year of Queen Victoria's birth, the year of the birth of Charles Kingsley, James Russell Lowell and Walt Whitman.

QUEEN YIELDS TO KAISER.

Seizure of the Bundesrath Acknowledged as Unjust.

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—The Bundesrath incident, which caused such great excitement in Germany, is at last settled. The British government undertakes to foot the bill of damages, amounting to a considerable sum, and to offer guaranties against a future occurrence of unlawful search and holding up of German mail steamers. Count Hatzfeldt, the German ambassador in London, telegraphed to Berlin Lord Salisbury's verbal declaration to this effect.

A Russian Warship Ashore.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 19.—The Russian ironclad Poltava, 11,000 tons, is dangerously ashore near Libau, on the Baltic. The Poltava's armament consists of four 12-inch guns, twelve 5.9 inch quick firing guns, thirty-four smaller guns and six torpedo tubes. Its cost was $5,500,000.

Losing Anna Gould's Millions.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—Matin says it is rumored on the bourse that Count Boni de Castellane, husband of Anna Gould, has lost three million francs by unlucky speculations.

NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL

LEGISLATIVE PROCEEDINGS.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 16.—After the prayer the regular order of business was called by the lieutenant-governor and a motion prevailed that the senate proceed to vote on the selection of a United States senator. The 34 republicans voted for Gear and the 12 democrats voted for Fred White. Bills were introduced as follows: To provide a plan of compulsory education; to authorize school districts to accept charitable bequests; regulating pay of miners; to fix hour of closing polls.

HOUSE.

The house session was almost wholly taken up by the senatorial election. The vote resulted: Gear 78, White 19, absent 4. No other business of importance was transacted.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 17.—Memorial services were held in the senate in honor of the late ex-Governor Cyrus C. Carpenter. Governor Shaw and ex-Governor Larrabee were present and spoke briefly of Mr. Carpenter's life and work. Senators Bolter and Healy also briefly eulogized the dead statesman. Bills were introduced as follows: Providing for a license fee of $10 for every person who desires to hunt in the state of Iowa; providing for the appropriation desired by the Iowa State College of Agriculture; providing for the taxation of mortgages and other real estate liens; providing for compulsory education; providing for the taxation of telegraph companies on the principle of the Cheshire amendment. A resolution passed providing for the election of state binder and printer at today's joint session, 34 to 10.

HOUSE.

Speaker Bowen announced the standing committees of the house. The senate resolution providing for the election of state printer and binder at to-day's joint session was defeated, 50 to 40. Bills were introduced as follows: To amend the law in regard to cutting weeds on public highways; to prohibit the leasing and contracting of penitentiary convicts; to amend the law in relation to the time of closing the polls at elections; authorizing the appointment of a monument commission to erect granite monuments on the battlefields of Shiloh, Chickamauga and Lookout Mountain and to provide for the payment of necessary expenses of same; relating to the rate of interest to be charged in loaning the endowment fund of the State Agricultural College; to convert the industrial home for the blind at Knoxville into a state normal school.

JOINT SESSION.

There was a sharp fight over the question of the election of state printer and binder at the joint session and a resolution providing for such election was laid on the table by a viva voce vote. Senator Gear's election was confirmed by the joint convention and in presence of the convention his certificate of election was made out and signed by the president of the senate and speaker of the house

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 18.—Resolutions were adopted on the death of Senator Malloy, a member of the last assembly. These bills were introduced: By Titus, prohibiting letting of convict labor by contract and providing for its utilization otherwise; by Titus, to establish a state library commission; by McIntyre, to provide for the cutting of weeds on public roads; by Hobart, to make use of blasphemous or obscene language a misdemeanor instead of an indictable offense; by McArthur, to establish parole system for inmates of Iowa penitentiaries; by Porter to define place of bringing action against any incorporation, company or person operating or maintaining a coal mine; by Lister, to amend laws relating to loans of the permanent school fund; by Mellen, to appropriate $16,500 for teachers and $8,000 for contingent, both annually, for the State Normal School at Cedar Falls; also $21,800 for biennial period and $100,000 for buildings; by Perrin, to appropriate $35,000 for finishing and furnishing the new state historical building; by Penrose to provide that county authorities may withhold taxes or other money due the county from claims presented to the county.

HOUSE.

A resolution by Dunham instructing the printing committee to provide the house with information as to rates charged by the state printer and state binder passed. Another resolution, by Clark, of Dallas, was adopted. It provides that the chair appoint a committee of three to call on the board of control and secure all the information possible as to the cost of printing and binding, and the saving, if any, made by the board in letting the work to the lowest bidder; the said committee to report within ten days. Hawk, of Jasper, introduced a joint resolution providing for an amendment to the state constitution for the use of voting machines, and another instructing our representatives in congress to work for an amendment to the federal constitution to elect United States senators by direct vote o fthe people. Bill permitting independent school districts to accept bequests passed. Bills were introduced as follows: By Venneman, to make appropriations for Iowa State College; by Wise, to provide for the State Normal school at Cedar Falls; by Santee, in relation to increasing the governor's salary; by Dows, to appropriate $1,440 for the supreme court contingent fund; by Clark, of Hamilton, to provide for the furnishing of the state historical building; by Kirkwood, to transfer Harrison county from the Fourth to the Fifteenth judicial district and provide additional judge for the latter; by Koontz, relative to larger appropriations for the State University; by Buchanan, for the establishment of three additional normal schools; by Clark, of Hamilton, to amend the section of the code relating to the Russian thistle; by Furry, relative to the rate of interest on permanent school fund loaned by county auditors.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 19.—Senator Hubbard introduced a bill providing for an appropriation of $10,000 for the erection of a monument to the memory of Sargeant Charles Floyd, who was a member of the Lewis and Clark expedition, and who was the first American soldier to die in the Louisiana purchase after it came into the possession of the United States. The grave is situated on a high bluff a few miles below Sioux City. Hubbard also introduced a bill providing that no person shall be permitted to dispose of a stock of goods in bulk without first notifying his creditors. Other bills were introduced as follows: By Cheshire, that telephone companies shall be assessed on what is termed the unit mileage plan; also another bill providing for similar method of taxation for express companies; by Hayward, providing for an appropriation of $56,100 for the Soldiers' Orphans' home at Davenport; by Hubbard, providing for the sale and purchase of water works; by Wilson to provide for the protection of game, fowls and birds; by Ball, to appropriate $2,000 for the State Historical society; by Allyn, to provide for the improvement of streets and the construction of sewers; by Lewis, to do away with the payment of attorney fees to lawyers appointed by the court to defend indigent criminals. Upon recommendation of the committee on appropriations the senate passed a bill allowing the supreme judges $1,440, which they paid a bailiff who served in the supreme court.

HOUSE.

An invitation was received from the Polk county board of supervisors asking the members of the house to visit the county asylum for the insane and the invitation was accepted. Clark of Dallas, Wilson of Washington, and Blake of Webster were appointed a committee to ascertain the prices paid for printing by board of control. Senate bill appropriating $1,500 for supreme court contingent fund passed. Bills were introduced as follows: By Thuenen, making an appropriation of $56,100 for the Soldiers' Orphans' Home at Davenport; by Way, appropriating $1,300 for the publication and distribution of 20,000 railroad commissioners' maps; by Harbut, to provide for the collection of personal taxes; by Venneman, to levy a tax for necessary buildings for the State Agricultural College; by Jones, in relation to the marking of ballots; by Boyson, relating to the time in which mortgages must be canceled; by Theophilus, to establish a state barbers' examining board; by Koontz, to appropriate $2,000 for the state historical society; by Buchanan, in relation to library tax in cities of the first class

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 20.—The Titus amendment, providing for biennial elections, passed with only one dissenting vote. Lambert, of Jackson, who had a like measure up in the house two years ago, introduced a bill in the senate to-day providing that the offices of state printer and binder shall be abolished and the printing and binding let by competetive bids to offices where the union scale of wages are paid, unless such offices pool the prices. The bill to allow the trustees of the state agricultural college to use the discretion in the amount of interest paid on endowment fund loans at that school. The senate also passed Ball's bill providing that the state university may use ground originally appropriated for building an observatory.

HOUSE.

The house held a brief and unimportant session. Bills were introduced as follows: By Carr, providing for the improvement of the river front within the corporate limits of Des Moines; by Myers, requiring landlords to record leases.

DES MOINES, Jan. 22, 1900.

The legislative committee of the Iowa League of Municipalities met here, and among other actions agreed upon a bill revising the special assessment laws of the state to meet the United States supreme court decision in the case of Norwood vs. Baker. The bill provides that the difference between the contract price for special improvements and the benefit received by abutting property shall be paid from a fund created by a special tax levy.

It is understood that Chairman Dows, of the house appropriations committee, is opposed to the general assembly appropriating all the funds that the state has in sight. Speaking on this line, Mr. Dows said: "If the general assembly has a million dollars to spend it should save at least $100,000 of that amount. There is liable to be a deficit in the state treasury at any time, caused by the failure of the tax levy to yield as large returns as expected. There are always more bills to be met than expected, and it seems to me that it will not be wise to expend all the money in sight. I believe in being conservative in making appropriations, even if the state is in excellent condition financially."

At the recent meeting of the state fair director a proposal was presented to do away with soldier's day during the fair this year. It has been customary to set aside one day of each fair season on which old soldiers should be admitted free. Some complications have arisen in handling the railroad and other classes of tickets that have made the feature embarrassing, and it was proposed to entirely do away with the feature. The suggestion led to a lively discussion, which resulted in the determination to make no change.

The excitement incident to the appearance of the smallpox at Youngstown has materially subsided since it has become known that measures have been taken by the mayor and health officers to prevent those exposed from coming to the city or people from the city from going to the mines. Mayor MacVicar has nineteen special officers guarding the eastern corporation line night and day to stop people from coming in from Four Mile township. The patients down with the disease are reported to be getting along nicely. The malady does not seem to be of a virulent type, but seems to yield readily to treatment.

The biennial report of the Benedict Home has been filed with Governor Shaw. Miss Flavilla Bailey is superintendent, Mrs. H. C. Hollingsworth is matron and Jennie Coleman is physician. By law but twenty-five inmates can be accomodated at the home at one time. The extension of this is asked by the management. Since its opening the home has cared for 800 girls and 600 babies. It now has fifty rooms and can accommodate fifty persons. During the biennial period 134 adults and 91 infants were cared for. Eighteen were 16 years old, twenty-one, 17, twenty-one, 18, twenty-two, 19, and from less each way. The Americans numbered 111. Boone had six inmates, several counties four and others three, two and one. The treasurer's report showed $8,084 receipts during the period, $1,150 being donated. There is on hand $1,995.

The American Malting Company, of New York City, succeeds the American Spirits Manufacturing Company in the ownership of the old distillery property in Des Moines. The distillery has been used for a couple of years past for the purpose of making malt, and it is generally understood that the American Malting Company has acquired the possession of it and will continue its operation for such use until it is possible to convert it again into a distillery under the laws of the state.

Ex-Governor William Larrabee expects to retire from the board of control and on February 24 to sail from New York for Europe and the Mediterranean countries with a party of friends. They will land first at Gibraltar, going to Egypt and the Holy Land, visit Italy, Austria, Switzerland, etc., and conclude their visit by seeing the world's fair at Paris. Just when Mr. Larrabee will retire from the board of control is not known. He declines to state the exact time, but says that he feels that the work is now well established and that his associates on the board are fully competent to carry it out. This will hasten the selection of Mr. Larrabee's successor.

The Farmers' Tribune has prepared and published a tax bill that has for its object the repeal of section 1311 of the present law, which permits the holders of moneys and credits to deduct all their debts before turning in their property for taxation, a privilege given to holders of no other kind of property. The bill also provides that all notes and mortgages shall be stamped by the assessor, showing that they have been listed for taxation, thus compelling all holders of this kind of property to pay taxes upon it according to law. The Tribune will publish this law, asking the farmers to sign and send it to them and if it meets the approval of enough of them to justify the effort, it will be presented to the legislature for enactment into law.

STOLE MARCH ON ST. LOUIS.

LOCKPORT, Ill., Jan. 18.—The bear-trap dam, separating the drainage canal from the Desplaines river, was lowered by the sanitary district trustees, with the consent of the canal commissioners and Governor Tanner yesterday and 200,000 cubic feet of water per minute rushed with a roar into the Desplaines river on its way to the Gulf of Mexico.

More Warships for Germany.

BERLIN, Jan. 17.—A bill for the increase of the navy has been submitted to the general council.

HIS WORD OF HONOR.

A Tale of the Blue and the Gray.

BY E. WERNER.

Copyright, 1894, by Robert Bonner's Sons.

CHAPTER V.

But Florence was silent. She only cast a beseeching glance at Edward; but the latter knew his advantage too well. He was aware that there was still one means of parting the two lovers, and did not delay using the weapon.

"You have come at an unfortunate time, Mr. Roland," he said, with cutting scorn. "I shall be at your service for the explanation you will probably demand at any hour tomorrow; today I regret that it is impossible. At my uncle's urgent desire, my marriage with his daughter takes place this very day; all the arrangements for the ceremony are completed; the justice of the peace will arrive in an hour. You probably understand that our affair must be deferred for the present."

Roland had turned deadly pale; he scarcely heard the last words; his eyes rested only on Florence. At last, with a violent effort he murmured, almost unintelligibly:

"You heard. What have you to say? Answer!"

Florence stood as if utterly crushed. For the first time she realized how unpardonable her weakness had been, and that the decision which she had regarded as a sacrifice to filial love was really an act of treason to the man to whom her promise and her faith were pledged. In the consciousness of this guilt, she did not even attempt to defend herself, but, instead of answering, burst into passionate weeping.

"I know enough!" said William in a hollow tone. "Farewell!"

A flash of triumph blazed in Edward's eyes, but he exulted too soon. The moment when William turned from her broke the spell which had held the young woman captive. She knew that if he crossed the threshold she would lose him forever, and, ere he reached it, she rushed forward, clasping his arm with both hands.

"William, don't leave me so! You see that I was deceived, ensnared, and that unfortunate promise was extorted from me beside my father's sick-bed. They gave me no choice, and constantly told me you had given me up, until I believed it."

The young officer paused; his voice still sounded harsh and bitter, but at least he lingered.

"Then choose now," he said. "Now the net that ensnared you is torn, and no one shall prevent your free decision. Choose whose wife you will be."

"Yours! Yours!" cried Florence with passionate fervor, as she rushed into his arms. "Protect me, William! You do not know how they have tortured me!"

"Yes, I see it," he said, bending toward her.

His resentment could not endure against this touching entreaty. Clasping her hand in his, he turned resolutely to Harrison.

"My fiancee's explanation is sufficient for me, and, I hope, for you also. As she has been the victim of a fraud—"

Edward started at the insult, and was about to answer, but Roland gave him no opportunity.

"Well, call it delusion, if the word sounds better. The fact remains the same, and also the part which you have played in it. You probably will not refuse to account to me for it, even though there must be delay. In this house and at the hour when the man who also was a father to you lies on his death-bed, such a dispute cannot be settled. So I yield to necessity and shall wait a more fitting season."

Edward looked as if he were on the point of rushing upon his enemy. The icy contempt in Roland's words enraged him even more than the insults themselves, but by exerting all his strength of will, he controlled himself.

"'A more fitting season!'" he repeated. "You are right, Mr. Roland. I, too, can wait, and perhaps the hour for settlement will come before you expect it."

He turned slowly toward the door. His game was lost; the prize for whose sake he had humbled himself to intrigue was snatched from him at the last moment, yet he did not quit the field like a vanquished man.

The menacing glance which rested on the young couple ought to have warned them; it was the look of a man sure of his vengeance and his ultimate triumph.

CHAPTER VI.

As the door closed behind her cousin, Florence uttered a sigh of relief. She had feared an instant outbreak of the quarrel, which seemed at an end, at least for the moment, but the last threatening words of the two men had not escaped her notice.

"What are you to do?" she asked anxiously. "What is the meaning of the concealed threats you exchanged with Edward? William, I beseech you—"

"Say no more," he interrupted gravely, almost sternly. "This is a matter which concerns us men alone. You hear that no explanation will take place at present. Let that suffice."

Florence looked timidly at him. The dark cloud on his brow was not caused by the dispute with Edward; she knew only too well what had occasioned it.

"You are angry with me—still!" she said, softly.

"No, I understand that you were deceived by the intrigue, that a father's last wish has a powerful influence, but I had expected my affianced wife to show more resolution, more confidence. I, too, remained for months with no message from you; I, too, heard that you assented to the separation your father decreed: but I did not believe it for an instant. What urged me hither was merely the torturing uncertainty, a vague presentiment of misfortune. Had I arrived a few hours later, I should have found you another's wife."

Florence bowed her head in conscious guilt. She had so dreaded this fate, yet had not had courage to boldly resist it. But for this intervention, she would indeed have fallen a victim to it.

"I am brave only when you are at my side," she confessed. "Do not reproach me, William! I was so utterly deserted; but now you are here again, and all will be well."

He gazed silently at the pale, sweet face raised so imploringly to his, and the reproof died on his lips. He loved this tender, yielding creature, with her gentle unselfishness, and knew that she was capable of any sacrifice as soon as a strong hand guided and directed her.

"Then show me that you can be brave and steadfast when only my love, not my presence, protects you," he replied. "I cannot stay with you as you expect; my leave of absence gives me only a few hours more. I must rejoin my regiment today, and God alone knows when I shall be permitted to see you again."

At his first words Florence's features expressed vague anxiety; now she started in sudden terror.

"You are going? You will leave me?"

"I must. I gave my colonel my word of honor to return at sunset. This was the sole condition on which he would permit me to ride here. I must keep this promise."

"And leave me alone, exposed to the full fury of the storm which Edward will raise. You mortally insulted him, flung the word 'fraud' into his face. He will avenge himself for it, and on me, if you are out of reach."

"Then come with me," said William, with desperate resolution. "Cast everything behind you and follow me at once. Our marriage has long been agreed upon. We shall find within our lines a justice of the peace and a priest, will perform the ceremony. Day after tomorrow—tomorrow even—you can be my wife. Then come what may, at least nothing can separate us."

"And my father?" replied the young girl, with a trembling voice. "Must he, in his last hour, call in vain for his child? Must a stranger's hand close his eyes? So long as he breathes, my place is at his side."

"You are right! I forgot. You are bound; but so, too, am I. You hear. I gave my word of honor, and where duty calls—"

"Duty? To whom? Your first, most sacred duty is to protect me. I shall stay. I have not the heart to leave my father. You will go, when you see that I cling to you in mortal anguish? William, our love is at stake!"

"And so is my honor! Florence! Merciful heaven! Hear me! Do not torture me longer by your entreaties! Do you not understand that I must go, even though the whole happiness of my life depended on my remaining!"

She really did not understand. The spoiled, idolized daughter of the rich planter could not believe that anything could be more valued than herself. She had had before her eyes the dangerous example of a passion which set aside duty and honor to gain her hand. Only an hour before she had heard the confession from Edward's lips. From William she always heard of honor and duty; and the old suspicion that there was a lack of love stirred in her heart. And yet, her whole soul drew her to the man who seemed so hard and unyielding—she would not lose him.

"William!" There was no reproach in her voice now. The tones were sweet and persuasive. "William, do not leave me; you do not know what I must encounter during the next few hours. My father will demand the fulfillment of my promise. If I refuse, the excitement will perhaps cause his death. Then I shall be wholly in Edward's power, and you do not know him as I do. He has a fiendish will, which can overcome all resistance. During his suit I have often felt like the bird spellbound by the gaze of the serpent. It knows that it is going to destruction, yet flutters into its jaws. Have you courage to leave me to this power? I—fear it."

With feminine instinct, she had touched the right chord. William's jealousy blazed up at the thought of the possibility suggested. He, too, knew Edward, and was aware that Edward would make every effort to wrest from him the prize which he had just regained. Florence was not created for a heroine. To leave her now was indeed to loose her. Torn from the sheltering trunk, she would flutter helplessly, like a vine in the storm, and become a prey to the tempest.

Roland made no reply, but a terrible conflict was raging in his soul. Now, for the first time, he understood the warning of Colonel Burney, who had been unwilling to let him go into temptation.

He had manfully resisted it, when Harrison assailed him; but it was very different to stand face to face with Florence, listen to her entreaties and see her tears. The young officer loved her with all the passion of his four-and-twenty years, and his strength threatened to forsake him.

Florence saw the conflict in his face, and, clinging to him like a timid dove, she pleaded more and more fervently, while the temptation stole nearer and nearer. After all, why was it necessary that he should return today? There was no battle in prospect; the soldier would not be missed from his post. What if he should stay merely until the morrow? Much—nay, everything—would be decided by that time. Death was already knocking at the door, and, as soon as Mr. Harrison passed from earth, his daughter would be free to follow her lover.

A pretext was easily found. Springfield was within the enemy's lines. The way might be obstructed; return impossible; any one of the hundred perils which threatened the daring rider might intervene. It was but a word which stood between him and his happiness—true, his word of honor.

Paving Stones and Revolutions.

The reasons why another reign of terror was not recently inaugurated in France is thus stated by the Chicago Times-Herald: "One hundred—fifty—twenty-five years ago these things would have set the mobs going. They would be throwing paving stones at one another! Paving stones? Ah, there is the secret of the whole matter. The mobs have been robbed of their ammunition. The people stand ready to hoist the red flag and run riot, but what are the bare hands against maces and muskets? The rioter stoops to pick up a paving stone, and his fingers scratch vainly along the smooth surface of the asphalt with which most of the streets of Paris are now paved. Ciel! He is helpless! He straightens up and stares vaguely about him for a moment, and then some commissary of police runs him in. Men and women follow, shouting and shaking their fists, but there are no paving stones for them to hurl. So the Republic continues to stand. It is wonderful! A little bit of asphalt prevents the killing of people by the scores, and history is robbed of whole chapters of bloody details. Vive le tar barrel!"

Dangerous Friction.

An insurance adjuster was sent to a Massachusetts town to adjust a loss on a building that had been burned.

"How did the fire start?" asked an acquaintance who met him on his homeward trip.

"I couldn't say certainly, and nobody seemed able to tell," said the adjuster, "but it struck me that it might have been the result of friction."

"What do you mean by that?" asked his friend.

"Well," said the insurance man, gravely, "friction sometimes comes from rubbing a ten-thousand-dollar policy on a five-thousand-dollar building."

BOERS STILL FALLING BACK.

Offer Little Opposition to the British Advance.

DUNDONALD WINS SKIRMISH.

Defeats a Boer Force and Captures a Number of Prisoners—Big Naval Guns in Action—War Has Now Lasted One Hundred Days.

London, Jan. 22.—A Durban special, dated Thursday night, says:

"It is reported here that Lord Dundonald has smashed a Boer convoy.

"Gen. Buller is said to be within twelve miles of Ladysmith, and Gen. Warren to be about six miles to the rear."

Spearman's Camp, Jan. 19.—Gen. Warren and Lord Dundonald are continuing a cautious advance, hourly expecting battle. There has been slight artillery firing here, at Ladysmith and at Chieveley. Natives report that the kopjes are full of Boers.

Spearman's Camp, Natal, Jan. 18.—The Boer trenches have been persistently shelled by the naval guns all day long. Small parties of Boers were seen at intervals, and a large force, from the direction of Ladysmith, was seen trekking toward the northwestward British position.

On the left, Gen. Warren's troops remained in possession of two prominent kopjes behind Spion kop. There was some Boer sniping, but it was ineffective.

London, Jan. 19.—General Buller has telegraphed the war office from Spearman's Camp, under date of last evening, as follows: "Lord Dundonald with a body of mounted troops came into action this afternoon with a force of Boers west of Acton Homes. After a fight he occupied several kopjes, which he is still holding. Field Cornet Heilbrun was killed, twenty Boers were killed or wounded and fifteen prisoners taken. Two British soldiers killed and two wounded.

London, Jan. 22.—The war office has given out nothing in regard to the Ladysmith situation since Sir Redvers Buller's message reporting Lord Dundonald's fight with the Boers near Acton Homes, and there were but few details in this. Gen. Buller says he has reinforced Lord Dundonald with a detachment of the First dragoons. Besides the dragoons Dundonald's force now consists of the Thirteenth hussars, two squadrons of the Fourteenth hussars, six squadrons of Imperial and South African light horse, Bethune's horse, Thorneycroft's mounted infantry and some Natal carbineers, probably about 2,500 mounted men all told. He has also several Maxims and Colt guns on galloping carriages.

The reports of heavy guns were heard on Thursday morning in the direction of Ladysmith. The cause and results are as yet unknown.

Planned by the Experts.

Lyttleton's brigade will demonstrate against or attack the Boer front after a heavy bombardment, supported probably by Hart's or Hildyard's brigade.

Gen. Warren will then attempt to turn the Boer right flank. The cavalry will strike towards Blaauwbank, on the roads to Tintwa and Van Renen's passes.

The Ladysmith garrison will make a determined sortie to the west and endeavor to debouch on Dewdrop.

The whole movement is considered as risky as it is audacious, but it is necessary. If it proves successful the position of the enemy will be a serious one. It will be attacked in front, on the flank and in the rear. If the plan fails the position of the British force will be equally bad.

War One Hundred Days Old.

Yesterday was the one hundredth day of the war.

With Gatacre and French there is no change. Kimberley reports "All well, but anxious for news." Mafeking the same.

Lord Methuen made another reconnaissance on the new Boer laager, but by the time his forces arrived on the scene the Boers had disappeared.

Buller's Position Is Stronger.

It appears that Gen. Buller's troops north of the Tugela number at least 22,000, and possibly 25,000, with fifty guns. His total forces, forming a great outer curve south and west of Ladysmith, probably number 40,000.

While Gen. Buller's forward operations, which began on Jan. 10, develop rather leisurely, the Boers appear to be fully aware that they must meet a strenuous assault. Balloon observers have roughly estimated that 10,000 Boers are using spade and pick in artificially strengthening positions which nature has rendered easy of defense.

War Office Is Confident.

There is nothing up to the present to support the story that the relief of Ladysmith is an accomplished fact, but it is learned on excellent authority that the situation is now regarded at the war office with entire confidence, and that the beleaguered town is considered practicaly relieved, although there is no attempt to underrate the danger and difficulty of Gen. Buller's task.

Death of G. W. Steevens.

A Ladysmith dispatch published in today's Chronicle announces the death from fever on Monday, Jan. 15, of George W. Steevens, the distinguished war correspondent of the Mail.

Is Ordered to Mobilize.

Formal orders have been issued to mobilize the Eighth division of the British army.

Hints at Another Defeat.

Paris, Jan. 22.—The Temps, in what seems to be an inspired article, says: "Who knows whether Sir Charles Warren, instead of turning one of the flanks of the republican army, is not going to fall in front of an army which has simply turned on a pivot itself? Who dares to guarantee that between Potgieter and Ladysmith the Boers are not in as well fortified positions as are those between Ladysmith and Colenso?"

Relief's Guns Cheer Ladysmith.

Ladysmith, Jan. 17.—Everything is quiet. The position is unchanged, and there is very little bombarding.

The welcome sounds of the guns of the relief column were heard yesterday from Colenso and Springfield. The heat is intense, but there is no increase of sickness.

Canadian Scouts Arrive.

Cape Town, Jan. 18.—A number of Canadians, including two experienced scouts, arrived here, and have offered their services for scouting purposes. They have paid their own expenses, and say there are hundreds of others anxious to follow them.

Deaths from Fever at Ladysmith.

Pietermaritzburg, Jan. 18.—A heliograph message from Gen. White at Ladysmith reports twenty deaths from fevers in the camp, from Jan. 15 to Jan. 17. He also reports that two men were wounded on Jan. 16 and two more on Jan. 17.

Adelbert Hay at Cape Town.

Cape Town, Jan. 17.—Adelbert S. Hay, the United States consul to the Transvaal, arrived here today. He will start for Pretoria on Saturday.

MASKED MEN USE EXPLOSIVES.

Peru, Ind., Jan. 22.—The Commercial bank of the town of Silver Lake, about twenty-five miles northeast of this city, was wrecked between 1 and 2 o'clock Friday morning by masked men, who blew up the vault and safe with nitroglycerin. The racksmen carried away about $4,000 in paper money. They were compelled to leave several sacks of silver, owing to a battle begun by citizens. These sacks contained $15,000.

The town's night watchman, William Price, was eating at a restaurant about two blocks from the bank, when he heard an explosion. In company with the restaurant keeper he started to investigate. In a moment a second explosion occurred, followed by three more. When the watchman and his companion reached the bank five masked men faced them and forced them back with drawn revolvers. The watchman immediately began shooting at the robbers. They returned the fire and backed toward the railway tracks, where their handcar was concealed. The fight was kept up for three blocks. The noise of the shooting brought many citizens to the scene. The safe-blowers finally made a dash for the handcar, and by rapid shooting kept the citizens at bay until they could make their escape.

W. W. Herric, a citizen, was shot in the right arm. One of the burglars was also shot.

The bank building is a two-story brick. The explosion cracked the walls, and the interior is a mass of wreckage. The bank is owned by Adam Stout & Co. The handcar was stolen at North Manchester, to which place the robbers were traced.

Smallpox in the Jail.

Owensboro, Ky., Jan. 22.—Several cases of smallpox have been discovered in the jail here, and great excitement prevails among the prisoners. Judge Owens has refused to allow Jailer John Ashby to come into court. There are about 240 prisoners in jail, ten of whom are United States prisoners.

Indicted Miners Sent to Vienna.

Marion, Ill., Jan. 22.—Friday nine miners held here, indicted for the killing of four negroes in Carterville, July 1 last, were taken to Vienna, where they go on a change of venue for trial. They were guarded by a portion of Company B, Fourth Illinois.

Will Admit American Fruit.

Berne, Jan. 22.—The bundesrath abrogated the previous regulations, granted permission for the importation of dried American fruits, and also fresh fruits, on condition of their examination at the Basle custom house.

American Goods Released.

London, Jan. 22.—The foreign office has notified Ambassador Choate that a portion of the seized American cargoes has been released. It will be landed at Lourenco Marques and delivered to the consignees.

Confirmed by Miss Anthony.

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 22.—Miss Susan B. Anthony has officially confirmed the report that she is to resign as president of the National American Woman Suffrage association.

Racine Has a $40,000 Fire.

Racine, Wis., Jan. 22.—The Common Sense Trunk company's factory was burned at 2 o'clock Friday morning, at a loss of more than $40,000.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON IV, JANUARY 28.
MATT. 3: 13, 4: 11.

The Baptism and Temptation of Jesus—"This Is My Beloved Son, in Whom I am Well Pleased"—Matt. 3: 17—Prepare for the Best Life.

13. "Then cometh Jesus." Probably in January, A. D. 27, after John had been preaching six months; from Nazareth, his home in "Galilee," being about 30 years old (Luke 3: 23). "To Jordan." Probably at the ford near Jericho and not far from Bethabara (John 1: 28). "To be baptized of (by) him." Why did Jesus wish to be baptized? It showed where Jesus stood in relation to the preaching of John.

14. "John forbade him." The imperfect tense in the original implies that John was about to forbid him, as R. V., "would have hindered him." "I have need." I am the sinful but repentant one. I am the inferior, only the doorkeeper, the preparer of the way.

15. "Suffer." Permit. "Thus it becometh us to fulfill righteousness." For the reasons given above (v. 13). It was the right thing to do.

16. "Went up straightway out of the water" and up the bank of the river. He was praying as he went (Luke 3: 21). Thus it was when he was transfigured. "The heavens were opened." In Mark, R. V., "rent asunder." All that had hidden from him the view of his heavenly home and his Father above was rent asunder, and he saw into the very heaven of heavens.

17. "Lo, a voice from heaven." Three times during our Lord's earthly ministry was heard a voice from the heaven: (1) at his baptism; (2) at his transfiguration (Mark 9: 7); (3) in the courts of the temple during Passion Week (John 12: 28). "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Thus God endorsed him and his mission, and showed to the Jewish nation that he was the Messiah. It must also have strengthened and confirmed the human Jesus as to his nature and his work.

1. "Then was Jesus led up [illegible] he Spirit." It was just after his bapt[illegible] and he was full of the Holy Spirit (Luke 4: 1). It was some impulse of this S[illegible]it that impelled him to go (Mark 1: [illegible] "Into the wilderness." Where in sol[illegible]de he could be absorbed in intense meditation, and fight for himself the great battle with temptation. Mark says he was with the wild beasts" (i. e. without human companionship or help). "To be tempted of the devil." For the whole forty days, according to Luke. It was not merely one sudden assault. The three temptations were either a summary of the whole forty days' experience, or the final assaults at the close.

2. "Fasted forty days and forty nights." Being tempted all the time (Mark, Luke). He was probably thinking, praying, planning. "He was afterward an hungered." When the reaction has begun, hunger asserts its claims with a force so terrible that (as has been shown again and again in human experience) such moments are fraught with the extremest peril to the soul.—Cam. Bible.

3. "The tempter came to him." In this hour, when his desire for food was strongest, and his powers of resistance weakest. "If thou be (art) the Son of God," if you really are God's Son, and hence are possessed of miraculous powers, "command that these stones," probably pointing to one of the small round, flat stones lying near him, which looked like their loaves, "be made bread," and thus satisfy your hunger, and at the same time prove that you have the powers of the true Son of God.

4. "It is written." In Deut. 8: 3, quoted from the Greek translation. "Man shall not live by bread alone." By food for the body.

5. "Taketh him up into the holy city." Jerusalem, literally, or in spirit. "On a (the) pinnacle," or rather, wing, "of the temple." "Herod's temple had two wings, the northern and southern, of which the southern was higher and grander, hence probably the wing."

6. "If thou be the Son of God." Thus planting a doubt in his mind. "Cast thyself down." Not into the valley of Hinnom, but into the court of the temple among the crowds. "For it is written," in Psa. 91: 11, Septuagint (Greek) version then in common use. "The devil can cite Scripture for his purpose." "He shall give his angels charge," etc. Satan's meaning is, You can do this act in perfect safety, for you rest on God's promise, which cannot be broken, and you honor God by your perfect confidence in his Word.

7. "It is written (Deut. 6: 16) again." On the other hand, as explaining the words you quote. "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God." That is, "distrust God or test his power presumptuously." A case is described, Ex. 17: 1-7.—Lutheran Com. It is to demand that God should fulfill his promises to those to whom they are not made, and in circumstances in which they do not apply or else appear to have dishonored his Word.

8. "The devil taketh him up," probably in vision or imagination, as there is no mountain from which can be seen with the natural eye "all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them." Not only the splendid courts and cities like Rome, but the kingdoms of literature, art and culture in Greece; the "barbaric pearls and gold" of the Orient; and possibly a vision of the future.

9. "All these things will I give thee." In a measure Satan did have these things. Christ later called him the "prince of this world." On everything he had stamped his seal. "If thou wilt fall down and worship me." Satan does not mean a bald act of worship, a bending in outward reverence to the grim king of darkness.

10. "Get thee hence, Satan." It was by this proposal that Satan revealed himself. This was the Ithuriel's spear that made everything it touched appear in its true nature, as Milton represents it in the temptation in Eden. "For it is written (Deut. 6: 13), Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God." The first and great commandment. There is none other worthy of worship, and there is no other way of gaining the true kingdom of God.

11. "Then the devil leaveth him." "For a season" (Luke 4: 13). He was tempted again and again; at last in Gethsemane and on the cross. "And, behold, angels." Spiritual beings; probably in visible form on this occasion. "Ministered" most naturally means "supplied him with foods," as in the case of Elijah (1 Kings 19: 5); and with all spiritual support, comfort and companionship.

WISE OR OTHERWISE.

The pleasures attained without labor are of short duration.

One half of the world ought to be what the other half is not.

A man's ideal figure usually has a dollar mark in front of it.

Many a good man has worried himself crazy over a pointless joke.

Very few husbands are half as good as their wives imagine they are.

No man ever attains such a high position but some one will call him down.

The things that come to those who wait are seldom what they started in to wait for.

The less you talk the less likely you are to choke if compelled to swallow your words.

Actions speak louder than words, but various constructions may be placed on them.

Ask some men how they feel and they will entertain you for an hour with their woes.

The more experience a man has in making good resolutions the poorer the quality he turns out.

Some people never succeed in finding out which side of their bread is buttered until they drop it.

It requires a good deal of diplomacy to enable a man to back down with dignity after going too far.

A good many prayers are made in private that his satanical majesty would like to have answered.

The cheeky individual usually gets there, but it is generally at the expense of some one's good opinions.

The selfish individual who lives for himself alone is usually the only person in the world to mourn his demise.

Probably the majority of men would be lazy were it not for the fact that they must either work or die of starvation.

CHURCH AND CLERGY.

The Rev. Dr. John Watson (Ian Maclaren) is to be the next moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church in England.

The Boston Ministers' union will ask congress for legislation to secure lower postal rates on library books sent from the universities for home study.

The work of raising $1,000,000 to perfect the plans of making a theological university out of Union Theological seminary, New York, has been begun.

The dean of Durham, who occupies the wealthiest deanery in the Church of England, receives the equivalent of $15,000 a year, with a fine old residence.

The Christian Register of Boston says that Thanksgiving day was particularly joyous throughout New England this year, as it marked an advance in wages of the mill owners in all the great centers of population.

The Rev. Dr. William Nixon, pastor emeritus of St. John's Free church, Montrose, is the oldest surviving Presbyterian clergyman in Great Britain, and is known as the father of the Free Church of Scotland. He was ordained in 1831.

One of the most remarkable examples of an elective office becoming hereditary occurs in the recent designation of the Rev. Dr. Norman Macleod to be the next moderator of the Church of Scotland general assembly. He will be the third of that name and the fifth member of the family to hold that high office, having been born in the famous manse of Morven, of which his father and grandfather were ministers.

PROGRESS AND REFORM.

The Y. M. C. A. announces an aggregate gain in real property of nearly $1,000,000 during the past year. The number of association buildings is 344, a net gain of ten.

The largest Bible class formed in Great Britain is at Bristol, England. The class was organized nineteen years ago at the Old Market Wesleyan chapel, and nearly 10,000 persons have passed through it. The present membership is 800, and the managing staff consists of 100 officers.

A new and reliable estimate gives an interesting comparative view of the world's great religions. The number of their adherents are: Christianity, 477,000,000; worship of ancestors and Confucianism, 256,000,000; Hinduism, 190,000,000; Mohammedanism, 176,000,000; Buddhism, 148,000,000; Taoism, 43,000,000; Shintoism, 14,000,000; Polytheism, 117,000,000; Judaism, 7,000,000.

A number of Waldensian congregations were expelled from Italy in 1699. They found their way to Wurtemburg, where they afterward became a part of the Protestant church of that churchly kingdom. There are now ten Waldensian congregations in Wurtemburg, numbering 3,000 persons, and these will celebrate this fall the two hundredth anniversary of their settlement there.

Sleeping with the hair pinned up tightly is not only bad for the circulation, but it is said to prevent the hair from growing.

Albuquerque, N. M., has the record of the greatest number of sunshiny days in the year of any town on the American continent.

The little town of Turner, Kan., with its 400 inhabitants, supplied three soldiers when the call for volunteers was issued, and all of them died of disease.

Sixty-six mining companies at Johannesburg, South Africa, have suspended operations on account of the war, and as a result many families are destitute.

Phonotypewriter.

An Englishman, Mr. William Marvin, is the latest claimant for the credit of having perfected a practicable "phonotypewriter." It will be the invention of the century if it fulfills all that Mr. Marvin stoutly claims for it. It is an instrument for recording spoken language, and will reproduce on paper and in a readable manner anything that may be uttered in its presence. A sermon, a speech, legal evidence, spoken in any language, is recorded by it on paper which can be sent by mail like an ordinary letter or document, and read by the recipient as easily as a typewritten communication.

A PROMINENT CHICAGO WOMAN SPEAKS.

Prof. Roxa Tyler, of Chicago, Vice-President Illinois Woman's Alliance, in speaking of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, says: "I suffered with a severe cold this winter which threatened to run into pneumonia. I tried different remedies but I seemed to grow worse and the medicine upset my stomach. A friend advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and I found it was pleasant to take and it relieved me at once. I am now entirely recovered, saved a doctor's bill, time and suffering, and I will never be without this splendid medicine again. For sale by J. L. Harr.

Thirsts in Infants.

It is a mistake to suppose that because milk is a liquid food it is at the same time a drink which is capable of satisfying the thirst of infants. Although milk appeases hunger, it makes thirst more intense after it has remained some time in stomach and digestion of it has begun. It is thirst which causes healthy, breast-nourished infants to cry for long periods of time in many instances. There are many cases of indigestion due to weakness or insufficiency of the child's gastric juice, which would be greatly benefited or even cured if the child were allowed an occasional drink of water.—Medical Classic.

There are inventions and inventions but the simplest cream separator we have ever seen is 'The Western'. It's simply a can, that will hold 10 or 20 galons, with glass gages down the side, and a faucet at the bottom. At the top is a cover, with a strainer attached. You need only put in milk, add a certain per cent of water, let stand for half or three quarters of an hour, draw off the milk through the faucet in the bottom until the cream is reached, and there you are. If it will do what is claimed for it, it is a wonder. A. H. Burke has the sale of them and you can see one by calling at Schoper's office.

The farmers of Klemme and vicinity are cordially invited to attend the Farmers' Institute meeting which will convene in Garner on Wednesday, Jan. 31st and continues and conclude Feb. 2. Meeting will be called to order Wednesday, January 31st, at 1 o'clock sharp. Speakers from abroad have been secured and a good time is assured every body. We hope all our readers who can spare the time will attend. It will be worth the time and expense to meet your neighbors and get acquainted. There is a little too much of the inclination of our friends to stay at home. These long winter evenings can be profitably employed visiting and talking over the plans for next year. Attend the Institute next week, and if you have profited by your labor and experience the past year, do not be afraid to tell your neigibors of it. Remember the dates.

As few of Oom Paul's followers are familiar enough with history to know that in war it is the side with the most men and the heaviest guns that usualy wins, they were doubtless much cheered by his assertion that Providence is on their side and that they are bound to win.

COUNTY NEWS FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.

GARNER.

E. P. Fox is in Chicago this week.

M. A. Fell returned from his trip to Minnesota last Friday.

P. T. Burke, of Belmond, was in town on business Tuesday.

Mrs. M. A. Fell visiting over Sunday with friends at Klemme.

Herman Schleisinger is very sick at the home of Jos. German.

F. E. Blackstone was at Forest City one day last week on legal business.

C. E. Stevens went to Freeport. Illinois, on land business Monday uight.

Kelley & Bush are painting and decorating the office rooms in the new Bell block.

James McGuire, of Belmond was visiting with friends in Garner a few days this week.

Frank Yarish and Ed. Duffy have formed a partnership in the machine and implement business.

Elry Purcell and Lizzie Walton were married Thursday evening last. Rev. Albertson tied the knot.

Mrs. L. D. Byers returned Saturday from Missouri, where she has been visiting C.H. Gove and family.

County Attorney Wichman Sheriff Gartin and Supt Schell are the first to occupy their new offices in the new court house

Daniel Kelley is now a permanent fixture in his new office over Katter's store. If you want law in "chunks"—take the elevator.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith of Winona Minn., have been visiting with friends and relatives in Garner, the guest of her Aunt Mrs. Robt. Elder.

The Schneider Co., have moved their dry goods and clothing department into the brick building, formerly occupied by the Bell Clothing Company. They have now one of the neatest dry-goods stores in Garner.

A. C. Ripley and J. E. Wichman are in Des Moines looking after the interests of the East Side in the Court house case, which will be taken up by the supreme court this session.

W. C. Amsden has made quite a little improvement in his drug store the past few weeks. He has put in a new gas lighting plant, and on the north side has put in sliding glass doors in front of the shelving. The store presents a neat and tasty appearance.

Last Thursday we visited with the inmates of the county court house. E. F. Brummund and his able deputy, Geo. Asplin, were more than busy at the auditor's office but stopped work long enough to say hello! Klemme. H. V. Reed and Mrs. Reed were "at home" in the treasurer's office, and while Herb's smile was not as broad as it was before election, it was none the less of the how-are-you-old-man sort. Ole Peterson told us to send him the TIMES, and of course we will do so. It was a matter of surprise to him that we had not done so before. L. Womeldorf was busy in the clerk's office, preparing his docket for the next term of court. Our Big (little) sheriff threatened to run us in, but when I remarked that he would want votes a couple of years hence he withdrew the charge and accepted our apology. Supt. Schell we missed but will probably see him later. Take it all around, the gang is about the best behaved lot of mortals we have seen in a long time. May their shadows never grow less. The committee having charge of past due taxes are about through with their work. When they hand in their report there will be to the credit of the county about $10.-000 less the commission of the experts. We venture to say that hereafter there will be more careful attention given to the proper listing of monies and credits. Supervisor Fox is establishing a precedent as supervisor that will be hard to follow. When he went into office there were a great many irregularities that do not now exist. Being a man of great energy; chuck full of push, he has been untiring in his work for Hancock county along many lines. The great improvements in the roads and highways of the county is due in a great measure to the following of his plans and much of the work has been personally conducted by himself. We do not give Mr. Fox all the credit, for without the co-operation of the board he would be powerless. The county funds, with the present guardians, will be used to the best possible advantage. Let the good work go on.

GOODELL.

Mr. Fry lost a valuable cow last week.

The revival meetings at the U. B. church still continue.

Mr. Entrikin and wife of Cornelia visited relatives here Sunday.

Mrs. Whitaker has a brother and sister visiting her from Dows.

J. P. Larson, of Klemme, was attending to business here last week.

A minstrel troop will give a play here in the Opera hall Saturday evening.

The dance was well attended Friday evening. Good order prevailed "as usual."

Ed. Remer, of Klemme, was visiting at Mr. Wesenberg's the latter part of the week.

Mr. Schneider, of Garner, took charge of the bank in the absense of cashier Sweigard, last week.

Bill Cronin, of Thornton, passed through Goodell Sunday with a large drove of horses enroute for South Dakota.

Mrs. Elmer Kinney met with a very painful accident. She will doubtless be confined indoors the rest of the week.

Geo. Ruka received a kick from Prof. Houghton's horse. Dr. Gilbert is in attendance. He is now pronounced out of danger.

GERMANTOWN.

Rev. Wellemeyer is still at Ft. Dodge.

Supt. Schell visited the Center school Tuesday.

Klemme was well represented at the church last Sunday.

Ed. Griffin has expanded and purchased the Ridder place.

HAPPILY WEDDED.

One of the most enjoyable social events of the season occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Fiala, Tuesday evening Jaunary 16, when their daughter Rosa, was joined in marriage to Isaac Ptacek, of Duncan. Miss Stella Hajlik acted as bridesmaid and Joe. Houdak was "best man." About 130 invited guests were present and after the ceremony partook of the bountiful repast prepared for the occasion. When the remains of the feast had been cleared away, old and young indulged in dancing, and not until the beginning of day did the mirth and jollity cease. The happy couple were the reciptents of many valuable and beautiful presents, a list of which has been handed us, but lack of time and space must be laid over until next week. We join with the host of friends of the happy couple in wishing them a long and happy life.

STRANGE TALES TERS.

The humors of examinatio were illustrated by Dr. Haig who, speaking at the City of college upon the responsibility rested upon examiners in wei fragments of knowledge, said tha question, "What are the Chil. Hundreds?" once received the re "Small animals which abound in s. great numbers in cheese." The quiry "What is a cherub?" elicited its turn, the answer, "An immo ing of uncertian shape."

In the course of an address de one afternoon at Mount Hermon Moody referred to a wooded elev as "Temptation Point." One of trustees remarked that he had ne heard the spot called by that name be fore. "Neither have I," the speaker replied. "Why did you hit upon such a name as that?" came the inquiry. "Oh," said Mr. Moody, "because I thought that some day some one might be tempted to erect a chapel for us on that point." The remark was duly repeated and his wish has since been gratified, for a beautiful stone chapel now adorns the little hill.

A man was discussing literature with a second-hand book seller in Paternoster row the other da and a bystander overheard the lowing conversation: "By the by, wi is the author of 'Ecce Homo?'" The bookseller paused for a moment and rubbed his chin reflectively. "Well," he said, "that's hardly a fair question. There's only a few of us as have the secret, and its not supposed to be known." The inquirer immediately apologized for his rash question, and the bookseller forgave him.

Here is a story of Jennie Lee, the popular "Poor Jo" of the London stage Miss Lee was playing "Jo" in Scotland. She was in the midst of the long and harrowing death scene of "Poor Jo." The stage was darkened and the limelight illumined the pale features of the death-stricken boy. People were sobbing all over the house. Suddenly to her consternation, Miss Lee hear the limelight man address her in brawny Scotch whisper, audible to half the house. "Dee quick, Miss Lee dee quick," he roared softly; "the limelsght's gin oot!" She did "die quick," but it was for the purpose of making a speech to that limelight man, which he said he would never forget.

But few women have the ability and pluck to successfully carry on a farm when death claims the husband and father; still we note with pleasure the success which has attended the efforts of Mrs. M. W. Spofford who lives a short distance west of Rockford. With the aid of her two daughters, one ite young, and the help of a man three days in the spring and for two months during haying and harvest, she has the past year raised 800 bushels of oats, 125 bushels of flax, 1,200 bushels of corn sold cream to the amount of $150, poultry $15, hogs $150, and eggs $40. The 28 acres of corn was all picked by Miss Dorr her daughter and Miss Lillie Mc Cade. This is a most honorable record. —Rockford Register.

Before I agree to undertake your defence," said the eminent criminal lawyer who had been called in, "you will have to be perfectly frank with me and tell me the whole truth. Did you embezzle the $20,000 you are accused of having taken?"

"Yes, sir," replied the accused man. "I'll not attempt to conceal the fact from you. I stole every cent of it.

"How much of it have you still?"

"It's all gone but about $10.

"Young man," said the eminent lawyer, buttoning his overcoat about him and putting on his gloves, "you'd better plead guilty and throw yourself on the mercy of the Court."

"I'll do it if you say so, sir. What are you going to charge me for the vice?"

"Ten dollars."

THOUGHTS.

When we love it is the heart that judges.

Children need models rather than critics.

We always lose the friendship of those who lose our esteem.

The direction of the mind is more important than its progress.

What can one put into a mind which is filled and filled with itself?

Gravity is only the bark of the tree of wisdom; but it preserves it.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN.

Flatirons, when new, must be heated very slowly, or they may crack.

New York spent $200,000 last year in inspecting and cleaning bakeries.

All fruits are better if sugar is added when they are first put on to cook.

Milkmaids get more money in Switzerland if they have musical voices.

A patent glove-buttoner is bringing $5,000 a year to its woman inventor.

Lamp chimneys are better if cleaned with alcohol instead of soap and water.

MORE EXPANSION.

United States to Acquire the Danish West Indies.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—Captain W. V. Christmas, of Copenhagen, who has been at the Hotel Manhattan for a few days, has gone to Washington. He is one of the accredited agents of the Danish government in the pending negotiations looking to a sale to the United States of the islands of St. Thomas, St. John and St. Croix, known as the Danish West Indies. Captain Christmas said he believed the negotiations in progress would soon reach a satisfactory termination. The price first demanded was $13,000,000, then it was reduced to $7,500,000, but now the Danish government is willing to accept $4,000,000, which sum will about enable the authorities of Denmark to pay the colonial indebtedness.

"Denmark," said Captain Christmas, "cannot afford to be on bad terms with the United States. Several European powers want the Danish West Indies, but King Christian prefers they should be the property of the United States. In the event of the construction of the Nicaraguan or Panama canal the islands will be of special value to the American people as a coaling station. I am well acquainted with the islands, of which my grandfather, Admiral Christian, was governor for many years. I believe the islands will prove valuable property to the United States and just as soon as the matters reach a certain stage I shall disappear, and negotiations will be concluded by Constantins Brun, the Danish minister at Washington. Henry White, a member of the American legation at London, made frequent trips to Copenhagen on this matter, and the affair is about closed."

EXCITEMENT IN GERMANY.

Government is Interpellated on Seizure Question.

BERLIN, Jan. 18.—In the reichstag an interpellation signed by Herr Moeller, national liberal, and all the members of the reichstag, except the social democrats and independents, was introduced. It was as follows:

"What steps have the federal government taken in regard to the seizure of German ships by agents of the English government?"

In view of the excited state of public opinion concerning the seizures, the interpellation will probably be speedily answered. The Hamburg Nachrichten advises German reprisals against Great Britain and expresses its belief that a coalition of neutral powers would be feasible. It goes so far as to suggest that Germany should head such a coalition. It is asserted by a high authority that if England much longer delays the satisfaction which Germany demands, the emperor would participate in a coalition movement to compel her to respect the commercial rights of neutrals at sea.

GEN. JOE WHEELER HAS RESIGNED

Gives Up His Position in the Army and Will Re-enter Congress.

FLORENCE, Ala., Jan. 18.—The first absolute news of the intended course of General Joe Wheeler came in a private letter to Hon. William J. Wood, a personal friend of the general. The letter, which is dated Manila, December 2, says:

"I saw in papers from the United States that the commissioner of the land office was again recommending that our mineral lands be sold under the act of March 3, 1893, and I wrote to him urging that this be not done until we get our school lands out of it. I expect to leave in a few days for the United States and will devote myself to getting the bill through, which I think I can do now. I could not have left here while the campaign was on without being subjected to severe criticism. I have resigned my position in the army."

BULLER MAKES ADVANCE.

Occupies the Hills Beyond Pelgieter's Drift.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—General Buller completely surprised the Boers and occupied the hills beyond Pelgieter's drift, fifteen miles west of Colenso, on January 10. This intelligence is contained in a Times dispatch, dated yesterday. He followed up the movement by shelling the Boer trenches. This news completely disposes of the statement that Sir Charles Warren's force went in the direction of Weenan, and it tends greatly to restore confidence in General Buller's tactics. The supposition that he had divided his forces into three columns is now seen to be erroneous, as General Buller's forces are concentrated.

AGAINST ROBERTS.

Special Committee Against His Holding Seat in Congress.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The special committee of the house to investigate the case of Brigham H. Roberts of Utah, has reached a conclusion. On the polygamous status of Roberts the committee is unanimous in the affirmative. On the question of procedure to be adopted the committee is divided. A majority, consisting of all members except Littlefield, of Maine, and Dearmond, of Missouri, favored exclusion at the outset. Littlefield and Deamond will make a minority report favorable to seating Roberts on his prima facie rights and then expelling him.

Bombardment at Mafeking.

PRETORIA, Jan. 13.—As a resut of the bombardment of Mafeking yesterday the British fort at Eastward was demolished and the British retired. One Boer was wounded.

Mason's Pure Food Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Among the bills introduced in the senate is one by Mason to prevent the adulteration of foods and drugs. It creates a bureau of chemistry in the agricultural department and provides for food inspection by that department.

COLSON KILLED THREE MEN.

The Tragedy Occurred in a Hotel Lobby at Frankfort, Ky.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 17.—A shocking tragedy in which the lives of three prominent men were sacrificed and that of a fourth hangs by a slender thread, while two others miraculously escaped with painful injuries, occurred here at 1 o'clock yesterday. The principals in the tragedy were ex-Congressman David G. Colson, of Middlesboro, and Lieutenant Ethelbert Scott, of Somerset. Scott was shot six times by Colson and almost instantly killed. Luther W. Demaree, assistant postmaster at Shelbyville, an innocent bystander, was shot three times and died instantly. Charles Julian, another bystander, was shot and died a half hour later, and Captain B. B. Golden, of Barboursville, commonwealth's attorney of the Twenty-seventh judicial district, was shot in the back and is not expected to live. Colonel Colson himself was shot twice in the arm. Harry McEwing, of Louisville, was shot in the foot, and W. O. Ridpatch, of Chicago, sustained a broken leg by the body of Scott falling against him as it rolled down the stairway. The shooting took place in the lobby of the Capital hotel. Colson was colonel in the Fourth Kentucky regiment and Scott was a captain in the same regiment. Trouble arose between them and before the regiment was mustered out Colson was shot by Scott.

IN SOUTH AFRICA.

What the British Troops Are Doing at Various Places.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—A dispatch from Sterkstrom, dated January 15, reports Gatacre's troops made a demonstration beyond Molteno, in the direction of Stormberg, in the belief that the Boers intended to seize Molteno. The Burghers were not sighted and the British remained at Molteno. The arrivals from the Stormberg estimate that there are 4,500 Boers at that place, mostly revolted colonists and Free Staters. President Steyn's brother is the land drost. French continues to shell the Boer positions, but nothing decisive has taken place. Evidence accumulates that Methuen's blunder at Magersfontein lost him the confidence of his entire force to such an extent that it is declared that it is doubtful if the troops would follow him in another attack on the Boers. The war office is understood to be in possession of a letter written by General Wauchope, the night before the battle, saying it would be the last letter he would write, as he had been asked to perform an impossible task and he had either to obey or surrender his sword. The immediate change in command of force may therefore be expected. It is anticipated in some quarters that Lieut. Gen. Tucker will succeed Methuen.

THE BUBONIC PLAGUE.

Said to Be No Recoveries Among Victims ot Honolulu.

HONOLULU, Jan. 9, via San Francisco, Jan. 17.—Up to date twenty-two deaths have occurred from the bubonic plague. Practically every case so far has proved fatal. There have been no recoveries, but hopes are entertained of four cases now in hospital. About 2,000 people have been removed from the infected quarter and are now herded in quarantine camps. The council of state has appropriated $20,000 for a garbage crematory and $250,000 with which to put the city in a sanitary condition and guard against the spread of the plague. No passengers are allowed to depart until they have spent ten days in quarantine, under directions of the United States consul general. Incoming steamers cannot put any passengers ashore, nor can anyone board them. Hence many tourists who are here are unable to get away. A shotgun quarantine has been established on the island of Kauai, and no vessel or passenger is allowed to land. On December 31 it was decided to destroy infected houses. Since then five sections of Chinatown have been destroyed. One of these included the principal Chinese joss house in the city, where a Chinaman was found sick with the plague.

BURGHERS ALL ORDERED OUT.

President Kruger Appeals to All Fighting Men to Come Out.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—A Daily Mail dispatch, dated Lorenzo Marquez, January 13, says:

"President Kruger has issued a proclamation ordering all burghers to the front. The Volksstem, the Transvaal official organ, suggests that the moment the British crossed the border the gold industry should be irretrievably destroyed. President Kruger has issued a circular, dated January 8, to Boer commandants and burghers, urging them to show more energy in the Transvaal cause."

BLOODY BATTLE.

Boers Make a Rush On British Position, But Are Repulsed.

RENSBERG, Cape Colony, Jan. 17.—The Boers attempted to rush a hill held by a company of Yorkshires and New Zealanders, but they were repulsed at the point of the bayonet. The Boers had twenty-one killed and fifty wounded.

France Making Guns for Boers.

"After two days inquiry I do not hesitate to assert that the Schneider company is not only working night and day in the manufacture of guns and ammunition for the Boers, but it has already packed, ready for shipment to the Transvaal, six heavy guns of large calibre. The workmen told me that ere long thirty additional guns would be dispatched to the Boers."

STORYETTES.

Sir Henry Erskine once quelled a riot in Edinburgh when Mrs. Siddons was playing to a crowded house in the largest theater in the town. A surly fellow in the pit refused to sit down, and a howl went up from all around him. The crowd was likely to do him and the house a damage, when Sir Henry came to the front of his box with the quiet statement: "Pray excuse the gentleman; don't you see it is only a tailor resting himself?" The man sat down without further urging.

General Buller was once in company with Lord Charles Beresford coming down the Nile, and as their boat approached the First Cataract a sharp discussion arose as to which was the proper channel to take. The soldier advised one, the sailor another, but in the end Buller's channel was followed, with perfect success. "You see, I was right," the general exclaimed, exultantly. "What of that?" retorted Beresford; "I knew it was the right one myself, and only recommended the other because I knew you would oppose whatever I said."

On one occasion there was an argument going on before the United States supreme court in Washington, and the attorneys were using a map to illustrate the case. One attorney, in the course of his presentation of the case, pointed to the map in question, and was proceeding to dilate upon the same, when Justice Gray asked him what the map was. "Why, your honor, it is just a bird's-eye view of the land in controversy," answered the counselor. "Well," said Justice Gray, "I wish you would bring the map a little nearer; I haven't got a bird's eye."

When Otis Skinner, the actor, played an engagement in Memphis recently, his matinee performance of "The Liers" was graced by the patronage of a bevy of the season's most attractive debutantes. After the curtain went down the manager escorted the debutantes back of the stage, where they met and conversed with the actor. "We enjoyed everything very much," said one of them; "but, do you know, Mr. Skinner, we could scarcely hear a word you said?" "Now, that's certainly strange," replied the actor; "I could hear everything you ladies said."

A MINNESOTA FARMER

Does Well in Western Canada.

VIRDEN, Man., Nov. 18, 1899.

Hon. Clifford Sifton, Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, Canada—Sir: Thinking that my experience in Manitoba might be both useful and interesting to my fellow-countrymen in the United States who may be looking to Manitoba and the northwest with the intention of settling there, I have much pleasure in stating that through information received from Mr. W. F. McCreary, immigration commissioner at Winnipeg, I was induced to visit Manitoba in February, 1898. When I called upon Mr. McCreary he spared no pains to give me all the information, etc., in his possession, the result of which was that I came here with a letter of introduction from him to the secretary of the Virden Board of Trade. That gentleman provided me with a competent land guide, and, although there was considerable snow on the ground, I had no difficulty in selecting three homesteads for myself and sons. Having made the necessary homestead entries at the land office in Brandon, I returned to my home in Lyon county, Minnesota, and came back here in May following, accompanied by one of my boys, bringing with us two teams of horses, implements, etc. Our first work was to erect a temporary shanty and stable, after which we broke and leveled seventy-five acres and put up thirty tons of hay. I went back to Minnesota about July 20, leaving my son here. I returned in October, bringing my family with me. I found that the land we had acquired was of good quality, being a strong clay loam with clay subsoil. Last spring I sowed 100 acres in wheat and fifty acres in oats and barley. (Seventy-five acres of this grain was sowed on "go-back" plowed last spring.) My crop was thrashed in October, the result being over 2,700 bushels of grain in all. Wheat averaged fifteen bushels per acre and graded No. 1 hard, but that which was sown on land other than sod ("go-back") went twenty four and one-half bushels per acre.

To say that I am well pleased with the result of my first year's farming operations in Manitoba does not adequately express my feelings, and I have no hesitation in advising those who are living in districts where land is high in price to come out here, if they are willing to do a fair amount of work. I am ten miles from Virden, which is a good market town, and nine miles from Hargrave, where there are two elevators. This summer I erected a dwelling house of native stone and bought a half-section of land adjoining our homesteads, for which I paid a very moderate price. There are still some homesteads in this district, and land of fine quality can be purchased from the Canadian Pacific Railway company at $3.50 per acre on liberal terms. Good water is generally found at a depth of from fifteen to twenty feet. I have 175 acres ready for crop next year.

The cost of living here is about the same as in southern Minnesota. Some commodities

I Had a Bad Cough

"I had a bad cough for six weeks and could not find any relief whatever. I read what a wonderful remedy Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was for coughs and I bought a bottle. Before I had taken a quarter of it my cough had entirely left me."—L. Hawn, Newington, Ont., May 3, 1899.

Quickly Cures Colds

Neglected colds always lead to something serious. They run into chronic bronchitis which pulls down your general health and deprives you of sleep; or they end in genuine consumption with all its uncertain results.

Don't wait, but take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral just as soon as you begin to cough. A few doses will cure you then. But it cures old colds, too, only it takes a little more time. We refer to such diseases as bronchitis, asthma, whooping-cough, consumption, and hard winter coughs.

If you've just taken cold a 25 cent bottle is all you'll need. For harder cases a 50 cent bottle is better. For chronic troubles, and to keep on hand, the $1.00 bottle is most economical.

Seaport of the South.

It has long been evident that the rapidly increasing movement of grain and merchandise towards the southern seaboard would demand an increase of shipping facilities on the Mexican Gulf. The most promising seaport city is La Porte, at the head of Galveston Bay. Peculiar natural advantages surround LaPorte, notably its being the fartherest inland seaport on the Gulf, having high dry land with perfect drainage and the purest artesian water, a climate unsurpassed in the south and an attractive city site. The American Land Co., 188 Madison street, Chicago, is interested at LaPorte and announces the first general sale of property will be held Feby. 14-17, 1900.

HOPES FOR BOER SUCCESS.

Senator Hale Declares Great Britain Is Wrong.

BLOW STRUCK AT LIBERTY.

Maine Statesman Says the American People Sympathize with the Little Republic—Pension Bill Passed by the House—Washington Notes.

Washington, Jan. 22.—A speech, sensational in its interest and international in its importance, was delivered in the senate Friday by Mr. Hale (rep., Me.). He declared that nine-tenths of the American people sympathized with the Boers in their gallant struggle for liberty against one of the greatest powers in the world. He declared that "the war which Great Britain is waging is the most fell blow at human liberty that has been struck in the century." He denied that the American people were "in sympathy with Great Britain in the South African war to stamp out the liberty of a people," and when Mr. Balfour, in the house of commons, made such a statement, "he should be met with some disclaimer from this side of the Atlantic." He declared that the English people themselves were not in favor of the war which "had been brought on by a sharp cabinet minister engaged with gold speculators."

The resolution of Mr. Allen, which called upon the secretary of state for information as to whether any representative of the Transvaal had applied to the United States government for recognition, and if such application had been made if it had been accepted, and if not, why not, was laid before the senate at the conclusion of the morning business. Mr. Spooner (rep., Wis.) moved that the resolution be directed to the president and he be requested to furnish the information if not incompatible with public interests.

In a brief speech in opposition to the amendment Mr. Teller said he would not say a word that would be offensive to the government of Great Britain, yet he felt his sympathy go out to the Transvaal republic in its great contest at arms with England.

At the conclusion of Mr. Hale's speech the resolution as amended by Mr. Spooner was adopted.

Mr. Morgan (Alabama) then addressed the senate in opposition to the financial bill, and the senate adjourned until Monday.

Prompt Answer Allen.

Washington, Jan. 22.—The state department will send a prompt answer to Senator Allen's resolution, adopted by the senate, calling for information as to the refusal of the government to receive officially a representative of the Transvaal. The answer, in effect, will be that Gen. J. R. O'Beirne of New York, who was credited to his government as the Transvaal's commissioner, was an American citizen, and, as such, could not be recognized by the United States the diplomatic representative of a foreign country.

House Passes Pension Bill.

Washington, Jan. 22.—The pension appropriation bill, carrying $145,245,250, was passed by the house Friday. It was made the vehicle of an attack upon the commissioner of pensions by Mr. Curtis (rep., Kan.), who was seconded by Mr. Norton of Ohio and Mr. Johnson of Indiana and other northern democrats. The commissioner defended by a score of members from both sides of the house.

Cullom Vote for Quay.

Washington, Jan. 22.—Senator Cullom has authorized the statement that he will vote in favor of seating Mr. Quay.

Dr. Says It Is Smallpox.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 22.—The report of smallpox at Clay City, some local physicians diagnosed as chicken-pox, continues to spread. disease has been prevailing community for over a month previous to the visit of the second state board of health precautions had been taken. Dr. Lembert W. Brayton of this city, recognized expert in skin diseases was sent to Clay City to examine the epidemic, reported that the disease was smallpox, and that it would probably continue in the locality throughout the winter and spring.

Young Man Confesses a Crime.

Wood Falls, Minn., Jan. 22.—A letter has reached here from relatives of a deceased that old man Slover recently died in California and that he made a deathbed confession that he had killed Moses Lufkins in Gales township, this county, some twelve years ago, instead of William Rose, who was afterward executed for the crime. In a speech from the gallows he affirmed his innocence and charged Slover with the crime.

Indiana Would Honor Lawton.

Washington, Jan. 22.—Senator Beveridge has made a request of the adjutant-general that Gen. Lawton's body be allowed to lie in state at Indianapolis. Gov. Mount telegraphed an earnest request on behalf of the people of Indiana that the body be allowed to come by way of Indianapolis.

Valparaiso, Jan. 22.—Judge Huidobro of the supreme court has granted extradition papers in the case of Frederick Moore, formerly a bank official of Boston, Mass., who is accused of embezzlement.

IS REELECTED BY MINERS.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 22.—John Mitchel, president, and W. C. Pearce, secretay, were re-elected by acclamation Friday by the United Mine-Workers' convention. Three hours were allotted for voting for the other officers, and te tellers are counting the ballots.

Thee was a hot discussion in the convation just before adjournment in the eening over a resolution on which the rsolution committee had made an advese report. It provided that $30,000 sould be expended during the year for cganizing purposes in the various field. The measure finally went to the comittee on constitution.

A number of resolutions bearing on injuntions were referred to the special committee on injunctions, which is in sessio in the Occidental hotel.

The matte of a defense fund was refered to the committee on constitution, and it is believed that it will recommend favorable action.

Presiden Mitchell announced that he had reived a telegram stating that the Iowa perators would be represented in the joint conference next week.

The thatened strike of the miners in the Fst Pennsylivaia district is wakenin considerable interest among the deleges to the convention. While the men who will be first affected in case of strike do not for the most part belng to the union, there is a deep feling of sympathy for them in the organization and words of cheer have already been sent to them.

Presint Mitchell said that while he had no official advices from the district he would not be surprised to hear that the miners had gone out, and he added that if the 40,000 men did strike the public would probably involve a total of not less than 100,000 men.

McGiffert Will Withdraw.

New York, Jan. 22.—Members of the New York presbytery hear that Prof. Arthur C. McGiffert of Union Theological seminary will have his answer in printed form next week, and that he will send it to them for private perusal. They also hear, through a close friend of the professor and one who has been identified with the matter for some time, that the answer will be an announcement of his willingness to withdraw from Presbyterian church membership.

Rob a Bank of $4,000.

Bloomington, Ind., Jan. 22.—The village of Elletsville was aroused from its slumbers at 2 o'clock Friday morning by a loud explosion, which seemed to shake the whole town. Upon investigating it was discovered that the village bank had been broken into and the safe looted. The robbers secured about $1,500 and escaped on a handcar. George Fryhofer, the bank cashier, says papers were taken of sufficient value to make the aggregate loss $4,000.

Von Bulow Is Satisfied.

Berlin, Jan. 22.—In the reichstag Friday Count von Bulow, minister of foreign affairs, announced the details of the settlement of the controversy raised between Germany and Great Britain over the seizure of the steamer Bundesrath at Delagoa bay on Dec. 30. Count von Bulow not only stated that the British government had acceded to Germany's demand for the release of the steamer, but had made concessions which would prevent a recurrence of the incident.

Sets Up Civil Law in Cuba.

Havana, Jan. 22.—The full text of the order relating to the duties of civil and military authorities was issued Friday. Civil officials are charged with the conduct of civil affairs, under supervision of the military governor alone. Military officers, the order directs, are not to interfere with the civil authorities, except under extreme conditions, where, in their opinion, public order, life, and property are in serious danger.

Miners Idle in Europe.

Vienna, Jan. 22.—The strikes in the coal districts in Moravia and Bohemia are assuming threatening proportions. Besides the 11,000 miners who went out early in the week at the mines at Klando, in Bohemia, there are now 16,000 on a strike in the region between Ostrau and Krawin, in Moravia. The prospect of a coal famine is troubling manufacturers throughout all the northern part of the empire.

Senate Caucus Undecided.

Washington, Jan. 22.—For two hours Friday afternoon the republicans of the senate caucused over the election of a sergeant-at-arms and secretary. After adjournment it was said no conclusion was reached, although there are strong indications that Daniel S. Ransdell of Indiana will be elected sergeant-at-arms and former Representative Charles G. Bennett of Brooklyn secretary.

WOMEN OF THE UNITED STATES

Regard Peruna as Their Shield Against Catarrh, Coughs, Colds, Grip and Catarrhal Diseases.

MRS. BELVA A. LOCKWOOD, LATE CANDIDATE FOR THE PRESIDENCY.

Mrs. Belva Lockwood, the eminent barrister, of Washington, D. C., is the only woman who has ever been a candidate for the Presidency of the United States. She is the best known woman in America. As the pioneer of her sex in the legal profession she has gathered fame and fortune. In a letter to The Peruna Medicine Company, she says:

"I have used your Peruna both for myself and my mother, Mrs. Hannah J. Bennett, now in her 88th year, and I find it an invaluable remedy for cold, catarrh, hay fever and kindred diseases; also a good tonic for feeble and old people, or those run down and with nerves unstrung." Yours truly, Belva A. Lockwood.

Catarrh may attack any organ of the body. Women are especially liable to catarrh of the pelvic organs. There are one hundred cases of catarrh of the pelvic organs to one of catarrh of the head. Most people think, because they have no catarrh of the head, they have no catarrh at all. This is a great mistake and is the cause of many cases of sickness and death. "Health and Beauty" is free to women only, by The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Every man expects to be better off some day.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE 2-CENT POSTAGE STAMP.

What Is Uncle Sam's Loss Is Another Man's Gain.

Ex-Postmaster-General James A. Gary in the Youth's Companion: She drops the letter in the postoffice at Key West, and it starts on its long journey to the Klondike. It does not, of necessity, travel in a straight line to its destination, but must follow the twisting and turnings of the railroads, which have complete charge of it until the northwest corner of the state of Washington is reached. When it arrives at Seattle it has passed through fourteen states, and yet, so far as time is concerned, but one-fourth of the journey has been accomplished. It now takes a sea voyage from Seattle to Juneau, Alaska, and from the latter place is carried to Circle City. It may be taken from there by friendly hands further into the Klondike country, and finally delivered to the anxious brother, who has been eagerly awaiting the arrival of the next party from the nearest town in which a postoffice is conducted in the hope that some one would bring him a letter. This letter has now traveled in the neighborhood of 7,000 miles—by railroad, steamboat, stage, horseback, and, perhaps, dog-sled—and has been on the road for nearly forty days without a moment's rest! No profit, in money, accrues to the government for delivering that letter; indeed, each letter sent into the Klondike costs the government for transportation many times the amount of postage charged; but in such cases should we reckon the profit only in dollars and cents? Should we not consider also the happiness and satisfaction afforded this brother as he sits by his fire, perhaps homesick and lonely, but now with a loving smile illuminating his face, as he reads and reads again every word his thoughtful sister has written about home, mother and father, and perhaps of some one else whom he holds dear? When, finally, he places his treasure under his pillow and seeks rest he is happier than for many a day; and Uncle Sam, who has contributed so largely to that happiness, does not regret the small pecuniary loss he has sustained.

QUEEREST OF FOSSILS

Jaw of Some Huge Animal Found in New Mexico.

The fossil remains of a strange prehistoric animal were discovered at postmaster Nusbaum's ranch, at Tesuque. Alphonso Dockweiler, who has charge of digging a ditch through a ridge on the ranch, picked up a piece of petrified bone the shape of a large tongue, but with a row of 12 teeth along what seemed to be the tip of the tongue. He dug a little further and found the remainder of what seemed to be the jaw of an animal that was part ichthyosaurus and part plesiosaurus, with part of the characteristics of the pterodactyl perhaps. The jaw consisted of about 20 layers of bone in the shape of a tongue, and each layer was armed with a dozen teeth, which showed that the animal was herbivorous and not carnivorous. These 20 layers were evidently the upper jaw of the animal. Mr. Dockweiler expects to find the lower jaw and perhaps all of the remains of the strange animal. As much as he has found he will bring to this city, and from here ship it to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington. Two layers of the jaw were brought to the city by J. G. Schumann and shown to friends, who were all puzzled by their unusual shape. It is well known that the surroundings of Santa Fe abound with submarine fossil remains, which seem to prove that in long-gone-by ages the site of the city was covered by a sea. Only half a mile up the aroyo and canyon that branch off Palace avenue, near the old brewery, pretty petrified seashells are to be found. At many other places there are unmistakable signs of the erosion of waves and the footprints of gigantic animals that probably made their home both in the water and on the land when the highest peak of the Rocky mountain range were only islands in a vast ocean.—Santa Fe New American.

The Increase of Nationalities.

From the Paris American Register: According to a German statistician, Russia is the nation which increases the fastest—her population will double in about forty-five years. Germany needs sixty-five years, Austria-Hungary seventy, England eighty, Italy 110, but France can only do it in 860 years, provided the present annual increase does not diminish, which unfortunately seems to be the case. The loss of Alsace-Lorraine, with a population of 1,250,000 souls is nothing in view of the insignificant annual increase of France's population. During the last five years the population of Germany has increased 3,000,000, while France's increase has been scarcely 175,000—a considerable part of whom are moreover of foreign nationality.

Not a Bird.

Washington Times: The solemn air of judicial gravity and dignity of the Supreme court is sometimes disturbed by a flash of humor. On one occasion there was an argument going on and the attorneys were using a map to illustrate the case. One attorney, in the course of his presentation of the case, pointed to the map in question and was proceeding to dilate upon the same, when Justice Gray asked him what the map was. "Why, your honor, it is just a bird's eye view of the and in controversy," answered the counselor. "Well," said Justice Gray, 'I wish you would bring the map a little nearer; I haven't got a bird's eye."

THEATRICAL NOTES.

How have the mighty fallen! Lotti Collins is now in a London ballet.

Marie Corelli's "Thelma" has been dramatized by Clayton Legge and may be produced shortly.

Ellen Beach Yaw did not make a success in "The Rose of Persia," Sullivan's new opera, in London.

More craziness among the ladies over Paderewski in New York. He is to be in San Francisco in March.

Israel Zangwill will complete a new play in time for next season. It is already named "The Mantle of Elijah."

William Winter says of the New York theaters that "one fad succeeds another, and the general aspect of theatrical affairs is commonplace and monotonous."

Competent judges say the art objects and books of the late Augustin Daly are worth at least $1,000,000. They are not expected to command that sum at the coming sale.

Saleza, the Grau tenor, and a friend of Jean de Reszke's, a Pole who dared to say in an interview that Grau had no tenors, are to fight a duel when they get back to Paris.

The name of Daly will remain in New York. Frohman's Lyceum company, now occupying the late manager's theater, is to be called the Lyceum Daly company.

The Italian actress, Pezzana, known as Duse's first teacher and the last female Hamlet Italy has known, contemplates a visit to this country before retiring from the stage.

A club man's being sued for heavy damages by an actress whom, it is said, he boasted of having kissed, carries a suggestion with it, that when kissing is indulged in the lips should be kept shut.

While on his deathbed the late Charles Coghlan was engaged upon a dramatization of "Vanity Fair." He was to play Lord Steyne, and his daughter Gertrude, Becky. The work was left unfinished.

It is alleged of the manager of one of the popular extravaganzas now running in New York that he wrote a number of supper invitations to the girls of his chorus and then discharged those who answered them. This story must be a mistake. The last part of it should undoubtedly read, "and then promoted them."

AUTOMOBILE NOTES.

It is stated that automobile omnibuses will be substituted at once for the old horse-drawn stages of Fifth avenue, New York city. The omnibuses will not be allowed to be crowded and the little sign bearing the word "Full" will be displayed when every seat is taken. This is the general European custom.

The New York Medical Journal, speaking of the recent explosion of the gasoline tank of a motor carriage, says: "Some new danger is almost always to be expected in connection with novel devices of the kind, but, on the whole, the power carriage, whether propelled by gasoline or electricity, is probably less dangerous than vehicles drawn by horses."

International competition has been invited by the offer of a gold cup by the Automobile club of France. The first test will be held as near May 1 as possible, the idea being to make the date coincide with the great automobile day at the exposition. The rules which will govern this cup have not been made as yet and it is expected to arrange racing conditions, which will be satisfactory to automobilists of all countries.

Prominent officers and stockholders of the manufacturing company witnessed a test of a truck recently. The truck was brought down to New York from Providence by boat and was run to the air-compressing station of the Metropolitan Street railway in 24th street with the charge which it had received in Providence. A fresh supply was taken on and it was demonstrated that it could be satisfactorily run on the streets, says the Scientific American.

REFLECTIONS OF A BACHELOR.

When a girl says, "Now, stop," the wise man wants to.

Every woman thinks that to a man she must be a fascinating puzzle.

The first thing to learn about gawf is the kind of clothes not to wear.

The day before a woman goes to stay all night with another woman she scratches out the number of her shoes.

A woman looks on marriage as a chance to raise her social position; a man looks on it as a chance to lower his own.

After she gets married the average woman takes about as much care of her ideals as she does of her old fine-tooth comb.

A woman's mouth, when it is in repose, shows her character, when it isn't it is generally showing some other woman's.

A woman begins to enjoy her Christmas presents about New Year's. She spends the time in between wondering what they cost.

When a man is engaged to a woman he thinks of her half the time he doesn't see her. After they get married he thinks of her half the time he sees her.

If everybody really felt as nice and kind to everybody they meet on Christmas as they pretend to there wouldn't be any use in having any Christmas.

A woman never feels really intimate with another woman till she has slept with her and they have told each other how nice they think each other's husband is till it's most morning.—New York Press.

THE DESERTED VILLAGE.

Writing of communistic experiments Arthur Henry draws this dramatic picture of the decline of the Harmonists "At the present time, 23 years later than that at which Aaron Williams wrote, there are but seven members of the Society of Harmonists. Four aged women and one man, all over 70, and John Duss and wife, who are about 0, are all that remain of this once prosperous hive of people. Most of he factories have disappeared. The reat barns that once sheltered the undreds of cattle are empty. The ocks and herds are gone. The broad ields are untended. The town, while till preserving its ancient semblance, s inhabited by another people. The ouses, hotel, and store are all rented. Many of those now occupying the quaint, vine-covered dwellings work in Pittsburg. Some are the hired hands, employed to do the little labor still required by the society. Few of the people now living at Economy know anything even of the history of the former inhabitants. Not one in twenty can point out to you where the surviving Harmonists reside. These aged remnants of the society are seldom seen. Now and then two of the more active women appear hand in hand and walk slowly, silently through the street to the store or wine cellar, to the meeting-house, or garden. Joint possessors of a vast estate, they dress in plain, old-fashioned gowns of calico, or gingham, grow what vegetables they still have strength to care for, and busy themselves from dawn to dark about their households. It has been many years since any of these aged ones have needed to work at all. Whatever they desired would have been theirs for the asking. But the greatest distress that can befall them is to fail for a day in the little strength still left them, to go to the work of their house and garden. While celibacy was thus operating at Harmony other causes were working the gradual withering of the communities elsewhere. In January, 1857, an inventor showed the Wallingford and Onida Perfectionists to be worth over $600. In the next 10 years, their net profits amounted to $10,000. In 1874 they were worth over half a million. today, still controlling vast property, they are but few in numbers, and as a community, nothing."—Ainslee

THE GREAT [E]AGLE RAPTOR.

Fores Eagle Found in One of the Philipp

Wherever the great tropical forest grows, whether in the old world or the new a separate class of great forest eagle seems to be produced, says the Cornhill. The largest of all living raptors yet known was discovered only six years ago and proved to be one of these forest eagles. It was found in the island of Samar (one of the Philippines) by Mr. Whitehead, whose death in Hainan was lately recorded. He brought the skin back to South Kensington, where it is among the treasures of the bird department. Nothing is yet known of its habits but the few natives who know it say that it lives on monkeys, caught in the tree tops. It seems almost incredible that so large and interesting a bird should not have been discovered before. But the tropical forest is a possible place to find monsters. The eagles. It is extremely likely that some may be discovered haunting the Congo forest. In the correspondent regions of South and Central America the harpy eagle is found, a bird large and formidable that it would seem impossible not to observe in the great height and thickness of the trees make the birds above them invisible. Mr. Salvin in all his travels in those regions only once saw a wild harpy eagle. In examining the skin brought over to this country, one is struck with the astonishing thickness and strength of the "wrists" and the size of the talons. Azara said that the bird "would kill animals of thrice the size of its own weight." But what is the truth as to weight? Mr. Whitehead guessed that the weight of his great eagle at sixteen pounds. The harpy is not so large. There is a species of harpy eagle in Mexico which used to be tamed to take deer.

Table Mountain Ropeway.

Engineering Magazine: The ropeway located at Table Mountain is an important example of a line 5,280 feet long. It consists of a single fixed rope on which one carriage is drawn to and fro with an endless hauling rope, the driving gear having reversing motion so that the direction of travel of the carrier can be controlled. Commencing at sea level, and following the ground on posts spaced about 300 feet apart, the cable takes a span of 1,500 feet, rising to a projecting rock some 1,480 feet above the starting point. Resting on a support at this point, the cable again takes a span of 1,400 feet to an upper terminal 2,200 feet above the lower one. This ropeway has worked so satisfactorily that it is not only used for the carriage of materials employed in the construction of a reservoir but is at times used for passengers.

New Style Toothache.

Mountain toothache is a new addition to our bodily ills. It has attacked engineers and laborers on the Jungfrau railroad at a height of 8,500 feet above sea level as a jumping toothache that attacks several teeth at a time, lasts seven or eight days, and leaves the patient with a swollen face, which it takes another week to reduce. After that the teeth are acclimated and give no further trouble.—New York Sun.

FOUND A GOLD MINE!

It Was in His Poultry Yard.

People in the neighborhood of Creston, Iowa, are amazed at the number of eggs that this man drives to market with. When asked what was the cause of his hens being so prolific, he stated it was all in a certain compound he was using, that kept his hens in good condition and furnished them with the proper stimulus to egg production. American Poultry mixture is the name of it, and is made by American Mfg. Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Every man in the poultry business is interested in the health of his hens and their laying capacity. In the eggs lie his profits. This mixture is guaranteed to increase the production of eggs 100 per cent or money refunded. It will do more than three times as much as the same amount of any other compound. It is concentrated in form and the result of years of practical experience in the poultry business. There is absolutely no doubt as to what it will do, and you are invited to try it at the expense of the company. Send $1. for a sample package and if it doesn't do the work you get your money back. This is fair and is made to induce practical poultrymen to give it a trial. It is also a sure preventive of such diseases as the terrible cholera and roup which create such havoc in all parts of the cotntry. It acts directly on the craw and gizzard and is a thoroughly scientific preparation.

The manufacturers guarantee every package or refund purchase money. If your druggist don't sell American Poultry Mixture, he's behind the age. In that case order direct from American Manufacturing Co., Terre Haute, Ind.

Stood Death Off.

E. B. Munday, a lawyer of Henrietta Tex., once fooled a grave-digger. He says: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters and he was soon much better, but continued their use until he was wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." This remedy expels malaria, kills disease germs and purifies the blood; aids digestion, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, cures constipation, dyspepsia, nervous diseases, kidney troubles, female complaints; gives perfect health. Only 50c at HARR'S drug store.

Smoking Stunts the Growth of Boys.

Whatever difference of opinion there may be upon the advisability of smoking for men. there is none as to its pernicious effect upon boys. It affects the action of the heart and reduces the capacity of the lungs. Young men who are being trained for athletics are not permitted to smoke by their trainers because, as they say, "it is bad for the wind." The argument that will appeal most forcibly to your boy is that smoking will stunt his growth. It has been proxed that youthful smokers are shorter and weigh less than their comrades who do not smoke. Cigarettes are particularly injurious. Nicotine, the active principle of tobacco, is said by chemists to be, next to prussic acid, the most rapidly fatal poison known. The tender tissues of a growing boy cannot absorb even a very small quantity of it without most injurious results.—February Ladies' Home Journal.

A Night Of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she would die from Pneumonia before morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night, but she begged for Dr. Kieg's New Discovery, which had more than once saved her life, and cured her of consumption. After taking, she slept all night. Further use entirely cured her." This marvellous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1.00 Trial bottles free at Harr's drng store.

Congress will have to quicken its gait if this session is to end before late in the summer.

Working Night and Day.

The busiest and mighties little thing that ever was made is Dr. King's New Life Pills. These pills change weakness into strength, listlessness into energy, braiu-fag into mental power. They're wonderful in building up the health. Only 25c per box. Sold by HARR.

The claim of other cough medicines to be as good as Chamberlain's are effectually set at rest in the following testimonial of Mr. C. D. Glass, an employe of Barlett & Dennis Co., Gardiner, Me. He says: "I had kept adding to a cold and cough in the winter of 1897, trying every cough medicine I heard of without permanent help, until one day I was in the drug store ,of Mr. Houlehan and he advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and offered to pay back my money if I was not cured. My lungs and bronchial tubes were very sore at this time, but I was completely cured by this remedy and have since always turned to it when I got a cold, and soon find relief. I also recommend it to my friends and am glad to say it is the best of all cough medicines." For sale by HARR, the druggist.

Attorney General Griggs has rendered an opinion that may arouse as much harsh criticism as the "canteen" opinion did. It is that Admiral Sampson commanded the American fleet in the battle of Santiago. It was rendered in connection with a claim for prize money.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by Harr.

PROGRESS OF IRRIGATION.

The preliminay work of the census office in collecting data relative to the arid and sub-humid regions shows that during the past ten years vast areas have been reclaimed by irrigation, both by ditching from running streams and drilling for subterranean waters. Where only a few years ago the sage brush struggled for existence in the midst of a waste of alkali and sand, today are fields of waving grain and blossoming orange groves. Hundreds of miles of canals and ditches have been constructed; hundreds of wells have been sunk, and thousands of acres of land have been cultivated in zones where once the desolation of Sahara reigned. Moistened by fresh waters and fertilized by the rich silt of the swift mountain streams, once trackless wastes and desolate valleys in the arid southwest have become as fertile as the famous valley of the Nile, and send forth crops of endless variety and exceeding abundance.

Irrigation is intensive farming. Where the water supply is ample, it is sure farming. There are no failures, and crops are enormous. The experienced irrigator is like the trained engineer with his hand on the lever. The movements of his hand regulate the amount of water supplied to his fields as those of the engineer control his engine. In most of the irrigable sections of the west, fertilizers have never been used, although the land has been constantly cultivated for over two centuries. In many sections fields may be seen which have yielded successive crops of wheat for forty years and show no diminution of productive strength. Wonderful progress is shown in the methods of constructing canals, dams, and pumping machinery, and in the manner of distributing water. Modern inventions in machinery have greatly lessened the time, labor and cost of construction and management and made possible many gigantic enterprises of land reclamation and water utilization. Mountains have been tunneled and whole rivers have been lifted from their beds and spread over the valleys precisely as wanted. High up in the ranges and the elevated plateaus immense storage reservoirs have been constructed to impound the flood-waters of the streams so that the thirsty land below shall not suffer during the long rainless summer. As the successful solution of the problem of conservation of flood waters means the reclamation of millions of acres of public land, the people naturally ask the government to promote measures having this end in view. To this demand the government responds. Lands containing excellent reservoir sites have been set aside and a thorough study of the sources and permanence of the water supply of arid regions has been made to enable congress to legislate with intelligence upon this important subject. In aid of this work the twelfth census will endeavor comprehensively to show the present condition and values of agriculture in the arid and sub-humid regions; the length, irrigable extent and cost of the various canals, wells and ditches; the character, volume and constancy of water supply; systems employed in distribution; amount paid for water, and the crops, acreage and yield of irrigated farms. This effort will be successful if those interested in irrigation shall heartily co-operate with the census office and its agents. Within a brief period the main schedules for taking the census of irrigation will be distributed, and Director Merriam requests that all recipients prepare properly to fill them out and to return them promptly.

MAY RECOGNIZE BOERS.

It is stated in an authoritative quarter that if Montague White is equipped with proper credentials from the Transvaal government he will be received as its representative by the administration. Gen. O'Beirne's rejection was ostensibly due to his American citizenship, but there is no doubt that the authorities would have preferred that the matter of the Transvaal representation be left undetermined. However, when Mr. White calls at the state department Secretary Hay will see him, and his status will then be determined.

The NEWS OF IOWA

Chris Nissen, of Clinton, 50 years of age, was fatally injured a few nights ago and died the next day. A limb of a tree fell, crushing his skull. He never regained consciousness.

State Auditor Merriam has notified his friends by telegraph that he is improving in health and gaining as rapidly as can be expected, but will probably not be able to leave California for two or three weeks.

Will Hoffman, who was working on a horse power machine near Dyersville, was fatally injured a few days ago. His coat caught in the tumbling rod, and before the mac hine could be stopped he was rolled under it several times. His skull was fractured and he was otherwise injured. The physician says he cannot recover.

Dr. R. H. Hammond, of LeMars deputy state veterinarian, was called to Storm Lake to examine horses supposed to be glandered. He found fourteen diseased animals in a railroad graders' camp and condemned them and ordered them shot. Other horses in that district are supposed to have contracted the glanders, and Dr. Hammond will make further inspection.

Paderewski, the great pianst, will give one of his grand concerts at Des Moines Tuesday evening, February 13, 1900. Price $1, $2 and $3. Seats on sale at Kirkwood House Pharmacy, Monday, Jan. 29, at 10 a. m. Numbers given out at 9 a m. Choice seats can be reserved now by sending J. S. Connelly, Des Moines, Ia., the amount and number of seats wanted, who will select the best seats and send them by return mail. Reserved seats are $3 for the concert of Feb. 13.

Four separate petitions have been filed in the office of the clerk of the district court at Ackley, claiming of certain persons over $38,000 on omitted taxes. The petitions state in brief that the defendants are indebted to Franklin county in the sums given below, upon property, moneys and securities that had been fraudulently withheld, overlooked or omitted, or from other cause not listed for taxation, which property is subject to taxation and has not been taxed for the period of five years last past.

Clark county will probably have another murder trial soon. Constable Walter Phelps was shot a few days ago and fears are entertained for his recovery. The tragedy occurred at Wayland, seven miles west of Alexandria, and the victim was Walter Phelps, a well known and highly respected citizen. The man whoshot him was Walter Fuller, an ex-convict with a bad reputation whom Constable Phelps was attempting to arrest. Fuller resisted and a ball from his revolver hit the officer in the head. The wound is a dangerous one and may prove fatal. The officer was still alive at last accounts. After shooting the constable Fuller escaped and tried to get out of the country. A posse of citizens pursued him with such determination that he was captured soon after. He was taken to Kahoka and lodged in jail.

Jerome W. Hoot, who is wanted at Waterloo on a charge of sending an infernal machine to his wife, has been arrested in New Orleans and Sheriff Law has started for that city to bring him back. He was arrested at his boarding house, where he was living under the name of Jerome Howard. When arrested he acknowleged his identity and said he would return to Iowa without requisition papers. The crime with which Hoot is charged was committed on October 29, 1899. On that day Mrs. Hoot received a mysterious package delivered her by express from Chicago. When she removed the wrapping she found the package to be a neatly turned box of polished wood with small handholds at each end. She started to open it when there was a sharp explosion and a cloud of smoke puffed out into the room. The next day it was taken to the river by the police and exploded. The detonation was terrific, and showed the machine to have contained dynamite enough to wreck the largest block. Had it exploded when Mrs. Hoot attempted to open it she would undoubtedly have been killed and ... her home totally destroyed, and no one would have surmised the cause. An information was sworn out ... once by Mrs. Hoot, charging her husband with the crime and the officers have been diligently searching for him since. They claim to have evidence enough on hand to convict him. They know where he had the box ... made in Omaha and where the dynamite said to have been used in the machine was purchased in Des Moines. The alleged motive for the crime is that Hoot would have obtained some insurance money and considerable property by his wife's death.

Nick Anliker, a farmer residing one and a half miles west of Lohrville, started for home a few evenings since considerably the worse for liquor, taking the Northwestern railroad track. When just out of town he was run down and killed by a freight train, the body being carried about two and a half miles, where it was found wedged in between the ties on a bridge. He leaves a wife and a large family of children.

Mrs. Charles Rudolf, of Seney, died a few days ago. She was the widow of Charles Rudolf, ex-county treasurer of Plymouth county, who was found dead on a railroad track in Colorado last summer. There were many theories as to the cause of his death, murder or suicide being most freely advanced. The horror of the mystery so preyed on Mrs. Rudolf's mind that, though a young woman in perfect health, she fell into a decline and died of a broken heart.

The Byers-Batty contest before the legislature was ended by the seating of Webb Byers, the present incumbent from Sheiby county. This was the result of the withdrawal of George Batty, the contestant. The majority discovered by the committee proved to be eleven, when the final count by the attorneys had been made, and Mr. Batty withdrew. In laying out the ballots over which there was dispute, these ballots were paired by the attorneys, and it was found that Byers would still have a majority of eleven votes. It was useless, therefore, for Mr. Batty to continue the fight and he withdrew.

The appointment of Colonel H. H Rood, of Mount Vernon, to be a member of the state board of control to succeed ex-Governor William Larrabee was sent to the senate a few days ago It was received in executive session and according to the provisions of the board of control law, put upon the statute books two years ago, was referred to a committee of five, which is expected to report upon it shortly The committee consists of Blanchard Finch and Frewin, republicans, and Young and Lambert, democrats. It is still the general belief that the appointment will not be confirmed by the senate.

Alfred Peterson and Charles Gropenthen were driving up a hill south of Peterson a few days ago when they were halted by a highwayman. Failing to find any money or valuables on their persons, he ordered them to "git," and to do so quickly. They hurried away and at once organized a posse who surrounded the robber and demanded his surrender. Finding escape impossible, he shot himself through the heart, dying almost instantly From papers found on his person it was ascertained that his name was Chris Nelson, but his place of residence is unknown, he being a total stranger in the vicinity.

The biggest beet sugar meeting ever held in the west occurred at Storm Lake a few days ago. The feature was a barbecue on the main street at noon, given by the Business Men's association, and a rousing meeting at the opera house. An address was made by D. B. Lyons, of Des Moines, who has charge of the acreage campaign, assisted by A. G. Kingman, of Pekin, Ill. This meeting was the opening of the campaign. The enthusiasm was unbounded and in response to invitations from Mr. Lyons over 1,500 acres were contracted. Storm Lake business men are pulling together in the utmost harmony on the proposition and are determined to have a sugar beet factory next year. Five hundred farmers attended the meeting.

Harrison P. Stevens, since October 6 last and until a few days ago a member of the Iowa Soldiers' Home at Marshalltown, was instantly killed at the second public road crossing west of Quarry by being struck by the Chicago & Northwestern Colorado special, east bound. Steveus was on his way to Chicago afoot, or at least he so informed the officials of the home when he took his discharge that morning. He evidently did not pay any attention to the repeated danger signals of the engineer, and was thrown several feet off the right-of-way. His skull was badly crushed, both legs were broken and mashed below the knee, his left arm broken at the shoulder and at the wrist, his right arm broken at the elbow and his right hip broken. Just as the pilot struck him it is evident that he turned around and faced the engine, as the shin bones of both legs are badly broken in exactly the same place and the same distance up from the ankle.

Several important cases growing out of the Ingram bankruptcy case have been filed in the district court at Mt. Ayr. R. A. Lawhead brings suit against United States Marshal George M. Christian and his deputy, A. E. Willis, asking for a judgment of $7,000, of which $6,000 is placed as the value of the Shannon City Cash Store, and $1,000 as damages sustained by plaintiff. The stock was bought November 28 by Mr. Lawhead from A. O. Ingram. December 5, Deputy Marshal Willis took possession and December 8 he refused to turn it over to Mr. Lawhead.

APPALLING LOSS

TERRIBLS DEFEAT FOR THE BRITISH AT SPION KOP.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—General Buller's dispatch to the war office states that Spion Kop was abandoned on account of a lack of water and inability to bring the artillery there and a heavy Boer fire. Buller gives no list of casualties. His whole force has retired south of the Tugela river with the evident intention of reaching Ladysmith by another route.

The week has opened with the utmost gloom for the British and the reaction is all the stronger because of the high hopes that were reposed in General Buller's turning movement and of his announcement that there would be no turning back. At the very moment when Dr. Leyds is being received as an honored guest in the highest circles on the continent, Great Britain has to face the worst disaster in a campaign thus far disastrous. Open talk is heard of the absolute necessity of abandoning Ladysmith to its fate. If Boer reports are to be credited, the abandonment of Spion Kop was due to the inability of the British to resist the Boer attack, the Boers carrying the first trenches and taking 150 prisoners.

As it required a month for Buller to recover from his earlier defeat at Colenso, it is not thought he can pull his disheartened army together now in time to do anything for Ladysmith. London waits anxiously for the Boers to move. They seem to be fighting on a very definite plan, and it is thought they may attack Buller or assault Ladysmith.

Following is the text of General Buller's dispatch, dated Spearman's Camp, Jan, 27, 6:10 p. m.

"On the night of Jan. 23 Warren attacked Spion Kop but found it very difficult to hold as its perimeter was too large and water was found very deficient.

"The crests were held all that day against successive attacks and a heavy shell fire. Our men fought with great gallantry.

"General Woodgate, who was in command at the summit, having been wounded, the officer who succeeded him decided on the attack of January 24 to abandon the position and did so before dawn Jan. 25. I reached Warren's camp at 5 a. m. on Jan. 25 and decided that a second attack on Spion Kop would be useless and that the enemy's crest was too strong to allow me to force. Accordingly I decided to withdraw the force to the south of the Tugela."

LONDON, Jan. 29.—The situation at other points is unchanged.

HEAD LAAGER, Ladysmith, Jan. 25, via Lorenzo Marquez, Jan. 26.—It is reported here that as a result of Long Tom's practice on Monday Dr. Jameson was wounded in the leg.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—There is comment in Ladysmith on the discrepancy between the Boer account of the recapture of Spion Kop and that sent by Buller. The latter says not a word about the Boers scaling the hill and attacking the British trenches and capturing 150 men who had hoisted the white flag, as at Majuba Hill. Instead he spoke of the maintenance of the "best traditions of the British army." There is not much doubt that the Boer account is correct. It is by no means boastful. It is believed that the war office has further dispatches which it is withholding. For days nothing has been heard from Lord Dundonald and his mounted brigade and it is rumored he has been cut off on the upper Tugela. London military critics have given up the hope of saving Ladysmith, which is undoubtedly short of food and ammunition. The garrison went on short rations December 2d.

LORENZO MARQUEZ, Delagoa Bay, Jan. 29.—It is reported on good Transvaal authority that Mafeking was relieved last Tuesday.

VAN METER WINS.

The Kentucky Legislature Controled By Democrats,

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 27.—The case of Van Meter (democrat) against Berry (republican) for the latter's seat in the house, was decided in favor of Van Meter by a vote of 51 to 45. The republicans and democrats admit that this an accurate forecast of the vote in the Goebel-Taylor gubernatorial contest.

To Elect Roberts' Successor.

SALT LAKE, Utah, Jan. 29.—Governor Wells has issued a proclamation calling an election to be held on April 2 next for the purpose of electing a representative in the Fifty-sixth congress to fill the vacancy now existing.

Boer Losses Said to Be Heavy.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—A Durban special says: The Boer losses on the Upper Tugela during the fighting Sunday last were very great. Gen. Warren's men captured 160 prisoners, and 130 Boers were found dead in one trench

Germany and France Jubilant.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Advices from France and Germany show that the people are jubilant over the defeat of the British at Spion kop, which is regarded as a signal set back for the Englishmen.

NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 22.—Among the bills introduced today were the following: By Lister, to prohibit boxing exhibitions or glove contests; by Healy, to provide for the repeal of the antifusion law; by Emmert, to suppress tuberculosis; by Hubbard, to require boards of supervisors to buy supplies by competitive bids; two unimportant bills were passed.

HOUSE.

Among the bills introduced were the following: By Wilson, providing for the collection of taxes on property withheld from assessment; by Thunen, to prohibit the letting by contract of convict labor; by Miller, to provide for the teaching of the elements of music in all the public schools of Iowa; by Barrett, to create a state labor commission to take the place of the labor commissioner. The bill permitting the trustees of the State Agricultural College to loan the endowment fund at such rate of interest as should by them be deemed proper, was passed. Carter, of Sioux, introduced a resolution extending sympathy to the Boers and wishing them success in their war with England. Kerr, of Grundy, seconded the motion. The resolution was tabled by a vote of 57 to 22.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 23.—The senate received an invitation from the supervisors of Polk county to visit the county asylum for the incurable insane. Porter's bill requiring that mine owners be prevented from keeping more than three weeks of a miner's pay at a time, was passed. Bill reducing rate of interest on permanent school fuud from 6 to 5½ per cent was reported favorably. Bill providing that confidential clerks and stenographers of lawyers and doctors shall not be compelled to divulge professional secrets passed. Bills were introduced as follows: By Healy, granting school corporations power to receive and care for bequests; by Frewin, requiring that all fines derived from violations of the liquor law be paid into the county general fund; by Arthaud, stipulating that threshing engines shall cross bridges at their own hazard; by McIntire, making train robbery and train wrecking punishable by death or imprisonment at hard labor for life

HOUSE.

Clark, of Dallas, for the special committee to obtain from the board of control a report on printing and binding, submitted a report. The committee learned from the board of control that the latter had asked the state printer and binder to bid on work in but two instances; that they had declined, claiming that they were entitled to the work under the statute and therefore did not care to enter into competition with other printers. The committee learned from the board that the figures named in the two bids made by the state printer and binder were greatly in excess of figures named by other printers for the same work. The board of control's statement showed a considerable saving to the state by the adoption of the competitive bid system. The committee submitted the report without comment or recommendation, and on motion of Prentis it was referred to the committee on printing. The senate bill, permitting the trustees of the state agricultural college to loan the endowment fund at any rate of interest deemed advisable, was passed. Among bills introduced were the following: By Dows, for the establishment of a state library commission; by Payne, requiring county treasurers to make annual reports to the board of supervisors; by Barrett, making a radical reduction in charges of telephone companies.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 24.—The senate voted to print 2,000 copies of the board of control report. Bills were introduced as follows: By Emmert, striking out a clause in the code which gives the Welsbach lamp a monopoly in all tests of oil made in the state; by Griswold, providing for clearing the records of cancelled mortgages; by Cheshire, granting school directors permission to divide districts into as many precincts as they may deem necessary; by Hazelton, the caucus normal school bill; by Moffit, providing a heavy fine for the offense of smuggling whisky and morphine to convicts; also providing punishment for use of blasphemous language around state institutions; by Hazelton, extending to cities of second class authority to levy special tax for fire departments; by Moffit, appropriating $2,000 for purpose of locating graves of Iowa soldiers at Vicksburg.

HOUSE.

Bill for improvement of river front at Des Moines passed, as did also the bill permitting cities of 2,000 population to elect park commissioners. Report of committee on banks and banking, recommending for passage the bill providing that savings banks may receive deposits to 20 times the amount of their capital stock instead of ten as under the present law. Bills were introduced as follows: By Clarke, to abolish the offices of state printer and binder and provide for a contract system; by Byers, the caucus normal school bill; by Warren, to prohibit the marriage of divorced persons within one year in case of personal service of appearance by defendant, or two years in case of service by publication; by Eaton, providing for the appointment of public examiners and for a uniform system of keeping the books of county treasurers; by Santee, raising the salaries of county recorders.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 25.—No business of importance was transacted. Bills were introduced as follows: By Fitzpatrick, prohibiting wholesale liquor dealers from other states from sending solicitors into Iowa to make a house to house canvass for orders; by Hazelton, providing that paving tax shall not be assessed for a greater amount than the property is benefited and legalizing a special tax of not more than five mills from which the difference between the actual benefit derived by property and the cost of the paving shall be paid; by McArthur, permitting the executive council to print extracts from the code; by Young, providing that bodies of paupers shall be turned over to medical schools if the relatives are willing; by Hazelton, providing for the prosecution of barbers who violate the Sunday law; by Griswold, providing that persons signing petitions of candidates for office be required to sign affidavits that they will support the candidate.

HOUSE.

A message was received from the governor announcing the death of Edward Townsend, one of the regents of the state normal school. Bill permitting cities of first class having less than 25,000 population, to levy tax for library purposes, was passed. Bills were introduced as follows: By Sokal, to prohibit the selling or giving of morphine or whisky to any of the inmates of the state institutions; by Stuckslaker, to provide the erection of markers and monuments at Shiloh; by Towne, relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors; by Jones, relating to the inspection of petroleum; by Sokal, in relation to distribution of text books in districts adopting a uniform series.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 26.—The appointment of Col. H. H. Rood to succeed ex-Governor Larrabee on the board of control was announced. Trewin introduced a bill which is intended to do away with drawing party lines in the printing of tickets for municipal elections. The bill provides that the names of all candidates shall be printed in alphabetical order and that in no way shall the political faith of the candidate be indicated on the ticket. Other bills were introduced as follows: By Bishop, relating to marking and counting ballots; by Hobart, making an appropriation for the Cherokee hospital for insane; by Alexander, doing away with the one per cent tax levied on Iowa insurance companies by the last general assembly. Adjourned till Monday.

HOUSE.

Bill to allow savings banks to receive deposits to the amount of 20 times their capital stock instead of 10, caused a spirited debate, and was made a special order for next Wednesday. Bill permitting boards of supervisors in counties of 30,000 to fix salaries of recorders, passed. Sauer's bill making owners of steamboats liable the same as hotel keepers, passed. Bills were introduced as follows: By Dows, exempting Iowa insurance companies from one per cent tax; by McAleer, for the establishment of a school for the deaf in the eastern part of the state; by Eaton, for the consolidation of the state library and historical department; by Dunham, to regulate the sale and require the redemption of passenger tickets by common carriers.

Good Shot by Boers.

HEAD BOER LAAGER, Ladysmith, Jan. 24.—The headquarters of Generals White and Hunter were smashed by a shot from "Long Tom." It is not known whether or not any of the occupants of the building were killed.

Prohibitionists to Meet in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—Oliver W. Stewart, chairman of the national prohibition party committee, has issued a call for the assembling of the national convention of that party in Chicago June 27 next, to nominate candidates for president and vice president.

DES MOINES, Jan. 29, 1900.

The caucus committee to prepare a normal school measure has completed its work, drafting a bill to provide for three additional schools. The measure will be introduced, probably in both houses, as soon as possible. It provides that one school shall be established in 1901, one in 1902 and one 1903. The schools shall be in charge of boards of trustees. The locations shall be determined by joint ballot in the legislature one week after the passage of the act. A majority of all votes cast will be necessary to fix locations, the first town receiving the necessary majority being the location for the institution founded in 1901; the next town receiving a majority shall be the seat of the school established in 1902, and the third town to receive a majory shall be the seat of the school established in 1903. After the tenth ballot the places having the smallest number of votes may be dropped from the list. A site of not less than forty acres, not less than three-fourths of a mile nor more than two miles from the business portion of the town must be proffered free, with $25,000 bond for the performance of the contract.

The result of a poll of the house by Stallcop, of Sac, makes the future look black for the normal schools bill. Mr. Stallcop has been quietly looking the matter up for days, and he declares positively the three normal schools bill is beaten in the house.

A bill for a woman reformatory at Anamosa has been introduced in the house by Representative Stewart, of Polk. It has the sanction of the board of control and of the organizations such as the W. C. T. U. which have been opposing the methods of the girls' reform school at Mitchellville. The bill is a long one, specifying in detail points regarding the organization and management of the proposed institution. The reformatory shall be in two divisions, a reformatory and a penal section. Both shall be under the management of a woman superintendent to be appointed by the board of control with a salary fixed at $1,000 per year. The departments are to be kept in separate buildings, the reformatory to occupy the entire building now used as the female department of the penitentiary and the penal department that portion of the criminal insane building now used by female convicts. The reformatory division is for the care of such women over 16 years of age as may hereafter be convicted of crimes other than murder or of such girls over 14 years of age as the board of control may see fit to transfer from the girls' industrial school at Mitchellville. The penal department is for the safe keeping of girls and women over 16 who have been convicted of the crime of murder or are for other reasons not eligible to the reformatory division.

The secretary of state says the fees he received during the month of January from the filing of articles of incorporation exceed those of any previous month in the history of the office. They have at present reached the $8,000 mark. This fund has been swelled by a large fee of $3,017 paid by the C. B. & Q. road in filing articles of incorporation covering the double tracking it is soon to do. The articles include those of the company which will build the double track from Murray, Clarke county, to Creston, and the other from Fairfield to Ottumwa. The state board of control appeared before a joint meeting of the ways and means committee of the senate and house on the evening of the 24th and told its story. The members discussed every problem presented with ease, showing a remarkable fund of information, an intimate knowledge of what is being done along similar lines in other states; familiarity with every detail of conduct of institutions, and exhibited a record, in answer, of having bought 75 per cent of the supplies in Iowa, and yet never buying from an Iowan if another bid was lower. The session was held in the senate chamber.

Members of the Shiloh battlefield commission, appointed by Governor Jackson in 1896 to mark the ground at the battlefield occupied by Iowa troops, appeared before the senate committee on appropriations and asked for an appropriation of $65,000 to erect a monument to Iowa soldiers and to pay the expenses of demarkation of the ground. Commissioners Godfrey, Huston, Hays, Rood and Munroe made speeches favoring the plan proposed.

A great deal of interest is developing over the election of trustees for the three state educational institutions. It is probable that the joint convention for the election of these officers will be held during the next two weeks. The list of trustees whose terms expire includes four regents of the State University, four trustees of the State Agricultural College and two trustees of the State Normal School to be chosen. The regents of the Agricultural College are chosen from congressional districts. The normal school trustees are chosen from the state at large. All hold office for six years.

HIS WORD OF HONOR.

A Tale of the Blue and the Gray.

BY E. WERNER.

CHAPTER VI.

Then, with this last thought, a burning sense of shame filled the young officer's soul. The face of his old commander suddenly rose vividly before him. He saw his earnest gaze; heard the warning words: "If Lieutenant Roland has not returned by eight o'clock this evening, I shall believe that he is either dead or dishonored." And at the same moment William felt that he could not stand in his presence with a lie or an evasion on his lips; that he must tell him the truth; and with this thought the struggle was over.

He released himself so hastily, so abruptly, that the young girl almost tottered back. His lips quivered, but his voice was as firm as when he made the fateful promise.

"I cannot be a dishonored man, Florence, not even for the prize of your hand. If you fear Edward more than you love me—if you have not the courage to defend this love against him—why, I must lose you. I will not break my word of honor."

Florence had shrunk back. Her dark eyes rested with a look of mingled surprise and anger upon the man, whose rigid sense of duty she could not understand. But ere she could frame an answer, the door again opened, and a stranger appeared on the threshold. It was a young man in uniform, who paused a moment, scanning the pair with a hurried glance, then courteously approached the lady.

"Pardon this intrusion, Miss Harrison. Allow me to request a brief private interview with this gentleman. I have some important news for him."

Florence recognized Captain Wilson, Edward's friend, whom she had seen several times. She knew only too well what had brought him to Springfield that day, but this sudden entrance into her drawing-room aroused the utmost astonishment. For the moment made with the greatest caution. Edward's revenge was swift and sure.

"I do not know you, sir," said the young officer slowly, without lowering his weapon or averting his eyes from his enemy. "You, on the contrary, seem to be very well informed concerning my personality. In that case, you probably are also aware that I am in the house of my future father-in-law, and came solely to see my betrothed bride. By what right do you attack me?"

Wilson shrugged his shoulders.

"By the same right which you would exercise if an officer of the hostile army should fall into your hands in disguise. I am a soldier and must discharge my duty; it is not my business to inquire the motive that brought you here. Will you surrender?"

"So long as I carry a weapon, no! However the struggle may end, the first man who touches me I will shoot down!"

"Then you will force me to extreme measures. The consequences must be on your head."

The captain turned toward the terrace, with the intention of summoning the men who were waiting there, when Florence, who had stood trembling and deadly pale, anticipated him. She rushed past him to Roland, threw herself on his breast, and clinging to him frantically, exclaimed:

"You must not, William! There are ten to one! You will be conquered in the struggle! They will kill you!"

"Let me go, Florence! Let me go, I say!"

William was vainly striving to release himself, when Captain Wilson, taking advantage of the favorable moment in which his enemy was defenseless in the arms that clasped him so closely, with a rapid movement she lacked the least comprehension of the situation.

But William understood it better. He saw the Confederate uniform, and with it the danger menacing him, and slowly thrusting his hand into the breast-pocket of his coat, where he carried his pistol, he replied with cold formality:

"I shall be at your service, sir, as soon as my conversation with Miss Harrison is over. We have some important matters to discuss, so I beg—"

Glance and tone plainly requested the captain to retire. But instead of doing so, he advanced close to the young officer, saying in a low tone:

"I wish to spare the lady, and hope you will aid me—Lieutenant William Roland."

William started. He perceived that he was betrayed, and did not doubt a moment the author of the treachery. To deny his identity was impossible. Only prompt action could be of service now. If he succeeded in reaching his horse, which was fastened a few hundred paces from the house, escape might yet be possible. Hastily retreating a few steps, at the same time drawing his revolver, he said in a loud, sharp tone:

"Well, what do you want with Lieutenant Roland?"

Florence uttered a cry of terror. She, too, now suddenly realized the full extent of the peril, but the captain remained unmoved, though the pistol was aimed at him.

"Yield, Mr. Roland," he said, quietly. "Resistance would be vain. You will not find your horse where you left him; all the exits from the house are guarded; and the servants have orders to prevent your departure by force. Convince yourself that flight has become an impossibility."

He pointed toward the terrace and William's eyes followed the gesture. He really did see several figures whose faces were unfamiliar to him, and who certainly would not fail to carry out the orders which they had received.

The preparations had evidently been snatched the revolver. A cry of indignation escaped the young man's lips. The next instant he had wrenched himself free, but it was too late. He stood defenseless.

"Florence, what have you done?" he cried in a tone of sharp reproach.

"Saved you!" she passionately exclaimed. "They would have killed you here before my eyes!"

"Calm yourself, Miss Harrison," said the captain, gravely. "Lieutenant Roland will not be so mad as to offer resistance now. Once more, sir, yield! Spare us useless bloodshed. It is no disgrace to a soldier if he submits to the inevitable, and I give you my word that you have no dishonoring treatment to fear as a prisoner of the Confederacy you will be treated in an honorable manner.

William bent his eyes gloomily on the floor. He perceived the truth of the words. Longer resistance would have been madness and, at the utmost, brought only degrading treatment upon him. After a brief, uncomfortable pause, he turned to the officer.

"I am in your power. Dispose of me."

"I will send news of your arrest to the city. Meanwhile, remain here; and, if you give me your word of honor to make no attempt to fly—"

"No! I yield to force, but to that alone."

"Then I cannot leave you in Miss Harrison's society, but must provide a more secure prison."

"Which you will doubtless find in Springfield," said William, with an outburst of resentment. "I was prepared for everything when I risked the ride here, except treachery in the house in which I was called son."

"You are right, Mr. Roland." The captain raised his voice so loud that a person on the other side of the closed door could not fail to hear it. "But do not address your reproaches to me. I did what I was forced to do. I do not believe in treachery, and I regret that you have fallen a victim to it."

"My words do not apply to you. I know the traitor—and now I will ask only a moment longer."

He went to his fiance and bent over her, but just at that moment a side-door was hastily flung open and Ralph rushed in.

"Miss Florence, master is asking for you. He has suddenly grown worse. We are afraid the end is near."

Florence had hitherto found it difficult to sustain herself. This last blow threatened to crush her. She tottered and would have fallen had not William clasped her in his arms.

"I cannot go!" she murmured, despairingly. "Not at this moment! William! What will become of you?"

"Lieutenant Roland is my prisoner and under my protection," said Wilson, with marked emphasis. "Have no anxiety for him. I will answer for his safety so long as he remains in Springfield."

"Go to your father," said William, pushing the trembling girl with gentle violence toward the door. "You hear? No harm will befall me, and your place is there. Courage, my poor Florence! I cannot be with you in this trying hour, but, at least, you know that I am near. So be resolute."

He gave her to Ralph, who drew the half-senseless girl away with him, and then went back to the captain.

"If you wish to go to the sick-room," said the latter, in a low tone, "I will not prevent you."

William made a gesture of refusal.

"No. After what has passed between me and the sick man, my presence could not help exerting a bad influence upon him. He has no suspicion that I am here; let him remain ignorant of it. I thank you for your consideration, sir. Let us go!"

The servants, at the captain's order, had left their posts at the doors, but stood whispering together with troubled faces. Ralph had betrayed that the officer under arrest was Miss Florence's lover. And it had happened in her own house! True, the master of the house had had no share in it; they all knew now that he was dying.

Edward Harrison, pacing up and down the drawing-room alone, with a cloud upon his brow, knew it also. The end so long expected was coming more quickly than had been supposed. The physician had given the sick man days, and now, at the utmost, there were only hours. Yet Edward had not courage to enter the apartment where Florence was, and had Ralph bring him reports, which constantly grew more alarming.

Then Captain Wilson entered, but the cordiality with which he usually treated young Harrison had given place to cold formality; he bowed as if he were saluting a stranger.

"I wished to inform you that I am going to the city to report the capture," he said, distantly. "An escort will be sent for the prisoner; until then he must remain at Springfield."

Edward did not appear to notice the icy coldness in the tone and manner of his former friend, and answered quietly, as if the point in question were a matter of the utmost indifference:

"Have no anxiety. I'll see that the spy doesn't escape us."

"I am positive that Lieutenant Roland is not a spy," replied Wilson, with marked emphasis. "What brought him here is perfectly apparent, and I shall make my opinion as emphatic as possible at the court-martial."

THE MEMORY OF FISH.

Sometimes Keeps Them from Biting a Second Time.

Fisherman believe that a fish almost caught a first time does not easily let itself be caught a second time, that he remembers the pain he suffered, and that he even lets his companions know his cruel experience. This is easily accounted for by their memory and M. Semon gives an incident characteristic of the subject which shows that certain fish have their memory seconded by a particular gift of observation. He had seen around a ship in which he was sailing a number of those curious fish called echineis remora, one of the peculiarities of which is that on the top of the head they have a kind of hook, which permits them to attach themselves to a vessel or to the belly of fish larger than themselves. M. Semon wished to procure some specimens and threw into the water a hook baited with a piece of crab. A first remora was soon taken, but the others, having evidently seen the capture, allowed the line to be thrown into the water many times without even touching it. They remained attached to the vessel, regarding with an indifferent eye the most succulent bits that could be offered them. M. Semon renewed the experiment, and in no case could he capture two remoras belonging to the same band. These fish have evidently powers of observation and a well-developed memory.

Disheveled.

From Judge: Beth was deeply interested in a weeping willow that her father had planted the night before on the lawn. "Come, mamma, hurry!" she called, as she looked from the sitting room window, "and see this cunning little tree with its hair all down."

FARM AND GARDEN.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture, Viticulture and Floriculture.

Testing Seeds.

We herewith show an arrangement for testing seeds, as described in a publication by the Department of Agriculture. Take two plates and place in one of them a folded cloth. Wool or flannel is preferable, since it remains moist for a long time, but any cloth will do. The cloth should be free from dyes that will come out in water, since they may contain chemicals that may be injurious to the seed. Wet the cloth, pressing out the surplus water, leaving it very damp, but not soaked. Place the seeds between the folds of cloth, put in the number of the record, marked in pencil on a piece of paper, with date and number of seeds, and cover with the second plate inverted. Plenty of air will get in between the plates and the upper one will prevent too rapid evaporation of moisture. If the tests are to be made during the winter, keep the apparatus in the living room, as the heat of such room will be sufficient for most seeds. During the night the seeds should be put in a warm place. Instead of the cloth, old newspapers well-soaked may be used. These need to be moistened more frequently, however.

In testing beet seed-balls special care is necessary in recording the number of germinated seeds. The balls must be left in the test during the entire time of fourteen days, but whenever a seed has sprouted it must be cut out with a sharp knife. One hundred seed balls should produce at least 150 seedlings.

Growing Potatoes.

In early spring, last year, I plowed to the depth of six inches, a piece of blue grass sod. In May I cut the sod thoroughly with the disc. The latter part of June I planted the land to potatoes in the following manner, says a contributor to Epitomist: Plowed one round in the middle of the patch. Planted potatoes—which were cut in halves—in these two furrows. Placed the seed on the mellow soil, at the side of the furrow, and a little from the bottom in order to prevent the furrow horse from stepping on it, and also to guard against planting too deep. Covered with the plow, and then planted in every third furrow.

The flat side of the seed was placed underneath, for that gives each plant a fair chance and the crop will ripen evenly. When the potatoes had had time to sprout nicely, the ground was thoroughly harrowed. As soon as the plants appeared above ground the cultivator was put to work, and followed with the harrow. They were now left alone until six or eight inches high. Potatoes planted in this way do not make much growth until the fall rains come. But I have always succeeded in growing a good crop by planting the middle of June. My last year's crop yielded 285 bushels per acre. I always plant a late variety, if I plant late in the season.

My regular system is to plow my potato ground late in the fall or very early in the spring. I am never much bothered with bugs. Just as soon as the soil is fit to work in the spring I plant early potatoes. I always cut off and throw away the cluster of sprouts at the bloom end of the tuber when cutting the seed. Too many sprouts in one bunch will produce small potatoes. If early potatoes fail—and they often do in this locality—the late crop can be relied upon. Last year my late potatoes were sold for 50 cents a bushel, which made me $142.50 an acre.

Horticultural Observations.

When trees are planted in an orchard with the idea of cutting some of them out the Missouri pippin is recommended for alternate rows. It is an early bearer and short lived. The trouble with trees that are not short-lived is that when once put into the orchard they are neglected and allowed to grow long after they should have been taken out. A tree that dies itself is to be preferred in such a position.

The state fruit lists are open to criticism, especially when the states cover several degrees of latitude or have diverse conditions caused by large bodies of water or many elevations. Most of these fruit lists are made by a committee chosen from different parts of the state, often coming from counties where the soil, climate, and elevations are different. They meet and find themselves at variance and have to patch up the best truce they can. Perhaps this is as well as can be done under the circumstances, but it is evident that we will have to get down to more serious work in the future.

Someone asks the question: "Is cold storage diminishing the necessity for late-keeping varieties of apples?" In the light of the present year's experience we would say no. Even cold storage cannot be depended on to keep the fall varieties till mid-winter or spring. Many thousands of barrels of that kind of fruit that went into cold storage last fall kept very badly. This may not have been the fault of the cold storage, but of the condition of the fruit when it was put in. We cannot depend on storing fruit in proper condition for storage, or of having it eaten up as soon as it gets out of the cold storage house. We must have apples that will hold together for weeks before being stored as well as weeks after coming from the cold storage house. If a man buys a barrel of apples for his family he wants to know that they will last some weeks till they can be used up. No, cold storage has not diminished the necessity for late keeping fruits.

Concentration of Breeding.

Important as the head of the herd is to the highest development of its members, it is surprising to continually hear of dairymen ignoring breed and performance of a strain and selecting the cheapest animal, says New Zealand Dairyman. It is all the more strange considering that, in buying a bull, it is not so much a matter of putting money into an individual animal, but it means the improvement of the whole future stock, and the improvement, of course, must be largely gauged by the value of the animal selected as the head. Selection and culling of the cows is most important, but the surest and speediest way of bringing up the herd is to have a finely bred bull from a proved milking strain. As dairy farmers in New Zealand get cramped for room, concentration in everything else must necessarily follow—concentration of cultivation, of feeding and of breeding. By concentration of breeding we mean making one good, well bred-up cow do the work of two scrubbers. When prices get tighter, dairymen who are slow to see this principle now will have the fact forced upon them that they can't afford to feed and care for the scrub animal; it is the men who have already learned this lesson who are now happy and prosperous members of the great dairying fraternity.

Old or Young Sows.

A bulletin on hog raising in the south says: The number of litters which a sow should be allowed to have before she is fattened for butchering depends on the animal herself. When a young sow has only four or five pigs, or shows herself to be a poor milker or a careless and indifferent mother, the sooner she is fattened the better; but if she does fairly well she should be given a second trial. The second litter is usually larger than the first. If she then proves a good mother and her pigs from both litters develop into good porkers, she should be kept as a breeder until she can be replaced by a more prolific and better animal. An old sow which regularly raises large litters of good pigs is worth half a dozen untried gilts. An aged sow mated with a young boar will produce pigs which will mature earlier than those produced when the sow is young and the boar aged, which is a strong argument in favor of keeping a sow as long as she continues to breed satisfactorily. Ordinarily sows cease to be profitable breeders after they are 4 or 5 years old, but some raise good litters after they reach 8 or 9 years. When a sow more than 4 years old fails to give a good litter whenever it is due, she may as well be fattened at once.

Soil for Cauliflower.

A deep, moist, clay soil is the best for cauliflower, although good crops can be grown on any good garden soil, says Vick's. I cover the ground two or three inches deep with stable manure, and plow it in. Then harrow and furrow two and one-half feet apart. If I have well rotted manure, I scatter it in the furrow, and mix it with the soil with the cultivator; or, if the manure is not at hand, I set the plants and in a few days apply around them a little commercial fertilizer that is rich in nitrogen. Vegetables of which the leaves or stalks are the edible parts need plenty of nitrogen in an available form. The plants are transplanted at different times from May until June. Cauliflower plants from the hotbed should not be set too early, unless they are well hardened, for they are more easily injured by frosts than cabbages. I do the most of the cultivation with the wheel hoe and horse cultivator.

To insure success in a dry season, one must have some means of irrigation. I have now irrigating works in my market garden, so that I may be prepared for drouths when they come. The plants should not stop growing at any time, hence the importance of irrigating them during a drouth.

Home-Made and Commercial Manures.—Farmers should look more to the utilization of home resources. He who has not learned to husband his farm manure, to "tickle" his soil as Prof. Roberts says, by tillage, to destroy weeds at the right time, and make use of the legume to gather nitrogen, is not sufficiently advanced to hope to use fertilizers economically. The experience of the best European agriculture shows that, husband our resources as we will, we must still depend to a great extent upon commercial manures. The varying chemical and physical character of soils, and the special demands of innumerable varieties of plants render the problem extremely complex.

The letter B is always in debt—although there is no necessity for it.

Bees are said to see an enormous distance. When absent from their hive they go up in the air until they see their home, and then fly toward it in a straight line.

STRANGE TALES TERSELY TOLD.

The story is told of an intoxicated man coming out of a saloon in Spirit Lake recently, and carrying a comfortable jag, he fell upon the sidewalk. He was unable to arise. A bright and sharp eyed Miss was passing about this time and a thought struck her and she opened the door of the saloon and said: "Mister, your sign has fallen down!" The proprietor came to the door and immediately recognized that a truthful point had been made at his expense.—Ex.

A Missouri young bachelor sheriff, who was called upon to serve an attachment on a handsome young widow had the following experience; "Madam, I have an attachment for you." She blushed and said the attachment was reciprocated. You misunderstand he said, you must proceed to court. She told him she knew it was leap year but she had rather he would do the courting. Madam, this is no time for trifling, he continued, the justice is waiting. O, I prefer a minister, she said. A squire married me the first time and I had bad luck."—Ex.

A truthful, if not modest exchange relates this joke upon one of its lazy citizens. It is told of a lazy man, that in order to save himself an inconvenience, when he had his house built he included an automatic bath tub. The bath tub was so arranged that he could lie in bed, and upon pushing a button, the door would open and a tub would glide in from the next room up to the side of the bed. All he would have to do was to roll into the tub and take his morning bath. One day he was showing a party of gentlemen friends over his new house when he came to his room and said: "Let me show you my automatic bath tub." He pushed the button, the door opened, there was a yell, and the tub came sailing into the room with his wife in it. She now takes semi-annual baths. —Ex.

Let the Man Reform Before Marriage.

"A girl should never mary a man that she may reform him," writes Margaret Sangster, in the February Ladies' Home Journal. "If he is in need of reformation let him prove himself worthy by turning from evil and setting his face steadfastly and perseveringly to good before he asks a girl to surrender herself and her life to him. Nor should a girl be too impatient with father, mother and friends if they counsel delay in deciding a matter which is to influence her whole career and her lover's, when they, with clearer eyes than her own, perceive in him an unsuitability to her."

E. L. Tiede of Belmond advertises a rather novel sale in the Belmond papers—he advertises giving presents with a $1.00, $5.00 and $10.00 purchase, this sale is on Wenesday Feby. 7th the presents given with the $10.00 purchase is worth from $1.00 to $3.00 each. He will sell ladies jackets at 95 cents to $4.95, the $4.95 jackets were never sold for less than $10.00. His shoe bargains at $1.98 are worth from $2.50 to $3.50 per pair. A special feature of the sale will be a remnant sale which means many goods at less than can be bought for in any market. This notice was paid for by Mr. Tiede, but that does not make the sale less attractive and you will find Tiede always living up to his advertisements.

EDITOR BAILEY'S SPASMODIC FIT!

He Charges the County Treasurer, County Attorney and Board of Supervisors with neglect of duty.

COUNTY MONEY WRONGFULLY APPROPRIATED.

A Partial Investigation Proves the Utter Fallacy of the Charges Made.

The Britt Tribune editor comes out last week with a column effusion in which he scores the board of supervisors, county attorney and county treasurer. He labels the puerile product of his mental throes "More Calamity," and the following is his howl.

And now our Board of Supervisors appear to have got their foot in it again far worse than they did in appropriated public money for a pivate building, which had the merit of having two sides to the question. The tax ferrets are to get fifty per cent for collecting back taxes from tax dodgers and a contract has been made to that effect. The first thing to consider is: What share of the public money has the Board of Supervisers power to appropriate for any purpose? Look at your tax receipt and you will find the levies as follows in Britt township for for the year 1898 that you paid in 1899;

General levies	17 mills
Ind. Dist. Corp. levy	67 mills
Total	84 mills

The Code of Iowa sets forth clearly the moneys that can be appropriated by the Board of Supervisors, and for any purposes whatever they have no jurisdiction outside of the seventeen mills general funds and but the six mill county fund can be used for general purposes. Now six mills is one fourteenth part of eighty-four mills and if the ferrets are to receive fifty per cent of the tax or forty-two mills, then the Supervisors will have a right to give them six mills or all of the county fund portion while thirty-six mills on the other funds are clearly illegal, as the Board of Supervisors has no jurisdiction whatever over these funds. Now we elect a Co. Treasurer and pay him to collect taxes. If by any means he considers that the taxes are not legally or fully assessed, we have a Co. Attorney elected and pay him a salary to see to the rights and uphold the laws of the county, for the county. If the Co Attorney can't find illegal assessments and have them legal, let us fire him and elect one who can, and if we have not any legal authorithy or ability in our county sufficient to uphold our laws let us import some and give it a job, not a smeller, but to a resident lawyer. If our county treasurer can't collect the taxes, then let us fire him and elect one who can. But we don't need to import anyone. Our county attorney is capable of performing all the duties of his office and so is the county treasurer, and we don't need any importations of tax ferrets from Indiana or any other sea port to hunt our taxes. If the contract made by our Board of Supervisors don't bankrupt Hancock county and put the county funds so far in the hole that county warrants are at a discount for ten years it will be because the money that belongs to the various funds has been misappropriated and no effort is made to get them back from the county funds which can be done if any one with determined effort goes after them. That 50 per cent. must entirely be paid out of the six mill county fund to those tax ferrets if it is paid at all and paid legally. The Board of Supervisors shouldif they consider that taxes are being "dodged"--which is a notorious fact—have ordered the county attorney to look it up and if he needed assistance, they should have furnished it and the bills should have been paid as all other bills are that the board have any jurisdiction over, out of the county fund. This is the opinion of the Tribune editor without predjudice or bias. And we don't believe our Co, treasurer has a right to issue a tax receipt to anyone unless the cash is paid into his hands and apportioned to their respective funds. we don't care what orders the board of supervisors may have made, and neither do we believe that after it is once so apportioned he will dare bav one cent of it to tax ferrets or for any other purpose except as provided by law for the disbursement of these various funds.

You will notice that a claim is set up that it is the duty of the county attorney to see that all tax dodgers and suspects fully give in all and completely, their property for taxation. This is not true and there is no law, according to acknowledged good authority, to show that it is the duty of our county attorney, to do anything of the kind. Nor is it the duty of the county treasurer to examine the records, and ferret out these several individuals who have been remiss in giving in the full list of taxable property. His duty is to collect the taxes as shown by the assessors books and the books in the county treasurers office, and did he assume the duties, it would be without authority and without pay.

The burden of proof rests not with the county treasurer and not with the county attorney but with the several assessors, and the individuals who willfully, negligently, or ignorantly fail to give in the full amount of monies and credits, and taxable property to the assessor.

Now these things being true—whose duty is it to look after this matter? The Board of Supervisors, surely. And this being the case we cannot see wherein they have overstepped the bounds of prudence in securing the aid of experts to do the work

It would make a horse laugh to think that this transaction would send Hancock county into bankruptcy because the board of Supervisors have dug up out of the old records about $10,000.00 to present to Hancock county with their compliments.

It was lost.

It is being found.

And in this case it comes as a gift to the people. We do not believe there are a half dozen people in Hancock county tha could do the work, and in th number we would not incl Bailey, of the Tribune.

Then again the "ferrets" have been at work for nearly five months, and there were never less than thre and most of the time five of them at work, and when you come to pay them reasonably for that class of work they will not be greatly burdened with wealth when they get through.

This 50 per cent that the "ferrets" get comes out of the money collected through the efforts of the experts and will be a burden on no one, since it comes out of monied men who can stand the loss.

In another place in his paper he states that there are men in this county who would do the work for thr dollars per day. Unless we have been misinformed those now doing the work will not realize that amount.

We make this assertion: If the county never realized one cent, it is worth the full amount to have our county records cleaned up—something that has not been, since the county was organized.

The egotism of some people passeth all understanding. The constant flings of the Tribune at every straw fluttering on this side of the dividing line is not without a sinister meaning and we don't believe Bailey cares a rap whether one dollar or all of it goes to the "ferrets" so long as he can stir up a feeling "feninst the government," right or wrong.

It may not be the fact that the Tribnne is beginning thus early a campaign that is prospective in the near future. It may not be that he is seeking by these questionable methods to bias public sentiment. We say it may not be, but if that is the case—tune up gentlemen we have our partners for the cottilion.

M. S. Gilman's Letter.

Stourd O. T. Jan. 27. 1900.

DEAR EDITOR:—As per promise, I will writ you a short letter. I arrived here at Stroud Dec. 20, and as far at possible I have given this country a carefull study and examination. Stroud, is situated in the extreme eastern part of Lincoln County O. T. The town lots were sold Feb. 12, 1898, at Oklahoma City, 63 miles west. The first days' sale—the receipts were $48,000 cash. Stroud town site proper was nothing but a corn and cotton field. The above shows conclusivlly the confidence the people had in the location of a new town, in the midst of a beautiful agricultural country, which is rapidly improving—I would advise those desiring a valuable home—say 80 or 160 acres or more at low prices, to come at once and see for themselves. The large diversity of crops raised, guarantees a sure income each year to the farmer—fruits grow in abundance, —apples, peaches, grapes and pears, also all kinds of berries. The selection of a home is a very important question. One should study climate, resources and product. There should be no guess work and hap-hazzard method about it. It is a real and serious question, one that envolves the happiness and well fare of the whole family—therefore select first a healthy climate, one where there is good water, plenty of fuel and where a diversity of crops can be raised. The more natural resources the country posesses, the greater opportunities for success. Surface and soil are not so important as a good climate and produtive season. A place to make a good, square, honest living, with the least hardships and discouragements. I think as far as I have investigated in eastern O. T.,—of course one must exercise common sense, and good judgement in selecting a farm here, as in all other matters. Its a rolling timber and prairie, with an abundance of pure water—there can't be a more heathly climate for most people. Timber, fuel, building material, and fencing are very cheap. Land is cheap, ranging from $5 to $15 per acre. I have looked at several farms and bought one, and expect to buy one or two more, before I leave here. Have good school here, about 3 miles apart. Teachers wages range from $30 to 50 per month. This is one of the best markets in O. T., being on the Frisco R. R., which runs direct from here to St Louis. We have four hog and cattle buyers here, one of them paid out ten thousand dollars alone for hogs bought in one day. Stroud claims a population of 2,000 and is steadly growing. Hoping this may find you well, I remain yours truly.

Mother Wellemeyer came down and visited with us over Sunday.

Dallas Butterfield was up from Goodell Saturday distributing show bills.

Aug. Dusenberg of Rockford, was visiting friends in Klemme over Sunday.

R. M. Day was at Garner Friday night attending G. A. R. Post meeting.

Lee Skeen of Sioux City was visiting his wife's folks, the Merrick's over Sunday.

Miss Nora Gates, of Garner, has been visiting friends and relatives in town for some time.

Weck and Doc. Robbins of Goodell were renewing aquantance in Klemme the latter part of last week.

Mrs. Greggory of Clear Lake visited several days of last week and this, with her daughter Mrs. Lew Lewis.

An elevator at Latimer collapsed the other day ruining the building and mixing all kinds of grain in a heap.

Agents on salary of $15.00 per week and expenses; the greatest agent seller ever produced; every stock and poultry raiser buys it on sight. Hustlers wanted. Refference. Address, with stamp, American Mfg. Co. Terre Haute, Ind.

L. G. Schultz transacted business at the county seat Saturday. He has purchased a copy of the Code of Iowa and will study law some.

The Cedar Rapids Republican is like good wine, it improves with age and is fast becoming one of the leading dailies of the state.

The Hancock County Farmers' Institute is in session at Garner. We hoped to be able to attend, but press of business matters will not permit.

Joe. Dietrich, of Charles City was at Klemme Saturday looking over some of Hancock County's fine improved farms with a view of purchasing.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Skeen, came down from Ganer Saturday evening for a visit with relatives. Mrs. Skeen is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Merrick.

A Brother Editor was in our town this week "ratting" for job work. This is a game two can play at. We are a little modest in our notice this time but will not vouch for the future.

Dr. Fraser was down from Garner Saturday, and made our office a short visit. The Doctor is a pleasant gentleman,—withal a good physician and is enjoying a liberal patronage.

Dr. H. F. Thompson. of Belmond, formerly with the S. D. Regiment in the Philippines, as hospital surgeon, has moved to Buffalo Center, where he will engage in the practice of his profession.

The Britt News says that "Every paper in the 10th District is for Cummins." We must confess that this is a bit of news to us. We know that nearly every one supported Thos. A. Way, but that was in 99.

It is wonderful the amount of interest the Garner papers have taken in the Farmers' Institute now in session in that city. Will bet a jaller dog not one of the editors will attend the meetings or give more than a ten line writeup unless they are paid for it.

Great opportunity offered to good, reliable men. Salary of $15 per week and expenses for man with rig to introduce our Poultry Mixture and Insect Destroyer in the country. Send stamp, American Mfg. Co., Terre Haute, Ind.

They do say that Bert Crawford imagined his faith was strong enough to allow him to walk on the water. Strange to say he had not sufficient of the saving grace to keep him up and he sank down, down, down—much to the surprise of the fishes—They are dead—the fishes.

The deaf mute, representing a Dabuque institution, furnished a large number of Corwith, Britt, Goodell, Klemme and Garner business men some mighty cheap machine advertising. If ever there was a fraud, this style of advertising is one. But then—"charity covers a multitude of sins."

Hancock Signal:—The Renix Bros. gave their entertainment at the opera house Thursday evening. The instrumental music was fine and the dancing was the best ever seen in this city. At the Goodell opera house Saturday evening Feb. 2. Come and enjoy a good show.

J. L, Harr of this place has in a gasoline gas machine put in by C. I. Tenney of Mason City that is superior to any weight machine on the market. One light will give as much as four of the weight and he is satisfied. When you can say that, the gas plant must be about right.

County Supt. Schell visited Klemme schools Monday and incidentally called at TIMES office. He reports Klemme schools doing well and says Klemme is to be congratulated on having such an excellent staff of teachers. An educational meeting will be held in Klemme a little later on.

COUNTY NEWS FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.

GARNER.

The Farmers' institute is in session to-day.

C. E. Stevens has returned from Rockford Illinois.

John Brisco of Goodell was in Garner on busiuess Monday.

J. E. Wichman and A. C. Repley have returned from Des Moines.

A. M. Amsdem of Forest City spent Sunday with friends and relatives in Garner.

Mack McGuire of Buffalo Center, was transacting business with Garner people Monday.

Aug. Dusenberg of Rockford will open a bicycle livery and repair shop in Garner next month.

G. A. Griswold of Burt was in Garner, Monday looking for a house with the intention of moving back to Garner.

Quite a number of our young people attented the spelling school at the Rasmusson school house last Friday evening.

The Christian Endeavor Society gave an entertanment and served refreshments at Bell Hall Tuesday evening. It was well attended and a pleasant time is reported.

The Schneider Co. are holding an auction sale every Saturday at their store. Jim Young does the selling and many bargains are to be had. Try it next Saturday.

T. E. Cassill will succeed J. T. Bush as baggage and express messenger on the C. R. G. & N. W. R. R., Feburary 1st. Mr. Cassill is well qualified to fill the position and will no doubt be able to hold his job.

Mrs. C. S. Collins has sold her drug store to parties from Clear Lake and the new owners took possession Monday. Mrs. Collins has been in business in Garner for about 15 years. She has built up her business from a shelf full of patent medicines to its present magnitude and if the new proprietors keep the business up to its present standard they will have to hustle. Garner will loose an enterprising business woman, when her business interests, backed by her push and pluck ceases to be. We hope the new firm will succeed and that they will find Garner a town to their liking.

GOODELL.

Quite a number are on the sick list.

Dallas Butterfield took a trip to Klemme Saturday.

Mrs. Schell, of Garner visited friends here last week.

Revivial meetings still continues through the week.

John Cline, of Mitchel S. D. is here trasacting business.

Mrs. Sandry living north of Butterfields Grove has been very ill.

Query—Should a person who cannot take a joke locate in Goodell?

Mrs. Charles Ford of Concord, visited the Rebecca Lodge Friday evening.

Miss Ott, of Iowa Falls, who has been visiting relatives here returns home this week.

Mrs. Porter, quite an elderly lady, died Sunday morning. The family had but recently located in the old town.

Spring Rye For Sale.

300 bushels of fine spring rye for sale, for seed, or milling purpose. Good quality. Samples at W. R. Bloom's, Aug. Lau & Son, or at my farm in Twin Lake Twp. 2 S. J. Carlson.

The following marriage license were issued since our last issue: Cora A. McGrnder and Jno A. Senneff, of Britt; John Connerton and Mabel Thomas of Britt; Leo LaPlonnt and Helen Bailey of Garner; Charle Thomas and Nora Wagner of Amsterdam Twp.; Elmer Holmes and Edna Abbey, of Ellington Twp.; Wm. Nelson and Blanche Farman, of Goodell.

The Iowa Central R. R. is making a bid for the use of Clear Lake Park grounds as a pleasure resort next year. They would come by the way of Mason City and over the electric road. If the I. C. gets into the deal Clear Lake would amount to something as a pleasure resort. The past four or five years it has been "strictly on the bum."

Will Lau came from his Minnesota trip Saturday, bring home with him about a hundred pounds of fine lake pickerel. Out of the goodness of his big heart he presented the editor with about 10 lbs. of brain food. If the paper is any brighter or better, our readers may thank him for it. An editor never has any too much gray matter in his think-tank. The fact of the matter is, we, as a class don't need brains—any more than does a school teacher—we need a gun or club. Be that as it may, he has done a good thing, and where there was nothing but emptiness, now there is a fullness that is almost distressing—in our stomach. You are not to infer from the above that our brains are in our stomach, it is the fish. William, again we say thanks.

E. P. SCHAEFER.

ALBAY REBELS ARE ROUTED.

Of 600 Filipinos 78 Are Killed in Two Fights.

NASHVILLE AIDS GEN. KOBBE.

Two Companies of Marines Aid in Capture of Legaspi, Albay, Sorsogon, Donsol, Bulan, and Virac, Opening These Ports at Last to Hemp Trade.

Manila, Jan. 29.—After occupying Sorsogon, Donsol and Bulan, in this province, without resistance, Gen. Kobbe had a sharp fight Jan. 23 in taking Legaspi. Six hundred insurgents, having previously destroyed the piers, held strong trenches controlling points where is was expected the Americans would attempt to land. This really had been Gen. Kobbe's plan, but when he saw the insurgents waiting for him in the trenches, he called for boats and landed about two companies of troops on the beach, turning the insurgents' left flank under cover of the guns of the cruiser Nashville. The flankers caught a party of the insurgents behind the town and killed thirty-three. The fighting lasted two hours. Albay and Virac were then easily taken. Unfortunately the shells from the Nashville set fire to two of the towns, and 8,000 bales of hemp were burned. There are over 100,000 bales of hemp in the ports already opened awaiting shipment. The crop is large. These ports will be opened to trade Jan. 30.

Released Spanish prisoners, seventy-four officers, 1,000 enlisted men, twenty-two civilian officials, twenty-one wives, thirty-five children; furnished transportation for Spain Thursday.

CHICAGO WOMAN MISSING.

Mrs. Anna Beck, a Widow, Believed to Have Been Murdered.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—Mrs. Anna Beck, a well-to-do and aged German widow residing at No. 182 East Fullerton avenue, within a few blocks of the famous Luetgert sausage factory, has been missing since last October, and the police fear that she has met with foul play. Mrs. Beck is said to have had a large sum of money, probably $2,000, in her possession at the time of her disappearance, and this fact furnishes ground for the belief that she has met with a terrible fate. Capt. Schuettler and four detectives of the Sheffield avenue police station, with operatives from the Scott detective agency, are working on the case, and they have several persons under surveillance. By several persons it is stated that Mrs. Beck is visiting her sister, Mrs. Kate Bresch, at Beloit, Kan. Little credence is placed in this theory, however, because of the fact that mail has been received from Beloit addressed to Mrs. Beck which was posted a month after she left home. The authorities at Beloit have been asked to investigate.

LOVE IGNORES COLOR LINE.

Refined White Girl Becomes Infatuated with a Negro Thief.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 29.—Mary Lechevesky, a 17-year-old white girl, left her home a few days ago to go to live with a colored family of thirteen persons in a house of four rooms. The girl has a good education and every appearance of refinement. Last summer she became infatuated with a negro thief, who was confined in jail, making daily visits to him, carrying bouquets and dainties. A little later she left the home of her parents, who are well to do and highly respected, to live with the colored family amid surroundings of squalor, poverty and filth.

HEIRESS LIVING IN A HOVEL.

Mary Fox, Left $24,500 in a Will, in Poverty at Denver.

Denver, Colo., Jan. 29.—In a wretched little hovel on Page street lives Mary Fox, heiress to $24,500 by the will of her father, Henry Fox of St. Louis. She has lived there for several years as the wife of Samuel Mitchell, a gray-haired old negro, who makes a living as janitor, coachman or whatever occupation offers. Mary Fox eloped fifteen years ago from St. Louis with a lover who left her in Nebraska. By degrees she sank to her present state. Her father on his dying bed relented and remembered her in his will.

Lawton's Funeral Will Be Imposing.

Washington, Jan. 29.—The funeral of Gen. Lawton will be the most imposing military funeral held here since that of Gen. Sheridan. Gen. Shafter will accompany Mrs. Lawton and the remains to the capital as a military escort. Gen. Merritt will be in command of the cortege here, and Gens. Miles, Brooke and Shafter will be pallbearers, with all general officers of the army in attendance. Members of the senate and house committees on military affairs, and some officials from the war department will also act as pallbearers. The president and his cabinet and congress will attend the services.

Kills the Trap-Keeper.

Darrtown, Ohio, Jan. 29.—At a shooting match here John Kulp was working the traps and had a heavy board as protection from the guns. John Willoughby of Hamilton stepped in the box. Kulp looked over the board to see he was ready, when the gun Willoughby held went off accidentally, striking Kulp square in the face, killing him almost instantly. No blame is attached to Willoughby.

Trolley Plant for London.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 29.—The St. Louis Car company has decided to establish a branch in England. The plant will probably be located in London and will cost $100,000.

RACE PREJUDICE ABANDONED.

Booker T. Washington Admitted to a Fashionable Denver Hotel.

Denver, Colo., Jan. 29.—Booker T. Washington, the negro lecturer, is the first of his race to be admitted as a guest at the Brown Palace hotel, the fashionable hostelry of Denver. Maxcy Tabor, the owner, says:

"He is in the class with Frederick Douglass, and above popular prejudice."

Mr. Washington lectured on "The Future of the Negro" Friday night.

"Did you ever regard yourself as a freak?" asked a visitor.

"A what? A freak?"

"There are persons who say that yours is an inferior race, and that you are merely an anomolous output—a brilliant crystallization of the intellectuality that has been thinly scattered through your race."

"No; I don't feel that way," replied Mr. Washington. "I simply used my opportunities and developed my mind. All of us have minds. I am only one-eighth white. I might be entirely white and not exhibit any unusual mental qualities, might I not?"

OLIVER PIKE IS NOT DEAD.

Mystery of Body Found in a Trunk Materially Deepens.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—Oliver Pike, whose supposed body was found in a trunk sold at auction in Chicago four years ago, is alive and well. Pike was thought to have been murdered, and the body found in the trunk was turned over to relatives in Delta, Ohio, and buried in the family lot. Friday Pike appeared at his mother's home in Delta and was recognized by all the members of the family. Two years ago, according to telegrams from Delta, Mrs. Pike received a letter from Redlands, Cal., telling her that the son she thought buried in the Delta cemetery was living in that city and living under the name of Harry Price. A correspondence ensued, but nothing definite resulted, and every one but the mother disbelieved the writer of the letters until Oliver returned Friday and was identified. He knows nothing of the body found in the trunk, and has little to say about his disappearance.

Cockran Is for Bryan.

New York, Jan. 29.—W. Bourke Cockran has announced his advocacy, with one exception, of the renomination of William J. Bryan for president. Mr. Cockran proposes a truce with the Nebraskan on the silver question until 1904, and if Bryan will agree to the armistice anti-imperialism will be the democracy's war cry in the 1900 campaign. If Mr. Bryan will consent to postpone the silver fight until 1904 Cockran agrees to indorse the Chicago platform in its entirety.

Automobiles to Carry Mail.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 27.—First Assistant Postmaster-General Perry S. Heath said today that the department was thoroughly satisfied with the results of the automobile test at Chicago for delivering mails and he made statements which left little doubt that the horseless vehicles would appear in the government mail service at Chicago by July 1, 1900, when the fiscal year begins.

Mexico Has New War Minister.

City of Mexico, Jan. 27.—Gen. Bernardo Reyes has been sworn in as minister of war, to succeed the late Gen. Felipe Berriozabal. Gen. Reyes has been governor of the state of Nuevo Leon for some time and is a popular and progressive statesman. He is in the prime of life and enjoys the public confidence and esteem of the entire republic.

Burglars Foiled at Racine.

Racine, Wis., Jan. 29.—Burglars entered the postoffice, drilled open the postmaster's safe, but found nothing in it. They then turned their attention to the large vault, which contained money and stamps. By the time they had drilled half through the vault they became frightened and fled, securing nothing.

Plans to Honor Lawton.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Jan. 29.—At a meeting of the committee named to arrange for the reception of Gen. Lawton's remains, which will lie in state here, it was decided to select the new courthouse as the place in which the people will be given an opportunity to look upon his features the last time.

State Witness Is Missing.

Vienna, Ill., Jan. 29.—The fifth juror has been secured in the trial of the twelve miners charged with riot and the killing of five negro non-union miners from the Brush mines in the streets of Carterville, last September.

CONGRESS.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 22—Platt of New York introduced a joint resolution authorizing the president to invite Great Britain to join in the promotion of an international commission to examine and report on the diversion of the waters that are the boundaries of the two countries referred to. A resolution of Rawlins of Utah for an inquiry into the extent of polygamy practiced, and what, if any stress, is necessary for its prevention, in the United States and places over which they have jurisdiction, was passed. Pritchard spoke in advocacy of his resolution relating to the proposed amendment to the constitution of North Carolina, which, if adopted, he claimed, would disfranchise a large class of voters of the state, white as well as black. He was followed by Turner of Washington on the Philippine question, opposing the policy of the administration.

HOUSE.

The house, after transaction of business of minor importance, took up the District of Columbia business, which occupied the time up to adjournment.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 23.—Reports of the committee on privileges and elections in the case of Quay, who claims a seat in the senate on the appointment of the governor of Pennsylvania, were presented in the senate to-day. The majority report opposes the seating of Quay, while a minority report favors his being seated. Pettigrew of South Dakota, offered a resolution calling for the report of Gen Bates relative to the treaty with the sultan of Sulu and whether the sultan and his officials were under the civil service. It went over. Caffery presented three resolueions calling for the correspondence with Great Britain on the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, with Colombia relative to the Panama canal and with the new Panama canal company of France. They were adopted. Allen's resolution asking for information concerning the sale of the old New York custom house was adopted. Turner, of Washington, concluded his speech on the Philippine question which was begun yesterday.

HOUSE.

The case of Brigham H. Roberts, the Mormon representative from Utah, came up before the house today. Taylor of Ohio made an argument for the majority report. Littlefield of Maine spoke for the minority report, and then Roberts spoke in his own defense. All of the speakers were vigorously applauded. There was a great outburst of applause in the galleries when Mr. Roberts concluded. Many of the ladies in the galleries were especially demonstrative.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 24.—Hale reported from the appropriations committee the urgent deficiency bill. Allen offered a resolution for information relative to the administration of the customs in Porto Rico, Cuba and the Philippines. Pettigrew offered a resolution declaring that the United States could not recognize the right of any nation to declare contraband and seize food products as such; that such seizure would be an unfriendly act. Pettigrew spoke in support of his resolution calling on the president for the report of Gen. Bates concerning the treaty with the sultan of Sulu. Senator Spooner asked if he meant to hold the president responsible for the slavery clause in the treaty. Pettigrew said he did. The resolution was adopted.

HOUSE.

The second day's debate in the house upon the Roberts case was less dramatic than that of yesterday. The galleries were almost as crowded, but the leaders were less demonstrative. Speeches were made by Landis, Powers, Miers, Snodgrass, Wilson, Lacey and Crumpacker. The day's debate strengthened the majority resolutions.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 25.—As a result of a speech by Money of Mississippi on the race question Chandler charged the southern senators with reopening the whole southern question after it was supposed to be dead. In answer to charges by Teller and Allen, Allison denied that the senate financial bill permitted the withdrawal of the greenbacks, the silver certificates and the silver dollars. He said no secretary of the treasury would find it possible to do so. The urgent deficiency bill was passed. Among bills introduced was one by Clay, to repeal the war revenue stamp tax.

HOUSE.

The case of Brigham H. Roberts was decided by the adoption of a resolution to exclude him, by a vote of 268 to 50. The exact language of the resolution is as follows: "That under the facts and circumstances of the case, Brigham H. Roberts, representative-elect from the state of Utah, ought not to have or hold a seat in the house of representatives, and that the seat to which he was elected is hereby declared vacant." The amendment to expel Roberts without seating him, offered by Lacey, was ruled out on a point of order, and the house only voted upon the resolution of the majority and minority of the committee. The latter—to seat and then expel Roberts—was defeated—81 to 244.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The greater portion of the session of the house today was devoted to eulogies upon the life and death of Vice President Hobart. The tributes paid to his memory were not the usual perfunctory eulogies, but breathed the love and admiration and respect in which he was universally held. Dolliver of Iowa delivered the principal address.

RUSSIA IS EXPECTING WAR.

Firmly Believed That Japan Is Making Ready for Attack.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 29.—From an authentic source it is learned that in diplomatic and governmental circles here it is considered assured that Japan is ready for a war with Russia, and that the policy and efforts of Japanese statesmen are directed along the line of an alliance for offensive purposes between Japan, Great Britain and China. Japan is plainly anxious to resist and paralyze Russia's successful invansion and predominant influence in eastern Asia, and as a preliminary to the desired conflict suggests to China the establishment of a military academy at Peking, where Japanese officials shall instruct the Chinese in the art of war. This proposal, it is believed, will be accepted, despite the opposition of Russia, France and Germany. The Japanese arsenals are at their busiest—that is matter of Russian military information. The army and fleet system of coast defenses has been developed and improved and recent inspections have shown that they are satisfactory to the mikado's war office. That Japan will obtain a certain portion of Korean territory has already been decided, but it will be done quietly so as to avoid premature trouble with Russia. Japan knows that Russia is not going to make the first move toward war, and Japan, before war actually is precipitated, is doing its best by way of preparation. Russia is ready for any war in Asia or elsewhere. She now calmly awaits Great Britain's downfall.

To Concentrate Forces.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—There are signs of important movements developing in north Cape Colony. Gen. French has succeeded in getting in touch with Gatacre, possibly presaging a combination of their columns and the commencement of a concentration of forces which is believed to be the groundwork of Roberts's plan of campaign.

British Killed and Captured.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—A special dispatch from Colenso, dated January 24, says that Commandant Meyers's commando surprised and surrounded a strong body of General Methuen's infantry, killing and wounding twenty-three and capturing fifteen.

British Losses of January 24.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—Buller reports the British casualities January 24 were: Killed, officers, 6; non-commissione officers and men, 18; wounded, officers, 12; non-commissioned officers and men, 142; missing, 31.

BRITISH TAKE SPION KOP.

Reports, Though Meager, Indicate Heavy British Losses.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Advices have been received from [illegible] Spearman's camp that General Woodgate has succumbed to the wounds he received in the attack upon Spion Kop.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The war office has issued the following dispatch from Spearman's Camp dated January 25 at 12:10 a. m.:

"General Warren's troops last night occupied Spion Kop, surprising the small garrison, who fled. It has been held by us all day, though we were heavily attacked, especially by very annoying shell fire. I fear our casualities are considerable, and I have to inform you, with regret, that General Woodgate was dangerously wounded. General Warren is of the opinion that he has rendered the enemy's position untenable. Our men are in splendid condition."

LONDON, Jan. 26.—General Buller's phrase "the men are splendid" thrills England with pride and confidence. His taking and holding of Spion kop are considered permanent advantages. Sir Charles Warren's opinion [illegible] of adjacent intrenchments are tenable is accepted by most experts as obviously true, because of the height of the position, although some point out that it may lack adequate gun platform to resist artillery fire from the two extended lines. It is not likely that General Warren will let go anything he holds, and news of further success is calmly awaited. The military authorities recognize, of course, that in the twelve or fifteen miles between Spion kop and Ladysmith there are continuous defensive positions and rugged hills and ravines which far outrange Spion kop, but they are sure that the troops who have turned the Boers out of difficult places can do it again.

ARMED MEN IN FRANKFORT.

They Are Opposed to Goebel and Warn Legislators.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 26.—A special train bearing over a thousand men carrying Winchester rifles arrived at Frankfort yesterday morning. They are from the counties of Bell, Allen, Knox, Harlan, Whitler, Metcalf and Edmundson. Governor Taylor stated to the Associated Press that they are not soldiers. He disclaimed any knowledge of their identity or the purpose of the armed visitors. Ex-Secretary of State Finley addressed the visitors from the steps of the state house. He said the object of the gathering was to see that justice was done. A committee was appointed to draft resolutions. The committee drafted a demand and remonstrance which was presented to the legislature. It reminds the members of the legislature that they are the creatures of the voters of the state, from whom they derive authority. It warns them that there is peril in the situation; that calmness, prudence and wisdom are necessary that truth may prevail. It beseeches them to remember the powers lent them by the people at the polls included the jurisdiction to decide judicially and not otherwise; the people then express their will, not their political preferences. It implores them not to, on slight or technical pretexts or flimsy or trivial causes, permit the submersion of the will of the people. Finally at 9 p. m. the men left for their homes.

MORE VICTORIES.

Schwan Drives the Philippine Insurgents From Intrenchments.

MANILA, Jan. 25.—Part of Gen. Schwan's column, consisting of six companies with some artillery, drove a force of 500 insurgents from their intrenchments at San Diego near San Pablo. The enemy have officially reported that they lost sixty-seven killed and wounded. Our casualties were one killed and fourteen wounded, the injuries in most instances being slight. Another batallion, while executing a flank movement, came upon a hundred other rebels in an intrenched position and routed them, killing fifteen. The Americans had two wounded. General Schwan moved against Majayjay, La Guna province, on Tuesday. He found the position almost impregnable but by lowering men down a steep river bank by ropes, he flanked the enemy and drove them out. Part of his command proceeded to Santa Cruz, killing six insurgents.

JAPAN LOOKING FOR TROUBLE.

Willing to Send Troops to the Assistance of England.

OTTAWA, Jan. 26.—K. Hiratati, recently connected with the Japanese war department, who is traveling around the world, after expressing sympathy for England, said Japan would send 30,000 to 40,000 troops to her aid if she would accept them. He added:

"All Japan asks of Great Britain as an ally in war against Russia is to employ part of her fleet in assisting the Japanese fleet to protect the ports of Japan against the fleets of Russia and France, and thus enable Japan's entire military strength to be used for the recovery of Port Arthur, the occupation of Manchuria and the overthrow of Russia's power in China. But the first thing to be done is to free the hands of Great Britain in Africa to take up her work in India."

Danish West Indies.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The Copenhagen correspondent of the Daily Mail says: "Negotiations for the sale of the Danish West Indies to the United States are likely to undergo a new development. The United States government intends to acquire a sphere of influence in China. In that case Denmark, for the benefit of her newly founded commercial connections in East Asia, would, through American concessions, obtain a valuable equivalent for her western colonies."

My Hair Was Coming Out

"About a year ago my hair was coming out very fast. I bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor to stop this. It not only stopped the falling, but also made my hair grow very rapidly, until now it is 45 inches in length and very thick."—Mrs. A. Boydston, Atchison, Kans., July 25, 1899.

It Feeds the Hair

Have you ever thought why your hair is falling out? It is because you are starving your hair. If this starvation continues your hair will continue to fall.

There is one good hair food. It is Ayer's Hair Vigor. It goes right to the roots of the hair and gives them just the food that they need. The hair stops falling, becomes healthy, and grows thick and long.

Ayer's Hair Vigor will do another thing, also: it always restores color to faded or gray hair. $1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

Sir Henry Erskine once quelled a riot in Edinburgh when Mrs. Siddons was playing to a crowded house in the largest theater in the town. A surly fellow in the pit refused to sit down, and a howl went up from all around him. The crowd was likely to do him and the house a damage, when Sir Henry came to the front of his box with the quiet statement: "Pray excuse the gentleman; don't you see it is only a tailor rising himself?" The man sat down without further urging.

Cushman of Washington, is put down in the congressional directory as a congressman-at-large, his state being without definite congressional districts. This reminds him of a story, which is quoted in the Washington Post. He was once approaching a town, where he was billed to make a speech, and stopped at a house on the outskirts to get a drink of water. He met the farmer's wife at the well. "What is the political sentiment around here?" asked Cushman. "I dunno," said the woman; "I don't go to political meetings. They say there is a congressman at large, and I think the safest thing for me to do is to stay at home."

An Englishman went into the Chatham hotel, in Paris, recently, and cautiously asked the price of a whisky. "One franc, sir," replied the bar-tender. "And a whisky and soda?" "One franc, sir. All drinks are the same price." The Englishman sat down and, to his astonishment found, that the place was run on American lines, and that the customers helped themselves at their own discretion. He punished that bottle of whisky till it was near empty. As he went out he paid down his franc, but the manager called him back and said: "You have forgotten your change." "I thought it was for the drink was a franc." "That is so, sir," was the reply; "that is the retail price, but there is a reduction when you buy wholesale." And he handed back five sous.

Deep Water Ports.

The growing interest in deep water seaports and cheap transportation by water, gives added importance to the building up of the city of La Porte Texas. The high, dry ground of La Porte is in direct contrast with the greater portion of the Mexican Gulf Coast. Marshes, malaria and fevers are unknown. La Porte is to be formally "opened" and introduced to the public February 14 to 17, when it is expected a great crowd of Northern and Texas people will be on hand to inspect the much talked of new seaport of the Gulf. So great is the interest shown that the American Land Co., 188 Madison St., Chicago, acting as Northern Manager, is deluged with letters of inquiry.

DISCUSS RAILROAD RATES.

Senate Committee on Commerce Gives Shippers a Hearing.

UNIFORM RATES AT ALL HAZARD

Senators Chandler and Allen Hint at Trust to Maintain Non-Competitive Rates—Nicaragua Canal Bill Perfected—Pacific Cable Taken Up.

Washington, Jan. 29.—The senate committee on commerce Friday gave a hearing to the representatives of a number of business organizations throughout the country in support of the bill to amend the interstate commerce law. The first statement was made by Frank Barry of Milwaukee, secretary of the National Millers' association and accredited representative of the National League of Industrial Associations. He commended the pending bill, saying that it had been framed with a view to doing justice to the shipper and carrier.

Augustine Gallagher, representing the millers in particular and also the national board of trade, in reply to a question from Chairman Cullom, said he firmly believed the adoption of the amendment proposed by the national board of trade would produce results immensely beneficial to the whole people.

A crossfire of questions from Senators Chandler and Allen ensued, tending to show that these gentlemen failed to recognize any essential difference, as claimed by Mr. Gallagher, between a "pool" and a "trust," as long as both maintained noncompetitive rates.

Would Control Corporations.

Washington, Jan. 29.—A joint resolution introduced by Representative Jenkins of Wisconsin proposes amendments to the constitution giving congress control over corporations. It provides that congress shall have the power to create any corporation for the purpose of commerce between the states, including railroads, telegraph, telephone; transportation, express and sleeping-car companies. Section 2 gives congress control over all corporations in the United States, including the power to impose a franchise tax, terminate the existence of corporations, forfeiture of the franchise, control and disposition of the property of the corporation, and to enforce this by appropriate legislation.

Want Pay for Dewey's Cable Cutting.

Washington, Jan. 29.—The special order for Friday in the house was the delivery of eulogies upon the late Vice-President Hobart, after the final agreement upon the census bill by the conference was adopted and the senate amendments to the urgent deficiency bill were sent to conference. An hour was also spent in discussing the bill recommended by President McKinley authorizing the secretary of state to compensate for the Eastern Extension Australasia and China Telegraph company for loss and expenses entailed by the cutting of its Manila-Hongkong and Manila-Capiz cable by Admiral Dewey.

Nicaragua Bill Perfected.

Washington, Jan. 29.—The house committee on interstate and foreign commerce Friday reconsidered the Nicaragua canal bill, which had been reported with an appropriation of $140,000,000, and changed the appropriation section so as to make $10,000,000 available, with authority to contract for the entire excavation, construction, defense and completion of the canal at a total cost not exceeding $140,000,000. In the amended form the bill was ordered reported, and the Pacific cable question was then taken up and Gen. Swayne of New York argued against government construction, operation and ownership.

Subsidy Bill Amended.

Washington, Jan. 29.—The subcommittee of the senate commerce has agreed to such changes in the Hanna-Payne shipping bill as will place a limit of $2,000,000 a year on the amount of subsidy to fast vessels, thereby materially increasing the compensation to be paid the slower steamers. Another amendment reduces from 80 per cent to 51 per cent the required American ownership in foreign-built vessels, which may be admitted to the benefit of the subsidy.

Roberts Case a Closed Incident.

Washington, Jan. 29.—Brigham H. Roberts of Utah has made it perfectly clear that he will not contest the case further. Mr. Roberts says that he considers the vote of the house yesterday as ending the matter. Members of the house regard the Roberts incident as closed, and none of them, so far as can be learned, looks for a re-opening of the case by any method.

Balky Horse Causes Tragedy.

Evanston, Ill., Jan. 29.—Mrs. Kate McLain was killed and Mrs. Genevieve Gabriel probably fatally injured by a Northwestern train at the Dempster street crossing. Mrs. Gabriel's 2-year-old son was thrown twenty feet upon an embankment and escaped uninjured.

McMahon Is Found Guilty.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—Jeremiah McMahon, on trial before Judge Bretano for the murder on Sept. 5 last of Richard McGraw, was found guilty, the jury fixing his punishment at fourteen years in the penitentiary.

Bequest for Elgin Academy.

Elgin, Ill., Jan. 29.—The late Orlando Davidson, father of Mrs. Nathaniel C. Sears of Chicago, left property to the value of nearly $50,000. Elgin academy receives a bequest of $10,000.

LYNCHING BEE IN COLORADO.

Denver, Colo., Jan. 29.—Thomas Reynolds, one of the four convicts who escaped from the penitentiary at Carson City Monday night, after murdering Night Captain W. C. Rooney, was captured at Florence Friday night and taken back to Canon City, and there lynched by a mob. A posse is close on the trail of C. B. Wagner, the fourth murderer, and if he is taken he undoubtedly will share Reynold's fate.

Antone Wood and Kid Wallace, who were captured Thursday morning, are safe within the penitentiary walls. Reynolds surrendered at the point of a rifle, but Wagner fled, notwithstanding he was fired on. Reynolds was put in a wagon, his arms tied behind his back and, for some unaccountable reason, a rope placed conveniently about his neck. The party reached the penitentiary about 11 o'clock and was about to turn Reynolds over to the warden when the mob appeared. Without any parley the mob took Reynolds away from the officers, dragged him to a nearby telephone pole and strung him up and then shot his body full of holes. Reynolds was sent up from Mosa county for seven years for burglary and would have been released in a few months.

MAY BE A GENERAL STRIKE.

Operators and Miners Still Apart in Their Views.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 29.—The operators' and miners' scale conference have so far done nothing further than to agree upon the order in which their discussions shall be carried on. They are drifting further apart, and predictions of a general strike on the part of the mine workers were freely made Friday.

President Mitchell, when asked as to the outlook, declined to express an opinion, but it is plain he sees little hope of an adjustment of the differences. The latest straw was the action of the miners' convention in deciding to break up the joint-session plan and have a sine-die adjournment of the conference.

Conservative leaders among the miners say that, if the plan is forced, it will be difficult to again get the operators into a conference. The stubbornest set of miners here are those from Illinois. They favor breaking with the operators, and boast that they have a strike fund of $112,000, and prefer to settle their own trouble with the Illinois operators at their convention, which meets at Springfield next month.

Cold Wave Strikes Gotham.

New York, Jan. 29.—A cold wave and a northwesterly gale caused the temperature to drop to 15 degrees at midnight. The wind at Sandy Hook is blowing nearly sixty miles an hour. It doubtless will delay for a day or more all incoming liners and coastwise boats from ports below Virginia capes. A gale is sweeping the Long island coast. From Rockaway point to Montauk Point the ocean is in a turmoil, and heavy surf is pounding the shore. It is bitter cold. Clouds of blinding sand are being driven along by the wind, and the whole life-saving force on the coast is doing double duty. The gale is felt with great force also along the sound front.

Sweeping Injunction Issued.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 29.—Judge Ludwig of the Superior court has issued an injunction on the application of George P. Miller, attorney for the Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light company, restraining any citizen owning property abutting any of the lines of the company from bringing any actions against the city, company or officials. It is the most sweeping injunction ever issued in Wisconsin, according to the opinion of leading attorneys. The injunction is to be effective until Monday morning at 10 o'clock, when the order to show cause will be returnable.

Fire Does $100,000 Damage.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—The Mason building, a six-story structure at Nos. 94, 96 and 98 Washington street, one of the landmarks of the city, was destroyed by fire Friday night. There were a number of narrow escapes from death on the part of between fifty and sixty young men and women constituting the night class of Gregg's Commercial college, on the top floor of the building, many of whom were overcome by the smoke and rescued with difficulty by the firemen. The property loss on the building and contents is estimated at $100,000.

High-Hat Bill Passed.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 29.—The senate has passed what is known as the high-hat act, which provides "that any owner, lessee, proprietor or manager of a theater, hall or opera-house, where an admission fee is charged, who permits any person attending to wear upon his or her head any hat, bonnet or covering which may obstruct the view of persons during the performance, shall be guilty of misdemeanor, and shall be fined not more than $10, nor less than $5."

Death Caused by Football.

Canandaigua, N. Y., Jan. 29.—Edgar Marks, the 18-year-old son of W. R. Marks of this place, died in Fairfield military academy on Wednesday night, another victim of football. The cause of death was peritonitis. Young Marks had suffered from bowel trouble since he was injured in a game a short time ago.

Sheriff Held to Grand Jury.

Pana, Ill., Jan. 29.—Sheriff Thomas J. Downey of this county has been held to the Montgomery grand jury in the sum of $10,000 for shooting Thomas Furlong at Litchfield ten days since.

Wild With ECZEMA

Hands and Limbs Covered with Blisters and Great Red Blotches. Scratched Until Almost Wild. Burned Like Fire. Sleep Impossible. CUTICURA Remedies Bring Speedy Relief and a Permanent Cure at a Cost of Only $2.

I was a sufferer for eight years from that most distressing of all diseases, Eczema. I tried some of the best physicians in the country, but they did me little good. The palms of my hands were covered and would become inflamed; little white blisters at first would appear, then they would peel off, leaving a red, smooth surface which would burn like fire and itch; well, there is no name for it. On the inside of the upper part of both my limbs great red blotches, not unlike hives, would appear, and as soon as I became warm the burning and itching would begin. Night after night I would lie awake all night and scratch and almost go wild. I heard of CUTICURA REMEDIES, got them and gave them a thorough trial, and after a few applications I noticed the redness and inflammation disappear. Before I had used one box there was not a sign of Eczema left. I can truthfully assert that $2.00 worth of CUTICURA REMEDIES cured me. There has been no sign of its return anywhere upon my body since I wrote you I was cured, nearly four years ago. Hardly a month passes but what I receive a letter or some one calls and wishes to know how I got cured, if I had Eczema bad, and if the cure has been permanent, etc., etc. I always take pleasure in enlightening them the best I can.

JOHN D. PORTE, Pittsburg, March 1, 1899.
Of JOHN D. PORTE & CO., Real Estate and Insurance, 428 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburg, Pa.

The agonizing itching and burning of the skin, as in eczema, the frightful scaling, as in psoriasis; the loss of hair and crusting of the scalp, as in scalled head; the facial disfigurement, as in pimples and ringworm, the awful suffering of infants and the anxiety of worn-out parents, as in milk crust, tetter, and salt rheum—all demand a remedy of almost superhuman virtues to successfully cope with them. That

Cuticura

Remedies are such stands proven beyond all doubt. No statement is made regarding them that is not justified by the strongest evidence. The purity and sweetness, the power to afford immediate relief, the certainty of speedy and permanent cure, the absolute safety and great economy, have made them the standard skin cures and humor remedies of the civilized world. The treatment is simple, direct, agreeable, and economical, and is adapted to the youngest infant as well as adults of every age. Bathe the affected parts with hot water and CUTICURA SOAP to cleanse the surface of crusts and scales, and soften the thickened cuticle. Dry, without hard rubbing, and apply CUTICURA Ointment freely, to allay itching, irritation, and inflammation, and soothe and heal, and lastly take CUTICURA RESOLVENT to cool and cleanse the blood. This sweet and wholesome treatment affords instant relief, permits rest and sleep in the severest forms of eczema and other itching, burning, and scaly humors of the skin, scalp, and blood, and points to a speedy, permanent, and economical cure when all other remedies and even the best physicians fail. CUTICURA SET, price $1.25; or, CUTICURA SOAP, 25c., CUTICURA OINTMENT, 50c., CUTICURA RESOLVENT, 50c., sold throughout the world. "How to Cure Eczema," free. Sole Props., POTTER DRUG AND CHEM. CORP., Boston, Mass.

MILLIONS OF MOTHERS

use CUTICURA SOAP exclusively for baby's skin, scalp, and hair. It is not only the purest, sweetest, and most refreshing of nursery soaps, but it contains delicate emollient properties, obtained from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, which preserve, purify, and beautify the skin, scalp, and hair, and prevent simple skin blemishes from becoming serious. For distressing heat rashes, chafings, inflammations, and eruptions, for crusted, itching affections of the scalp, with dry, thin, and falling hair, for red, rough hands, and shapeless nails, and simple infantile humors, it is absolutely indispensable.

THE CHINESE AMBITION.

It Is to Save Money to Spend in China

A somewhat superfluous law in this country shuts out John Chinaman from citizenship. That is no grief to John. He doesn't yearn for the enlightenment of western civilization typified by foreign devils who attempt to restrict his use of opium and even go so far as to deny him the right of gambling. What he wants to do is to live here on 20 cents a day, while making $2 a day, and, as soon as he gets enough surplus, go back to his ancestral halls, where he can support a family in great comfort on something like 12 cents a day. The copyright on this article doesn't prohibit persons with a taste for mathematics from using these figures as a basis for calculating how long it will be before, under present conditions, America has a permanent Chinese population. Of course, John sometimes marries here and settles down. His wife may be a Chinese woman, to whom he was betrothed years before, when she was a baby, and who comes over here in the steerage and under chaperonage to fulfill the obligation entered into by her parents, and to find herself the center of considerable celebrations, extending through the streets of the quarter. In the last wedding of this sort the bride was 21 and the bridegroom 54. The betrothal had lasted since her second year. More often the bride is one of the debauched victims of the quarter, and the wedding ceremony is after the American custom, for which the Chinaman has little regard. It matters the less in that the wife commonly dies in a year or two, rarely leaving any offspring. Opium does it. To the Mongolian it is one of the blessings of life. To the Caucasian it is mental, moral, and physical decay, then insanity; then death. There is a third class of marriages not pleasant to contemplate—the union of Chinamen to young Sunday school teachers. There was a time, not long ago, when associations of this kind resulted in several weddings. Many more might have followed had not several outspoken and courageous clergymen delivered warnings from the pulpit of the folly and danger of such alliances; whereupon they were, as a matter of course, denounced in round terms from many other pulpits as enemies to the propagation of the Christian faith.—Leslie's Weekly.

PRISON BABIES.

Create a Flutter of Excitement in Their Gloomy Birthplace.

Very few people outside official circles know what a large number of babies are born every year in the infirmaries of prisons and penitentiaries, the little people always causing quite a flutter of attentiveness and excitement among female warders and prisoners alike. Of course there is a vast difference in prisoners, and sometimes the person least attentive to the prison baby is the mother herself; but, on the other hand, the general body of the women prisoners make the most pathetic efforts, by means of all manner of trifling scraps and odds and ends, to fabricate articles of wear and ornament for the out-of-place little stranger. Quite three-fourths of the women volunteer to tend it, and it is often the case that the most refractory and difficult of the prisoners soften and greatly alter by being allowed to do little things for it; indeed, it acts throughout like a veritable ray of sunshine among the whole of the poor prisoners, who generally manage to get themselves into great good humor by suggesting as volubly as the prison rules will permit fantastic names for the child. Within a certain period of their birth these children are taken away from the mother and are tended elsewhere with the utmost care and humanity.

Captivating a Queen.

It was by his graceful execution of a dance that young Hatton first captivated the heart of Queen Elizabeth, says Edward Scott in his book on "Dancing in All Ages." He had been brought up to the law and entered court, as his enemy, Sir John Perrot, used to say, "by the gaillarde," as his first appearance there was on the occasion of a mask ball, and her majesty was so struck by his good looks and activity that she made him one of her band of pensioners, who were considered the handsomest men in England. It is said that the favors which the virgin monarch extended to her new favorite excited the jealousy of the whole court, especially that of the earl of Leicester, who, thinking to depreciate the accomplishments of the young lawyer, offered to introduce to Elizabeth's notice a professional dancer whose salutory performances were considered far more wonderful than Hatton's. To this suggestion, however, the royal lady, with more vehemence than elegance, exclaimed: "Pish! I will not see your man. It is his trade."

Science or Dreams.

From the Youth's Companion: According to the recent studies of Signor de Sanctis of Turin, children begin to dream before their fourth year, but are unable to recall dreams before the age of 4 or 5. This age, he concludes is that at which a child first becomes distinctly conscious of self. Aged people dream less frequently and less vividly than the young. Women's dreams are more frequent, more vivid and better remembered than those of men. Criminals and delinquents dream much less frequently and much less vividly than other people. Two-thirds of the most depraved criminals examined [illegible] of dreaming. This is attributed to lack of mental activity.

THOUGHTS.

When we love it is the heart that judges.

Children need models rather than critics.

We always lose the friendship of those who lose our esteem.

The direction of the mind is more important than its progress.

What can one put into a mind which is filled and filled with itself?

Gravity is only the bark of the tree of wisdom; but it preserves it.

He who has none of the weaknesses of friendship has none of its powers.

We easily tolerate an authority that we hope one day to exercise ourselves.

It would be difficult to live at once despised and virtuous; we need support.

There is nothing good in a [illegible] ut his young feelings and his old thoughts.

One should only choose for a wife a woman whom one would choose for a friend, were she a man.

He who is afraid of being a dupe while he is young, runs the chance of being a knave when he is old.

If men of imagination are sometimes the dupes of appearance, colder intellects are often the dupes of their own reasonings.

It is a cruel situation when we can not make up our minds to hate and despise the man whom we cannot esteem or love.—From the words of Joseph Joubert.

AS TRUE AS GOSPEL.

Thou wilt always rejoice in the evening if thou hast spent the day profitably.

When you start to give your neighbor "a piece of your mind," be sure that you keep some for yourself.

What are the aims which are at the same time duties? They are the perfecting of ourselves and the happiness of others.

Think of the ills from which you are exempt, and it will aid you to bear patiently those which you may now suffer.

Few of us gain by the mistakes of others, but he who fails to profit by his own mistakes will soon be bankrupt in knowledge.

Courtesy is the passport to success. We double the power of our life when we add to its gifts unfailing courtesy. The world always begrudges room to a boor.

It is a perfectly safe proposition that without the thoughtfulness, which is otherwise named tact, no one can find the fullest measure of success and pleasure in life.

GREAT MEN'S AGES.

A great man does not always attain a ripe old age; in fact, hardly half of the greatest men of modern and ancient times have reached that limit of age set by the bible—70.

Musicians died at these ages: Mozart, 35; Mendelssohn, 38; Chopin, 39; Weber, 39; Schumann, 41; Beethoven, 56; Bach, 65; Palestrina, 70; Spohr, 75; Handel, 75; Haydn, 77.

To painters death came at the ages stated: Raphael, 37; Corregio, 40; Van Dyk, 42; Holbein, 57; Velasquez, 61; Rembrandt, 63; Rubens, 61; Michelangelo, 89; Titian, 99.

Among statesmen, Mirabeau was 42; Pitt, 47; Caesar, 55; Richelieu, 57; Cromwell, 59; Washington, 67; Charlemagne, 71; Frederick the Great, 74; Disraeli, 75; Augustus, 76; Bismarck, 83; Tallyrand, 84.

The age of the decease of philosophers was: Spinoza, 44; Descartes, 53; Hegel, 61; Aristotle, 62; Socrates, 68; Leibnitz, 70; Linnaeus, 70; Copernicus, 70; Galileo, 78; Kant, 79; Plato, 82; Newton, 84; Humboldt, 89.

The longevity of great writers, poets, is as follows: Byron, 36; Schiller, 45; Moliere, 51; Virgil, 51; Shakespeare, 52; Dante, 56; Dickens, 57; Horace, 57; Racine, 59; Scott, 61; Milton, 65; Cervantes, 68; Aeschylus, 69; Rabelais, 70; Petrarch, 70; Euripides, 74; Corneille, 78; Victor Hugo, 83; Goethe, 83; Voltaire, 84; Sophocles, 90.

WISE APHORISMS.

"Have no friends not equal to yourself."

"What truly is within will be manifest without."

"When you have faults, do not fear to abandon them."

"Between friends frequent reproof makes the friendship distant."

"If a man take no thought about what is distant he will find sorrow in store."

"The scholar who cherishes the love of comfort is not to be deemed a scholar."

"A man can enlarge the principle which he follows; those principles do not enlarge the man."

"See what a man does, mark his motive, examine in what he rests; how can a man conceal his character?"

"I am not one who was born in the possession of knowledge; I am one who is fond of antiquity and earnest in seeking it there."

"When you know a thing, to hold that you know it, and when you do not know a thing, to allow that you do not know it—this is knowledge."

"When one cultivates to the utmost the principles of his nature and exercises them upon the principle of reciprocity, he is not far from the path.

"In letters I am, perhaps, equal to other men, but the character of the superior man—carrying out in his conduct what he professes—is what I have not yet attained to."

"Learning without thought is labor lost; thought without learning is perilous."—Sayings and Aphorisms of Confucius.

WITH THE SAGES.

Libraries are the shrines where all the relics of the ancient saints, full of true virtue, and that without delusion or imposture, are preserved and repose.—Bacon.

Learning, like money, may be of so base a coin as to be utterly void of use; or, if sterling, may require good management to make it serve the purposes of sense and happiness.—Shenstone.

When all is done, human life is, at the greatest and best, but like a froward child, that must be played with, and humored a little, to keep it quiet till it falls asleep, and then the care is over.—Sir W. Temple.

If this life is unhappy, it is a burden to us, which is difficult to bear; and if it is in every respect happy, it is dreadful to be deprived of it; so that in either case the result is the same, for we must exist in anxiety and apprehension.—La Bruyere.

To go to law is for two persons to kindle a fire at their own cost, to warm others, and singe themselves to cinders; and because they cannot agree to what is truth and equity, they will both agree to unplume themselves, that others may be decorated with their feathers.—Feltham.

WHAT THE MEN THINK.

That whenever a hat looks as though it had been struck by a cyclone the milliner calls it picturesque.

That the saying that habits grow on us seem verified by the appearance of the up-to-date equestrienne's costume.

That the new mode in woman's garments suggests a recently popular work of fiction entitled "Looking Backward."

That a woman can forgive a man almost anything if he asks for a second piece of the first pie she ever made.

That a woman doesn't want to be called new, and she absolutely waxes indignant at being called old; in fact, she is hard to please any way.—Boston Journal.

NEW CHAIR CAR SERVICE.

Between Watertown, Ellsworth and Chicago via. B. C. R. & N. Ry. Commencing Sunday Nov. 19th, a free reclining chair car will be placed on trains Nos. 608 and 605 between Watertown and Chicago by the Burlington Cedar Rapids & Northern Ry. This car leaves Watertown daily, except Sunday at 11:15 a. m. arriving at Chicago 7:59 the following morning. This car runs to and from Sioux Falls Sundays, thus giving daily chair car service between Ellsworth and Chicago. Passengers going east from Chicago will have ample time to make any transfers to connect with all morning eastern trains.

These trains are very fast, and, with this new additional service, passengers can feel assured of first class accommodations. JNO. G. FARMER, Cedar Rapids, Ia.

Stood Death Off.

E. B. Munday, a lawyer of Henrietta Tex., once fooled a grave-digger. He says: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters and he was soon much better, but continued their use until he was wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." This remedy expels malaria, kills disease germs and purifies the blood; aids digestion, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, cures constipation, dyspepsia, nervous diseases, kidney troubles, female complaints; gives perfect health. Only 50c at HARR'S drug store.

A Night Of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she would die from Pneumonia before morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night, but she begged for Dr. Kieg's New Discovery, which had more than once saved her life, and cured her of consumption. After taking, she slept all night. Further use entirely cured her." This marvellous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1.00 Trial bottles free at Harr's drug store.

Working Night and Day.

The busiest and mightiest little thing that ever was made is Dr. King's New Life Pills. These pills change weakness into strength, listlessness into energy, brain-fag into mental power. They're wonderful in building up the health. Only 25c per box. Sold by HARR.

The claim of other cough medicines to be as good as Chamberlain's are effectually set at rest in the following testimonial of Mr. C. D. Glass, an employe of Barlett & Dennis Co., Gardiner, Me. He says: "I had kept adding to a cold and cough in the winter of 1897, trying every cough medicine I heard of without permanent help, until one day I was in the drug store of Mr. Houlehan and he advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and offered to pay back my money if I was not cured. My lungs and bronchial tubes were very sore at this time, but I was completely cured by this remedy and have since always turned to it when I got a cold, and soon find relief. I also recommend it to my friends and am glad to say it is the best of all cough medicines." For sale by HARR, the druggist.

In Denmark there is an excellent law in aid of temperance. It is that intoxicated persons should be conveyed to their homes by the police in carriages provided by the publicans who last supplied them with drink.

German gymnasiums or grammar schools are about to introduce the Russian language into their already difficult and comprehensive curriculum. Not only must the school boys crowd their brains with Greek, Latin, French and English, but the terrors of the Russian tongue are to be added.

The new Victoria and Albert museum, as the old South Kensington museum is now called, is having a new building constructed. The frontage on Cromwell road is 700 feet. The area of the new buildings will be equal to the whole of that covered by the existing museums, including temporary sheds on the west side of the Exhibition road.

Iceland is such a law-abiding country that its force of police consists of one, and even he has an easy time of it. He is a fine, well-built fellow, six feet high, with broad shoulders, as is right and fitting for one who has the responsibility of upholding the laws of the country. Still, in spite of the cares of office which rest upon him, he would not be inclined to agree with the oft-quoted sentiment that a policeman's life is not a happy one.

EBEL SWORN IN.

NKFORT, Ky., Feb. 1.—William l was shortly before 9 o'clock night sworn in as governor of ucky, and J. C. W. Beckman, a minutes later took the oath of tenant Governor. The oath was inistered to both men by Chief stice Hazlerigg of the court of apals. A statement was prepared sayg that the boards which had heard e contest for governor and lieutenvernor had decided in favor of and Beckman; that the boards PRA d to report their findings to the M ature, but that they had been preven from doing so by the action of Gove r Taylor in declaring the legislatu djourned. This statement then goes to say that the members of the legislature were driven from place to place by the militia and threatened with arrest wherever they attempted to hold a meeting. It was declared the belief of all the signers of the statement that Goebel and Beckman were the legally elected governor and lieutenant governor, and each man as he signed the paper announced that he voted for the adoption of the majority report of the contest boards which declared Goebel and Beckman to be the men legally and rightfully entitled to the offices. The statement is signed by a majority of the members of both houses. Mr. Goebel as soon as he was assured that he was legally governor of Kentucky took prompt action regarding the military arm of the service. Two orders were quickly prepared for his signature, the first of which discharged General Daniel Collier from office and appointed General John B. Castleman of Louisville as his successor. The second was addressed to the commanders of the militia now stationed in this city, directing them to return to their homes. Among the militia in Frankfort 300 men announce that they will obey Goebel's orders.

FRANKFORT, Feb. 1.—The doctors agree that Senator Goebel cannot live. Nothing but his wonderful vitality and nerve has kept him alive thus far. His assassin has not been arrested and there is no hope that he will be. Governor Taylor and the militia have complete control of the situaton.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 1.—When the members of the legislature attempted to enter the capitol yesterday morning they were stopped by Col. Williams and a detachment of troops and the following proclamation of the governor was handed to them:

"Whereas, a state of insurrection prevails in the state of Kentucky, especially in Frankfort, the capital thereof:

Therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the constitution of Kentucky, I do hereby, by this proclamation, adjourn at once the general assembly of the state of Kentucky to meet at London, Laurel county, Ky., Tuesday, the 6th day of February, 1900, at 12 o'clock.

The democratic members denounced the proceedings and at once made an effort to secure the opera house, in which they proposed to hold a session. Again the militia interfered. At the court house the were also shut out by the soldiers. Going to the Capitol hotel they were met by officers of the militia, who told them any attempt to hold a meeting would be suppressed. Later the democrats were told that no conferences could be held. London is in the "feud" county of the state, which is strongly republican, and while the democrats have not refused to go there they declare their lives would not be safe. Adjutant General Collier threatens to arrest them individually and carry them to London if necessary.

Legislation for Porto Rico.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—The Republicans of the ways and means committee of the house have laid down definite lines upon which the republican leaders of the house have decided to legislate for Porto Rico, so far as tariff duties are concerned. The decision reached is exceedingly important, as it commits the republicans of the ways and means committee to the theory that Porto Rico and the Philippines are not the territory of the United States, within the meaning of that section of the constitution which provides that customs and revenue laws shall be uniform throughout the United States. In other words it commits them to the view that our new possessions can be governed as colonies and that discriminating duties can be laid against them.

Situation at Ladysmith.

LADYSMITH, Jan. 28.—(Heliographed to Swartz Kop north of Tugela river.)—News of the prolongation of the siege, resulting from Buller's failure was received with fortitude. We can hold on. The garrison is healthier and is cheery and confident. Disease is disappearing and there is no horse sickness. Rains give plenty of grass. We can hear Buller's guns still working and it is rumored in camp that he is advancing along another line. The Boer laagers have also taken up a new position on the hills near Colenso, where they are in great force. Reinforcements are apparently arriving from the Transvaal. Large bodies of Boers are also visible beween here and Potgeiters drift.

Bubonic Plague at Honolulu.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 1.—The steamer Australia, from Honolulu, reports to the time of her departure that forty one deaths from the plague had occurred there out of [illegible], N. Y. of fifty-two cases.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

HE IS RESTRAINED.

Governor Pardons McClauskey, a Forger, on Many Conditions.

DES MOINES, Feb. 2.—Governor Shaw has issued a pardon to C. E. McClauskey, who was sentenced to four years in the state's prison in 1898, for the crime of forgery. In issuing the pardon the governor has inserted many iron bound restrictions. The party convicted must take an oath to support his family, refrain from the use of all intoxicating liquors, live a peaceful and law abiding citizen, and once a month make a report to the chief executive of the state as to where he is laboring, for whom, and what he does with his earnings. In violation of these orders he will be deprived of his liberty and returned to the penitenteary to serve out the remainder of his term. If the paroled should for any reason, insufficient in the eyes of the governor, fail to make the regular monthly report the grounds will be held of a sufficiency to warrant a revocation of the pardon.

SALOONS ARE OPEN AGAIN.

Supreme Court Granted a Stay Suspending Recent Decision.

DES MOINES, Feb. 3.—Des Moines is a wet town again. The sixty-three saloons that were closed as a result of the decision of the supreme court in the case of O. C. West against Lorenz Ill, have reopened their doors. Judge E. T. Morris and Fritz Conrad, representing Defendant Ill and the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association, appeared before the supreme court and asked leave to file a motion for a rehearing in the Ill case. This was granted, and as soon as the petition was filed they asked that a stay be granted suspending the effect of the decision rendered until they can be heard on the petition. This was argued, and at the conclusion it was directed that the stay be granted, and it was so entered on the record of the court. No further action is likely until the May term. Meantime the saloon men will try to secure a new petition.

ARMY POST FOR DES MOINES.

Congressman Hull Gets the Bill Through the House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Congressman Hull yesterday called up his bill to authorize the establishment of a military post at Des Moines. Not a word of protest was raised against the bill, and it passed without a single vote in opposition. It will probably be comparatively easy to secure the endorsement of the senate, and Mr. Hull says he will try to get that body to give the bill early consideration. The people of Des Moines may therefore confidently expect to see an army post established within rifle shot of the heart of the city within a comparatively short time, but the chances are that not until the Philippine war is ended will there be many troops assigned to the new post.

GOODRICH ARRESTED.

Charged With the Murder of Robson, His Partner, at Sioux City.

SIOUX CITY, Feb. 2.—Oscar A. Goodrich has been arrested for the murder of John E. Robson of Sioux City December 29. The accused was the former partner of the dead man, has been a resident of Sioux City for many years, and his arrest caused a great sensation. The popular verdict is that he is innocent. Detective Henry Morrison filed the information. The state offered $500 reward for conviction. The whole reward is $1,225. The murder was committed with a hatchet and was one of the foulest crimes in the history of Iowa.

Bitten by a Boar.

GENEVA, Feb. 3.—Oscar Creighton, a young farmer living fifteen miles northwest of town, is lying seriously ill from the effects of being bitten by a hog. Creighton was taking care of his hogs when the large boar which is in his drove made a rush at him, and before he could get out of the way it grabbed him just below the knee. At first he did not think he was hurt very badly, and went on about his work, but he afterwards found that he had been seriously injured and a physician was called. He has been receiving the very best of care since, but the physicians have given him up, as hydrophobia has set in

Got Hold of Wrong Bottle.

BEVINGTON, Feb. 4.—Thomas Nugent, when groping in the dark for a medicine bottle, got hold of the wrong one and swallowed a quantity of carbolic acid before he discovered his mistake. His mouth, throat, and stomach were badly burned, but the physicians believe that he is now out of danger.

Sioux City Box Mystery Solved.

SIOUX CITY, Feb. 4.—The Sioux City box mystery has been solved. The body, which was supposed to be that of a murdered man, was the body of a German tramp, who was fatally injured in Baltimore by being struck by a trolley car. The corpse was sent to Sioux City for medical purposes.

Fire at Fayette.

FAYETTE, Feb. 2.—Fire broke out in the business portion of the city and before it could be gotten under control nine buildings had been reduced to ashes. The loss is estimated at $60,000, not more than half covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Ghastly Find at Sioux City.

SIOUX CITY, Feb. 1.—A ghastly find was made in the office of the United States Express Company, when a box marked "books" was opened and found to contain the decomposed body of a murdered man.

NO LEGAL SALOONS.

There Are None Operating in Des Moines at Present.

DES MOINES, Jan. 30.—There is not a legal saloon in the city of Des Moines, and there are few of them in the state of Iowa. This is the effect of a decision handed down by the supreme court. The statements of consent, secured prior to the publication of the new code and upon which the saloons of this city have been operating ever since the new code went into effect, are held to be insufficient, and new ones must be secured before any local mulct saloon may operate legally. The opinion which carries this effect with it is a most sweeping one and is a body blow at Des Moines saloons. It is written by Judge Waterman, but is the unanimous holding of the supreme bench. It is the decision which has been anticipated by both saloon men and the prohibitionists of the city ever since the January term of court opened. The saloonkeeper who is made an example of is Lorenz Ill, on whom an application for an order was made to show why he should not be punished for violating an injunction against his maintenance of a liquor nuisance. Ill resisted the restraining order on the ground that he had complied with section 17, chapter 62, of the laws of the Twenty-fifth general assembly, which require the filing of a statement of consent signed by a majority of the voters at the last election, and he was therefore legally engaged in the liquor business. The plaintiff in the case, O. C. West, set up a demurrer, declaring that the acts of the Twenty-fifth general assembly were repealed when the new code went into effect, and under the provisions of the new code Ill's statement of consent was insufficient because not canvassed by the board of supervisors. This demurrer was over ruled by Judge Bishop, and the case was appealed. The supreme court reverses the decision of Judge Bishop and holds that a new statement of consent is necessary.

FROZE THEIR BABY TO DEATH.

Terrible Act of Religiously Insane Parents in Monroe County.

OTTUMWA, Feb. 1.—Thoroughly crazed over the subject of religion, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spencer, residing six miles northwest of Lovilla, in Monroe county, sacrificed their infant to the fanatic belief that they had been called upon by God to make this demonstration of their belief and devoutness. All the clothing was removed from the infant, and thus in its denuded condition it was held out of doors until death resulted from extreme cold. The father had the child in his arms and during the time he remained thus exposed to the elements his hands and feet were severely frozen. The screams of the little one were heard by the neighbors, who at first were not aware of the awful tragedy that was being enacted. Neighbors passing the house later saw what was being done and after coming to a full realization of the fact that the parents had gone insane and were in a frenzied condition toward all who attempted to interfere with what they claimed to be a special order from God, organized a crowd and proceeded to place the parents in custody. The father resisted and was only overpowered after a fierce battle. After he had been taken into the house four men were required to keep him quiet. Mr. Spencer is a prosperous farmer and in the community where he resides has always been considered one of the most prominent citizens. Both he and his wife are devout Christians, and of late have been more concerned in their faith. They have three children.

Iowa Fails to Get "Healer" James.

LINCOLN, Neb., Feb. 2.—Governor Poynter refused to honor the requisition of the governor of Iowa for the return of "Healer" James, who was indicted by the grand jury of Pottawattamie county, charged with manslaughter in the case of Ethel Yates, the young woman who died under his hands and those of the mother of the girl, recently, in Council Bluffs. The indictment charged willful and felonious manslaughter, but James's attorneys claimed that no crime had been committed under the statute, and that no man could be held for committing an offense for which no penalty is provided by law. Governor Poynter upheld this contention.

Baby Cruelly Abandoned.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—A girl babe in a market basket was found in front of the St. James Catholic school. Its limbs were frozen to the knees and its arms to the elbows. The child was but a few hours old and thinly clad. It will probably die. A $1 bill was found in the basket.

BREVITIES.

At Waterloo recently the coroner's inquest over the remains of Dave Connell, the section foreman found dead on the Illinois Central tracks at Nashua, resulted in a verdict to the effect that death was caused by a blow. Connell's pockets were empty when the body was found. Two men are under arrest, but the charge is not made public.

Judge and Mrs. S. M. Richardson, of Clear Lake, have been married 62 years.

Omaha dispatch: "Divine Healer" James, indicted for manslaughter by the grand jury of Pottawattamie county, for complicity in the death of Ethel Yates, at Council Bluffs early in January, surrendered to the authorities and will be placed in jail. His attorney has gone to Lincoln to argue against the granting of requisition papers by the governor. Mrs. Yates, mother of the girl, who was indicted at the same time, is out on jail.

GOEBEL IS DEAD.

Beckham Sworn in as Governor Immediately After His Death.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 4.—The bullet fired by an unknown assassin last Tuesday morning ended the life of William Goebel at 6:45 last evening. The only persons present at his deathbed were Mr. Goebel's sister, Mrs. Braunacker, and his brother, Arthur Goebel, who have been in constant attendance at Mr. Goebel's bedside, and Dr. McCormick. Justin Goebel, who has been hurrying from Arizona as fast as steam would carry him, in a vain hope of reaching his dying brother in time for some token of recognition, arrived forty minutes too late. The patient was conscious a short time before his death, which was painless.

Immediately after his death Lieutenant Governor Beckham took the oath as governor. As acting governor he had already issued an order removing Adjutant General Collier and Assistant Dixon from office, and instructing the troops to return to their respective posts.

During the day the democratic members applied for and secured a writ of habeas corpus from Judge Moore of the county court, directing the governor to release Alonzo Walker, who had been arrested by the troops for serving legal papers on Governor Taylor. This writ Governor Taylor refused to recognize. Judge Cantril has also issued an injunction restraining Governor Taylor from interfering with the legislature and from removing the seat of that body to London. When Sheriff Suter returned the writ to Judge Moore unserved and reported the situation, the judge said another attempt would be made to enforce it Monday and if refused the sheriff would be given a sufficient number of men to enable him to take possession of the capitol grounds and carry out the purposes of the writ.

GREAT BRITAIN INDIGNANT.

Incompetency of the Cabinet Causes Amazement.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The indignation, humiliation and amazement of the nation at the incompetency displayed by its ministers has arisen to heights probably never before attained. While the empire is engaged in the most serious struggle to which it has been committed since the first years of the nineteenth century, while statesmen and legislatures of self-governing colonies faithfully represent the imperial spirit of their constituents, while Britishers of all ranks have arisen to the occasion with courage and unanimity unsurpassed in their annals, statesmen at home have committed themselves to party manœvers, mutual recriminations, contradictions, shuffling evasions and palpably lame excuses, so utterly heedless of the temper of the people, that a movement in favor of a reconstruction of the cabinet, first inaugurated a few weeks ago, promises, unless a more vigorous policy is speedily adopted, to develop into a national uprising which will sweep out the politicians whose utter failure almost appears to justify, in the words of the Daily Mail, "prophesy of the downfall of the British empire so liberally poured forth by writers and speakers in the United States and on the continent." Even the Times, that bulwark of conservatism, declares the chatter in the house of commons during the past few days is simply irritating and offensive to nine out of ten persons in the United Kingdom. Consequently it is not astonishing that people are looking for some strong man to lead them. Lord Roseberry's name is most prominent. His pitiless lashing of Salisbury on the day parliament reassembled marks him, in the opinion of many, as the right man to face the present imperial crisis.

CONSCRIPTION HINTED AT.

Rumor That Roberts Has Asked for Ninety Thousand More Men.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Sensational rumors are current that the militia ballot act will be put in force February 14, and that Lord Roberts, the commander-in-chief of the British forces in South Africa, has cabled for 90,000 additional men, which, it is added, the government has promised to give him, sending 50,000 militia and volunteers and 40,000 militia reserves. It is also said that the volunteers will be mobilized forthwith. It is even asserted that the cabinet has specially dealt with these matters. The militia ballot act makes every unmarried man between 18 and 30 years of age liable to serve for five years.

McKinley Sends Taylor a Reply.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—After the cabinet meeting the following statement was made:

"The president has decided that no case has as yet arisen to justify intervention of the national government in Kentucky and has so informed the governor."

Some significance may be attached to the word "governor," in the statement, inasmuch as the reply is directed to Taylor.

Taylor Appeals to McKinley.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—McKinley received a long message from Governor Taylor of Kentucky in which he recites the situation, declares he is the legal governor, asserts that the condition of affairs is most critical, etc. He says a riot may occur at any time and expresses doubt of his power to control the situation and appeals to president to end the matter and secure peace in the state by recognizing him as governor. The appeal is very earnest and the aid of the administration is urgently requested.

NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 30.—McArthur's bill providing that extracts of the code may be published with the consent of the executive council, was passed. Hobart's bill making use of blasphemous language an indictable offense, and Porter's bill making a notarial seal prima facie evidence of the compliance with the statutes of the state in which the seal was attached, were also passed.

HOUSE.

Joint resolution providing for an amendment to the constitution making elections biennial instead of annual, was recommended for passage. The resolution was made a special order for Thursday. Among bills introduced were the following: By Barrett, to raise salaries of turnkeys and guards in penitentiaries; by Baker, to provide better facilities at private railroad crossings. Bill raising salaries of county recorders, placing them on the same basis as auditors, was passed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 31.—Blanchard introduced a resolution providing that a joint session of the two houses of the legislature be held in the hall of the house next Friday morning at 11:30 for the purpose of electing a state printer and binder and trustees for the three state educational institutions not under the board of control. The resolution went over under the rules. Two bills of minor importance were passed. Among bills intruduced were these: By Garst, a bill making all inmates of state institutions wards of the state; another bill to provide for this support and still another providing an annual appropriation for a contingent and repair fund; by Allyn, a bill to amend the code so that the state printer and binder will be required to the secretary of the executive council to report concerning all expenditures and materials; by Bishop, to prevent desertion after seduction and marriage.

HOUSE.

Bills were introduced as follows: By Blake, appropriating $75,000 for building a state arsenal; also making the pay of the adjutant general $3,500 in time of war and $2,000 in time of peace and providing him with a record clerk at $1,200 per annum; by Hinkle, providing for equal suffrage; by Dows, permitting sale of real estate mortgages for delinquent tax; by Jones, appropriating $40,000 to pay for transporting troops from San Francisco to Iowa; by Black, providing for election of supervisors by voters of the whole county instead of electors of various districts.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 1.—Blanchard's resolution for a joint convention to elect a binder and a printer and trustees of institutions came up. An amendment by Lambert, striking printer and binder from the resolution, was defeated, 21 to 27. The resolution was adopted. Hurn's bill relative to proceedings in criminal cases, was passed. Bills were introduced as follows: By Hobart, providing for a state board of dental examiners; by Lister, providing for the correction of the code so it will be possible for foreigners to dispose of property which they own in the state; by Perrin, making mutilation of the United States flag a misdemeanor.

HOUSE.

Myers' bill providing that landlords must record leases with county recorder in order to make same enforcable against innocent purchasers and Sauers' bill extending time of closing polls at elections from 6 to 7 o'clock, were passed. Allyn's joint resolution, authorizing the executive council to print and bind extra copies of the report of the board of control, was passed, as was also the Titus constitutional amendment providing for biennial elections. Bills were introduced as follows: By Dows, to regulate the administration of trusts by savings banks and loan and trust companies doing business under the laws of Iowa; by Jones, for the protection of birds and game; by Graff, providing that assessors shall report to the county auditor on the stocks of building and loan associations in January instead of February, as under the present law; by Theunen, raising the salary of the chief executive officer of the Soldier's Orphan's Home at Davenport from $1,200 to $1,800 per year.

SENATE

Des Moines, Feb. 2.—Twenty-one senators voted against the confirmation of Col. H. H. Rood in executive session this morning. It needed but seventeen votes to refuse to confirm. All the democrats but Young, Ball and Bolter voted against confirmation. Bolter was absent or would have voted with the majority. Nine republicans voted with the minority as follows: Healy, Garst, Cheshire, Smith, Craig, Crossley, Hopkins, Hubbard and Finch. Several measures passed the senate, including Hayward's bill to change the laws regarding medical students, so that an examining board is sent to each institution, and students admitted to practice for a fee of $5. Among bills introduced was one by Harriman, creating a department of agriculture. It consolidates the state, district and county fairs, the weather crop service, dairy commissioner and state veterinarian under one department.

HOUSE.

The house, after spending the entire morning session discussing the question of electing state printer and binder in joint convention to-day, voted down the proposition by a vote of 52 to 45. The fight was over concurrence in the senate resolution to elect these officers at the same time the trustees of the educational institutions are elected. Clarke of Dallas and Blake of Webster led the fight against election. Ex-Speaker Byers and Eaton of Mitchell wanted to elect the officers and then abolish them. Temple of Clark was against voting down the election and against abolition. After the amendment striking out the words "printer" and "binder" had carried, Byers introduced a resolution postponing the date of the joint convention to elect trustees of the educational institutions to 11:30 next Tuesday, and the same prevailed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 3.—The bill extending the one-tenth mill building tax for the State University for five years was unanimously passed. Ten new bills came into the senate, making 176 new measures up to date. Mullan introduced one to extend the law course in the State University from two to three years, and require an equivalent course in all other schools for admission to the bar of the state; Wilson, one against convict labor; Hazleton, to regulate and tax distributers of advertising matter and employment bureaus; Cheshire, to allow cities to punish gambling, and by McIntyre, to exempt from taxation property, the income of which is given to literary, scientific, charitable or benevolent institutions. Senate concurred in house resolution to elect trustees of state institutions on Tuesday.

HOUSE.

Sweet of Bremer introduced a bill which calls for an amendment to the laws of the twenty-seventh general assembly, providing for the election of the members of the state board of control by the general assembly in joint convention. It takes all power of appointment from the governor save that he may with the endorsement of the senate, remove a man under certain conditions and may suspend a member when the assembly is not in session, but this suspension must be confirmed by the senate when it convenes. Among bills introduced were a half dozen bearing on insurance. Three bills of minor importance were passed.

Injunction Suits Begun.

FRANKTORT, Ky., Feb. 3.—A petition for injunction, signed by all the democratic members of the legislature, has been filed in the circuit court, Governor Taylor and Adjutant General Collier being made defendants. The court is asked to enjoin the defendants from interfering with the plaintiffs in the exercise of their lawful functions in the capitol building at Frankfort, or forcing the plaintiffs to go to London.

May Surrender Delagoa Bay.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The Lisbon correspondent of the Standard says: "I hear that the indemnity to be awarded Great Britain in the Delagoa bay arbitration will be so large that Portugal will be obliged to make over the railway and the port of Lorenzo Marquez to the British government."

Roberts Gets No Mileage.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The house committee on mileage rejected the claim of B. H. Roberts of Utah for mileage in connection with his contest for a seat in the house.

DES MOINES, Feb. 5, 1900.

The board of supervisors on the 30th granted a postponement of ten days for further investigation of the saloon petition by the ministerial association. This means that the saloons of Des Moines will be closed during that period. The investigation revealed the fact that out of 4,457 names on the petition, 293 cannot be found on the poll books, 258 names are duplicates and 29 are forgeries, affidavits being presented to back the statement. The petition, if the statement is correct, reduces the petition to 3,997 names or 200 short in names of voters to make it sufficient. It is believed that if any more discoveries are made the saloon men will withdraw their petition and commence the circulation of another.

Senator Townsend, the democratic member from Monroe county, in offering a resolution of sympathy for the Boers, explained that he was not at all sure that the Boers needed the sympathy of the Iowa senate, in view of the recent developments in South Africa, but thought those same developments might be calculated to help the members to a proper view of the situation there. The resolution was not acted upon but went over under the rules.

A warm discussion ensued at a meeting of the printing and binding committee a few days ago. Clarke, of Dallas, appeared before the committee in behalf of his bill for the abolishment of the offices of state printer and binder and was replied to by Temple, of Clarke. Ayers, Prentis, Temple, Anderson of Warren, Hilsinger, Blakemore and Wilson of Buena Vista were appointed a special committee to give full information of the present rates fixed by law before action is taken. A hard fight is expected in the committee.

The fight between doctors has been resumed and will continue the present session with the same bitterness that has characterized it in the past. Prentis, of Ringgold, has introduced a bill providing that all superintendents in hospitals for the insane shall not be from the same school of medicine. At present they are all allopaths. It is claimed by supporters of the bill that more than one-fourth of the taxpayers of Iowa patronize other schools of medicine and are entitled to treatment by representatives of their faith. A bill somewhat similar passed the house four years ago and failed in the senate. Last session it lacked one vote of passing the house.

The house committee on public officers decided that $6,100 is about the salary for the governor of the state of Iowa, instead of $4,100 as at present. It decided to report for passage a bill fixing the salary at that figure. The bill called for a salary of $6,000 but the committee shaved the amount $1,000. With the $1,100 in perquisites—$600 for house rent and $500 for work on executive council—the actual salary of the chief executive will be $6,100, if the house committees report is approved by the house and senate. The bill provides that the change shall go into effect in 1902, so that Governor Shaw will receive the benefit of the change for one year, if the biennial elections amendment is carried by the people, and Governor Shaw remains in office a fifth year, as is probable.

The Muscatine, Tipton & Northern Railway Company has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. It is organized to build between Muscatine and Independence by way of Cedar, Jones, Linn and Delaware counties. The capital is $150,000. Milton Weston, E. L. Tobie, O. H. Lloyd and L. M. Cole of Chicago, are the incorporators and officers.

The senate committee on ways and means, after consideration of the arguments advanced by the state university people, unanimously voted to report for passage the bill of Senator Ball to extend for five years more the one-tenth mill levy for the university building fund. President MacLean and Regents Babb, Ingham, Hilbrook and others spent a week in the city looking after the different appropriation measures of the institution. The action of the senate committee is considered strongly to foreshadow the passage of the measure. The house committee is disposed to be generous with the university.

The Des Moines Fire Insurance Company has gone into new hands, W. R. Warfield selling a majority of the stock to C. H. Ainley and Theodore Gatchell. Mr. Warfield retires from the presidency and is succeeded by Mr. Ainley. The company is one of the largest in Iowa.

One of the most important insurance bills, by Dows, of Linn, to repeal the state tax of 1 per cent on insurance companies, has been recommended for passage by the insurance committee of the house. The new code provides there shall be a state tax of 1 per cent of gross receipts, in lieu of other taxes. The supreme court held this state tax could not be in lieu of other taxes. Some counties are trying to collect the usual county, city, township and school taxes. The insurance companies object to what they consider double taxation.

Boer Advices Confirmed.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—A dispatch from Shearman's contains the first news from British sources, confirmatory of the Boer's report that the British in the first trenches on Spion Kop had surrendered. The telegram says: "The ammunition of some of the British troops in the advanced trenches on Spion Kop became exhausted and the Boers, observing this, charged the trenches and captured some. Other British troops, however, recovered the trenches."

HIS WORD OF HONOR.

A Tale of the Blue and the Gray.

BY E. WERNER.

Copyright, 1894, by Robert Bonner's Sons.

CHAPTER VI.—(Continued.)

"I fear it will be of little service to the prisoner. There is so much bitterness against the enemy that the mere suspicion of his having come as a spy will suffice to bring the most severe sentence the court-martial can impose. In the interest of our safety, I felt compelled to give you the information and urge the arrest of the suspicious person."

"And I have fulfilled your request, as duty required. My opinion of it we need not discuss. Only I desire to remind you that I have given Lieutenant my word of honor that he shall have honorable treatment. I shall hold you responsible for every insult that is offered him."

Edward shrugged his shoulders and tried to assume a scornful manner.

"You don't seem able to show your prisoner sufficient respect and indulgence. No one intends to insult him. I shall confine myself to preventing any effort to escape, which is always possible. You most positively refused to adopt any further precautions."

"Of course I did. Captured officers are not gagged; that is a measure fit only for spies or traitors."

Edward clenched his teeth. The glance with which he surveyed the captain was full of menace; but Wilson only smiled contemptuously.

"Farewell, Harrison. The object for which you summoned me here is probably baffled; and after what I have learned today I can only congratulte Miss Harrison. I again request that the prisoner shall be neither molested nor insulted until the escort arrives."

He bowed as coldly and formally as before, and left the room. Harrison did not return the salute, but gazed mutely and gloomily after his former friend, who now turned from him with undisguised contempt. The act which the wildest jealousy had led him to commit already showed to him a very different face than at the first moment of gratified revenge. What had he gained by it? Florence was forever lost to him, for she knew as well as Roland himself who had been guilty of this deed of treachery. Her father was no longer able to exert any control over her or make any bequest in favor of his nephew who, with his daughter's hand, was to receive all the rights of heirship and now possessed no legal claims. Nothing was left save vengeance on the hated rival, and this vengeance, at least, should be wreaked.

CHAPTER VII.

A horseman, who was evidently a stranger to the road, was trotting toward Springfield. He scanned every object very closely, and sometimes even seemed doubtful concerning the direction to pursue. He wore civilian's dress, a gray summer suit suited to the climate. Now, at a point where the road branched in two directions, he checked his horse irresolutely, pondered a few minutes and then waited for a carriage approaching him from behind. It was a light open vehicle, occupied by two gentlemen. The stranger, bowing, said:

"Pardon me. I am on my way to Springfield, and don't know whether to turn to the right or the left. Perhaps you will be kind enough to inform me?"

"You must take the right-hand one, sir," said the older of the two, a little withered man, with gray hair. "But we are going to Springfield, too; and if you will join us you cannot miss the road."

"With pleasure. I should not like to go out of my way, as I am in a hurry."

The rider urged his horse to a faster trot as he spoke, in order not to fall behind the carriage. The old gentleman eyed him curiously.

"You are in a hurry?" he repeated. "I suppose things are very bad at Springfield."

"Very bad!" was the laconic answer, but a sharp, keen glance rested on the speaker.

"Unfortunately, that was to be expected. But as you are so well informed, I presume I am not mistaken in supposing that I have met Doctor Blackwood?"

"Doctor Blackwood—of course," returned the stranger, with the same brevity. "And to whom have I the honor—"

"My name is Thompson. I am a justice of the peace in the city, and a friend of your colleague, Doctor Green. He told me yesterday that you had been summoned for consultation, and that he was going with you to Springfield. But you are alone, I see."

"Yes. Doctor Green was detained by an extremely critical case, and cannot leave town today, so I set off alone. These confounded military disturbances! Not a vehicle could be had in the whole city. I was obliged to ride in this scorching heat."

"May I offer you a seat in my carriage?" asked the magistrate courteously. "My companion can take your horse."

"I thank you. Don't trouble yourself. I'll keep up with the carriage."

Mr. Thompson, who was evidently glad to find some one with whom he could chat away the weary hours, ordered the driver to proceed more slowly, and an animated conversation was soon in full course. The old gentleman did not perceive that it consisted almost exclusively of questions which he answered. He did this, however, very eloquently, and was much pleased with his new acquaintance.

"Yes, I was summoned for consultation," said the physician. "Doctor Green has no doubt about the case, but the patient—"

He paused, apparently seeking just the right words.

"Poor Mr. Harrison!" observed the justice.

"Yes—poor Mr. Harrison! You know him, too?"

"Certainly; he always spends half the year at Springfield with his charming daughter. It is hard for the young lady that her wedding should take place under such sorrowful circumstances."

"Wedding? At her father's sickbed?"

"That is the reason. He probably knows that the end of his life is approaching, and wishes first to place his daughter in her husband's arms. At least that is what Mr. Edward Harrison told me when he asked me to perform the marriage ceremony at Springfield. Under the circumstances, I could not refuse, and am on my way there."

"Edward Harrison? A relative of the sick man, I suppose?"

"His nephew, and, through this wedding, also his heir. Miss Florence is the only child."

"But this haste is incomprehensible!" said the physician, whose lips curled in a smile of cutting sarcasm. "I heard from my colleague that but a short time ago the young lady was bound by other ties."

"Yes, I have heard so, too. Some romantic youthful love affair, which probably was not meant to be taken seriously. The lover, a young officer, is said to have entered the Union army, which, of course, ended the matter. At any rate, the young lady will be Mrs. Harrison this evening, if God so wills."

"Certainly—if God so wills."

The tone was so peculiar that even unsuspicious Mr. Thompson noticed it.

"What did you mean, sir?" he asked.

"Nothing especial; I merely repeated your pious words."

The mansion of Springfield was now visible in the distance; they were already driving through the plantation. The justice of the peace availed himself of the opportunity to dwell upon Mr. Harrison's wealth, discussed the possible losses which the war might inflict upon his property and expressed his belief that a large portion of his fortune was invested elsewhere. The doctor listened attentively, but this did not prevent his scanning the vicinity still more closely than before. He seemed trying to fix every bend in the road, every distant landmark upon his memory, and the house with its doors and terraces received the same scrutiny.

"A fine estate," he said. "Do you think its vicinity to the city will afford it protection? I have the contrary opinion, for it is an open secret that the march of the Union forces is directed here."

"Impossible! How do you know?" cried Thompson, starting from his corner of the carriage in terror.

"I heard it on my journey to the city."

"I heard, on the contrary, that their march was southward, otherwise I certainly should not have left town."

"Why, the troops will not interfere with a justice of the peace. At the utmost, you could only be obliged to unite some loving couple within the enemy's lines, in the bonds of matrimony."

"Jest as much as you choose," said Thompson, angrily. "I want nothing to do with the enemy. At any rate, I'll inquire about that rumor, and, for the present, remain in the city, which can only be taken by a regular siege."

The carriage now stopped at the house, the gentlemen alighted, and the doctor dismounted from his horse, throwing the bridle to a negro who hurried up.

"Don't unsaddle my horse," he said, carelessly. "I must go back to the city as quickly as possible, and at any rate shall leave before the other gentlemen."

He let the two men precede him and lingered, as if by accident, on the steps, looking after the servant.

An unmistakable expression of satisfaction flitted over his face as he saw that the animal was led to a stable close by the house.

Edward Harrison received the new arrivals, and the loquacious Mr. Thompson instantly presented Doctor Blackwood, sparing the latter any explanation by relating in detail the cause of Doctor Green's absence. Then he introduced his clerk, a pale, effeminate fellow, whose manner was excessively timid and deferential, and of whom no notice whatever was taken.

Meanwhile, during the last half hour Edward had had time to regain his composure. These visitors must, of course, obtain no glimpse of the catastrophe which had happened here.

He expressed in courteous phrases his regret for having troubled the magistrate in vain, his uncle's condition had changed so suddenly for the worse that it was impossible to have the wedding take place that day. Miss Harrison was in a state of the utmost anxiety and excitement. Then, turning with the same courtesy to the physician, he added:

"You are welcome, Doctor Blackwood, though I fear you can give us no consolation. We were prepared for the worst long ago, yet a physician's presence is always a satisfaction. I suppose Doctor Green has told you about the case?"

"Yes," replied the doctor, whose sharp keen eyes raised steadily on the young man's face. "So I should like to go to the sick room at once. Pray, don't trouble yourself. I prefer to see the patient first alone, and will then inform you of the result of my examination."

Self-Mastery.

He who has mastered himself, who is his own Caesar, will be stronger than his passion, superior to circumstances, higher than his calling, greater than his speech. Self-control is the generalship which turns a mob of raw recruits into a disciplined army. The rough man has become the polished and dignified soldier; in other words, the man has got control of himself and knows how to use himself. The human race is under constant drill, says O. S. Marden in the St. Louis Republic. Our occupations, difficulties, obstacles, disappointments, if used aright, are the great schoolmasters which help us to possess ourselves. The man who is master of himself will not be a slave to drudgery, but will keep in advance of his work. He will not rob his family of that which is worth more than money or position; he will not be the slave of his occupation, not at the mercy of circumstances. His methods and system will enable him to accomplish wonders, and yet give him leisure for self-culture. The man who controls himself works to live, rather than lives for work.

Ingersoll Floored.

Robert G. Ingersoll was not always the tactful lawyer he became in his maturity. Early in his career he found himself as counsel for the defense in a murder case, with a fussy old doctor as principal witness against him. Thinking he saw a chance to be brilliant he sarcastically proceeded to bully the witness by commenting upon doctors' mistakes. "Doctors make as few mistakes as lawyers," asserted the old man. "A doctor's mistakes are buried six feet under ground," was the reply. "Yes, but a lawyer's mistakes are hung as many feet above the ground," was the reply, "and that is just the difference." The jury saw the point, and Ingersoll lost the case.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

"For God So Loved the World That He Gave His Only Begotten Son, That Whosoever Believeth in Him Should Not Perish, but Have Everlasting Life."

Jesus and Nicodemus:

1. "There was a man of the Pharisees." The strictest sect of the Jews, holding the most correct opinions (Matt. 23: 3) and looking for the Messiah. Many of them were very bad, mere whited sepulchers, but the best of them, like Nicodemus and Paul, were the best soil for planting the gospel truths. "Nicodemus." A Greek name in common use. All we know of him is recorded here and in John 7: 50; 19: 39, which implies that he became a disciple. "A ruler of the Jews." "Archon, a Greek term, applied to the members of the Sanhedrim."—Canon.

2. "Come to Jesus by night." Not probably from fear, but from common prudence, for why should he commit himself before he knew more about Jesus? "Rabbi." Teacher, master; a very respectful address. "We know." And he soon gives his reason. "Thou art a teacher come from God." Not that he was a believer in Jesus as the Messiah, but was sure that there was some divine influence upon him. "For no man can do these miracles." Signs. "Except God be with him." The signs were not only miraculous, but of a kind worthy of a prophet.

3. "Jesus answered." Not to a spoken question, but to the condition he was in, to his needs, to the deeper questions of his soul. "Verily, verily." In the original, the Hebrew words, "Amen, amen," in Greek letters, "most assuredly," emphatically true. "Except a man (any one) be born again," or "anew," as in R. V., margin, from above. Whosoever is born anew, or is born from above, is born again. So Nicodemus understood it (v. 4.).

4. "Born when he is old." Nicodemus was old in the outward kingdom of God. To expect still a birth into the kingdom of God was inconceivable. He, in his own view, was already born into the kingdom.

5. Jesus replies by repeating his truth with emphasis. "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit." Jesus now adds born of water to born of the Spirit. As water is not repeated, the emphasis lies on the Spirit.

6. "That which is born of the flesh." The visible man, including "the appetite, desires, faculties which govern the body."—Dods. "Is flesh," is of the same kind as that from which it is born. Outward things can bring men into only the outward kingdom. "That which is born of the Spirit is spirit." Relating to the spiritual life of the soul, thus bringing men into the real, spiritual kngdom of God.

7. "Marvel not." For the same mystery is seen in natural things with which you are familiar. "Must be." There is no escape from this law. It would be as easy to change the law of gravitation as this law. But when men see the blessedness of this law of Christ, they will thank God for the privilege that they may be born again.

8. "The wind bloweth." The term for wind in Hebrew and Aramaic, as well as in Greek, was also the term for spirit, the immaterial in man being represented in a metaphor by the invisible but life-giving breath. We may, with Canon Liddon, imagine that in the upper room the wind was heard in the pauses of the conversation. "Where it listeth" (pleaseth)—i. e., according to its own unknown laws, and not according to our pleasure or will. "Thou hearest the sound thereof," etc.

10. "Art thou a master," that is, teacher, "and knowest not these things?" You will find this truth in the Scriptures you teach (Ezek. 11: 19; 18: 31; 36: 26; Jer. 24: 7; 31: 33). Have you studied the Scriptures enough to teach, and not noticed this great truth?

11. "We speak that we do know." The we may possibly include his disciples. They knew the truth from experience. It was not theory but personal knowledge.

12. "If I (now he speaks for himself) have told you earthly things." Things written and experienced in the earthly existence, which any one can put to the test, and verify. "How shall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things?" Those truths which could not be learned without a revelation from heaven.

13. "No man hath ascended up to heaven," and brought back the testimony of an eye-witness, "but he that came down from heaven." The "Word" of 1: 1-3, 14, who "was with God, and was God," and therefore knew absolutely the things which he revealed to men about spiritual and heavenly things. "Even the Son of man." Thus showing that he was the one who had come down from heaven. "Which is in heaven." His home is in heaven, and he maintains continually a vital connection with heaven. So far as heaven is a state and a character, Jesus was always in heaven.

14. "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness." Jesus now uses an illustration which makes clear some of the heavenly things he came to reveal. "Even so must the Son of man be lifted up." On the cross. The cross still holds up Jesus before the world, the best known and most exalted person in all history.

15. "That whosoever believeth in him." Accepts Him as Teacher, as Guide, and as Lord. Believing is the act of receiving the new life from God. "Should not perish." From the effects of sin, which naturally end in destruction of the soul. "But have eternal life." Be born again, have the new spiritual life by which he shall grow into a perfect man in Christ Jesus, and live forever in heaven. Eternal life is the life which nothing can destroy, which endures beyond the grave, and grows fuller and richer as the ages roll on.

16. "God so loved." With the greatest conceivable love, love put to the highest possible test. "The world." Not merely heavenly beings, angels, and seraphim, and saints, but this poor, sinful, unworthy world, so far from him in character. It was this wonderful fact which the angels sang on the fields of Bethlehem.

18. "He that believeth not is condemned already." As a starving man is condemned to starvation if he will not believe the messenger who proclaims where food can be obtained; or as a prisoner, condemned for his crimes, who will not believe in the offer of pardon from his king, remains in his chains and his prison.

CHURCH AND CLERGY.

BLOWS NOSE, EYE POPS OUT.

James H. Finigan of Cleveland Has a Novel Experience.

Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 5.—James H. Finigan, superintendent of the shipping department of Sterling, Welch & Co., has had a most remarkable experience. Tuesday evening Finigan was assisting in entertaining company at his home on Melvin street. He took his handkerchief from his pocket and blew his nose. Those present were horrified to see Fningan's left eye pop from its socket and hang by the ligaments down his cheek. One young woman fainted.

Finigan pushed the eye back into the socket, and in doing so carried the eyelid in with it. He was blind for the time being, and the pain was intense. A physician was called, but he refused to handle the case. Dr. D. E. Smith was then summoned. Finigan was removed to the Cleveland general hospital, where Dr. Smith took the eye out again and replaced it properly. Finigan is now able to be at work; the eye is bandaged. Finigan says:

"My physician tells me that I will be able to remove the bandage over my eye in a day or two. I take it off once in a while now. I do not dare blow my nose for fear the eye will pop out again."

The case among oculists is said to be one of the strangest on record.

TRANSPORT MAY BE LOST.

No News of the Manauense Since She Left Manila, on Dec. 8.

Washington, Feb. 5.—Many inquiries have been received at the war department relative to the safety of the transport Manauense, which left Manila for San Francisco on Dec. 8, and has not since been heard from, although several vessels which left Manila after her have reached San Francisco in safety. So far as is known at the war department no officers or enlisted men were embarked on the Manauense for the return voyage. Her officers and crew were not employes of Uncle Sam, but were furnished by the owners of the vessel, which was only chartered for the trip to Manila.

Girl Attempts Suicide.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—Agnes Schultz, the 19-year-old daughter of Mrs. Henrietta Schultz, 195 Madison street, this city, for the third time within a month, made an unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide Friday afternoon. Paris green was the poison taken, and by the prompt effort of Justice Frank Lehman of Harlem, the girl's life was saved. It is said Miss Schultz is in love with a young man who lives in Maywood, and that his indifference has made her despondent.

Fortune for Oshkosh Men.

Oshkosh, Wis., Feb. 5.—Timothy M. Walker of Omro and his son, Millard T. Walker, a machinist in this city, have received notice that they are sole heirs to a fortune of nearly $100,000 in cash and gilt-edge securities, left by the elder Mr. Walker's sister, Mrs. Nancy Maria Dikeman of Castleton, Vt., who died at Omro a few weeks ago while on a visit to her brother.

Ice Blockade on East Shore.

Grand Haven, Mich., Feb. 5.—An ice blockade prevails at Muskegon and Grand Haven. Not since Saturday has a steamer come in here, and only an easterly wind will break the blockade. The steamer Nyack is now in the ice off this port. The blockade is costing the transportation companies thousands of dollars.

Safe-Blowers Are Convicted.

Princeton, Ind., Feb. 5.—Patrick Jones, John Norton and Joseph Linden were found guilty of robbing the safe of McGinnis, Teel & Co., at Owensville, Jan. 12, of $4,000. The men will serve from two to fourteen years under the indeterminate sentence law at Michigan City prison.

Fell Dead at the Fire.

Youngstown, Ohio, Feb. 5.—Fire which originated in McElroy's furniture rooms in the business portion of the town Friday morning destroyed property valued at $500,000. Daniel Mills, a barber, while atempting to save his employer's effects, fell dead from heart trouble.

Arrested on Murder Charge.

Memphis Mo., Feb. 5.—Julius Courtney is under arrest here charged with the murder of William Hill, by giving him a drink of beer containing strychnine. Courtney was charged with keeping a gambling house, and Taylor was a witness against him.

Surveying on Panama Route.

Colon, Colombia, Feb. 5.—A party from the American surveying commission, which is headed by Rear Admiral Walker, commenced surveys of a canal route Friday.

PRESIDENT KRUEGER AHEAD.

Pretoria, Transvaal, South Africa, Dec. 7, 1899.

Messrs. Swanson Rheumatic Cure Company, Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.—Gentlemen: Your last shipment and communication received. I am very much pleased with the information which you have so kindly given me.

Please find enclosed bank draft to the amount of £412 10s, for which send me twenty-five (25) gross of Swanson's "5-DROPS." Ship same as before in order that there may be no delay, as this medicine will be greatly needed before it reaches us. The last shipment is almost disposed of, as the medical department of our army uses large quantities. This order is entirely for use in the army.

I have been told that our success on the battlefield is due to a certain extent to the use of "5-DROPS" Rheumatic Cure, which has relieved and prevented a great deal of suffering among our men from Rheumatism, Neuralgia and other acute pains caused by exposure. Your "5-DROPS" is as good as a Transvaal soldier!

In one of the battles, a small quantity of "5-DROPS," together with other medicines, was captured by the English, which was a great loss to our men. The Ruinecks won't do it again. I am, respectfully yours,

PETER HAAS.

"5-DROPS" is the most powerful specific known. Free from opiates and perfectly harmless. It is a perfect cure for Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia, Backache, Asthma, Catarrh, La Grippe, Neuralgic Headache, etc. Large sized bottles (300 doses), $1.00, or three (3) bottles for $2.50. Sample bottles 25 cents.

EBEL SWORN IN.

NKFORT, Ky., Feb. 1.—William l was shortly before 9 o'clock night sworn in as governor of ucky, and J. C. W. Beckman, a minutes later took the oath of tenant Governor. The oath was inistered to both men by Chief tice Hazlerigg of the court of apals. A statement was prepared sayg that the boards which had heard e contest for governor and lieutenvernor had decided in favor of and Beckman; that the boards d to report their findings to the Legislature, but that they had been preven W from doing so by the action of Gove r Taylor in declaring the legislatu adjourned. This statement then goes to say that the members of the legislature were driven from place to place by the militia and threatened with arrest wherever they attempted to hold a meeting. It was declared the belief of all the signers of the statement that Goebel and Beckman were the legally elected governor and lieutenant governor, and each man as he signed the paper announced that he voted for the adoption of the majority report of the contest boards which declared Goebel and Beckman to be the men legally and rightfully entitled to the offices. The statement is signed by a majority of the members of both houses. Mr. Goebel as soon as he was assured that he was legally governor of Kentucky took prompt action regarding the military arm of the service. Two orders were quickly prepared for his signature, the first of which discharged General Daniel Collier from office and appointed General John B. Castleman of Louisville as his successor. The second was addressed to the commanders of the militia now stationed in this city, directing them to return to their homes. Among the militia in Frankfort 300 men announce that they will obey Goebel's orders.

FRANKFORT, Feb. 1.—The doctors agree that Senator Goebel cannot live. Nothing but his wonderful vitality and nerve has kept him alive thus far. His assassin has not been arrested and there is no hope that he will be. Governor Taylor and the militia have complete control of the situaton.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 1.—When the members of the legislature attempted to enter the capitol yesterday morning they were stopped by Col. Williams and a detachment of troops and the following proclamation of the governor was handed to them:

"Whereas, a state of insurrection prevails in the state of Kentucky, especially in Frankfort, the capital thereof;

Therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the constitution of Kentucky, I do hereby, by this proclamation, adjourn at once the general assembly of the state of Kentucky to meet at London, Laurel county, Ky., Tuesday, the 6th day of February, 1900, at 12 o'clock.

The democratic members denounced the proceedings and at once made an effort to secure the opera house, in which they proposed to hold a session. Again the militia interfered. At the court house the were also shut out by the soldiers. Going to the Capitol hotel they were met by officers of the militia, who told them any attempt to hold a meeting would be suppressed. Later the democrats were told that no conferences could be held. London is in the "feud" county of the state, which is strongly republican, and while the democrats have not refused to go there they declare their lives would not be safe. Adjutant General Collier threatens to arrest them individually and carry them to London if ...ssary.

Legislation for Porto Rico.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—The Republicans of the ways and means committee of the house have laid down definite lines upon which the republican leaders of the house have decided to legislate for Porto Rico, so far as tariff duties are concerned. The decision reached is exceedingly important, as it commits the republicans of the ways and means committee to the theory that Porto Rico and the Philippines are not the territory of the United States, within the meaning of that section of the constitution which provides that customs and revenue laws shall be uniform throughout the United States. In other words it commits them to the view that our new possessions can be governed as colonies and that discriminating duties can be laid against them.

Situation at Ladysmith.

LADYSMITH, Jan. 28.—(Heliographed to Swartz Kop north of Tugela river.)—News of the prolongation of the siege, resulting from Buller's failure was received with fortitude. We can hold on. The garrison is healthier and is cheery and confident. Disease is disappearing and there is no horse sickness. Rains give plenty of grass. We can hear Buller's guns still working and it is rumored in camp that he is advancing along another line. The Boer laagers have also taken up a new position on the hills near Colenso, where they are in great force. Reinforcements are apparently arriving from the Transvaal. Large bodies of Boers are also visible beween here and Potgeiters drift.

Bubonic Plague at Honolulu.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 1.—The steamer Australia, from Honolulu, reports to the time of her departure that forty one deaths from the plague had occurred there out of ... of fifty-two cases.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

HE IS RESTRAINED,

DES MOINES, Feb. 2.—Governor Shaw has issued a pardon to C. E. McClauskey, who was sentenced to four years in the state's prison in 1898, for the crime of forgery. In issuing the pardon the governor has inserted many iron bound restrictions. The party convicted must take an oath to support his family, refrain from the use of all intoxicating liquors, live a peaceful and law abiding citizen, and once a month make a report to the chief executive of the state as to where he is laboring, for whom, and what he does with his earnings. In violation of these orders he will be deprived of his liberty and returned to the penitenteary to serve out the remainder of his term. If the paroled should for any reason, insufficient in the eyes of the governor, fail to make the regular monthly report the grounds will be held of a sufficiency to warrant a revocation of the pardon.

SALOONS ARE OPEN AGAIN.

Supreme Court Granted a Stay Suspending Recent Decision.

DES MOINES, Feb. 3.—Des Moines is a wet town again. The sixty-three saloons that were closed as a result of the decision of the supreme court in the case of O. C. West against Lorenz Ill, have reopened their doors. Judge E. T. Morris and Fritz Conrad, representing Defendant Ill and the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association, appeared before the supreme court and asked leave to file a motion for a rehearing in the Ill case. This was granted, and as soon as the petition was filed they asked that a stay be granted suspending the effect of the decision rendered until they can be heard on the petition. This was argued, and at the conclusion it was directed that the stay be granted, and it was so entered on the record of the court. No further action is likely until the May term. Meantime the saloon men will try to secure a new petition.

ARMY POST FOR DES MOINES.

Congressman Hull Gets the Bill Through the House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Congressman Hull yesterday called up his bill to authorize the establishment of a military post at Des Moines. Not a word of protest was raised against the bill, and it passed without a single vote in opposition. It will provably be comparatively easy to secure the endorsement of the senate, and Mr. Hull says he will try to get that body to give the bill early consideration. The people of Des Moines may therefore confidently expect to see an army post established within rifle shot of the heart of the city within a comparatively short time, but the chances are that not until the Philippine war is ended will there be many troops assigned to the new post.

GOODRICH ARRESTED.

Charged With the Murder of Robson. His Partner, at Sioux City.

SIOUX CITY, Feb.2.—Oscar A. Goodrich has been arrested for the murder of John E. Robson of Sioux City December 29. The accused was the former partner of the dead man, has been a resident of Sioux City for many years, and his arrest caused a great sensation. The popular verdict is that he is innocent. Detective Henry Morrison filed the information. The state offered $500 reward for conviction. The whole reward is $1,225. The murder was committed with a hatchet and was one of the foulest crimes in the history of Iowa.

Bitten by a Boar.

GENEVA, Feb. 3.—Oscar Creighton, a young farmer living fifteen miles northwest of town, is lying seriously ill from the effects of being bitten by a hog. Creighton was taking care of his hogs when the large boar which is in his drove made a rush at him, and before he could get out of the way it grabbed him just below the knee. At first he did not think he was hurt very badly, and went on about his work, but he afterwards found that he had been seriously injured and a physician was called. He has been receiving the very best of care since, but the physicians have given him up, as hydrophobia has set in

Got Hold of Wrong Bottle.

BEVINGTON, Feb. 4.—Thomas Nugent, when groping in the dark for a medicine bottle, got hold of the wrong one and swallowed a quantity of carbolic acid before he discovered his mistake. His mouth, throat, and stomach were badly burned, but the physicians believe that he is now out of danger.

Sioux City Box Mystery Solved.

SIOUX CITY, Feb. 4.—The Sioux City box mystery has been solved. The body, which was supposed to be that of a murdered man, was the body of a German tramp, who was fatally injured in Baltimore by being struck by a trolley car. The corpse was sent to Sioux City for medical purposes.

Fire at Fayette.

FAYETTE, Feb. 2.—Fire broke out in the business portion of the city and before it could be gotten under control nine buildings had been reduced to ashes. The loss is estimated at $60,000, not more than half covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Ghastly Find at Sioux City.

SIOUX CITY, Feb. 1.—A ghastly find was made in the office of the United States Express Company, when a box marked "books" was opened and found to contain the decomposed body of a murdered man.

NO LEGAL SALOONS.

There Are None Operating in Des Moines at Present.

DES MOINES, Jan. 30.—There is not a legal saloon in the city of Des Moines, and there are few of them in the state of Iowa. This is the effect of a decision handed down by the supreme court. The statements of consent, secured prior to the publication of the new code and upon which the saloons of this city have been operating ever since the new code went into effect, are held to be insufficient, and new ones must be secured before any local mulct saloon may operate legally. The opinion which carries this effect with it is a most sweeping one and is a body blow at Des Moines saloons. It is written by Judge Waterman, but is the unanimous holding of the supreme bench. It is the decision which has been anticipated by both saloon men and the prohibitionists of the city ever since the January term of court opened. The saloonkeeper who is made an example of is Lorenz Ill, on whom an application for an order was made to show why he should not be punished for violating an injunction against his maintenance of a liquor nuisance. Ill resisted the restraining order on the ground that he had complied with section 17, chapter 62, of the laws of the Twenty-fifth general assembly, which require the filing of a statement of consent signed by a majority of the voters at the last election, and he was therefore legally engaged in the liquor business. The plaintiff in the case, O. C. West, set up a demurrer, declaring that the acts of the Twenty-fifth general assembly were repealed when the new code went into effect, and under the provisions of the new code Ill's statement of consent was insufficient because not canvassed by the board of supervisors. This demurrer was over ruled by Judge Bishop, and the case was appealed. The supreme court reverses the decision of Judge Bishop and holds that a new statement of consent is necessary.

FROZE THEIR BABY TO DEATH.

Terrible Act of Religiously Insane Parents in Monroe County.

OTTUMWA, Feb. 1.—Thoroughly crazed over the subject of religion, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spencer, residing six miles northwest of Lovilla, in Monroe county, sacrificed their infant to the fanatic belief that they had been called upon by God to make this demonstration of their belief and devoutness. All the clothing was removed from the infant, and thus in its denuded condition it was held out of doors until death resulted from extreme cold. The father had the child in his arms and during the time he remained thus exposed to the elements his hands and feet were severely frozen. The screams of the little one were heard by the neighbors, who at first were not aware of the awful tragedy that was being enacted. Neighbors passing the house later saw what was being done and after coming to a full realization of the fact that the parents had gone insane and were in a frenzied condition toward all who attempted to interfere with what they claimed to be a special order from God, organized a crowd and proceeded to place the parents in custody. The father resisted and was only overpowered after a fierce battle. After he had been taken into the house four men were required to keep him quiet. Mr. Spencer is a prosperous farmer and in the community where he resides has always been considered one of the most prominent citizens. Both he and his wife are devout Christians, and of late have been more concerned in their faith. They have three children.

Iowa Fails to Get "Healer" James.

LINCOLN, Neb., Feb. 2.—Governor Poynter refused to honor the requisition of the governor of Iowa for the return of "Healer" James, who was indicted by the grand jury of Pottawattamie county, charged with manslaughter in the case of Ethel Yates, the young woman who died under his hands and those of the mother of the girl, recently, in Council Bluffs. The indictment charged willful and felonious manslaughter, but James's attorneys claimed that no crime had been committed under the statute, and that no man could be held for committing an offense for which no penalty is provided by law. Governor Poynter upheld this contention.

Baby Cruelly Abandoned.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—A girl babe in a market basket was found in front of the St. James Catholic school. Its limbs were frozen to the knees and its arms to the elbows. The child was but a few hours old and thinly clad. It will probably die. A $1 bill was found in the basket.

BREVITIES.

At Waterloo recently the coroner's inquest over the remains of Dave Connell, the section foreman found dead on the Illinois Central tracks at Nashua, resulted in a verdict to the effect that death was caused by a blow. Connell's pockets were empty when the body was found. Two men are under arrest, but the charge is not made public.

Judge and Mrs. S. M. Richardson, of Clear Lake, have been married 62 years.

Omaha dispatch: "Divine Healer" James, indicted for manslaughter by the grand jury of Pottawattamie county, for complicity in the death of Ethel Yates, at Council Bluffs early in January, surrendered to the authorities and will be placed in jail. His attorney has gone to Lincoln to argue against the granting of requisition papers by the governor. Mrs. Yates, mother of the girl, who was indicted at the same time, is out on jail.

GOEBEL IS DEAD.

Beckham Sworn in as Governor Immediately After His Death.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 4.—The bullet fired by an unknown assassin last Tuesday morning ended the life of William Goebel at 6:45 last evening. The only persons present at his deathbed were Mr. Goebel's sister, Mrs. Braunacker, and his brother, Arthur Goebel, who have been in constant attendance at Mr. Goebel's bedside, and Dr. McCormick. Justin Goebel, who has been hurrying from Arizona as fast as steam would carry him, in a vain hope of reaching his dying brother in time for some token of recognition, arrived forty minutes too late. The patient was conscious a short time before his death, which was painless.

Immediately after his death Lieutenant Governor Beckham took the oath as governor. As acting governor he had already issued an order removing Adjutant General Collier and Assistant Dixon from office, and instructing the troops to return to their respective posts.

During the day the democratic members applied for and secured a writ of habeas corpus from Judge Moore of the county court, directing the governor to release Alonzo Walker, who had been arrested by the troops for serving legal papers on Governor Taylor. This writ Governor Taylor refused to recognize. Judge Cantril has also issued an injunction restraining Governor Taylor from interfering with the legislature and from removing the seat of that body to London. When Sheriff Suter returned the writ to Judge Moore unserved and reported the situation, the judge said another attempt would be made to enforce it Monday and if refused the sheriff would be given a sufficient number of men to enable him to take possession of the capitol grounds and carry out the purposes of the writ.

GREAT BRITAIN INDIGNANT.

Incompetency of the Cabinet Causes Amazement.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The indignation, humiliation and amazement of the nation at the incompetency displayed by its ministers has arisen to heights probably never before attained. While the empire is engaged in the most serious struggle to which it has been committed since the first years of the nineteenth century, while statesmen and legislatures of self-governing colonies faithfully represent the imperial spirit of their constituents, while Britishers of all ranks have arisen to the occasion with courage and unanimity unsurpassed in their annals, statesmen at home have committed themselves to party manœvers, mutual recriminations, contradictions, shuffling evasions and palpably lame excuses, so utterly heedless of the temper of the people, that a movement in favor of a reconstruction of the cabinet, first inaugurated a few weeks ago, promises, unless a more vigorous policy is speedily adopted, to develop into a national uprising which will sweep out the politicians whose utter failure almost appears to justify, in the words of the Daily Mail, "prophesy of the downfall of the British empire so liberally poured forth by writers and speakers in the United States and on the continent." Even the Times, that bulwark of conservatism, declares the chatter in the house of commons during the past few days is simply irritating and offensive to nine out of ten persons in the United Kingdom. Consequently it is not astonishing that people are looking for some strong man to lead them. Lord Roseberry's name is most prominent. His pitiless lashing of Salisbury on the day parliament reassembled marks him, in the opinion of many, as the right man to face the present imperial crisis.

CONSCRIPTION HINTED AT.

Rumor That Roberts Has Asked for Ninety Thousand More Men.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Sensational rumors are current that the militia ballot act will be put in force February 14, and that Lord Roberts, the commander-in-chief of the British forces in South Africa, has cabled for 90,000 additional men, which, it is added, the government has promised to give him, sending 50,000 militia and volunteers and 40,000 militia reserves. It is also said that the volunteers will be mobilized forthwith. It is even asserted that the cabinet has specially dealt with these matters. The militia ballot act makes every unmarried man between 18 and 30 years of age liable to serve for five years.

McKinley Sends Taylor a Reply.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—After the cabinet meeting the following statement was made:

"The president has decided that no case has as yet arisen to justify intervention of the national government in Kentucky and has so informed the governor."

Some significance may be attached to the word "governor," in the statement, inasmuch as the reply is directed to Taylor.

Taylor Appeals to McKinley.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—McKinley received a long message from Governor Taylor of Kentucky in which he recites the situation, declares he is the legal governor, asserts that the condition of affairs is most critical, etc. He says a riot may occur at any time and expresses doubt of his power to control the situation and appeals to president to end the matter and secure peace in the state by recognizing him as governor. The appeal is very earnest and the aid of the administration is urgently requested.

NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 30.—McArthur's bill providing that extracts of the code may be published with the consent of the executive council, was passed. Hobart's bill making use of blasphemous language an indictable offense, and Porter's bill making a notarial seal prima facie evidence of the compliance with the statutes of the state in which the seal was attached, were also passed.

HOUSE.

Joint resolution providing for an amendment to the constitution making elections biennial instead of annual, was recommended for passage. The resolution was made a special order for Thursday. Among bills introduced were the following: By Barrett, to raise salaries of turnkeys and guards in penitentiaries; by Baker, to provide better facilities at private railroad crossings. Bill raising salaries of county recorders, placing them on the same basis as auditors, was passed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 31.—Blanchard introduced a resolution providing that a joint session of the two houses of the legislature be held in the hall of the house next Friday morning at 11:30 for the purpose of electing a state printer and binder and trustees for the three state educational institutions not under the board of control. The resolution went over under the rules. Two bills of minor importance were passed. Among bills introduced were these: By Gatst, a bill making all inmates of state institutions wards of the state; another bill to provide for this support and still another providing an annual appropriation for a contingent and repair fund; by Allyn, a bill to amend the code so that the state printer and binder will be required to the secretary of the executive council to report concerning all expenditures and materials; by Bishop, to prevent desertion after seduction and marriage.

HOUSE.

Bills were introduced as follows: By Blake, appropriating $75,000 for building a state arsenal; also making the pay of the adjutant general $3,500 in time of war and $2,000 in time of peace and providing him with a record clerk at $1,200 per annum; by Hinkle, providing for equal suffrage; by Dows, permitting sale of real estate mortgages for delinquent tax; by Jones, appropriating $40,000 to pay for transporting troops from San Francisco to Iowa; by Black, providing for election of supervisors by voters of the whole county instead of electors of various districts.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 1.—Blanchard's resolution for a joint convention to elect a binder and a printer and trustees of institutions came up. An amendment by Lambert, striking printer and binder from the resolution, was defeated, 21 to 27. The resolution was adopted. Burn's bill relative to proceedings in criminal cases, was passed. Bills were introduced as follows: By Hobart, providing for a state board of dental examiners; by Lister, providing for the correction of the code so it will be possible for foreigners to dispose of property which they own in the state; by Perrin, making mutilation of the United States flag a misdemeanor.

HOUSE.

Myers' bill providing that landlords must record leases with county recorder in order to make same enforcable against innocent purchasers and Sauers' bill extending time of closing polls at elections from 6 to 7 o'clock, were passed. Allyn's joint resolution, authorizing the executive council to print and bind extra copies of the report of the board of control, was passed, as was also the Titus constitutional amendment providing for biennial elections. Bills were introduced as follows: By Dows, to regulate the administration of trusts by savings banks and loan and trust companies doing business under the laws of Iowa; by Jones, for the protection of birds and game; by Graff, providing that assessors shall report to the county auditor on the stocks of building and loan associations in January instead of February, as under the present law; by Theunen, raising the salary of the chief executive officer of the Soldier's Orphan's Home at Davenport from $1,200 to $1,800 per year.

SENATE

Des Moines, Feb. 2.—Twenty-one senators voted against the confirmation of Col. H. H. Rood in executive session this morning. It needed but seventeen votes to refuse to confirm. All the democrats but Young, Ball and Bolter voted against confirmation. Bolter was absent or would have voted with the majority. Nine republicans voted with the minority as follows: Healy, Garst, Cheshire, Smith, Craig, Crossley, Hopkins, Hubbard and Finch. Several measures passed the senate, including Hayward's bill to change the laws regarding medical students, so that an examining board is sent to each institution, and students admitted to practice for a fee of $5. Among bills introduced was one by Harriman, creating a department of agriculture. It consolidates the state, district and county fairs, the weather crop service, dairy commissioner and state veterinarian under one department.

HOUSE.

The house, after spending the entire morning session discussing the question of electing state printer and binder in joint convention to-day, voted down the proposition by a vote of 52 to 45. The fight was over concurrence in the senate resolution to elect these officers at the same time the trustees of the educational institutions are elected. Clarke of Dallas and Blake of Webster led the fight against election. Ex Speaker Byers and Eaton of Mitchell wanted to elect the officers and then abolish them. Temple of Clark was against voting down the election and against abolition. After the amendment striking out the words "printer" and "binder" had carried, Byers introduced a resolution postponing the date of the joint convention to elect trustees of the educational institutions to 11:30 next Tuesday, and the same prevailed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 3.—The bill extending the one-tenth mill building tax for the State University for five years was unanimously passed. Ten new bills came into the senate, making 176 new measures up to date. Mullan introduced one to extend the law course in the State University from two to three years, and require an equivalent course in all other schools for admission to the bar of the state; Wilson, one against convict labor; Hazleton, to regulate and tax distributers of advertising matter and employment bureaus; Cheshire, to allow cities to punish gambling, and by McIntyre, to exempt from taxation property, the income of which is given to literary, scientific, charitable or benevolent institutions. Senate concurred in house resolution to elect trustees of state institutions on Tuesday.

HOUSE.

Sweet of Bremer introduced a bill which calls for an amendment to the laws of the twenty-seventh general assembly, providing for the election of the members of the state board of control by the general assembly in joint convention. It takes all power of appointment from the governor save that he may with the endorsement of the senate, remove a man under certain conditions and may suspend a member when the assembly is not in session, but this suspension must be confirmed by the senate when it convenes. Among bills introduced were a half dozen bearing on insurance. Three bills of minor importance were passed.

Injunction Suits Begun.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 3.—A petition for injunction, signed by all the democratic members of the legislature, has been filed in the circuit court, Governor Taylor and Adjutant General Collier being made defendants. The court is asked to enjoin the defendants from interfering with the plaintiffs in the exercise of their lawful functions in the capitol building at Frankfort, or forcing the plaintiffs to go to London.

May Surrender Delagoa Bay.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The Lisbon correspondent of the Standard says: "I hear that the indemnity to be awarded Great Britain in the Delagoa bay arbitration will be so large that Portugal will be obliged to make over the railway and the port of Lorenzo Marquez to the British government."

Roberts Gets No Mileage.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The house committee on mileage rejected the claim of B. H. Roberts of Utah for mileage in connection with his contest for a seat in the house.

DES MOINES, Feb. 5. 1900.

The board of supervisors on the 30th granted a postponement of ten days for further investigation of the saloon petition by the ministerial association. This means that the saloons of Des Moines will be closed during that period. The investigation revealed the fact that out of 4,457 names on the petition, 293 cannot be found on the poll books, 258 names are duplicates and 29 are forgeries, affidavits being presented to back the statement. The petition, if the statement is correct, reduces the petition to 3,997 names or 200 short in names of voters to make it sufficient. It is believed that if any more discoveries are made the saloon men will withdraw their petition and commence the circulation of another.

Senator Townsend, the democratic member from Monroe county, in offering a resolution of sympathy for the Boers, explained that he was not at all sure that the Boers needed the sympathy of the Iowa senate, in view of the recent developments in South Africa, but thought those same developments might be calculated to help the members to a proper view of the situation there. The resolution was not acted upon but went over under the rules.

A warm discussion ensued at a meeting of the printing and binding committee a few days ago. Clarke, of Dallas, appeared before the committee in behalf of his bill for the abolishment of the offices of state printer and binder and was replied to by Temple, of Clarke. Ayers, Prentis, Temple, Anderson of Warren, Hilsinger, Blakemore and Wilson of Buena Vista were appointed a special committee to give full information of the present rates fixed by law before action is taken. A hard fight is expected in the committee.

The fight between doctors has been resumed and will continue the present session with the same bitterness that has characterized it in the past. Prentis, of Ringgold, has introduced a bill providing that all superintendents in hospitals for the insane shall not be from the same school of medicine. At present they are all allopaths. It is claimed by supporters of the bill that more than one-fourth of the taxpayers of Iowa patronize other schools of medicine and are entitled to treatment by representatives of their faith. A bill somewhat similar passed the house four years ago and failed in the senate. Last session it lacked one vote of passing the house.

The house committee on public officers decided that $6,100 is about the salary for the governor of the state of Iowa, instead of $4,100 as at present. It decided to report for passage a bill fixing the salary at that figure. The bill called for a salary of $6,000 but the committee shaved the amount $1,000. With the $1,100 in perquisites—$600 for house rent and $500 for work on executive council—the actual salary of the chief executive will be $6,100, if the house committees report is approved by the house and senate. The bill provides that the change shall go into effect in 1902, so that Governor Shaw will receive the benefit of the change for one year, if the biennial elections amendment is carried by the people, and Governor Shaw remains in office a fifth year, as is probable.

The Muscatine, Tipton & Northern Railway Company has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. It is organized to build between Muscatine and Independence by way of Cedar, Jones, Linn and Delaware counties. The capital is $150,000. Milton Weston, E. L. Tobie, O. H. Lloyd and L. M. Cole of Chicago, are the incorporators and officers.

The senate committee on ways and means, after consideration of the arguments advanced by the state university people, unanimously voted to report for passage the bill of Senator Ball to extend for five years more the one-tenth mill levy for the university building fund. President MacLean and Regents Babb, Ingham, Hilbrook and others spent a week in the city looking after the different appropriation measures of the institution. The action of the senate committee is considered strongly to foreshadow the passage of the measure. The house committee is disposed to be generous with the university.

The Des Moines Fire Insurance Company has gone into new hands, W. R. Warfield selling a majority of the stock to C. H. Ainley and Theodore Gatchell. Mr. Warfield retires from the presidency and is succeeded by Mr. Ainley. The company is one of the largest in Iowa.

One of the most important insurance bills, by Dows, of Linn, to repeal the state tax of 1 per cent on insurance companies, has been recommended for passage by the insurance committee of the house. The new code provides there shall be a state tax of 1 per cent of gross receipts, in lieu of other taxes. The supreme court held this state tax could not be in lieu of other taxes. Some counties are trying to collect the usual county, city, township and school taxes. The insurance companies object to what they consider double taxation.

Boer Advices Confirmed.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—A dispatch from Shearman's contains the first news from British sources, confirmatory of the Boer's report that the British in the first trenches on Spion Kop had surrendered. The telegram says: "The ammunition of some of the British troops in the advanced trenches on Spion Kop became exhausted and the Boers, observing this, charged the trenches and captured some. Other British troops, however, recovered the trenches."

HIS WORD OF HONOR.

A Tale of the Blue and the Gray.

BY E. WERNER.

Copyright, 1894, by Robert Bonner's Sons.

"I fear it will be of little service to the prisoner. There is so much bitterness against the enemy that the mere suspicion of his having come as a spy will suffice to bring the most severe sentence the court-martial can impose. In the interest of our safety, I felt compelled to give you the information and urge the arrest of the suspicious person."

"And I have fulfilled your request, as duty required. My opinion of it we need not discuss. Only I desire to remind you that I have given Lieutenant my word of honor that he shall have honorable treatment. I shall hold you responsible for every insult that is offered him."

Edward shrugged his shoulders and tried to assume a scornful manner.

"You don't seem able to show your prisoner sufficient respect and indulgence. No one intends to insult him. I shall confine myself to preventing any effort to escape, which is always possible. You most positively refused to adopt any further precautions."

"Of course I did. Captured officers are not gagged; that is a measure fit only for spies or traitors."

Edward clenched his teeth. The glance with which he surveyed the captain was full of menace; but Wilson only smiled contemptuously.

"Farewell, Harrison. The object for which you summoned me here is probably baffled; and after what I have learned today I can only congratulte Miss Harrison. I again request that the prisoner shall be neither molested nor insulted until the escort arrives."

He bowed as coldly and formally as before, and left the room. Harrison did not return the salute, but gazed mutely and gloomily after his former friend, who now turned from him with undisguised contempt. The act which the wildest jealousy had led him to commit already showed to him a very different face than at the first moment of gratified revenge. What had he gained by it? Florence was forever lost to him, for she knew as well as Roland himself who had been guilty of this deed of treachery. Her father was no longer able to exert any control over her or make any bequest in favor of his nephew who, with his daughter's hand, was to receive all the rights of heirship and now possessed no legal claims. Nothing was left save vengeance on the hated rival, and this vengeance, at least, should be wreaked.

CHAPTER VII.

A horseman, who was evidently a stranger to the road, was trotting toward Springfield. He scanned every object very closely, and sometimes even seemed doubtful concerning the direction to pursue. He wore civilian's dress, a gray summer suit suited to the climate. Now, at a point where the road branched in two directions, he checked his horse irresolutely, pondered a few minutes and then waited for a carriage approaching him from behind. It was a light open vehicle, occupied by two gentlemen. The stranger, bowing, said:

"Pardon me. I am on my way to Springfield, and don't know whether to turn to the right or the left. Perhaps you will be kind enough to inform me?"

"You must take the right-hand one, sir," said the older of the two, a little withered man, with gray hair. "But we are going to Springfield, too; and if you will join us you cannot miss the road."

"With pleasure. I should not like to go out of my way, as I am in a hurry."

The rider urged his horse to a faster trot as he spoke, in order not to fall behind the carriage. The old gentleman eyed him curiously.

"You are in a hurry?" he repeated. "I suppose things are very bad at Springfield."

"Very bad!" was the laconic answer, but a sharp, keen glance rested on the speaker.

"Unfortunately, that was to be expected. But as you are so well informed, I presume I am not mistaken in supposing that I have met Doctor Blackwood?"

"Doctor Blackwood—of course," returned the stranger, with the same brevity. "And to whom have I the honor—"

"My name is Thompson. I am a justice of the peace in the city, and a friend of your colleague, Doctor Green. He told me yesterday that you had been summoned for consultation, and that he was going with you to Springfield. But you are alone, I see."

"Yes. Doctor Green was detained by an extremely critical case, and cannot leave town today, so I set off alone. These confounded military disturbances! Not a vehicle could be had in the whole city. I was obliged to ride in this scorching heat."

"May I offer you a seat in my carriage?" asked the magistrate courteously. "My companion can take your horse."

"I thank you. Don't trouble yourself. I'll keep up with the carriage."

Mr. Thompson, who was evidently glad to find some one with whom he could chat away the weary hours, ordered the driver to proceed more slowly, and an animated conversation was soon in full course. The old gentleman did not perceive that it consisted almost exclusively of questions which he answered. He did this, however, very eloquently, and was much pleased with his new acquaintance.

"Yes, I was summoned for consultation," said the physician. "Doctor Green has no doubt about the case, but the patient—"

He paused, apparently seeking just the right words.

"Poor Mr. Harrison!" observed the justice.

"Yes—poor Mr. Harrison! You know him, too?"

"Certainly; he always spends half the year at Springfield with his charming daughter. It is hard for the young lady that her wedding should take place under such sorrowful circumstances."

"Wedding? At her father's sickbed?"

"That is the reason. He probably knows that the end of his life is approaching, and wishes first to place his daughter in her husband's arms. At least that is what Mr. Edward Harrison told me when he asked me to perform the marriage ceremony at Springfield. Under the circumstances, I could not refuse, and am on my way there."

"But this haste is incomprehensible!" said the physician, whose lips curled in a smile of cutting sarcasm. "I heard from my colleague that but a short time ago the young lady was bound by other ties."

"Yes, I have heard so, too. Some romantic youthful love affair, which probably was not meant to be taken seriously. The lover, a young officer, is said to have entered the Union army, which, of course, ended the matter. At any rate, the young lady will be Mrs. Harrison this evening, if God so wills."

"Certainly—if God so wills."

The tone was so peculiar that even unsuspicious Mr. Thompson noticed it.

"What did you mean, sir?" he asked.

"Nothing especial; I merely repeated your pious words."

The mansion of Springfield was now visible in the distance; they were already driving through the plantation.

The justice of the peace availed himself of the opportunity to dwell upon Mr. Harrison's wealth, discussed the possible losses which the war might inflict upon his property and expressed his belief that a large portion of his fortune was invested elsewhere. The doctor listened attentively, but this did not prevent his scanning the vicinity still more closely than before. He seemed trying to fix every bend in the road, every distant landmark upon his memory, and the house with its doors and terraces received the same scrutiny.

"A fine estate," he said. "Do you think its vicinity to the city will afford it protection? I have the contrary opinion, for it is an open secret that the march of the Union forces is directed here."

"Impossible! How do you know?" cried Thompson, starting from his corner of the carriage in terror.

"I heard it on my journey to the city."

"Why, the troops will not interfere with a justice of the peace. At the utmost, you could only be obliged to unite some loving couple within the enemy's lines, in the bonds of matrimony."

"Jest as much as you choose," said Thompson, angrily. "I want nothing to do with the enemy. At any rate, I'll inquire about that rumor, and, for the present, remain in the city, which can only be taken by a regular siege."

The carriage now stopped at the house, the gentlemen alighted, and the doctor dismounted from his horse, throwing the bridle to a negro who hurried up.

"Don't unsaddle my horse," he said, carelessly. "I must go back to the city as quickly as possible, and at any rate shall leave before the other gentlemen."

He let the two men precede him and lingered, as if by accident, on the steps, looking after the servant.

An unmistakable expression of satisfaction flitted over his face as he saw that the animal was led to a stable close by the house.

Edward Harrison received the new arrivals, and the loquacious Mr. Thompson instantly presented Doctor Blackwood, sparing the latter any explanation by relating in detail the cause of Doctor Green's absence. Then he introduced his clerk, a pale, effeminate fellow, whose manner was excessively timid and deferential, and of whom no notice whatever was taken.

Meanwhile, during the last half hour Edward had had time to regain his composure. These visitors must, of course, obtain no glimpse of the catastrophe which had happened here.

He expressed in courteous phrases his regret for having troubled the magistrate in vain, his uncle's condition had changed so suddenly for the worse that it was impossible to have the wedding take place that day. Miss Harrison was in a state of the utmost anxiety and excitement. Then, turning with the same courtesy to the physician, he added:

"You are welcome, Doctor Blackwood, though I fear you can give us no consolation. We were prepared for the worst long ago, yet a physician's presence is always a satisfaction. I suppose Doctor Green has told you about the case?"

"Yes," replied the doctor, whose sharp keen eyes raised steadily on the young man's face. "So I should like to go to the sick room at once. Pray, don't trouble yourself. I prefer to see the patient first alone, and will then inform you of the result of my examination."

Self-Mastery.

He who has mastered himself, who is his own Caesar, will be stronger than his passion, superior to circumstances, higher than his calling, greater than his speech. Self-control is the generalship which turns a mob of raw recruits into a disciplined army. The rough man has become the polished and dignified soldier; in other words, the man has got control of himself and knows how to use himself. The human race is under constant drill, says O. S. Marden in the St. Louis Republic. Our occupations, difficulties, obstacles, disappointments, if used aright, are the great schoolmasters which help us to possess ourselves. The man who is master of himself will not be a slave to drudgery, but will keep in advance of his work. He will not rob his family of that which is worth more than money or position; he will not be the slave of his occupation, not at the mercy of circumstances. His methods and system will enable him to accomplish wonders, and yet give him leisure for self-culture. The man who controls himself works to live, rather than lives for work.

Ingersoll Floored.

Robert G. Ingersoll was not always the tactful lawyer he became in his maturity. Early in his career he found himself as counsel for the defense in a murder case, with a fussy old doctor as principal witness against him. Thinking he saw a chance to be brilliant he sarcastically proceeded to bully the witness by commenting upon doctors' mistakes. "Doctors make as few mistakes as lawyers," asserted the old man. "A doctor's mistakes are buried six feet under ground," was the reply. "Yes, but a lawyer's mistakes are hung as many feet above the ground," was the reply, "and that is just the difference." The jury saw the point, and Ingersoll lost the case.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

"For God So Loved the World That He Gave His Only Begotten Son, That Whosoever Believeth in Him Should Not Perish, but Have Everlasting Life."

Jesus and Nicodemus:

1. "There was a man of the Pharisees." The strictest sect of the Jews, holding the most correct opinions (Matt. 23: 3) and looking for the Messiah. Many of them were very bad, mere whited sepulchers, but the best of them, like Nicodemus and Paul, were the best soil for planting the gospel truths. "Nicodemus." A Greek name in common use. All we know of him is recorded here and in John 7: 50; 19: 39, which implies that he became a disciple. "A ruler of the Jews." "Archon, a Greek term, applied to the members of the Sanhedrim."—Canon.

2. "Come to Jesus by night." Not probably from fear, but from common prudence, for why should he commit himself before he knew more about Jesus? "Rabbi." Teacher, master; a very respectful address. "We know." And he soon gives his reason. "Thou art a teacher come from God." Not that he was a believer in Jesus as the Messiah, but was sure that there was some divine influence upon him. "For no man can do these miracles." Signs. "Except God be with him." The signs were not only miraculous, but of a kind worthy of a prophet.

3. "Jesus answered." Not to a spoken question, but to the condition he was in, to his needs, to the deeper questions of his soul. "Verily, verily." In the original, the Hebrew words, "Amen, amen," in Greek letters, "most assuredly," emphatically true. "Except a man (any one) be born again," or "anew," as in R. V., margin, from above. Whosoever is born anew, or is born from above, is born again. So Nicodemus understood it (v. 4.).

4. "Born when he is old." Nicodemus was old in the outward kingdom of God. To expect still a birth into the kingdom of God was inconceivable. He, in his own view, was already born into the kingdom.

5. Jesus replies by repeating his truth with emphasis. "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit." Jesus now adds born of water to born of the Spirit. As water is not repeated, the emphasis lies on the Spirit.

6. "That which is born of the flesh." The visible man, including "the appetite, desires, faculties which govern the body."—Dods. "Is flesh," is of the same kind as that from which it is born. Outward things can bring men into only the outward kingdom. "That which is born of the Spirit is spirit." Relating to the spiritual life of the soul, thus bringing men into the real, spiritual kngdom of God.

7. "Marvel not." For the same mystery is seen in natural things with which you are familiar. "Must be." There is no escape from this law. It would be as easy to change the law of gravitation as this law. But when men see the blessedness of this law of Christ, they will thank God for the privilege that they may be born again.

8. "The wind bloweth." The term for wind in Hebrew and Aramaic, as well as in Greek, was also the term for spirit, the immaterial in man being represented in a metaphor by the invisible but life-giving breath. We may, with Canon Liddon, imagine that in the upper room the wind was heard in the pauses of the conversation. "Where it listeth" (pleaseth)—i. e., according to its own unknown laws, and not according to our pleasure or will. "Thou hearest the sound thereof," etc.

10. "Art thou a master," that is, teacher, "and knowest not these things?" You will find this truth in the Scriptures you teach (Ezek. 11: 19; 18: 31; 36: 26; Jer. 24: 7; 31: 33). Have you studied the Scriptures enough to teach, and not noticed this great truth?

11. "We speak that we do know." The we may possibly include his disciples. They knew the truth from experience. It was not theory but personal knowledge.

12. "If I (now he speaks for himself) have told you earthly things." Things written and experienced in the earthly existence, which any one can put to the test, and verify. "How shall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things?" Those truths which could not be learned without a revelation from heaven.

13. "No man hath ascended up to heaven," and brought back the testimony of an eye-witness, "but he that came down from heaven." The "Word" of 1: 1-3, 14, who "was with God, and was God," and therefore knew absolutely the things which he revealed to men about spiritual and heavenly things. "Even the Son of man." Thus showing that he was the one who had come down from heaven. "Which is in heaven." His home is in heaven, and he maintains continually a vital connection with heaven. So far as heaven is a state and a character, Jesus was always in heaven.

14. "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness." Jesus now uses an illustration which makes clear some of the heavenly things he came to reveal. "Even so must the Son of man be lifted up." On the cross. The cross still holds up Jesus before the world, the best known and most exalted person in all history.

15. "That whosoever believeth in him." Accepts Him as Teacher, as Guide, and as Lord. Believing is the act of receiving the new life from God. "Should not perish." From the effects of sin, which naturally end in destruction of the soul. "But have eternal life." Be born again, have the new spiritual life by which he shall grow into a perfect man in Christ Jesus, and live forever in heaven. Eternal life is the life which nothing can destroy, which endures beyond the grave, and grows fuller and richer as the ages roll on.

16. "God so loved." With the greatest conceivable love, love put to the highest possible test. "The world." Not merely heavenly beings, angels, and seraphim, and saints, but this poor, sinful, unworthy world, so far from him in character. It was this wonderful fact which the angels sang on the fields of Bethlehem.

18. "He that believeth not is condemned already." As a starving man is condemned to starvation if he will not believe the messenger who proclaims where food can be obtained; or as a prisoner, condemned for his crimes, who will not believe in the offer of pardon from his king, remains in his chains and his prison.

CHURCH AND CLERGY.

Boston's Christian Science churches have 16,000 members.

The Christian Science churches of the country have 5,000 readers, lecturers and healers.

Seven Congregational churches are pledged to contribute $25,000 each to the twentieth century missionary fund.

The Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, a British non-conformist, received $100 from two invalids to hear his sermons by telephone.

BLOWS NOSE, EYE POPS OUT.

James H. Finigan of Cleveland Has a Novel Experience.

Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 5.—James H. Finigan, superintendent of the shipping department of Sterling, Welch & Co., has had a most remarkable experience. Tuesday evening Finigan was assisting in entertaining company at his home on Melvin street. He took his handkerchief from his pocket and blew his nose. Those present were horrified to see Finigan's left eye pop from its socket and hang by the ligaments down his cheek. One young woman fainted.

Finigan pushed the eye back into the socket, and in doing so carried the eyelid in with it. He was blind for the time being, and the pain was intense. A physician was called, but he refused to handle the case. Dr. D. E. Smith was then summoned. Finigan was removed to the Cleveland general hospital, where Dr. Smith took the eye out again and replaced it properly. Finigan is now able to be at work; the eye is bandaged. Finigan says:

"My physician tells me that I will be able to remove the bandage over my eye in a day or two. I take it off once in a while now. I do not dare blow my nose for fear the eye will pop out again."

The case among oculists is said to be one of the strangest on record.

TRANSPORT MAY BE LOST.

No News of the Manauense Since She Left Manila, on Dec. 8.

Washington, Feb. 5.—Many inquiries have been received at the war department relative to the safety of the transport Manauense, which left Manila for San Francisco on Dec. 8, and has not since been heard from, although several vessels which left Manila after her have reached San Francisco in safety. So far as is known at the war department no officers or enlisted men were embarked on the Manauense for the return voyage. Her officers and crew were not employes of Uncle Sam, but were furnished by the owners of the vessel, which was only chartered for the trip to Manila.

Girl Attempts Suicide.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—Agnes Schultz, the 19-year-old daughter of Mrs. Henrietta Schultz, 195 Madison street, this city, for the third time within a month, made an unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide Friday afternoon. Paris green was the poison taken, and by the prompt effort of Justice Frank Lehman of Harlem, the girl's life was saved. It is said Miss Schultz is in love with a young man who lives in Maywood, and that his indifference has made her despondent.

Fortune for Oshkosh Men.

Oshkosh, Wis., Feb. 5.—Timothy M. Walker of Omro and his son, Millard T. Walker, a machinist in this city, have received notice that they are sole heirs to a fortune of nearly $100,000 in cash and gilt-edge securities, left by the elder Mr. Walker's sister, Mrs. Nancy Maria Dikeman of Castleton, Vt., who died at Omro a few weeks ago while on a visit to her brother.

Ice Blockade on East Shore.

Grand Haven, Mich., Feb. 5.—An ice blockade prevails at Muskegon and Grand Haven. Not since Saturday has a steamer come in here, and only an easterly wind will break the blockade. The steamer Nyack is now in the ice off this port. The blockade is costing the transportation companies thousands of dollars.

Safe-Blowers Are Convicted.

Princeton, Ind., Feb. 5.—Patrick Jones, John Norton and Joseph Linden were found guilty of robbing the safe of McGinnis, Teel & Co., at Owensville, Jan. 12, of $4,000. The men will serve from two to fourteen years under the indeterminate sentence law at Michigan City prison.

Fell Dead at the Fire.

Youngstown, Ohio, Feb. 5.—Fire which originated in McElroy's furniture rooms in the business portion of the town Friday morning destroyed property valued at $500,000. Daniel Mills, a barber, while atempting to save his employer's effects, fell dead from heart trouble.

Arrested on Murder Charge.

Memphis Mo., Feb. 5.—Julius Courtney is under arrest here charged with the murder of William Hill, by giving him a drink of beer containing strychnine. Courtney was charged with keeping a gambling house, and Taylor was a witness against him.

Surveying on Panama Route.

Colon, Colombia, Feb. 5.—A party from the American surveying commission, which is headed by Rear Admiral Walker, commenced surveys of a canal route Friday.

Our Increased Trade With China.

England can no longer compete with us in the shipment of many products to China. This is merely natural. The best wins in everything. For a like reason, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has for fifty years acknowledged no superior, because there is nothing better to cure constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia and biliousness.

"Nature Abhors a Vacuum."

Nothing in the world stands still. If you are well and strong day by day the blood supplies its tide of vigor. If you are ill, the blood is wrong and carries increasing quantities of diseased germs. You cannot change Nature, but you can aid her by keeping the blood pure. Hood's Sarsaparilla does this as nothing else can. Be sure to get Hood's, because

PRESIDENT KRUEGER AHEAD.

Pretoria, Transvaal, South Africa, Dec. 7, 1899.

Messrs. Swanson Rheumatic Cure Company, Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.—Gentlemen: Your last shipment and communication received. I am very much pleased with the information which you have so kindly given me.

Please find enclosed bank draft to the amount of £412 10s, for which send me twenty-five (25) gross of Swanson's "5-DROPS." Ship same as before in order that there may be no delay, as this medicine will be greatly needed before it reaches us. The last shipment is almost disposed of, as the medical department of our army uses large quantities. This order is entirely for use in the army.

I have been told that our success on the battlefield is due to a certain extent to the use of "5-DROPS" Rheumatic Cure, which has relieved and prevented a great deal of suffering among our men from Rheumatism, Neuralgia and other acute pains caused by exposure. Your "5-DROPS" is as good as a Transvaal soldier!

In one of the battles, a small quantity of "5-DROPS," together with other medicines, was captured by the English, which was a great loss to our men. The Ruinecks won't do it again. I am, respectfully yours,

PETER HAAS.

"5-DROPS" is the most powerful specific known. Free from opiates and perfectly harmless. It is a perfect cure for Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia, Backache, Asthma, Catarrh, La Grippe, Neuralgic Headache, etc. Large sized bottles (300 doses), $1.00, or three (3) bottles for $2.50. Sample bottles 25 cents.

To open the bowels naturally, easily, without disagreeable feelings or results, has been the problem before modern science, which has been solved in Cascarets Candy Cathartic.

Cascarets are the ideal laxative, harmless, purely vegetable, mild yet positive. They make the liver lively, prevent sour stomach, purify the blood, regulate the bowels perfectly.

They cure constipation. We want you to believe this, as it is the truth, backed by an absolute guarantee. If Cascarets do not cure any case of constipation, purchase money will be refunded.

Go buy and try Cascarets to-day. It's what they do, not what we say they do, that proves their merit. All druggists, 10c, 25c, or 50c, or mailed for price. Send for booklet and free sample. Address Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago; Montreal, Can.; or New York.

1,000,000 DEATHS!

From Cholera During the Past Year.

The Germs of this Fatal Disease are Lurking Everywhere! Thousands of Dollars Saved by this Wonderful Discovery.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars has been lost in the poultry business on account of the devastation among the flocks, caused by cholera, roup gape and other fatal diseases. There have been many remedies advanced but none seem to be so successful as the American Poultry Mixture. This will cure chickens in the last stages of cholera or roup, and is excellent for gapes. Do your fowls suffer from violent diarrhea, drooping of the wings, stupor or excessive thirst? These are the first symptoms of cholera. Cholera is a germ disease and being infectious spreads rapidly through the entire flock. Take time by the forelock; don't stop to experiment with unreliable or untried remedies. Use this mixture at once and the sanitary measures they recommend in connection. Don't give the fowls up. Cholera is a terrible disease but this remedy cures it every time. It is also guaranteed for roup, which can be told by hoarse breathing, swelled eyes, discharge at the nostrils resembling catarrh. Fifty dollars is offered for any case the mixture will not cure. If some of your fowls are diseased it will prevent the rest from catching it. Try it. It is cheap, reliable and effective; a scientific preparation; goes more than three times as far as any other remedy; does more good than all of them combined. It is used and indorsed by the most experienced and largest breeders of plain and fancy poultry in all parts of the world. The manufacturers guarantee every package or refund purchase money. If your druggist don't sell American Poultry mixture, he's behind the age. In that case send $1.00 for sample box to American Manufacturing Co., Terre Haute, Indiana,

Gov. Roosevelt should not let his success in the Lou Payne decapitation act turn his head. The "Easy Boss" understands the art of keeping his ship afloat by throwing ballast overboard.

Governor Taylor of Kentucky, though a Republican, evidently believes in that plank of the Chicago platform which declares against "government by injunction."

We have read Henry Watterson'd article on 'how to succeed' with much care, but we find nothing in it that tells what to do when a man hasn't got the cards or when the other man has the drop.

If the new Department of Commerce is established as it probably will be, the political counsel will give way to the commercial agent, selected with special reference to his ability to promote the trade and aid the commercial interests of this country.

The middle west, by which is meant the states bordering on the great lakes, snows a strong tendancy to insist on the radical amendment of the shipping bill. The present draft of that measure seems drawn altogether too much in favor of two or three lines of fast atlantic steamships and not enough in favor of the weaker and slower lines which alone will be of benefit to the farmer.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Attorney Will Bullard was up from Belmond on business Saturday.

Chas. Bracher and Will Nissen drove to Garner Monday afternoon.

A load of Klemme people went to Garner last evening to take in the show.

Editor Pierce, of the Belmond Herald was a passenger north on the Burlington Saturday.

Miss Myrtle Gallion, of Armstrong is visiting in Klemme, the guest of Mrs. Chas. Bracher.

F. J. Martinex, of Dubuque, Iowa, visited over Sunday at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bracher.

We handle first class groceries and just a little cheaper, because we handle more of them.

GRUETZMACHER BROS.

H. E. Peitzke returned Saturday from a week's trip to Chicago. His brother who lives at Clear Lake accompanied him.

If the TIMES is not up to the standard this week you must lay it to the fact that we were called away on important business and did not give the paper the usual attention.

The first, and we hope the only blizzard of the season, is raging this morning. Quite a considerable snow has fallen and it is drifting badly. Stock that is without good shelter will suffer.

If you want to trade in the best town in the county, come to Klemme. Look over the Times, note the names of the enterprising firms and patronize those that are making a bid for your trade.

Agents on salary of $15.00 per week and expenses; the greatest agent seller ever produced; every stock and poultry raiser buys it on sight. Hustlers wanted. Refference. Address, with stamp, American Mfg. Co. Terre Haute, Ind.

The bright and versatile editor of the Wright County Democrat, Walter Elder, of Clarion, was a pleasant caller Saturday. Walt is a good fellow, runs a first class paper, but is such a radical democrat that we don't like him—politically.

A little bad, fighting fire-water on the inside of a bad, bad man, enriched the town treasury $13 one night last week for drunk and disorderly conduct. This gave our efficient city marshall a chance to experiment a little with his new come-along. It works to perfection.

Wm. Becker, one of our most prosperous farmer's was hauling grain Saturday, and just after unloading was suddenly taken seriously ill. He is troubled with a weakness of the heart, which was the cause of his illness. After a few hours rest he was able to go home and is better at this writing.

S. L. Sage and family were the guests of ye editor and wife over Sunday. Mr. Sage will start a new paper at Garner and the presses and material are there, ready for business. His many years of newspaper work we believe has fitted him for the work and Garner will have a newspaper that will be more than one in name only.

Talbert Spooner met with a bad accident Saturday night. He was on the evening passenger from Garner, and in stepping from the car, missed his footing and fell, striking his head on the switch rail, sustaining a deep cut on the forehead, just over the eye. Dr. Spooner took three stitches in the gash and about the only inconvenience was the loss of blood and a headache.

The Democrat assumes that a republican assassin shot Goebel, the alleged governor-elect of Kentucky. Since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, it has often been observed that democratic assumptions are not always correct. In this instance it is evident that the democratic wish is father to the thought. It may be that there are some Kentuckians in the Republican party of Kentucky, and if so there may be a few who are no better than the rank and file of Kentucky's democracy. The shooting of Goebel indicates as much at all events. See?

The following is probably a fair solution of the killing of Goebel, the Hancock County Democrat to the contrary notwithstanding.

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 3—Dispatches from Wellston state that a man giving the name of Radman, a relative of Dr. Radman of Philadelphia, formerly of Kentucky, has arrived here and says he was in Frankfort the day Senator Goebel was shot, adding "I know all about the shooting of Goebel. I can tell you plainly that our people are away off if they think Taylor or the republican party had anything to do with the shooting. A trap had been set for a long time and the opportunity anxiously awaited to kill Will Goebel for his killing of John Sanford, and the party who fired the shot was a near friend intimately connected with Sanford. It was to avenge Sanfords death that the political situation was taken advantage of for the shooting. The idea that the shooting came from the second story of the state house is all rot."

E. P. SCHAEFER.

BRITT GLEANINGS.

F. B. Glidden has bought the property known as the Tregauza place, north of the railroad.

Last Wednesday, at high noon, John Senneff and Miss Cora Mc Gruder were married at Britt.

Hugo Rohrbach has joined his brother in the clothing business, and the firm is now in the Daylor building.

W. L. Duff, with the Armour Packing Co., of Chicago was visiting his brother Postmaster Duff a few days ago.

Attorney Senneff, of Britt, has been enjoying a visit from his sister, Miss Salome, of Thompson, Illinois.

O. G. Thompson was taken violently ill at Milwaukee a few days ago while en route to Chicago with a car of cattle, and is now recuperating at the hospital under a brother's care.

Some of the high tones of this city report "light refreshments" at some of the social entertainments. We suppose this is to distinguish them from the "heavy refreshments" furnished at post-election events.

The Britt News has got a cinch on a new kind of atlas for premium purposes. It is advertising it as the "T. R.'s consice atlas." Will the News kindly furnish a dictionary along with the atlas, to tell us what a "consice" atlas is like?

A Britt firm of coal dealers advertise a soft coal as being so good that it burns as long as "Hard Coal for sale by" the firm mentioned. This adv. indicates either a blamed poor quality of hard coal, or a poor quality of grammar used in the office.

Great opportunity offered to good, reliable men. Salary of $15 per week and expenses for man with rig to introduce our Poultry Mixture and Insect Destroyer in the country. Send stamp, American Mfg. Co., Terre Haute, Ind.

To Cure a Cold in One Day.

If you want to buy a fine Ladies or Gents Gold or Silver Watch, go to Harr's. Prices reasonable.

GARNER.

Wesley Aldrich was over from Britt on business Monday.

The new paper is a sure thing: Mr. Sage is here, his car having arrived Saturday, and the presses and material are being moved into the Geo. Schuler building.

Geo. Lein, the organizer of the Mystic Workers of the World, will shortly institute a lodge here.

On Wednesday and Thursday of last week the most successful Farmers' Institute in the history of Hancock County was held in the hall of the new court house at Garner. A good program, consisting in part of addresses by prominent speakers on agricultural subjects had been prepared and was carried out as per arrangements. An address was delivered by Joe Trigg, the well known editor of the Rockford Register, on "Sheep," which was very interesting. Mr. Trigg emphasized the importance of sheep raising on the farm, and his suggrstions relative to the care and keeping of sheep were valuable to the farmers. L. L. Klinefelter, of Mason City, editor of the Farmers' Institute, spoke on the benefits of the Iowa Agricultural College to boys on the farm. Mr. Klinefelter said every boy who intends to make farming a business should attend this school. W. A. Burnap, of Clear Lake delivered an address on Horticulture. There were addresses by E. P. Fox on road making, A. Schneider on the value of clean seed; H. E. Babcock on raising calves, N. P. Bayers on mutual insurance for the farmers, R. Conway on what the creamery haz done for Hancock county, County Superintendent Schell on county schools, and addresses by others, all of which vere well prepared, instructive and interesting. The general discussion at the close of the speeches and papers were also valuable in that the persoual experiences of the farmers themselves vere given concerning the subjects discussed by the speakers. Joe Trigg added to the life of te proceedings with his ready wit and great story telling proclivties.

The attendance at he Institute was quite large, bu would have been larger if the weather had not been so intensely cold. The citizens and business men of Garner showed their appreciation and encouragemet by attending the meetings. A those present from other parts of the county expressed great admiration of the new court hase, and nearly all seemed to fee a sense of regret that it was not being used for county purposes. It is needless to say tha these meetings are beneficial to the farming community. If the farmers are successful, then all other lines of business will b benefited. Whatever then tha tends to the benefit of the farmer adds to progress and prosperity of all other lines of industry. These meetings promot an interest in agriculture, and those who attend acquire by mual discussion and interchange of opinion additional ideas of how to make farming pay, and, for these reasons ought to be encouraged and attended by everyone.

Farman—Nelson.

From the Goodell Globe:

A quiet wedding occured at the home of Dr. N. H. Goodenow and wife on Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock, in the presence of a few of the relatives and intimate friends of the contracting parties, Rev. Hartsough spoke the words that legally made Mr. Wm. Nelson and Miss Blanche Farman husband and wife, after which all partook of an excellent repast provided for the occasion.

The bride is the youngest daughter of our esteemed townsman, C. S. Farman, who has for many years been one of our leading merchants. She is also a sister of Mrs. Dr. Goodenow, and as she has spent the most of her life in Goodell, she is well and favorably known to our citizens.

The groom is one of our popular young men and for a number of years has been proprietor of our tonsorial parlors, he having lived here from his boyhood, has won the respect and confidence of the people and has succeeded in working up a good patronage in his profession.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson are both prominent in religious circles and active in Sunday School and Church work and have a host of mutual friends who unite in wishing them happiness and prosperity in their new relations.

At present they will board until his cottage in the south part of town will be vacated where they will commence housekeeping and will be at home to their many friends.

Having received a car load of furniture and undertaking goods, I am in shape to supply you with anything in the line of furniture etc.

STRANGE TALES TERSELY TOLD.

Girls.

Girls, we have told the boys before now, what we have learned from observation during more than an average lifetime, but have never said a word to you. The fact is, it is easier to write to and of boys than it is of you. There is not so much required of them in the way of circumspect conduct as there is of you. We know this is not right, but so it is, and you must accept it. Were your conduct as reckless as the average good boys, your reputation would be ruined, and once a girl's or a woman's reputation tainted, life for her in the future is drear and sad, no matter whether she be culpable or not, she suffers just the same. Girls, you are either the highest or lowest of creation, the highest if you serve the end of creation, the lowest if you fail. If you fall you go down from a greater height than a boy But let us come down to the every day affairs of life. You are expected to be polite in deportment and sweet in disposition, and if you are not you are most unlovely. You are expected to bear a pleasant countenance and say "thank you" and "please" not only with your tongue, but your manner and countenance must say so too, and if you do not you are most unattractive. Once, since we lived in Sheldon we stopped a little Miss and asked her name because she spoke so politely in manner as well as by word. Yesterday we were in a store, a couple of little girls purchased something and as they passed out of the door one of them said so politely and pleasantly to one of the proprietors as he held the door open, "thank you and good bye." We inquired who they were, he told us and said that he would rather give those little girls candy than to sell it to others, because they were such nice little ladies. The Daily Sun goes into these little girls homes and we presume they will see themselves the one spoken of here. One day several little girls from 10 to 15 were talking and laughing in front of Mr. Thomson's furniture store. Some of them spoke to us, we stopped and inquired the names of those we did not know, the first we asked gave us a name that was not her own, with a rowdy expression of countenance. We were sorry. She is a pretty girl so far as features go, but alas, only that far. Girls, you are fair but tender plants, be careful; do not expose yourselves to the withering frost of gossip nor the poison of suspicion.—Sheldon Sun.

"The other evening just before we changed watch," said the clerk at one of the hotels, "a fat drummer came up and began figuring out his expense account for the day. He took the first piece of paper he could get his hands on and didn't notice that it was the blank we use for keeping memoranda of morning calls. The blank is arranged in columns, headed by figures representing the hours and half hours and he began his penciling in the 3:30 row. "First he jotted down $1.50 for buggy hire, then 15 cents for stamps, 35 cents for car fare, $1.60 for express package, $1.10 for telegrams, 50 cents for a trunk strap, 5 cents for a paper and 25 cents for messenger service. Down at the bottom as an afterthought, he put 40 and wrote 'beer' after it, thinging to work it in somehow I suppose. "Well, at 3:30 o'clock next morning there was trouble and plenty of it. The night clerk supposed, of course, that the calls had been left in the ordinary way, and, while he was a little surprised at so many people wanting to get up at such an unearthly hour, he told the boys to wake Nos. 150, 15, 35, 160, 110, 50, 5 and 25 and carry a quart bottle of beer to 40. They had a terrible time getting the people up, and everybody was as mad as blazes, particularly the fat drummer himself, who happened to be in 110 and swore he was going right down and lick the clerk. "About that time the boy with the beer got to 40. There was a preacher from Britt in the room and he called out to know what was wanted. 'I've brought you the beer you ordered,' hollers the kid, and the preacher nearly had a fit. 'Merciful heavens!' he said. This will ruin me for life! I will go down immediately and see the proprietor!" "He and the fat drummer struck the office together The drummer wanted gore, but when the drummer saw the call list he turned pale around the gills and sneaked back up stairs. It took nearly an hour to get the minister cooled off, and when the facts leaked out next day several people began looking for fat drummer with clubs. He lay low, but he bought a new memoranda book on purpose to figure up his cash."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Death of Lincoln

"Now he belongs to the ages."

The curtain had just been rung down over the life of the martyred president in that humble little room opposite the theater where the president had, a few hours, before received the bullet of the assassin Booth. E. M. Stanton, secretary of war, gave utterance to the words quoted. How prophetic; how true. Centuries hence the name of Abraham Lincoln will still retain its rightful place in history.

The president had been carried up the high steps, through a narrow hall, and laid, still unconscious, still motionless, on the bed of a poor, little, commonplace room of a commonplace lodging-house, where surgeons and physicians gathered about in a desperate attempt to rescue him from death.

While the surgeons worked the news was spreading to the town. Every man and woman in the theater rushed forth to tell it. Some ran wildly down the streets, exclaiming to those they met, "The president is killed! The president is killed!" One rushed in a ballroom and told it to the dancers; another, bursting into a room where a party of eminent public men were playing cards, cried, "Lincoln is shot!" Another, running into the auditorium of Grover's theater, cried, "President Lincoln has been shot, in his private box, in Ford's theater." Those who heard the cry thought the man insane or drunk, but a moment later they saw the actors in a combat called from the stage, the manager coming forward. His face was pale his voice agonized, as he said, "Ladies and gentlemen, I feel it my duty to say to you that the announcement made from the front of the theater just now is true—President Lincoln has been shot." One ran to summon Secretary Stanton. A boy picked up at the door of the house where the president lay was sent to the White house for Robert Lincoln. The news spread by the very force of its own horror, and as it spread it met other news no less terrible. At the same hour that Booth had sent the ball into the president's brain a man had forced his way into the house of Secretary Seward, then lying in bed with a broken arm, and had stabbed both the secretary and his son Frederick so seriously that it was feared they would die. In his entrance and exit he had wounded three other members of the household. Like Booth, he had escaped. Horror bred rumor, and Secretary Stanton, too, was reported wounded, while later it was said that Grant had been killed on his way north. Dread seized the town. "Rumors are so thick," wrote the editor of the National Intelligencer, at 2 o'clock in the morning, "the excitement of this hour is so intense that we rely entirely upon our reporters to advise the public of the details and result of this night of horrors. Evidently conspirators are among us. To what extent does the conspiracy exist? This is a terrible question. When a spirit so horrible as this is abroad, what man is safe? We can only advise the utmost vigilance and the most prompt measures by the authorities. We can only pray God to shield us, his worthy people, from further calamities like these."

The civil and military authorities prepared for attack from within and without. Martial law was at once established. The long roll was beaten; exery exit from the city was guarded; out-going trains were stopped; mounted police and cavalry clattered up and down the street; the forts were ordered on the alert; guns were manned.

In the meantime there had gathered in the house on Tenth street, where the president lay, his family physician and intimate friends, as well as many prominent officials. Before they reached him it was known there was no hope, that the wound was fatal. They grouped themselves about the bedside or in the adjoining rooms, trying to comfort the weeping wife, or listening awe-stricken to the steady moaning and labored breathing of the unconscious man, which at times could be heard all over the house. Stanton alone seemed able to act methodically. No man felt the tragedy more than the great war secretary, for no one in the cabinet was by greatness of heart and intellect so well able to comprehend the worth of the dying president, but no man in that distracted night acted with greater energy or calm. Summoning the assistant secretary, C. A. Dana, and a stenographer, he began dictating orders to the authorities on all sides, notifying them of the tragedy, directing them what precautions to take, what persons to arrest. Grant, now returning to Washington, he directed, should be warned to keep close watch on all persons who came close to him in the cars and to see that an engine be sent in front of his train. He sent out, too, an official account of the assassination. Today the best brief account of the night's awful work remains the one which Secretary Stanton dictated within sound of the moaning of the dying president.

And so the hours changed without perceptible change in president's condition, and with onright shifting of the scene around . The testimony of those who hadnessed the murder began to be tak in an adjoining room. Occasionalhe figures at the bedside changed. Lincoln came in at intervals, sobbout her grief, and then was led ay. This man went, another took hplace. It was not until daylight that ere came a perceptible change. Then breathing grew quieter, the face bene more calm. The doctors at Linc's side knew that dissolution was ne Their bulletin of 6 o'clock read: "Ise falling;" that of 6:30, "Still failir" that of 7, "Symptoms of immediate ssolution," and then at 7:20, in the esence of his son Robert, Secretaries nton, Welles and Usher, Atty.-Gen. peed, Senator Sumner, Private Secetary Hay, Dr. Gurley, his pastor and seral physicians and friends, AbrahamLincoln died. There was a prayer, and then the solemn voice of Stanton broke the stillness, "Now he belongs to the ages."

Two hours later the body of the president, wrapped in an American flag, was borne from the house in Tenth street, and carried through the hushed streets, where already thousands of flags were at half-mast and the gay buntings and garlands had been replaced by black draperies, and where the men who for days had been cheering in excess of joy and relief now stood with uncovered heads and wet eyes. They carried him to an upper room in the private apartments of the white house, and there he lay until three days later a heart-broken people claimed their right to look for a last time on his face.

LINCOLN AND THE SENTINEL.

In an article in the Century entitled "Our Fellow Citizen of the White House," Mr. C. C. Buel told the following story of President Lincoln: "There have been no soldiers as guardians under the shadow of the great Ionic columns since war; and even then, on one fierce winter night, the boy in blue who was on guard was not allowed to maintain professional decorum. Mr. Lincoln emerged from the front door, his lank figure bent over as he drew tightly about his shoulders the shawl which he employed for such protection, for he was on his way to the war department, at the west corner of the grounds, where in times of battle he was wont to get the midnight dispatches from the field. As the blast struck him he thought of the numbness of the pacing sentry, and, turning to him, said: 'Young man, you've got a cold job to-night; step inside and stand guard there.'

"'My orders keep me out here,' the soldier replied.

"'Yes,' said the president, in his argumentive tone, 'but the duty can be performed just as well inside as out here, and you'll oblige me by going in.'

"'I have been stationed outside,' the soldier answered, and resumed his beat.

"'Hold on there!' said Mr. Lincoln, as he turned back again; 'it occurs to me that I am commander-in-chief of the army, and I order you to go inside.'"

ADVANCING ON LADYSMITH.

Buller Said to Have Recrossed the Tugela and Resumed Fighting.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—The St. James Gazette says it is reported on good authority that General Buller has again crossed the Tugela river at three places, and that fighting has been proceeding all day.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—The actual news from South Africa is of little interest. Gen. Buller maintains silence as to his future movements, but it is generally supposed he is maturing another attempt to reach Ladysmith. A letter from a Hanoverian officer, formerly of the German army, now among the military advisors of the Boers, says that nearly 10,000 trained European soldiers, including 300 officers, are among the Boers. Referring to the military situation at Ladysmith, the officer says: "Owing to the strength of our position, on a circle of heights, like Sedan, we cannot be brushed aside except by a relief column outnumbering us two to one."

ENGLAND'S MONSTER ARMY.

Over 213,000 Troops and 452 Guns in Field in South Africa.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—Mr. Wyndham's remarkable declaration in the house of commons that Great Britain will have in a fortnight 180,000 regulars in South Africa, 7,000 Canadians and Australians and 26,000 South Africa volunteers is received with wonderment. Of this total of 213,000 troops, with 452 guns, all are now there, with the exception of about 12,000 that are afloat. Beyond comparison, this is the largest force Great Britain has ever put into the field. At the end of the Crimean war she had scraped together 80,000 men. Wellington at Waterloo had 25,000.

TRUSTS HIT HARD.

Texas Law Against Combination in Full Operation.

AUSTIN, Texas, Feb. 3.—The anti-trust law passed by the legislature has gone into effect. Under its drastic provisions all trusts, monopolies and pools and combinations will be forced to leave the state. It also prohibits merchants from buying and selling trust goods of all kinds. Many of the leading insurance companies now doing business in the state have threatened to withdraw from the state on account of the drastic provisions of the law, which requires them to make affidavit that they do not belong to any rate bureau, either in or out of Texas. The constitutionality of this extra territorial feature of the bill will likely be tested in the courts.

With Buller's Army.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—The Daily Telegraph publishes the following dispatch from Spearman's Camp, dated January 30:

Colonel Wynn has taken command of General Woodgate's brigade. Col. Mils has been appointed chief of General Buller's staff. The Boers are still constructing defensive works opposite Potgieter's drift. A strong cavalry reconnaissance proceeded to the westward in the vicinity of Honger's sprui

Conditions in Ladysmith.

HOO LAAGER, Ladysmith, Jan. 30.—All is quiet here. The Long Toms fire on Ladysmith occasionally. Deaths in Ladysmith from fever and other causes must be enormous, as we can clearly see them burying the corpses daily. General Joubert has gone to the Upper Tugela.

"The Writing and Certain Literary Discoveries, or, How Fiction May be Stranger Than Truth," is the title of an article appearing in the February Century. It is not the record of a new "discovery" in the trans-Mississippian region by an easterner, but the assertion of the present status of the west by a representative young westerner—E. Hough, author of "The Story of the Cowboy."

W. T. Stead writes in the Review of Reviews for February on "The Perilous Position of England," pointing out the dangers which threaten from across the chanel.

Walter Wellman relates in McClure's Magazine for February the story of his hard experiences and strange adventures in the course of his last year's Arctic expedition.

Not one of us but has wished to change places, and in the January Cosmopolitan the brilliant Edgar Saltus writes on "The Delights of Trying to Be Somebody Else" in a manner that makes the folly of the almost universal wish excusable and even commendable.

Herbert Putnam, librarian of congress, opens the February Atlantic with a striking and valuable article upon the library, sketching its history, its strength and weakness, and showing what it needs to make it truly national and effective.

B. H. Roberts Demands Salary.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—B. H. Roberts of Utah, has made a formal demand on the sergeant-at-arms of the house for his salary and mileage, amounting in all to about $2,000. The demand was accompanied, it is said, with the suggestion that suit would be begun to enforce the claim in case it was not paid. The sergeant-at-arms declined to accept service of the papers.

Boer Casualties at Spion Kop.

PRETORIA, Feb. 1.—The Boer casualties at Spion Kop were 53 killed, 120 wounded.

CONGRESS.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 30.—Bacon spoke in advocacy of his resolution declaratory of the government's policy toward the Philippines. A resolution by Hoar directing the committee on rules to consider whether some suitable plan could be adopted for the enlargement of the capitol was agreed to. A resolution by Pettigrew requesting information regarding the Samoan treaty was referred to the committee on foreign relations.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 31.—Pettigrew made an effort to get Aguinaldo's statement concerning the insurrection in the Philippines printed in the record. Lodge protested and read a letter from Admiral Dewey declaring the statement a tissue of falsehoods. The chair ruled against Pettigrew. Pettigrew declared that Dewey did recognize the Filipino republic. Gallinger and Hawley protested against such statements, the latter declaring that it was treason. Pettigrew declared that threats would not prevent him from disclosing the facts. Jones and Teller said there had been too much suppression of facts, and Rawlins, Sewall and Hawley denounced Pettigrew as a traitor.

HOUSE.

The house spent the day in general debate of the Indian appropriation bill, various questions being touched upon by the speakers, the Philippines, imperialism and lynching being made most prominent.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 1.—Nearly the entire morning hour in the senate was spent by Allen in the discussion of the report of Secretary Gage concerning his transactions with the National City Bank of New York. He vigorously opposed the proposition that the country should go to the gold standard. Daniel M. Ramsdell, of Indiana, and Charles G. Bennet, of New York, were sworn in as sergeant-at-arms and secretary of the senate, respectively.

HOUSE.

During consideration of the Indian appropriation bill Sibley, dem., of Pennsylvania, assailed his democratic colleagues for their opposition to expansion. Sibley has recanted his silver views and is now generally out of line with his party. The remainder of the debate was uninteresting. It touched the questions of mediation in the Transvaal war, lynchings in the south and the jury law in Hawaii.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 2.—An effort of Pettigrew to discuss the Philippihe question was of no avail as he was met by a point of order, which took him from the floor. He had gotten only so far as to charge that the great journals of the country would not publish the facts concerning the Philippine war. Subsequently he offered another resolution, on which he will speak next week. Allen of Nebraska concluded his speech in arraignment of Secretary Gage, because of his transactions with the National City bank of New York.

HOUSE.

A bill giving Cuban vessels the most favored nation treatment in American ports was passed. After the reception of the president's message transmitting the Philippines commissioners' report and reference to the insular committee, the house resumed consideration of the Indian appropriation bill. At the evening session Talbert, of South Carolina, objected to consideration of private pension bills because there was no quorum present, and a deadlock ensued, which could not be broken.

LEGISLATURE HOLDS A MEETING.

At Secret Session Goebel is Regularly Declared Governor.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 3.—The democratic members of the legislature yesterday effected a regular organization for the first time since the swearing in of Governor Goebel. A secret session of the members of both houses was held in one of the parlors of the Capitol hotel, at which the election of William Goebel as governor and J. C. W. Beckham as lieutenant governor were affirmed, first in separate session of the house and senate and afterward in joint session. Preceding this action the members of the senate elected as president pro tem Senator Carter.

The first clash of authority came yesterday. Alonzo Walker, a stenographer employed by the democratic attorneys, was placed under arrest in the capitol grounds, charged with conduct tending to incite mutiny and riot. The conduct consisted in pinning to the door of the private office of Governor Taylor a notice that the democratic attorneys would appear before Judge Cantril of the circuit court and ask for an injunction restraining Governor Taylor from all interference with the movements of the legislature and from his announced attempt to remove it to London, in this state. Walker was at once taken into custody by Colonel Roger Williams, the commanding officer of the forces now gathered around the capitol.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 2.—Governor Taylor has personally offered a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of the man who shot Governor Goebel,

BOERS MOVING ON TUGELA.

Ladysmith Dispatches Indicate Collision Near River.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—Heliograms flashed from Ladysmith three days ago say that the Boer investment lines were then thinning and that the besiegers were moving in force toward the Tugela, indicating that a collision was expected there. This intelligence bears out other signs that General Buller proposes a fresh attack.

Non-Interference Asked.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—The Kentucky delegation, consisting of Senator Lindsay, Senator-elect Blackburn, Representatives Rhea, Smith, Allen, Gilbert and ex-Representative Thompson, called on the president to protest against any federal interference in that state. They said that federal interference in Kentucky would be sure to result in serious trouble, as the first movement of troops would cause an uprising that could not be easily quelled. They expressed the opinion that the difficulties would be adjusted without further violence if the people of Kentucky were allowed to settle the matter themselves.

Burned to Death.

MARSHALLTOWN, Feb. 3.—William Shettel, aged 22, was burned to death by a gasoline stove exploding, which destroyed the residence of his father. He was literally cooked and died in a few hours.

Casualties Now Number 1,985.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—A further list of casualties published by the war office brings the total from the crossing of the Tugela to the abandonment of Spion kop to 1,985 officers and men.

British Killed and Captured.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—A special dispatch from Colenso, dated January 24, says that Commandant Meyers's commando surprised and surrounded a strong body of General Methuen's infantry, killing and wounding twenty-three and capturing fifteen.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieves the Suffering from Overwrought Nerves.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am so grateful for the benefit derived from the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I wish you to publish this testimonial that others may know the value of your medicine. I was suffering such tortures from nervous prostration that life was a burden. I could not sleep at all and was too weak to walk across the floor without aid. The disease had reached a condition where my heart was affected by it, so that often I could not lie down at all without almost suffocating. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it worked like magic. I feel that your medicine has been of inestimable benefit to me."—MISS ADELE WILLIAMSON, 196 N. Boulevard, Atlanta, Ga.

Thin, Sallow and Nervous.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was thin, sallow and nervous. I had not had my menses for over a year and a half. Doctored with several physicians in town and one specialist, but did not get any better. I finally decided to try your medicine, and wrote to you. After I had taken three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and three of Blood Purifier, my menses returned, and I feel as well and strong as I ever did, and am gaining flesh."—MISS LENA GAINES, Visalia, Tulare Co., Cal.

WESTERN CANADA.

Crop Prospects and Climate About Edmonton, N. W. T.—Interesting Letter from Mrs. S. A. Brigham, Late of Mason City.

The following extracts from an interesting letter to the Mason City (Ia.) Republican, written by Mrs. S. A. Brigham, late of that place, but now of Ross Creek, Alberta, Canada, so nearly describe most of the districts of Western Canada that we take pleasure in presenting same to the attention of our readers:

Ross Creek, Albert, N. W. T., Canada, Aug. 7, 1899.

Editor Mason City Republican—Dear Sir: We are located in the Beaver Hills, 30 miles from Ft. Saskatchewan and 50 miles from Edmonton. To the east of these is an immense area of bottom lands, which furnishes abundance of hay for the settlers. It is dotted with small lakes, the largest of which is called Beaver Lake, 16 miles in length.

The Beaver Hills are covered with small green willows which are easily gotten rid of before breaking up the land. Here and there poplar, birch and tamarack trees abound. Small meadows are numerous. The soil in these hills is much richer than the bottom lands, being a kind of black leaf mould. There is no tough sod to break, and it is very productive. Wheat, oats and barley do finely and vegetables are the finest that can be grown. Potatoes especially are large and solid, easily producing from 200 to 300 bushels per acre, and best of all never a "taty bug" to wrestle with. Wild fruit, strawberries, gooseberries, saskatoons (or pine berries), raspberries and cranberries, are found in the hills. Small tame fruit does finely, the red and white currants in my garden are as large again as eommon sized ones.

We have long days during the months of June and July; one can see to read many evenings until 10 o'clock in the twilight. Some nights less than 3 hours of darkness, and the birds are singing at 2 o'clock. Then again, it rains so easily. You look toward the west and see a little cloud coming up, a gentle shower follows, the sun shines forth again, and in a little while you forget it has rained.

Cyclones are unknown here and the thunder and lightning is very light. We had two storms this summer accompanied with wind and hail, but nothing to lodge the grain. The average heat is about 78 degrees. We had three or four days in July at 90. The nights are always cool.

The winter season is one of great activity. All the fencing is gotten out then and logs for the farm buildings. By paying 25 cents you are granted a permit at the land office to cut logs upon vacant lands. The roads are good and smooth, for the snow never drifts, not even around the buildings, and this is a great saving of time to the farmer. Hay is hauled from the bottom lands all winter long, and a man can work outside every day as far as the weather is concerned. There are cold snaps when it reaches 40 and 48 below zero, but the lack of wind prevents one realizing it and the mountains 150 miles west of us are a great protection. Our neighbors are mostly Canadian, Scotch, Swede, and we have a nice sprinkling of people from the states. The creeks abound in small fish.

We are now in the midst of haymaking (Aug. 7). Wheat will not be cut until early September, this being a little later season than common, but the crop will be immense. I send you a sample of wheat and barley—its height is almost even with my shoulders, average 50 inches. New comers lacking binders can hire their grain cut for 75 cents per acre. Prairie chickens are here by the thousands.

The water is good. We have a fine well 15 feet deep. In the creeks the water is soft and of a yellowish color.

Now for the drawbacks (we have them), but nothing very serious. The mosquitoes are simply abominable, especially after a shower. Then again we are surrounded with bachelors; we have no less than 18 single men in this neighborhood, on matrimony bent. When a feminine gender of any age between 14 and 40 visits these hills we pity her, so great is the demand for her company.

In conclusion, if the remainder of our loved ones were here with us, we should better enjoy life on Ross Creek, and unless the unexpected develops, consider this will be a pretty fair place to end our days.

SENATOR GOEBEL SHOT.

Wound Is Serious, But Not Necessarily Fatal.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 31.—Senator Goebel was shot and seriously wounded yesterday. The shooting was done by a man at present unknown. Goebel was walking up the sidewalk leading to the senate when a man in the second story of a building immediately to the east of the capitol fired upon him. Five shots were fired, when Goebel fell. He was at once carried to the Capitol hotel. The wildest excitement was at once created. Within ten minutes after Goebel had been shot the streets were filled with men carrying rifles and revolvers. A guard was instantly thrown around the building from which the shots were fired to prevent the escape of the assassin.

"They have assassinated Goebel," was shouted into the door of the house of representatives an instant after the shots rang out. Members rushed pell-mell over one another down the streets to the front of the building, coatless and hatless. In five minutes hundreds poured into the state house yard and it looked as if a riot would result. Cooler heads advised surrounding the building from which the shots came, and in less than three minutes fifty special police surrounded it and a detail began a search of the interior for the assassin. Finally John Whittaker, a farmer of Butler county, was arrested on the charge of shooting Goebel. Goebel is not fatally hurt. The ball struck him in the right side and passed through his body, coming out below the shoulder blade.

As soon as it was known that the bullet which struck down Mr. Goebel had come from the building to the east a group of men gathered in front of the doors to prevent the escape of people in it. Several men attempted to enter the doors from the outside, but were prevented by groups of mountaineers, some of whom held Winchesters in their hands and presented an aspect so generally uninviting that no attempt was made to search the building and nobody gained an entrance to it for several minutes after the shooting had been done and the assassin had had ample opportunity to escape. That the shooting of Mr. Goebel was the result of a carefully laid plan is without question. It is not believed that Whittaker is guilty. The physicians announce that they are unable to stop the internal hemorrhages and that death will probably result. The militia has been called out and is in absolute control of the situation.

SAY BULLER IS BOMBASTIC.

German Press and Public Fall to See Where He Has Cause for Boasting.

BERLIN, Jan. 31.—It would be hard to adequately describe the effect produced here by the latest British reverses in Natal. Much more astonishment was caused by the swaggering tone of the defeated general's dispatch than by these reverses. To the German mind it is simply inconceivable how a commander who has led his troops into ignominious defeat could be guilty of such bullying rant instead of chasing a bullet through his brain. Buller's remark about the "terrible" he inflicted upon the Boers is dismissed as "idiotic." Military circles are unanimous in asserting that the Boers are invincible as far as the English are concerned. New re-inforcements would only be destined to the slaughtering cattle. The only reasonable course for England to adopt, the papers say, is to make the Salisbury government resign and institute a Rosebery ministry, whose mission it would be to conclude peace.

LAW AGAINST TRUSTOID.

Judge Kohlsaat Declares Illinois Statute of 1893 to Be Unconstitutional.

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—The Illinois anti-trust law of 1893 has been declared unconstitutional by Judge Kohlsaat in the United States circuit court. His opinion was based on the fact that it exempts from its application all agricultural products and livestock while in the hands of the producer or raiser. This characteristic he considered as making it class legislation in contravention of the federal and state constitutions. The decision was occasioned by a suit brought by the Union Sewer Pipe Company to enforce payment of claims against Thomas Connelly and William Dee, who admitted their debts, but pleaded among other things the provision of the law of 1893, which makes all contracts in violation of its terms void and not enforceable by law.

REPORT TO SEAT GOEBEL.

Contest Boards Reach Decision in His Favor

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 31.—While William Goebel lay at the point of death in his room as the result of an assassin's bullet, the contesting boards which for two weeks had been listening to the evidence in his contest for the governor's chair declared him entitled to the seat. The decision was reached by a vote of 10 to 1, a strict party vote.

To Concentrate Forces.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—There are signs of important movements developing in north Cape Colony. Gen. French has succeeded in getting in touch with Gatacre, possibly presaging a combination of their columns and the commencement of a concentration of forces which is believed to be the groundwork of Roberts's plan of campaign.

THE BEST MAN IN AMERICA

Tells How He Escaped the Terrors of Many Winters by Using Peruna.

Mr. Isaac Brock, born in Buncombe Co., North Carolina, March 1, 1788.

Isaac Brock, a citizen of McLennan county, Texas, has lived 111 years. He now lives with his son-in-law at Valley Mills, Texas.

In speaking of his good health and extreme old age, Mr. Brock says:

"After a man has lived in the world as long as I have, he ought to have found out a great many things by experience.

"One of the things I have found out to my entire satisfaction is the proper remedy for ailments that are due directly to the effects of the climate.

"During my long life I have known a great many remedies for coughs, colds, catarrh and diarrhœa. I had always supposed these affections to be different diseases, but in reading Dr. Hartman's books I have found out that these affections are the same and that they are properly called catarrh.

"I had several long sieges with the grip. At first I did not know that Peruna was a remedy for this disease. When I heard that la grippe was epidemic catarrh, I tried Peruna for la grippe and found it to be just the thing.

"As for Dr. Hartman's remedy, Pe-ru-na, I have found it to be the best, if not the only, reliable remedy for these affections. It has been my standby for many years, and I attribute my good health and extreme old age to this remedy.

Very truly yours,

Isaac Brock.

AS WISE AS BEAUTIFUL.

Paderewski Sociable Enough with His Friends—Won't Be Interviewed.

Paderewski is as wise as he is beautiful. The Pole with the auburn hair dislikes to be interviewed, and, after briefly expressing the compliments of the season on his arrival, he escaped to the seclusion of his hotel, says the New York Press. Among his friends the pianist is sociable enough, being possessed of a pretty wit and a lively sense of humor, but to the general public he is a melancholy, absorbed, romantic personality, which is an interesting pose and advantageous. The domestic life of great men, however decorous it may be, is not revealed to their admirers without imperiling their fame. The author of "Vanity Fair" once met at a dinner one of his most enthusiastic worshipers. Unconscious of the ecstasy with which she gazed at him, he asked for a second helping of potatoes. Her idol was dethroned by his appetite, and crying, with a shudder, "Oh, Mr. Thackeray!" she left the table in dismay at the realization that her doll was stuffed with sawdust. Paderewski must eat, and that his appetite is Thackerayian may be judged from the fact that he has gained almost 100 pounds since he left us; but he eats in private and thus maintains the sentimental delusion of his devotees. In his habit as he lives the pianist is an every-day young man who would like to have his hair cut and enjoy life like his neighbors. But secrecy, when it can be preserved, is the badge of all the tribe of artists, and, by not knowing its favorites, the public exalts them. Jean de Reszke refused all social invitations while he was singing in our opera, though among his familiars he was full of fun. Augustin Daly insisted on drawing a veil of mystery around Ada Rehan, who was never allowed to be interviewed by newspaper men or to accept social invitations save from her intimates. The same system of seclusion was practiced with remarkable success by Eleonora Duse, and J. M. Hill established the fame of Margaret Mather by keeping her sedulously hidden except when she was on the stage.

WOMEN TRAIN PORTERS.

An Innovation That Is Hailed with Joy by Feminine Travelers.

I have often wondered why the staff of porters on trains did not contain a woman or two, such as are found on steamers, to attend to the wants of feminine passengers. The same idea must have found lodgment in the brains of some railroad official, for the woman porter is a feature of some of the new limited trains. It is not always pleasant to make one's little wants known to a man with an impassive countenance and self-possessed manner—the car porter who you know in your inmost heart prefers the surliest man on the car to the mildest little woman you ever saw. When ill from the motion of the car—car-sickness is a common complaint—there is very little sympathy to be expected from a man; he will never be able to grasp the full horrors of the illness because men are not subject to it. Even the porters on steamboats would never give you a grain of comfort, therefore bless your stars and the company for the presence of the woman who looks after your comfort. The new maids are employed for the special purpose of looking after ladies and children, particularly ladies and those traveling alone. They are carefully coached in behavior as well as duty, and are warned that deviation from either will be followed by prompt dismissal. There are so many things we can ask a maid to do—such as pinning on one's veil and buttoning or lacing the boots which were loosened for comfort. A male porter would never answer in such cases. But mind you, if we are not considerate enough to allow the maid to retain her temper and patience we shall loose her, and she will be counted among the experiments which failed, and no amount of persuasion will bring her back.

What Your Voice Looks Like.

To take a picture of your voice it is only necessary to tie a sheet of thin, strong paper over the wide end of tin trumpet. Hold it with the sheet of paper upward, take a thin pinch of fine sand and place it in the center of the paper, hold the trumpet vertically above your face and sing a note into the lower end. Do not blow, but sing the note. Lower the trumpet carefully and look at the sand. You will find that the vibrations of your voice have scattered the pinch of sand into a beautiful sound picture. Every note in the musical scale will produce a different picture, so you may produce a great variety of them. Some of these pictures look like pansies, roses and other flowers; some look like snakes and others like flying birds—in fact, there is no limit to the variation. If you wish to see the pictures while they are being made you may employ an old bell-shaped ear trumpet, or you may use your trumpet with a short piece of rubber tubing on the mouthpiece.—Answers.

"And follow the reasoning of the chemistry and insanity experts?" "Very probably." "Well, judge, your honor, I'm ready to enter my plea." "What is it." "Guilty." —Washington Star.

What an absurd thing it is to pass over the valuable parts of a man, and fix our attentions on his infirmities.

Virtue will catch as well as vice by contact; and the public stock of honest, manly principle will daily accumulate.

A greater value should be set on having received instructive and useful lessons than of possessing great store of wealth; for the latter is transitory good, the former is durable.

There is scarcely a generalization for one set which does not apply equally to the other, so perfectly alike in nature are men and women. The difference is only in circumstances.

It is better to be generous than selfish, better to be true than false, better to be brave than to be a coward. Blessed beyond all earthly blessedness is the man who in the tempestuous darkness of the soul has dared to hold fast to the venerable landmarks. Thrice blessed is he who, when all is drear and cheerless within and without, when his teachers terrify him and his friends sink from him, has obstinately clung to moral good—thrice blessed, because his night shall pass into clear, bright day.

SHORT SERMONS.

For its exercise or manifestation must demands, object or being to be trusted.—Rev. T. Jefferson Danner.

Better a very little real faith straight from the heart than a vast amount of vague belief.—Rev. D. C. Garrett.

A secret of blessedness in work is the conviction that we are doing the work that God wishes us to do.—Rev. R. J. Kent.

The Bible exhorts to that patient continuance in well-doing that is necessary to the building of Christ-like character.—Rev. J. T. Shannon.

Progress is not bad, and now, more than ever, the evolution of the race should be guided by intelligent foresight.—Rev. G. D. Black.

With the right conception of man's being here, not for happiness but for worthiness, suffering itself is an angel in disguise.—Rev. Ira Billman.

All human law is based on the conviction that the punishment should fit the crime. The common sense of justice requires that.—Rev. Dr. Crowe.

God and right must conquer. No great reform is born at once or grows to full stature in a night. Men are subject to the laws of growth.—Rev. G. Lee Van Roberts.

Expansion is the one idea of the Christian religion. Christ came as the embodiment of the idea of expansion, but he came to a people who must be educated up to the idea.—Rev. J. L. Barton.

AFTERTHOUGHTS.

Many a man wouldn't be nearly so lucky if he depended on luck.

One's admiration for oneself is largely due to the limitations of mirrors.

It is when we become rich or famous that we find out where are the friends of our youth.

Don't abuse the world because it abuses you, because the percentage is always against you.

The shrewd man does not openly condemn another for being an ass; nor does he cry him down; nor yet shun him; for he knows that the ass, though a little slow of movement and comprehension, is a very convenient beast of burden, and, remembering work of his own that should be done, he profits by his knowledge.

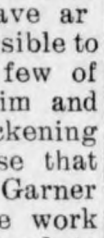
WHO STRUCK BILLY PATTERSON?

We see by the Klemme TIMES that there was a "rat" editor in Klemme last week soliciting job work. Bro. Wellemeyer threatens to do something awfully awful if that thing happens again—murder another rabbit maybe or something else quite as dreadful. By the way, about the time George's paper struck the town with this direful threat he came up smiling himself with job work for Garner patrons and further, came in our office and used our machinery to complete his jobs. Now there is a sample of gratitude and consistency for you. We are interested in Bro. Wellemeyer and want to see him succeed and will say to his Klemme patrons who wish him to spend more time at home looking after their interest, that it is no trifling matter that has kept him in Garner the past week. Not even the Farmers' Institute would have done it. He is engaged in launching this new paper at Garner and getting it properly in the swim. If it should slip a cog when George was not present to give free advice, he would feel like slaying two rabbits instead of one. As soon as this feat, not the killing of the rabbits but the proper launching of the paper is accomplished he will be with you again and attentive to your interests as ever.

It is painfully evident to us that there are a few things that need to be straightened out. From the above one would almost think that the editor of the Democrat was a self confessed "r a t"—the most despised of all beings connected with newspaper work. In our local of two weeks ago we never mentioned his name, simply stated that a Bro.(?) editor had been in Klemme "ratting for job work, and if the shoe fits, why, my dear Dr., just wear it. Now since matters have arrived at a point that is visible to the open eye, let us jar a few of the props from under him and listen for the dull and sickening thud. He says in excuse that we were doing work for Garner people and completed the work in his office. He did extend to us the use of his paper cutter to trim a job for the County Auditor; he knew it was for that office, and that came to us without the asking. County work is legitimate plunder for any print shop in the county and grandma Brackett knows it. We have solicited commercial work of no kind in Garner and we defy any one to successfully contradict the statement. It looks to us as though some one has made a false statement and it is not the editor of the Klemme TIMES.

And further we will say, that there never has been a time since Klemme had a paper that the editor of the Democrat has not "ratted" the town for ads and job work, to the express detriment of the paper struggling for a livlihood here. We do not wonder that he flies the track and pull his hair when these truths come to light with no contradictory evidence at hand. He charges us with neglecting our business to help start a new paper at Garner. Please compare the two papers and see how much truth there is in the statement. If we have been instrumental in giving Garner a real newspaper we are glad of it, and the people will be glad of the change—they have grown woefully tired of paying good money for nothing. There is not a town in the county that don't have a paper that is a better representative of the town in which it is published than Garner and we do not blam the citizens for wanting to go out of the pension business.



Oh, yes! You are interested in Bro. Wellemeyer; you want to see him succeed and according to the established code of ethics of all well regulated printoffices you have smiled in his presence and knifed him in the back at every opportunity.

We deplore the fact these things must be, but have grown weary of having our bread and butter carried off from under our very eyes without a protest. We propose from henceforth to fight for our rights, and if we do not get them it will not be because we have not made the effort.

DIGNITY IN THE LEGAL PROFESSION

The long drawn out screed in last week's Britt Tribune, in which Attorney Bradford, ostensibly for the "Britt Committee" indulges in an ultra excoriation of Garner and all that appertains to Garner, anent the final decision of the appeal case for a rehearing of the county seat matter.

For rank, puerile, misplaced and egotistical venom and unadulterated self-adulation and bombast, the Bradford philippic takes the rag off of anything thing that has appeared in public print this many a long day, when we take into consideration the large interests involved, the inherent dignity supposably attached to cases of this kind, and stamps the authors and endorsers of such far-fetched and unseemly eructions as men with little or no method in their madness, or as men who forget that neither rhodamontade nor vitrolic emissions of that character are at all calculated to properly place the great issues before the people of this county, nor to elevate in any great degree the legal profession as the accepted sponsors and advocates of the peoples rights in such premises.

Granted, that the decision of of the supreme court throws the whole question back upon the people for ultimate decision, does that fact at all prejudice Garners case? Does Mr. Bradford or the Britt Committee for one moment imagine that Garner is at all averse to trusting herself in the hands of the people of Hancock county? Not a bit of it! The concensus of opinion among Garner's workers and friends generally is, that when the die is finally and irrevokably cast at the polls, it will be found that Garner's princely gift to the tax-payers of thrifty Hancock will be appreciated, and so reckoned, far more than the wind pudding embraced in Britt promises and speculative pledges, and that a bird in the Garner hand is worth two in the Britt bush.

A careful perusal of the Bradford-Committee symposium permits the reader to arrive at only a few deductions, principal among which are these:

1st and Foremost: Britt has a "Committee" with five lawyers steering them, and at the head of the legal aggregation stands a behemoth named Bradford as an amanuensis and chief factotum, fugleman and vitriol tosser and who, as such, bluntly announces that Britt's five lawyers are more potential in legal matters than the whole Garner push of ten legal lights. As a cheap John style of attaining a lot of unprofessional free advertising the Bradford-Committee (mostly Bradford at that) is a farcically eminent success. But as a dignified, erudite rendition of a statement of alleged fact and law, it is asinine, reprehensible and a boomerang whose reactionary effect will inevitably be heard from later.

E. P. SCHAEFER.

We want to disabuse the Democrat editors' mind of one thing, and that is that we have not one cent of interest in the new paper at Garner. Mr. Sage had nearly all the arrangements completed before we were aware that he seriously contemplated the change. We did all we could to help him and trust Bro. Brackett will pardon us for lending aid to our fatherin-in-law. And even if we did spend part of our time in Garner, our paper had more "set matter" than the Democrat.

The Kentucky legislature threw out the vote of Louisville on the ground of intimidation, in order to count a majority for Goebel. Yet the democrats elected to that body from Louisville at the same identical election, still hold their seats. By what rule was the vote for governor thrown out and that for members of the legislature cast at the very same time and place counted?

The Britt Tribune editor has the mistaken idea that we need a few lessons in English literature. It does not take a learned man to understand that Bailey has it "in" for everybody that is in any way friendly to Garner. There is a time coming when it will require some explaination, and it would in no wise surprise us, if a deaf ear was turned to his entreaties. See!

Carnigie employed 11,000 men last year. He raised their wages during the year in the amount of $3, 970,000. He gave in charity, so far as now known $1,022,000, the most of which was in establishing reading and recreation resorts for working men. These reading rooms and rooms for evening resort will be appreciated and used long after Carnigie has passed away.

TROOPS LEAVE FRANKFORT.

Governor Taylor Will Not Sign Agreement, But Orders Troops Away.

FRANKFORT, Feb. 12.—Governor Taylor has decided not to sign the conference agreement, but has ordered the troops away, has issued a proclamation convening the legislature in Frankfort to-day, and says he will permit the courts to settle the controversy. There is no doubt what the decisions of the courts and legislature will be, as both have already gone on record as favoring the Goebel side. The new alignment of the parties is as follows: The republicans will stand on the legality of Governor Taylor's proclamation adjourning the legislature to meet at London, and will hold to be illegal all acts of the democratic legislature since the date of that proclamation, chief among which are the declaration of the election of Governor Goebel and Lieutenant-Governor Beckham. If the democratic legislators go back to Frankfort, the republicans will insist that John Marshall and not L. H. Carter is lieutenant-governor and president of the senate. They are free to take the matter of the governorship to the federal courts if they can make a case in which such an appeal will lie. If the democrats refuse to return to Frankfort, they may attempt to force the attendance of absentees, though this would be treading on shaky legal grounds. Meanwhile they will press the suit before Judge Taft, involving the minor state offices. The democrats will dispute the legality of Governor Taylor's proclamations adjourning the legislature to London and back again to Frankfort. They will contend that the legislature was dispersed by soldiers and adjourned to Louisville by its own action in adopting with a working quorum a concurrent resolution to that effect; that its acts have been legal; that by another concurrent resolution it may return to Frankfort when conditions warrant, as it is the only authority by which its sessions may be transferred from one place to another; that under the law the legislature is the court of last resort in a contest for the offices of governor and lieutenant governor. Meanwhile, Beckham will be recognized by this legislature as the legal governor. The positions are irreconcilable and while they are maintained a clash can only be deferred.

COULD NOT HOLD THE KOPJE.

General Buller Tells of His Third Retreat.

HEADQUARTERS CAMP, Springfield Bridge, Feb. 11.—The position taken north of the Tugela river proved difficult to maiutain. The regiments sent across as reinforcements went into the front line of trenches, but owing to the great strength of the Boers in Brakfontein hills to the left, it was impossible so advance without risking unnecessary loss. The Boers continued shelling the British positions. Several "Long Tom" shells fell among the transports trains and four burst on Zivaat Kop, but the Boers could not get the range. The British guns posted there failed to silence the "Long Tom" guns or other masked guns. The Boers continued to work the Nordenfelds on the British infantry entrenched on high. The fire was severe at times. Wednesday afternoon Buller resolved not to press the advance by this route. The transport train moved back and the infantry retired from Vaal Krantz. Wednesday night the guns on Swart Kop replied to Boer shelling. When they commenced to shell the transpot claim the Boers got a large number of cannon in position. Their superiority of shell fire rendered advance impossible.

MUST FALL.

British Experts Believe Ladysmith cannot Withstand Another Attack.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Military critics are almost unanimous in the belief that Ladysmith cannot hold out against another Boer attack. One London paper strongly hints that Buller's operations are for the purpose of distracting the attention of the Boers from a projected central advance by a strong force, presumably headed by Lord Roberts. The government announcement that in three weeks' time Lord Roberts will have 194,000 men in South Africa intensifies the public curiosity to unveil that closest official secret, where this stupendous force is. High authorities agree that Lord Roberts, after safeguarding his communications, will have only from 35,000 to 40,000 men for his northward march. Estimates as to how many Boers he will have to face are mere guesswork, as so much dedends upon the fate of Ladysmith and the number of Boers released from that point. Extraordinary efforts have been made by the censor to conceal Lord Roberts's destination, but the general idea seems to be that he contemplates an advance towards Bloemfontein.

Iowa News

THE co-operative creamery at Ely burned. The loss will amount to $1,400, with possible $1,200 insurance.

CHARLES STAEBER, president of the Iowa State Savings Bank, one of Burlington's most prominent German-American citizens, died of apoplexy a few days ago.

BERTHA OLLER, a 14-year-old girl, ran away from her home in West Chester, Washington county, a few nights ago, and no trace of her whereabouts can be found. She wore men's clothing and is about five feet tall, dark hair cut short, one upper tooth missing and small scar on forehead.

ALBERT SIETS, of Audubon, was arrested by Sheriff Anderson on a charge of forgery. He wanted to go to the house to see his wife which was granted. When inside the house he talked with his wife a few minutes, and then stepped into an adjoining room and swallowed two ounces of chloroform. Medical aid was summoned, but to no avail, and the man died in two hours.

WHILE Frank Boyd, a son of Mrs. A. J. Boyd, of Fairfield was at work on the bridge on the Burlington railroad near Ron, a sledge hammer fell from the top of the bridge, striking Boyd on the skull and fracturing it. As soon as possible after the unfortunate accident Boyd was taken to Ottumwa, where the proper surgical treatment was given him. The fracture, however, proved serious and he died from the effects of it.

MRS. JEFF, 84 years old, who lived eight miles east of Hamburg, committed suicide a few days ago by jumping into a well forty feet deep, containing 10 feet of water. After reaching the bottom she came to the surface and held onto the rope, calling for help, but there being no man on the place she could not be drawn up until she drowned to death. She left a letter saying she didn't want to be a burden on her friends and took this method of ending a weary life.

THE ministerial association of Sioux City has decided to take advantage of the predicament in which Woodbury county saloon keepers find themselves because of the recent decision of the supreme court and interpose every obstacle to a new petition of consent. With this object in view, a crusade has been organized and committees appointed to devise different means of blocking the efforts of the retail liquor dealers to secure signatures for a new petition to the board of supervisors.

FIRE which started in the Ervay clothing store at Rudd a few days ago, destroyed $12,000 worth of property and wiped out almost a block of the village stores. Two serious accidents marked the burning of the block. The most severe was that of J. W. Kline, a drayman, whose left knee cap was broken. He slipped and fell and the injury resulted. F. B. Brundare was also injured while kicking in the front of the bank building to get at the fire. He ran a large piece of glass into his left foot. The cut is very painful and serious. The origin of the fire is unknown.

JUDGE PROUTY, of the district court of Polk county, sentenced Ed Harrison to two years in the penitentiary at Ft. Madison. Harrison is a young fellow, not more than 17 years of age. He was indicted, tried and convicted of breaking and entering the Iliad building at Des Moines in company with the notorious Frank Belding. His attorneys plead for a reform school sentence, but the court said his experience in sending boys to the reform school this term of court had been unsatisfactory, as one had already broken out and was now at large, so the penitentiary sentence was imposed.

JAMES MCDONALD, a farm hand, wooed and won pretty Rose McLain, the young daughter of A. B. McLain, a prominent and wealthy farmer living near Farnamville. McDonald is, comparitively, a recent arrival and nothing is known concerning his antecedents. When, after a brief but fervent courtship, he sought the hand of Rose, Farmer McLain warned him from the place. He continued to meet the young lady, and Wednesday succeeded in inducing her to accompany him to Farnamville, where they took a train for the west. The father soon heard as his daughter's departure, and hurrying to Farnamville melted wires in all directions to intercept the runaways and finally succeeded in having the pair arrested at York, Neb., where they are now being held to await his arrival. McLain vows vengeance on McDonald when they meet.

A DISPATCH from Belmond says: More raw furs are being taken from Iowa streams this winter than in any other season in ten years. It was the general supposition that nearly all of the little fur-bearing animals had disappeared from the state. In fact, the ranks were thinned to an alarming degree, but during the last few years, without molestation, they have increased in numbers very rapidly. This winter many of the old trappers are reaping a fine harvest of mink, muskrat and other small furs.

Des Moines' request for one of the guns of the Spanish cruiser Marie Teresa has been granted, and one of the two-inch guns from that vessel is ready for shipment west. The gun, which is of Spanish make, will be mounted in one of the public squares in Des Moines. It is of modern construction and behind it six Spanish sailors were killed by a shell fired from one of the American ships, when the Teresa attempted to escape from Santiago harbor. The Teresa was raised by Hobson, but met disaster near Bermuda while being towed to the states. The gun that Des Moines will receive was one saved from the wreck by the American ship Vulcan.

IN the Jasper county district court a few days ago Judge Dewey rendered an important decision on section 1374 of the code, being the new section relating to back taxes. Suit was begun against several parties at Newton by the Iowa Tax Investigating Company. The defendants filed demurrers, claiming that the law was unconstitutional and not retroactive. Counsel on both sides submitted exhaustive arguments and the demurrers were overruled by Judge Dewey, who declared the law to be both constitutional and retroactive. Under this decision, which is the first to be made on the points involved, taxes may be collected for five years prior to the demand by the county treasurer. Many thousands of dollars will thus be saved to the state, as the system has been adopted by many counties throughout the state, the Iowa Tax Investigating Company having contracts with a number of counties.

A SIOUX CITY dispatch says: A movement is on foot in Iowa under which the Iowa Telepdone Company, better known as the Bell Company, proposes to buy up all independent companies in the state. The general manager, E. B. Smith, of Davenport, is authority for the statement, but he declines to say in which town operations will follow. At any rate, the Sioux City independent exchange, after a fight of several months' duration, has been obliged to give way to the trust and has been absorbed under the terms of a sale just closed. The Iowa company pays $28,000 and takes the system and stock. The Iowa manager says this is the first of the deals to be closed, but several more in other towns in the state are pending, and some surprises will be felt in some cities when the facts become known. This leaves northwestern Iowa at the mercy of the corporation, as the local company was the only one in competition. Iowa has seventy independent companies.

FRED SEARS, the Ida Grove man who was arrested last summer for taking fish with a seine from the waters of Wall Lake, Sac county, has been held guilty of violating the fish law. Sears was arrested by the deputy fish warden to whom he immediatly showed as a protection a permit from the state fish and game warden giving him the right to seine in the public waters of the state for game fish, with which to stock his own private pond. Sears claimed this to be a defense in the prosecution in the cases both before the justice and district court to which he appealed. Judge Elwood, of the district court, held that the fish warden had no legal right to issue such a permit and that the same had no place in the law and was therefore no protection whatever to the defendant in the case. County Attorney Newby was encouraged to conduct this case to the end by the citizens of the county who are interested in the fish in the lake and the enforcement of the law.

A dispatch from Des Moines says: A body blow was aimed at the building and loan associations of Iowa in the introduction by Senator Healy of a measure proposing to regulate the business of these corporations. The bill is the outgrowth of the existing sentiment that the building and loan business has much in its methods savoring of injustice and bordering on robbery, and is aimed primarily at the alleged root of the whole evil, the method of making fixed charges to defray the expenses of these corporations. It provides that the expenses of the building and loan associations must be paid out of the earnings of the association, striking out the provision that fixed charges may be made. The second object of the bill is to remove the temptation for keeping a large number of high salaried men on the pay rolls of these associations, by providing that no association shall have more than two salaried officers, neither of which shall draw more than $3,200 annually.

NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 5.—Several new bills were introduced and several passed. Junkin's bill to require a detailed statement of the wheelage of sleeping and dining cars on each division of the different roads over which they are operated, so as to enable the executive council to make a more equitable distribution of taxes than can be done at present, was passed without opposition. Lewis's bill making township clerks custodian of all township funds, including the cemetery fund, was also passed. Among the bills introduced was one by Gorrell to define specifically that the life of judgments shall be twenty years, and one by Harriman providing that a year after a man is adjudged bankrupt past judgments against him shall be stricken from the records.

HOUSE.

Three new bills were introduced, one of which proposes to prohibit state officials and representatives of the general assembly from accepting mileage. The house also concurred in the senate's amendments to the bill allowing notice of evidence in criminal cases to be served on attorneys as well as defendant.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 6.—The senate passed the bill which provides that the school fund may be loaned in sums as high as $3,000 and at as low a rate as 5 per cent, one-half per cent to go to the county for handling the funds. Trewin's bill providing that all liquor fines shall go into the county treasury instead of the school fund as now, was indefinitely postponed, as was also Crossley's bill to make county attorneys members of county boards of insanity, ex-officio. Among bills introduced was one by Garst doing away with the fee system in payment of sheriffs and their deputies, fixing a yearly compensation for the former of $1,500 and $500 for deputies, and one by Lister, making the law clear as to exemptions in favor of soldiers' homesteads, making all clearly exempt.

HOUSE.

The resolution introduced by Hawk of Jasper to request Iowa members of congress to propose and further an amendment to the federal constitution for the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people was adopted. The bill to make notarial seals of non-resident notaries public prima facie evidence that the words thereon conform to the requirements of the law of the place where the certificate purports to have been made was passed. Five bills were introduced, among them one by Campbell, of Henry, asking for an appropriation of $62,000 for the hospital for the insane at Mt. Pleasant, and one by Furry, of Hardin, asking for $37,950 for the boys' reform school at Eldora.

JOINT SESSION.

In joint convention today the legislature elected the following officers: Trustees for the State Agricultural college: W. K. Boardman, seventh district; W. J. Dixon, eleventh district; J. B. Hungerford, tenth district; W. R. Monenger, fifth district, and C. L. Gabrulson, of the fourth district. Regents for the State University: Carroll Wright, seventh district; W. D. Tisdale, sixth district; George W. Cable, second district, and Washington I. Babb of the first district. Trustees for State Normal: I. J. McDuffe and Roger Leavitt.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 7.—The senate adopted a resolution by Garst calling on the attorney general for an opinion as to the changes necessary in the building and loan laws. Hazleton's bill regulating the powers of mayors was considered at length. Perrin introduced a resolution providing for submitting to a popular vote the question of equal suffrage for both sexes. Several bills of minor importance were introduced.

HOUSE.

Byers introduced a concurrent resolution providing for sine die adjournment March 1. Among the bills passed was one by Stratton, permitting sub-directors to hire teachers.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 8.—Emmert's bill providing for the suppression of tuberculosis by requiring inspection of all cattle for dairy and breeding purposes, was under discussion to-day. No action was taken. Junkin introduced a bill to protect the state treasurer from liability for taxes collected under protest.

HOUSE.

The house adopted Byers' resolution for the adjournment of the assembly March 1st. The most bitter discussion which has taken place on the floor of the house this session ensued to-day on the bill to raise the governor's salary, which finally, by a vote of 53 to 39, passed as amended, changing it from $3,000 to $5,000 per year. The original bill made it $6,000. The bill by Payne of Appanoose regarding the exemption from taxation of the homesteads of old soldiers whether indigent or not, passed with an amendment providing for the exemption of the homestead to the value of $800 even though other property is held.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 9.—After a lengthy discussion of Emmert's bill for the suppression of tuberculosis, it was laid over till Tuesday. Fifteen bills were introduced. One by Healy provides for a deputy attorney general at $2,000 a year; another by Penrose fixes the salaries of county recorders at $1,500; another by Healy settles the ownership of lakes that dried up and of the abandoned courses of rivers by fixing title in counties where land is located.

HOUSE.

The house passed three bills. One by Payne provides that before the board of review adds to the taxable value of the property of any county, notice shall be served on the county auditor, stating clearly the nature and amount of the proposed increase, and shall fix a date and place for hearing. One by Wilson of Buena Vista relates to fees to be paid by corporations for filing articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The bill fixes the filing fee at $25 where the capital stock is less than $10,000, and an additional fee of $1 per thousand in excess of $10,000, but in no case shall the fee be more than $2,000. One by Dows repeals the provision of the code which compels home insurance companies to pay a tax of 1 per cent on their premium receipts to the state, The supreme court has held that this law is unconstitutional. Among bills introduced was one by Buchanan creating a department of state to supervise building and loan associations. At an afternoon session Hilsinger's bill preventing the spearing and seining of fish in the Mississippi, Missouri, Big Sioux and Des Moines rivers passed, as did also the bill providing for a license of $10 for non-resident hunters.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 10.—The question of substituting the benefit system of taxing improvements to abutting property, for the front foot rate, was discussed, but finally the bill was made a special arder for Wednesday. Bill for a tax of one-tenth of a mill for the agricultural college was favorably reported. Among bills introduced was one by Healy to regulate building and loan associations.

TAYLOR CAUSES A CRISIS.

Orders Warrants for Members of the Legislature.

LONDON, Ky., Feb. 10.—The tension under which the legislature has been laboring, especially during the past week, reached a crisis last night when the following message from Governor Taylor was received by a member:

"Have warrants issued for members of the house and put in the hands of the sergeant-at-arms to serve."

Water boiling over from the kettle means bad weather.

DES MOINES, Feb. 11. 1900.

President Johnson of the State Agricultural society is here in the interests of the Harriman bill, to establish a department of agriculture. He says the state ought to sell the coal rights under the fair grounds; that there is at least 100 acres of coal there and may be twice as much, worth about $400 an acre for the mining rights alone. He is of the opinion that if the state does not sell this right, mining companies will ultimately steal all the coal. In fact he is of the opinion there is good warrant now for a careful investigation to determine whether any of it is now being taken out. The money, he says, would put the fair grounds in magnificent condition; and if the state was not willing to have it used in this way, it would be quite an ornament to the interior of the treasury.

Rev. J. C. George, of Cedar Falls, state superintendent of the prison department of the American Homefinding association, was given a hearing before the two house committees, those on penitentiaries and on pardons. The association is interested in finding homes and employment for those discharged from Anamosa, Mitchelville and other penal or reformatory institutions. Mr. George urges that the board of control take the matter up and that a department be created under the board, and a fund placed at the disposal of the department, to look after those discharged from penal or reform institutions. A number of the members of these committees are inclined to believe the state should take the matter in hand, and make some provision as suggested.

The Sioux City Bar Association has decided to ask the legislature to allow one more judge for the Fourth judicial district and to cut off Harrison county. The lawyers will do all in their power to get the measure passed by the legislature.

Representative Boysen, of Audubon county, has introduced in the house a bill to provide that cities and counties may, in the discretion of the board of supervisors, substitute a vote by ballot for the petition form of consent for saloons. The law provides that in cities of over 5,000 the council may, by majority vote, submit the question to ballot by secret vote; in counties the board of supervisors may submit it likewise.

Plans are being made for the erection during the coming summer in Des Moines of two of the largest wholesale hardware houses in the west. One of them will be owned and operated by Messrs. C. J. and F. H. Luthe, who recently retired from the wholesale hardware company of Patrick & Luthe, and the other, if the present plans are consummated, will be owned by a firm from abroad, a representative of which visited the city for the purpose of investigating in regard to the removal of the wholesale hardware house now owned by the firm in a western city to Des Moines.

The Iowa Wholesale Butter and Egg Dealers' Association at its annual meeting re-elected its old officers, as follows: President, A. Rhynsberger, of Pella; secretary, W. M. Verhey, of Des Moines; treasurer, J. T. Davis, of Perry The association adjourned to meet again in Des Moines, March 22.

The house has passed a bill repealing the law taxing Iowa insurance companies 1 per cent on their gross receipts. The supreme court recently held that the law making this tax in lieu of all other taxes is unconstitutional. The companies have been compelled to pay local taxes and the present law is believed to be worthless. Some new plan for taxing insurance companies is likely to be adopted by this legislature. The bill as passed relieves mutual or assessment life insurance companies of all taxes, amounting to something over $50,000 a year.

At a meeting of the ways and means committee of the senate it was decided to recommend for passage the bill introduced by Senator Fitzpatrick providing for a levy of one-tenth of a mill tax for five years for a building fund for the State Agricultural College. The favorable report was agreed upon with the understanding that the college will not ask a direct appropriation for building. It has asked for $150,000 for buildings, but if the tax is voted this may be withdrawn, or part of it at least. The same rule applies to the State University. The friends of the Agricultural College are very much pleased with the action of the committee. The ways and means committee of the house looks with favor, also, upon this proposition and upon that of the State University, so that there now seems little doubt of the action of the legislature with respect to these two great institutions.

Turkey Yields to Uncle Sam.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Oscar Strauss, United States minister to Turkey, who is here, says the sultan has yielded to the demands of the United States for indemnity for destruction of property during the disorders in Armenia. American flour is to be admitted to Turkish ports and America secures the right to establish consulates throughout Turkey.

HIS WORD OF HONOR.

CHAPTER VII.—(Continued.)

His tone was the courteous yet decided one of a man accustomed to see his medical authority recognized without opposition. Edward had not intended to enter the sick chamber, where he would be obliged to meet Florence, but the plainly intimated request that he should remain outside nettled him. He glanced haughtily at the doctor and replied with evident coldness.

"The physician always has the right to command in such cases. I will submit, but shall expect speedy news of my uncle's health."

He gave the necessary orders to the servant, who was still in the room, and then turned to Thompson again.

The doctor was ushered through several apartments no less richly furnished than the drawing-room, then the man opened a door veiled by a heavy portiere and permitted the physician to enter, while he himself remained behind.

CHAPTER VIII.

Here, too, a subdued twilight reigned, and in the dusk the newcomer at first perceived only the white figure kneeling beside the bed, with her face buried in the pillows. The sick man himself appeared to be in a sort of stupor, and, at the end of the room, Ralph was busied with some medicine. After convincing himself by a hurried glance that the door had again closed behind him. Doctor Blackwood approached the kneeling girl, bent down to her and said, in a low tone, with marked emphasis:

"Miss Harrison!"

She slowly raised her pale, tear-stained face. The voice seemed to arouse some memory, her eyes rested inquiringly upon the stranger's features for a few seconds, then a startled cry escaped her lips.

"And now for the living," he continued. "Calm yourself. Another life is at stake, as dear to you as the one now vanishing."

"William?" cried the young girl, in terror. "Is his life threatened? They concealed it from me. They spoke only of imprisonment. For heaven's sake, tell me the truth!"

"First of all, you must tell me what has happened. I have just arrived, and know none of the particulars."

Taking her hand, he led her to the window, where Florence, in hurried, breathless whispers, informed him of what had occurred.

Maxwell listened silently, without interrupting her. Not until she had finished her story did he ask a few brief, direct questions.

"Is Captain Wilson still in Springfield?"

"No. I heard from Ralph that he rode away half an hour ago."

"And when do you expect your family physician and the real Doctor Blackwood?"

"Toward evening. They will not arrive before seven o'clock."

"Well, then, we shall have a few hours at our disposal. Can you rely upon this old man? Implicitly?"

"Ralph was the friend and confidant of my childhood. He is devoted to me with all his soul, and will do anything to save William. Won't you, Ralph?"

She had summoned the old servant by a gesture. He laid his hand upon his heart.

"Yes, Miss Florence—anything."

Maxwell looked keenly at him a few minutes, and seemed satisfied.

"Miss Harrison's lover is to be rescued," he said. "Will you help us?"

"Yes, master, as much as I can."

"Then first inform Mr. Harrison that I must remain here for the present, as his uncle's death may take place at any moment. But I must request him not to enter the sick chamber. Miss Florence does not wish it. Then find out for me in what part of house Lieutenant Roland is imprisoned and whether it is possible to reach him unseen. This can easily be learned from the servants; but be careful to rouse no suspicion."

Ralph's face showed that he clearly understood the importance of the commission. He promised in a whisper to obey exactly, and then glided noiselessly out of the room. Maxwell again turned to Florence, who seemed somewhat sustained by his presence.

"Do you really mean to try to reach William?" she asked. "Suppose that you should be discovered and recognized as his friend?"

John shrugged his shoulders.

"Then we shall probably be shot together. Yes, Miss Harrison, a fainting fit will be quite superfluous here and cannot serve us in the least. If you are not resolute, the game will be lost; and I tell you frankly that it is a matter of life and death. We shall undoubtedly be considered spies, and your cousin will certainly do nothing to clear up the error. This is the exact state of the case. Will you lie here, fainting, while it is decided, or will you do what you can to help?"

These blunt words fulfilled their purpose. What William, with all his consideration and tenderness, had failed to do, his friend's sharpness accomplished. Florence, who was really on the verge of fainting, rallied her strength. Her voice still trembled yet thrilled with kindling energy as she replied:

"I am not so weak as you imagine. I have courage for anything where William is concerned. Tell me what I am to do."

"For the present you must remain quietly here, but be ready to respond at any moment if I call you. This room has another door, I see; so I can leave it, unobserved, while I am supposed to be engaged in my professional duties. After the message I sent to Mr. Harrison, he will probably remain near, expecting further news."

"But if he doesn't—if he discovers and surprises you—if the doctors should arrive a few hours earlier—"

"Yes, but one must not take the 'ifs' into account in such enterprises," said Maxwell, carelessly. "Several hundred 'ifs' menaced me when I rode after that obstinate William, yet here I am, and my identity is wholly unsuspected, which is enough for the beginning."

He again approached the sick bed, where his prediction was being fulfilled. Death was approaching slowly but calmly and without suffering, and he silently beckoned to the daughter to resume her place.

CHAPTER IX.

Edward Harrison had, of course, taken every precaution to prevent any attempt at escape or rescue. He had been forced to yield to Captain Wilson's demand for suitable accommodations for his prisoner and his refusal to adopt other measures—indeed, the latter would have been superfluous. William was in the charge of his most bitter enemy, and he guarded him better than any jailer.

In a side-wing of the building, at the end of a long passage, was a room where many valuable articles were kept during the absence of the owners. The only entrance was through a strong door with a double lock, and the one window, which also opened upon the passage, was protected by an iron grating, which, though not heavy, was remarkably strong. In addition, the corridor was closed by a second door, and Edward kept the keys of both in his pocket. No assistance could come from outside, and her cousin knew only too well that Florence had not the energy to attempt to free the prisoner, at least in her father's dying hour.

William paced up and down the close, gloomy room in the most intense excitement. So this was the end of the foolhardy ride which he had undertaken in defiance of every warning. True, he had thought of two alternatives only—success or death in honorable conflict; and Colonel Burney, too, had had no other idea when he uttered the fateful words: "Dead or dishonored." There was a third: "Captured!"

True, this captivity meant death. The young officer did not deceive himself concerning his fate; but little as he feared death, his blood boiled in fierce rebellion at the thought of being sentenced as a spy. Anything save this shameful doom. There was one bright ray of hope for him: He trusted in the honor of the Confederates. Unless Edward Harrison could hoodwink them into believing him a spy, he seemed reasonably safe.

Then came the thought of Florence, who would now be left wholly without protection. How would she endure the terrible event, and what would befall her after her father's death? Edward, as the sole male relative, would also be the guardian and protector of the young girl, who would be absolutely in this scoundrel's power. William clenched his hands in helpless fury, and a low groan escaped his lips.

Suddenly he started. He fancied that he heard his name spoken by some one close at hand. Of course it must be a delusion, yet he stood still and involuntarily glanced toward the window. The voice reached him again. This time more distinctly.

"William! Don't you hear?"

With a sudden spring, the young man reached the somewhat high window, behind whose gratings the outlines of a human figure were now visible.

"John—you? Impossible! It can't be!"

"I have the honor, however, to be myself," was the reply. "Good evening, Will!"

"But how did you get to Springfield? How did you hear of my fate? How did you succeed in making your way here?"

"Don't be in such a hurry. Put your questions slowly, in regular order, and I'll answer in the same way. We shall have plenty of leisure for it; it will be some time before I can saw through this confounded iron grating."

The faint sound of a file showed that the rescuer was really at work, and at the noise fresh hope and courage filled the young officer's soul. Freedom! Rescue! He could have shouted for joy at the bare thought, as if the rescue had already been accomplished.

"Doctor Maxwell! Is it you?"

"Hush! Don't mention my name!" said Maxwell in a low, impressive tone. "I pass here as Doctor Blackwood, and we are not alone."

He glanced significantly at the negro, whose attention had been attracted; but Florence made an eager gesture of dissent.

"Ralph is faithful and discreet. You need fear no treachery from him. I will answer for that."

"So much the better. But, first: What has happened here? I am looking for William. Isn't he in Springfield?"

"Yes, he is here, but a prisoner, betrayed by Edward, and just at the moment they dragged him away from me this severe, perhaps fatal attack, came on. Doctor Maxwell, will my father die?"

John Maxwell did not answer the despairing question at once. The first glance at Harrison had told him that it must be in the affirmative, but he bent over the patient, felt of his pulse and placed his hand upon his heart. It was a short but careful examination.

"Yes, Miss Harrison," he said at last. "It is useless to withhold the truth; you must face it; but the struggle is over, and the end will be painless. He will probably not recover his consciousness."

Florence, sobbing aloud, covered her face with both hands; but Maxwell allowed her no time to give way to her grief.

A FORMER AMERICAN SAYS.

Doubled Their Cultivated Lands and More Than Doubled Their Stock.

The following letter, written by Mr. John Cummings of Wetaskiwin, Alberta, Canada, formerly of Washington, to a friend in the United States, is only one of a hundred similar cases, and what was done by Mr. Cummings can more easily be done by any good, sober and industrious farmer who chooses to make his home in the dominion.

Dear Sir: You want to know how I got along since I came into Northern Alberta. I am happy to inform you that I am not ashamed to.

We located five miles northeast of Wetaskiwin; left Farmington, Wash., on the 29th day of May, drove all the way. We had time to build our log house the first fall, and to make us comfortable for the fall and stock. We then built four stables, 18x20 inside, so that we could keep everything inside them when the cold got down to the fifties, and worked hard getting up the stables, and got through dabbing on the 1st of December, but, to our surprise, we had no use for the stables only for the milk cows and two spans of horses. The balance of the horses lived on the prairie all winter, and took care of themselves. The doors of two stables were left open for them to go into in a cold time, but they would not do it, but stayed out on the prairie the coldest night we had and looked as spry as crickets.

I can go ten rods back of my house and count ten residents. I know all of their circumstances. Every one of them have doubled their cultivated land, and doubled their animals and a great deal more. All of us are comparatively out of debt and an unusually big crop to thresh and prospect of a fair price, and I expect we are as well contented a lot of people as there is to be found from Florida to the Klondike.

My son bought two pounds of twine to the acre, and when we started to bind some barley we found that instead of taking two pounds to the acre it was taking nearly five pounds. Then you ought to have seen him hitch up team and make for town for 100 pounds more. I cannot say how it will thresh. All I can say is that it is well-headed and takes an enormous amount of twine.

The largest ostrich farm in the country is in Fullerton, Cal. On it are three hundred birds. One of them lately surprised its stomach by swallowing a gimlet.

AVOID DANGER.

The Danger of Catarrh Ointments That Contain Mercury.

This journal, although more particularly devoted to all that interests finance, commerce and manufacturing, is nevertheless always awake to the need and wants of its readers, let the subject be what it may. We were asked to investigate and report upon the merits of the various catarrh remedies on the market. The production of preparations of injurious composition cannot, unfortunately, be stopped or restricted at present, or until our state legislatures can be induced to pass such suitable and stringent laws as will effectually prevent their appearance on the market. In the meantime, the people must look out for themselves. In this matter, we have made a most careful and painstaking investigation, realizing the confidence that would be placed in our reply. Our medical staff employed to make such investigations were most favorably impressed with the preparation known as Hall's catarrh cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co. of Toledo, Ohio, and agreed that this peerless remedy deserves our highest indorsement. Many of the catarrh remedies on the market contain mercury, which destroys the sense of smell and deranges the whole system when entering through the mucous surfaces. From analysis we found that Hall's catarrh cure contains no mercury. It is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. We have no interest whatever in this matter beyond faithfully serving our readers, and as our indorsement is extended without reward of any kind, and is wholly unsolicited by this company, and will be received with the full credence that all our statements have met with for the past eighteen years.—Southern Review of Commerce.

It is a puzzling fact that the decks of sailing vessels show dust at night, even if washed in the morning and no work is done during the day. This is like indigestion and dyspepsia, which creaps on one unawares. The only way to cure them is by the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which also prevents malaria, fever and ague.

To the Honorable Board of Supervisors of Hancock County, Iowa:

Gentlemen:—

The undersigned committee report that upon examination of the books, accounts and vouchers in the offices of the County Auditor and Treasurer find as public funds in the hands of the Co. Treasurer, twenty-four thousand ninety seven and 52-100 dollars ($24,097.52) as shown by balance sheet.

Also we find Hancock county obligated to the State of Iowa on account of loans and cash in the sum of forty-three thousand eight hundred eight and 28-100 dollars ($43,808.28)

Also we find of redemption from tax sales in the hands of the County Auditor, eighteen hundred forty-nine and 99-100 dollars ($1849.99.

Also we find upon examination of the fee book in the office of the County Recorder, that fees are charged and received during the year 1899, the sum of twenty-seven hundred ninty-four and 05-100 dollars (2,974.05)

The books and records in the office of the Clerk of the District Court show the amount on hand collected since January 1st, 1899, to be four thousand eight hundred fifty-one and 37-100 dollars ($4,851.37)

We also find in the hands of J. H. Dickirson, ex-Sheriff of said county the sum of two thousand nine hundred twenty dollars ($2,930.00)

We have examined the books and vouchers in the Superintendent's office and find that he has made a true and correct report to the treasurer of all fees and money collected by him and that all of said money and fees have been paid to the County Treasurer.

Respectfully submitted.

M. E. SCHLEICHER,
GEO. P. HARDWICK,
JOHN C. FORD.

To the Honorable Board of Supervisors of Hancock County:

Gentlemen:—

With reference to the settlement with James M. Coutts I wish to report that after comparing the report filed herein I find that the amount which should have been paid over by Mr. Coutts to L. D. Womeldorf is three thousand three hundred nineteen and 37-100 dollars all of which all has now been paid to L. D. Womeldorf.

Respectfully submitted.

M. E. SCHLEICHER.

Upon counting money in the hands of the County Treasurer, Auditor and Clerk of District Court, the Board find amounts in their hands of public funds to agree with the reports thereof. On motion

Resolved, that the reports of the committee and also report of M. E. Schleicher be accepted and said committee discharged.

On motion claims were allowed as per schedule.

On motion Board adjourned to meet at one o'clock p m

Board met in the Auditor's office as per adjournment at one o'clock p. m. January 27th. 1900.

WAR TO THE DEATH

PESTS OF THE POULTRY YARD MUST GO

American Lice Destroyer Kills More Mites, Lice and Other Vermin in a Day Than All Other Remdies Combined.

The war is on! The days of lice and vermin that have done so much to make the life of the poultryman miserable, and his business unprofitable are over. American Lice Destroyer is the proper ammunition to use! This preparation is wonderful in its power, and vermin cannot exist twenty four hours after it is applied to the coop or fowls. Every poultryman needs it. It is cheap reliable and effective, one package being sufficient to protect 250 fowls from mites and lice for one year. When this Destroyer is used, profits at once increase. Lice and vermin do more to kill profits than all other causes combined. You know it. Don't go on losing money every week, but try American Lice Destroyer. You may have tried other things without success, but if this fails you can have your money back. We are in this fight to stay, and will back Destroyer against any number of mites or lice you may have. Don't fool away money with 'recipes' or home made makeshifts. Use scientific means. The American Lice Destroyer has been used by thousands of poultrymen; it has been on the market several years and has been tested thousands of times. We know it is all right, and if it doesn't do the work remember you get your money back. Wqat more can you ask? If your druggist don't sell American Lice Destroyer, he's behind the age. In that case send for $1. box at once. Made only by American Mfg. Co., Terre Hante, Ind.

W. O. Butterfield, of Goodell, was in town on business Monday.

Fred Haupt's little girl has been very sick but is getting better.

Corwith is going to put on airs and have electric lights. Good for Corwith.

W. R. Bloom went to Cedar Rapids Saturday on business, returning Monday.

Wanted! To trade a good hay press for horse and buggy. Inquire at this office.

Horace Merrill, of Garner, was visiting friends in Klemme a few days this week.

Fred Ax started Monday night for a visit with friends and relatives in Missouri.

G. A. Griswold has resurrected the Garner band and will again be their instructor.

The revival meetings in the English M. E. Church are continuing with good success.

Little Madeline Richter, who has been quite sick for the past week is much better.

We have received another notice of the advance of price of paper. Oh Lord, how long?

One of the Messersmith Bros. famous for wrestling, was in Klemme a few days last week.

Joe Fotheringham was doing professional work at Klemme, Meservey and Goodell the first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Schaefer have been in Chicago the past week purchasing a large stock of Spring goods.

L. G. Schultz visited with friends at Alden over Sunday. These trips to Iowa Falls and Alden must mean business?

One of the best paper's read at the Farmers Institute was that of R. Conway, on the "Creamery and its benefits."

The district court of Hancock Co., will convene at Concord next Monday, February 19, judge Clifford P. Smith, presiding.

The Mystic Workers initiated two new members at their last meeting. This organization is gaining new members rapidly.

W. W. Lawrence and Will Terhufen of Klemme are painting, papering, and otherwise beautifying the Germantown church.

Dows has three checker players looking for glory. In the advocate last week a challenge is issued and a series of games will likely be the result.

If there are any poor unfortunates in this town that did not get a valentine, if they will call on Pete he will give them one. He has a surplus.

We were in error when we stated two week's ago that the Garner editors would not attend the institute or give a report. They have done remarkably well.

Belmond is to have a new $15000, flouring mill. Enterprising citizens put up a bonus of $2,500 and tho plant will be built on the old mill site at the river.

Having received a car load of furniture and undertaking goods, I am in shape to supply you with anything in the line of furniture etc.

G. F. SCHULER, Garner, Ia.

DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is unequaled for piles, injuries and skin diseases. It is the original Witch Hazel Salve. Beware of all counterfeits. J. L. Harr.

W. S. Philpot, Albany, Ga., says: "DeWitts Little Early Risers did me more good than any other pills I ever took." The famous little pills for constipation, billiousness and liver and bowel troubles. J. L. Harr.

Mrs. J. K. Miller, Newton Hamilton Pa., writes: "I think DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve the grandest salve made." It cures piles and heals everything. All fraudulent imitations are worthless. J. L. Harr.

John Dirr, Poseyville, Ind., says: "I never used anything as good as One Minute Cough Cure. We are never without it." Quickly breaks up colds and coughs. Cures all throat and lung troubles. Its use prevents consumption. Pleasant to take. J. L. Harr.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Schaefer just returned from Chicago where they have been purchasing their Spring dry goods and also a complete stock of millinery. They have engaged a city trimmer that will be here when the Millinery Season opens.

Supt. Schell is holding a series of successful Teacher's Meetings. The last one was held at Goodell, and the date for a meeting at Klemme will be held soon.

The board of supervisors have ordered the sheriff to take prisoners from this county to Forest City for lodging and board during 1900. Heretofore they have patronized the Cerro Gordo county jail in Mason City.—News.

Geo. Barbe, Mendota, Va., says: "Nothing did me so much good as Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. One dose relieved me, a few bottles cured me." It digests what you eat and always cures dyspepsia. J. L. Harr.

Garner is to have a new paper soon. Three papers and a vacant court house is enough for such a small town like Garner.--Britt News.

Before Britt gets through with both court house and new paper they will have learned "who struck Billy Patterson."

A party of Britt young people were out riding and were caught in the blizzard last Wednesday night. The team become unmanagable and upset the sleigh. Louis Rasmussen was insensible when picked up, being badly bruised and several bones broken in his foot.

"I had dyspepsia for years. No medicine was so effective as Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. It gave immediate relief. Two bottles produced marvelous results." writes L. H. Warren, Albany, Wis. It digests what you eat and cannot fail to cure. J. L. Harr.

What he people that are friendly to Garner as to the court house want to do is to just take off their coats and work. Begin right now and keep it up. We want to help snow de gang under, so deep, that it will take a rotary steam shovel to get them out.

Friday last a deal was closed whereby A. Schneider became the owner of the dray outfit and business, and good will of Chan. Bartholomew. Mr. Snyder is a hustler and no doubt will do well at the business. Just what Chan will do we have not learned, but hope he will decide to remain in Klemme.

If the editor of the Democrat is really looking for a sure thing of something for nothing he should apply for a position as lineman for a wireless telegraph company. While it may not be as lucretive, it will be more honorable than ratting for ads and job work in Klemme.

The Corwith Hustler give an extensive write-up in last week's paper of the growth and substancial improvements made during the year 1899. Over $40,000. worth of buildings which includes the fine $15,000. flour mill and elevator. It is a splendid showing for our sister town on the west.

If you want to buy a fine Ladies or Gents Gold or Silver Watch, go to Harr's. Prices reasonable.

SCHOOL NOTES

Our new class in Algebra are working well for beginners

The intermediate and primary rooms had valentine boxes on Wednesday.

There a e several pupils who will be demoted if they do not attend more regularly.

The attendance has been very good in the upper room in spite of the storm and cold

The pupils of the second grade are delighted with their new supplementary readers.

The sixth grade will finish their history with an examination on Thursday and will begin reviewing.

A great many of the pupils in the primary room who have been absent on account of sickness have returned. We are glad to see them.

We will have rhetorical exercises in the Grammar department Friday afternoon. Parents and directors are especially invited to be present.

The pupils of the intermediate room spent the last half hour Friday, in giving quotation from Longfellow. This recreation was enjoyed after the worries of an examination.

Through the efforts of the larger boys we are now able to put our flag out. We have been unable to find anyone with the required courage to go on the roof and put up our new rope until the school boys volunteered.

The teachers are working at a disadvantage without the course of study.

(The printers are hard at work on the Course of Study and it will be completed as soon as possible. Ed.)

COUNTY NEWS FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.

GOODELL GLEANINGS.

Mr. Bailey took a trip to Dows returning Monday.

Mrs. Pell Thompson, of Dows, is here visiting friends.

Mr. John Brisco was at Garner on business Monday.

Mrs. David Hunt has been quite ill but is now improving.

Boyd Shafer was visiting with friends in Klemme over Sunday.

Mr. Smith of Dows, visited his sister here last week, returning home Monday.

Wm. Christie has purchased the Dan Eldred property in the north part of town.

Quite a number from Goodell took in the play at the Belmond opera house Saturday night.

Mr. Samuel Wright and wife, of Garner, were here attending to business the latter part of last week.

The U. B. church people will give an entertainment, donation and supper at the opera house Saturday evening.

During a snowball battle the other day Arnold Plowman lost his watch and up to this writing has not succeeded in finding it.

J. E. Savogue had a window smashed and there might have been other damages but darkness interfered. They never do things by halves in our town.

Miss Ethel Elder closed her term of school with an entertainment. It was well patronized, and the proceeds were nearly $25 which will be applied upon the school library fund.

Dr. Gilbert sustained quite a severe injury the other day. He was thrown from the sleigh and the driver Bob Brisco, landed on top of him. It was a lucky escape from total annihilation.

ELL CENTER ITEMS

Valentines will soon be a thing of the past.

John Braund is deing chores for J. W Allen.

Mrs J. W. Allen has been under the doctors care for the last few days.

Clarance and Hazel Grosbeck were absent from school on account of sickness.

Myrle and John Braund and Ray Burman were visitors at Ell Center on Lincoln Day.

The Literary was not very well attended at the Center, Thursday evening, on account of the bad weather.

The dance at Mr. Wm. Yahn's would have been all right if the fiddlers would have put in an appearance.

Lincoln's birthday was celebrated at Ell Center. Miss Belt and the school joined in making a most interesting program.

Harry Burman has made another trip to Franklin county and always arranges so as to be away over Sunday. We wonder what this means.

A sleigh load of young people from near the Center went to Garner to church last Sunday evening to hear Rev. Hanscom picture to young men.

News came to Ernest Brand that his brother Aaron, who has been sick in the hospital at Creed, Colorado, was much better, and would be able to start for home in a few days.

We handle first class groceries and just a little cheaper, because we handle more of them.

GRUETZMACHER BROS.

GERMANTOWN.

Center School has new stove.

Plans are being made to remodel the interior of the Germantown church in the near future.

A District Sunday School and Epworth League convention of the Ger. M. E. church will be held in the Germantown church from the 6th to the 8th of March inclusive. Delegates from the whole Northwestern part of the state are expected.

There was a meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society held in the Ger. M. E. church Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 6th. Three letters from missionaries in foreign fields were read and the study for the month on the Thankoffering discussed. The next meeting will be held the second Tuesday in March. It is hoped that all members will attend. Visitors are always welcome.

GARNER.

Herman Schneider is at home for a few days.

Dr. Wallace was a business visitor at Belmond last Friday.

Herman Schleisenger, who has been confined to the house for about three weeks is now nearly well.

Miss Minnie Nicholson s now the efficient deputy clerk in the Co. Clerk's office at the court house.

District Court convenes next Monday, with Judge Smith on the bench. About sixty new cases are filed for the term.

The Thompson Comedy Co., concluded a three night engagement Wednesday evening, giving general satisfaction.

The young people of the Presbyterian church gave a social at the home of J. N. Sprole Friday evening of last week. A large number of young people were present and a delightful time is reported by all who were present.

Atty. Hughes of this place and ex-county Attorney Wood of Corwith, locked horns in Boone township before a justice and a jury last Saturday. The verdict of the jury split the amount and adjudged that each party pay half the costs.

Mr. Blackwell, who purchased the the Lamson livery and feed stable some time ago arrived with his family from Illinois, and are now comfortably settled in their home, lately purchased on the west side of Winfield Pollock.

Ex-Congressman Lucas, of Chamberlain S. D. and the father of Mrs. Russ Allred, is visiting at the home of his daughter, and on Sunday afternoon delivered an address to the Y. M. C. A. at the U. P. Church. He was greeted with a large audience.

Thursday was the coldest day that we have had this winter in these parts. The denizens on waking up in the morning found snow drifts as high as the door top or higher. The Klondyke abandoned its trip north on that day and the train crew staid at home.

LaFayette Miller, of Rochelle, Illinois, and a former resident of this place, is shaking hands with old friends in town. He reports his brother, C. D. Miller, who will be remembered as one of our popular barbers, is perusing a theological course and in a few months will be licensed to preach. C. D's many friends will be glad to hear of this.

STRANGE TALES TERSELY TOLD.

A young lady was spending her summer vacation in the country. "Uncle Rasmus" she said one day. "Is that chicken standing by the gate a Brama?" "No, said the old farmer, "that is a Leghorn." "How simple of me!" said the young lady. "I might have known that myself" I can see the horns on his ankles now.

A tramp noticing a doctor's sign on the front of a residence in a neighboring town, and supposing the doctor to be a gentleman, proceeded to the door and inquired of the lady, who met him at the door: "Would you be kind enough, dear lady, to give me some old pair of trousers discarded by the doctor?" She gave him the following answer: "I am sorry to say I can't—I am the doctor!"

The traveling man as a general rule is a pretty wise guy, but occasionally he finds his mate. Along last summer we remember being seated at the dinner table with four or five others, when one of them asked the waiter for some milk. The young lady brought it in an individual milk pitcher and placing it near his plate the gentleman remarked sarcastically: "Is that all you can give?" The answer came at once: "If I was as fresh as you I could give a quart;" whereat the rest of the dinner party didn't do a thing but split their sides with laughter.—Ex.

Recently Fighting Bob Evans attended church in one of the cities. The church was pretty well filled so Bob sauntered down the aisle until he came to a vacant pew and sat down. Pretty soon a man with a handsome woman came in and sat down in the same pew. The man stood it as long as he could and then taking a card from his pocket wrote thereon, "I pay $2500 per year for this pew," and handed the card to Bob. After reading it Bob wrote this reply: "You pay too damned much."

A Nebraska paper spins a story about a citizen named John Michis who has a son George who is very hard to get out of bed mornings. When called the boy has the habit of answering "Yes sir," and going to sleep again On one occasion last week John called the boy, got the usual "Yes sir," and then quietly slid upstairs, turned down the covers and gave him a lively spanking. It happened that on that night the hired girl had been given the boy's room. When the tumult was over John sat down behind the barn and drafted an apology to the hired girl.

"I had bronchitis every winter for years and no medicine gave me permanent relief till I began to take One Minute Cough Cure. I know it is the best cough medicine made." says J. Kointz, Corry, Pa. It quickly cures coughs, colds, croup, asthma, grippe and throat and lung troubles. It is the childrens favorite remedy. Cures quickly. J. L. Harr.

I Look 25 Years Younger

"I am now seventy-two years of age and my hair is as dark as it was twenty-five years ago. People say I look at least that much younger than I am. I would be entirely bald or snow-white if it were not for your Hair Vigor." — Mrs. Anna Lawrence, Chicago, Ill., Dec. 22, 1898.

Sea Ports.

The memory of man runneth not back of the time when seaport towns and cities did not exist, thrive and flourish. There is a new and promising one growing up down south which bids fair to soon enjoy great commerce. It is La Porte, at the head of Galveston Bay on the gulf coast of Texas. A magnificent natural land-locked harbor already exists and extensive docks, wharfs and terminals are being constructed. The government is to deepen Galveston Bay, affording a 26-foot channel into the splendid fresh water harbor bay of San Jacinto. As Newport News is to the Atlantic coast, and Duluth and Superior are to the inland seas, so La Porte is to be to the south.

A HAPPY VALENTINE.

If I could be a valentine,
I know what I would do
I'd get into an envelope
And travel straight to you.

And if the postman didn't know
Your name is Baby Dear
And where you live, I'd shake his bag
As soon as he was near.

And then with all my might I'd jump
And run across the street.
(I'm sure that he'd jump, too, could he find
A valentine had feet.)

I'd ring the bell and ring the bell
A minute and a half,
And when you came and saw 'twas I,
Oh, my, how we would laugh!

—Anna M. Hatt.

They say she is out of date in this end of the nineteenth century, but that is wrong. She may be more coy, more reticent, more elusive, but she is ill with us. On each St. Valentine's day she peeps from her casement window, either literally or figuratively, with just as enticing a glance; her smiles are no less alluring; her signs create fully as much havoc.

Perhaps she no longer pins her leaves to her pillow to tempt fate, or makes a pretense of drawing her fate from a bundle of names written upon slips of material paper—all that was but form at best. The Sprite of the Valentine knew well who was her fate without such expedients. And she knows it now.

The eyes of common mortals might be blinded, but her bright eyes looked clearly into the future and saw there the chained captive who reveled in his chains. She read some tender verses and smiled at its innocence—she who was all innocence herself, yet gifted with that prescient sense of prophecy or foreknowledge, against which the clumsy reason of mortal swain was as helpless as the wiles of an infant. She smiled and no mystic rite could be more potent. She gave one glance from beneath the witching fringe of her long lashes, and no other sorcery was needed. The same is true today.

Good St. Valentine was a martyr, they tell us, and some can see no propriety in naming this lovers' day for him; but to my mind the fitness is most striking. How many a tortured heart has gone to its martyrdom at the eventide of this day! Even escaping that, how many a soul has been placed upon the rack by the coquetry of some maiden sweet at this same crucial time! For the Valentine Sprite is true to her sex, in spite of the traditions that hem her in and fix her place as some meek captive awaiting the decree that shall send her rejoicing into whatever arms are stretched out to receive her.

Be not deceived. She has decided upon the arms long before, and they are held forth at her will. She may have spoken no word save of the coyest, but she has willed. Ah, how deluded are they who cast a pitying eye upon woman for her lack of the power to choose and to plead! Know ye not, my lords of creation, that by far the most frequently ye are the chosen and not the choosers? If she wills you to come you come. If she wills you to speak you speak, and, more than that, she has the added power to send you away empty if so her caprice decides.

This in the common life of every day. What, then, might be expected in the mystic time when love rules all? At least, Valentine Sprite holds royal sway. If she wills your missive flies to her. If she wills she even binds a snowy message to the wings of Mercury and bids him speed with it to her chosen valentine, for who shall say her nay? The Valentine Sprite mistakes not—whom she chooses him she holds.

Heretofore, my brothers, I have warned you, though the warnings were vain, but against this enchantress I cannot bid you steel yourself, for the soft witchery of her innocent smile has sealed my lips, and I know not whether this maiden with the childish grace and the woman's wiles be most a blessing or a snare to you. I can only tell you this—your struggles against her will amount to naught but your own complete captivity, for with each plunge you sink deeper the arrow that has pierced you.

This much of the mystery, however, I can reveal to you: Mortal maid is the Valentine Sprite until that fateful morning when the little winged god flies from chamber to chamber and touches sleeping eyes with the feather end of his arrow, then speeds him on his way before the white lids unclose in wonder and the sweet glances go forth with the wisdom that Cupid alone can give and each one is touched with the power of his arrow point. Mortal maid she is not from that hour until the going down of the sun, and man is utterly helpless against the subtle witchery of this mystic, love-created being who beckons him into Elysium.

And you, O youth, who scoff at the time-honored privilege of sending to the lady fair upon this day of days a plea from your heart, hidden and shrined within some dainty, perfumed nest of beauty, or who turn with a laugh from the memory picture of your great-great-grandfather buried deep in the lover's ecstasy and the poet's rapture, as he pens the words which shall be his heart message to his heart's desire, do not too lightly set aside the good old custom; at least, put it away with tender reverence, for the spirits of those olden rites are not to be flippantly consigned to oblivion. On every hand the Valentine Sprite uprises, an avenger for any slight, however small, which is offered to her patron saint.

In the midst of your scoffing you hear a whisper at your heart. You blush and sigh and frown, but you listen, and you feel the pressing of the arrow point.

SHE PEEPS FROM HER CASEMENT WINDOW.

"Love, love, be wholly mine;
Come and be my valentine!"

How did the music of it get into your brain? From that time forth you sigh and serve. But this is vengeance that the Valentine Sprite exacts. In the end you are left wailing in the solitude of your twentieth-century superiority:

"Love, love, be wholly mine;
Come and be my valentine!"

But it may not be.

While for you, spirit of manly love, with the reverence of tradition in your heart and the loyal longing in your soul, there is a kinder fate. The Valentine Sprite, with her dower of mystic wisdom, shall not beckon you but to taunt. In the far distance of the future years that bind you to her I hear the echo of a tender strain:

"Love, love, so wholly mine,
I am still thy valentine!"

CONGRESS.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 5.—Senator Caffery, of Louisiana, in discussing the Philippine question, advised turning the islands loose, "as soon as we can get rid of them." It would be better for them and "infinitely better for us." Bill providing form of government for Porto Rico was favorably reported. A bill was passed authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi at Dubuque.

HOUSE.

The democrats of the house continued their assaults upon the Philippine policy of the administration during the general debate upon the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill. Dinsmore, of Arkansas, and Clark, of Missouri vigorously opposed the retention of the islands.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 6.—The senate finance committee today reported a new section to the finance bill as follows: "That the provisions of this act are not intended to place any obstacles in the way of accomplishing international bimetallism, provided same be received by the concurrent action of the leading commercial nations of the world and at a ratio which shall insure the permanence of the relative value between gold and silver." Caffery concluded his speech on the Philippine question. Butler made a legal argument against the proposed suffrage amendment to the constitution of North Carolina. Pettus offered an amendment to the financial bill that it shall not be construed to affect the present legal tender of silver dollars. Chandler proposed an amendment making both the gold and silver dollars the unit of value.

HOUSE.

The Philippine question again occupied the attention of the house. The feature of the debate was the speech of Williams, of Mississippi, who presented an argument against annexation of the Philippines which attracted much attention. It was devoted almost entirely to the commercial aspects of the acquisition, holding that the absorption of the islands would be ultimately ruinous to the American producers of cotton, rice, tobacco, hemp and sugar.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 7.—Vest, of Missouri, proposed an amendment to the financial bill providing that the secretary of the treasury shall prepared $20,000,000 in treasury notes, to be known as "bond treasury notes," to be full legal tender and to be loaned by the secretary of the treasury to anybody who may deposit United States bonds for them, the dotes to bear the same interest as the bonds deposited. Depew, of New York, called attention to the remarks made a few days ago by Pettigrew, in which he said that Commissioner Schurman had tried to bribe the insurgents and failed. Depew said he had received a letter from Schurman, who stated the charge was absolutely without foundation. Pettigrew in reply said: "I charge this fact, that this question being withheld, and what information is being sent to the United States is garbled; and I charge that we attacked an ally and made a compact with slavery." Turner, of Washington, spoke against the pending financial bill. Allen, in discussing the money question said it was his "solemn conviction that it is the purpose of framers of the senate financial bill forever to perpetuate the national debt."

HOUSE.

The house resumed consideration of the diplomatic consular appropriation bill. Shafroth, of Colorado, spoke in favor of mediation by the United States in the South African war. He said 3,000 Dutch native-born residents of Guiana were petitioning for relief from grievances similar to those complained of by the British in South Africa. Grosvenor, of Ohio, suggested that a commission of twenty-five members at salaries of $20,000 each be appointed to roam over the earth to discover where wrongs were committed and report to the house in order that the United States might go to war every time the kin of any of our constituents were oppressed. After several minor amendments were adopted the bill passed.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 8.—Allen and Cockrell made addresses on the pending financial bill. A large number of bills of minor importance were passed.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 9.—The senate transacted only routine business and adjourned to enable members to attend the obsequies of General Lawton. Allison presented credentials of Gear. Jones, of Arkansas, introduced a free silver coinage substitute for the pending currency bill.

HOUSE.

Sulzer, of New York, introduced a resolution declaring the Nicaragua canal bill should be immediately passed, regardless of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, and that the latter should be rejected as in conflict with the Monroe doctrine and revive the lapsed Clayton-Bulwer treaty. At a night session thirty-five pension bills were passed.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 10.—A resolution expressing sympathy with the Boers in their struggle against Great Britain and urging mediation on the part of the United States between the belligerants was adopted by the senate today in a fit of temporary aberration of attention. The resolution was offered by Allen and went through without attracting the slightest comment from any one of the dozen or more senators present. A minute later, however, at the request of the chair Allen consented to a reconsideration of the vote by which the resolution was passed and the incident passed amid much quiet laughter. The financial debate was continued during the day.

ANGLO-PORTUGUESE ALLIANCE.

Offensive and Defensive Agreement Said to Have Been Reached.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—There exists today what practically amounts to an offensive and defensive alliance between Great Britain and Portugal. The Associated Press is able to state that the real reason for Great Britain's tremendous military activity is a determination to convince Portugal that it is advisable to meet Great Britain's demands regarding the ports essential for carrying on the Boer war, namely, Delagoa Bay and Beira, and at the same time, having secured Portugal's assent to every proposition made, be in a position to support that country against an united European opposition. No word of this is printed or hinted at in London, but the Associated Press learns that intense pressure is being brought to bear on Portugal by continental powers to prevent her from giving aid to the British. Portugal's minister at London, Senor Pinto de Soveral, is almost as much an Englishman as a Portuguese, and his government is only too willing to do everything, far beyond the bounds of neutrality, to help Great Britain to protect Portugal. Lord Salisbury is determined this shall be done, and is counting on the co-operation of his countrymen to put the nation on a footing to defy European opposition. He has this week taken definite measures regarding the afore-mentioned ports that can only be described as daring. Portugal, bending to the modicum of coercion, and convinced that Great Britain is able to uphold her, has acquiesced until there practically exists to-day an alliance of the strongest fibre between Great Britain and Portugal. Yet, for reasons of diplomacy, nothing could be more quickly officially denied in London or Lisbon.

Nervous Women

are ailing women. When a woman has some female trouble she is certain to be nervous and wretched.

With many women the monthly suffering is so great that they are for days positively insane, and the most diligent efforts of ordinary treatment are unavailing.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

comes promptly to the relief of these women. The letters from women cured by it proves this. This paper is constantly printing them.

The advice of Mrs. Pinkham should also be secured by every nervous woman. This costs nothing. Her address is Lynn, Mass.

MILLIONS OF WOMEN USE CUTICURA SOAP exclusively for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and healing red, rough, and sore hands, in the form of baths for annoying irritations, inflammations, and chafings, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes, for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, and especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used it to use any other, especially for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp, and hair of infants and children. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odors. No other medicated or toilet soap ever compounded is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, viz., TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, the BEST skin and complexion soap, the BEST toilet and BEST baby soap in the world.

WHAT THE LAW DECIDES.

Inherent power of courts created by the constitution to enforce respect and obedience by punishing contempt without a jury trial is held, in Carter v Com. (Va.), 45 L. R. A. 310, to be beyond the power of the legislature to take away.

Statutory right of a stockholder to inspect the books, documents and records of a corporation is sustained in Weihenmayer vs. Bitner (Md.), 45 L. R. A. 446, even when he is a business rival of the corporation and seeks information to be used to its injury and loss.

A surety who has paid a judgment against himself and his cosureties on account of the principal's debt is held in Merchants' National bank vs. Great Falls Opera House company (Mont.) 45 L. R. A. 285, to be entitled to the assignment of it as a basis for enforcing contribution from his cosureties.

But in re Steinway (N. Y.), 45 L. R. A. 461, the court, sustaining the common-law right of a stockholder to inspect the books of the corporation goes no farther than to say he has a right to inspect them at a proper time and place and for a proper purpose. With these cases there is an extensive note reviewing the other authorities on the subject.

Combination of insurance companies for the purpose of maintaining rates is held, in Aetna Ins. Co. vs. Commonwealth (Ky.) 45 L. R. A. 335, not to be an indictable offense at common law, even if it constitutes a void contract, but a combination of insurers to fix prices is held, in state vs. Firemen's Fund Ins. Co. (Mo.), 45 L. R. A. 363, to be a violation of the Missouri statute, which expressly prohibits any such combination to regulate premiums.

FOUND A GOLD MINE!

It Was in His Poultry Yard.

People in the neighborhood of Creston Iowa, are amazed at the number of eggs that this man drives to market with. When asked what was the cause of his hens being so prolific, he stated it was all in a certain compound he was using, that kept his hens in good condition and furnished them with the proper stimulus to egg production. American Houltry mixture is the name of it, and is made by American Mfg. Co. Terre Haute, Ind. Every man in the poultry business is interested in the health of his hens and their laying capacity. In the eggs lie his profits This mixture is guaranteed to increase the production of eggs 100 per cent or money refunded. It will do more than three times as much as the same amount of any other compound. It is concentrated in form and the result of years of practical experience in the poultry business. There is absolutely no doubt as to what it will do, and you are invited to try it at the expense of the company. Send $1.00 for sample package and if it doesn't do the work you get your money back. This is fair and is made to induce practical poultrymen to give it a trial. It is also a sure preventive of such diseases as the terrible cholera and roup which create such havoc in all parts of the country. It acts directly on the craw and gizzard and is a thorough scientific preparation.

The manufacturers guarantee every package or refund purchase money. If your druggist don't sell American Poultry Mixture, he's behind the age. In that case order direct from American Manufacturing Co., Terre Haute, Ind.

From recently published letters of Sir Alfred Milner it seems that on Nov. 30 of last year he wrote to Mr. Chamberlain about "the colossal armaments of the Transvaal" and described the Boer republic as "a huge arsenal." The warning came too late and the world, as a consequence, has seen during the closing year of the century two little republics successfully confronting the greatest empire of modern times. The future historian of the Transvaal war will have some interesting materials at hand when he comes to narrate this struggle almost without a parallel in history.

Henry D. Clayton of Alabama has introduced in congress a resolution providing for the turning over of Cuba to the Cubans on the coming Fourth of July. The date is not well chosen There is no need for spectacular performance of what the United States is pledged to do. By the terms of the treaty of Spain this country is bound to remain in control in Cuba until the coming April, in order to give Spanish residents a chance to straighten up their affairs and leave the island if they so desire. When that date arrives Cuba should, as a matter of course, be turned over to the Cubans in fulfillment of a solemn pledge made by the American government in entering upon the war with Spain.

It is curious how a conviction tends to become deep and strong by reason of the fact that it is entertained. It seems to possess the power of the seed to send out shoots and become rooted in the mind, and ultimately to yield to its fruitage. Indeed, except for those rare natures that have the power on the instant of coming to the firmest decision, the element of time is an important factor in the strength of our convictions. While we are completely occupied in other things our beliefs and decisions are unconsciously growing, and we find, perhaps to our surprise, that the opinion of a month or two ago has become a controlling conviction. Parents are often discouraged because noble ideas appear to arouse so little response in the inner lives of their children. But there is no reason for discouragement. If they will recall the time factor in the formation of their own characters, they will have an abounding faith in the gradual deepening of convictions through the processes of life. The good seed that falls on good ground needs only to be let alone to produce a good harvest.

Iowa News

THE dry goods store of John H. Taft & Co., at Cedar Rapids, was entered a few nights ago by burglars, who stole $3,000 worth of silks and satins, and escaped without leaving any clue to their identity. It was evidently the work of professionals. The robbers took nothing but the best goods, throwing the cheap silks to one side. Neither did they take any of the remnants.

AUGUST WALLINE, a well-to-do farmer living four miles east of Rowan, was gored to death by a vicious bull. He was a man about 38 years of age and leaves a wife and three or four children to mourn his loss. He had just purchased the animal a few days before. This is the second person killed in that locality this winter by vicious bulls. Mrs. Isaacson was killed about two months ago.

REPRESENTATIVE HULL, of Iowa, chairman of the house committee on military affairs, has introduced a bill giving the adjutant general of the army the rank of major general. It also provides for one chaplain for each regiment, regular and volunteer, and for the appointment of a major general (retired) from those who served with credit in the war with Spain, not above the rank of brigadier general.

IOWA postmasters were appointed last week as follows; Butler, Keokuk county, C. J. Kennell, vice E. A. Speck, resigned; Froelich, Clayton county, W. H. Haeffner, vice J. H. Spiles, resigned. Rural free delivery service will be established at Springville, Linn county, on March 15, with one carrier; length of route is twenty miles, area covered twenty-one square miles, population to be served 775; carrier, Lemuel K. Smith.

THE board of control has received details concerning the fire which destroyed the industrial building, valued at $8,000, at the Mt. Pleasant asylum. About $2,000 worth of machinery and a $2,000 stock were destroyed. There is now absolutely no place for the inmates to work except in the field in the summer. Since work is necessary to the recovery of the insane, the board is urging upon the legislature the necessity of making an appropriation to replace the destroyed structure.

AT a meeting of the state geological board, A. F. Bain, assistant geologist, who is in charge of the offices of the department at the state house, was granted a leave of six months without salary, and H. F. Wilder, of the West Des Moines high school, was chosen to occupy the position during the interim. Mr. Bain, it is understood, will interest himself in the zinc proposition at Dubuque. He wished to resign from his place as assistant geologist, but the board dissuaded him from that plan.

A FEW days ago fire broke out in the extensive but unused ice houses belonging to W. J. Young & Co., at Clinton, and despite the hard work of the entire fire department, the fire was not extinguished for several hours. The temperature was ten below zero, and water was thrown with difficulty. Thomas Divine, one of the firemen, had his feet so badly frozen that he is in a dangerous condition. Other firemen had their faces frozen. The ice houses were near the lumber district, and the fire was kept from spreading.

THE seventh biennial session of the Pioneer Lawmakers' Association of Iowa closed at Des Moines a few days ago after a very interesting meeting. Officers were elected for the ensuing year and visits of respect were paid to Governor Shaw and to the senate and house. In both chambers impressive ceremonies were held in honor of the visitors. The new officers elected for the coming biennial period are: President, Hon. T. S. Parvin; vice-presidents, Samuel McNutt, F. M. Knoll, L. L. Ainsworth, Charles Weare, D. Anderson, L. Todhunter, W. S. Dungan and L. W. Ross; secretary, D. A. Poorman; assistant secretary, E. M. Steadman; executive committee, Isaac Brandt, R. S. Finkbine and G. L. Godfrey.

ALFRED B. HUGHES, about 30 years of age, en route from Burlington to Fremont, Nebraska, committed suicide at St. Bernard's hospital in Council Bluffs by shooting himself through the head a few minutes after he had been taken to the institution by Rev. Father Smythe, pastor of St. Xavier's church. Hughes got off the train at Council Bluffs and appealed to the priest for protection. Rev. Smythe took him in a carriage to the hospital, intending to turn the case over to the insane commissioners. The young man, while being conducted to the insane ward of the institution by one of the attendants, suddenly drew a revolver from his overcoat pocket, and before the attendant could interfere, sent a bullet crashing through his brain.

FRANK STOHM was found guilty in the district court at Clinton of assault with attempt to commit manslaughter. Within twenty-five hours a jury was secured, the case tried and a verdict rendered.

JUDGE E. P. SEEDS, of Iowa, has been appointed clerk of the house committee on merchant marine and fisheries, at $2,000 per annum, to succeed Blumsberk, who has been appointed the committee stenographer.

FIRE destroyed the high school building at Allerton one day last week, at a loss of $25,000, with $7,500 insurance. The school was in session, but all the pupils escaped without injury. They lost their books and wraps, however.

L. F. SMITH and E. W. Brooks, acting as a committee appointed to examine the accounts of the State Agricultural Society, has filed its report with the governor. It finds a balance of $16,397.74 to the society on Jan. 1, 1900.

THE list of possible candidates for attorney general now includes H. M. Remley, of Anamosa, Jacob Sims, of Council Bluffs; W. C. Mullan, of Waterloo; Thomas A. Cheshire, of Des Moines; Charles A. Clark, of Cedar Rapids, and J. W. Hallam, of Sioux City.

THE majority of the eighty members of the Grace church choir at Cedar Rapids have decided to strike because of the dispute which culminated in the dismissal of the choir-master by Rector Green. Only about a dozan will remain. Dr. Green announces that he has engaged Rev. Charles R. Hodge, formerly curate and musical director of St. Mark's church at Grand Rapids, Mich., to take a similar position in Grace church.

STATE AUDITOR MERRIAM, according to a dispatch received at Des Moines, is improving gradually and fairly satisfactorily to his family and friends at San Francisco. The matter of returning to Iowa is already being considered. But owing to the difference in climate, however, the physicians insist that he shall not leave California for some time. His friends hope to be able to announce that he will return to Iowa within three or four weeks.

THE Fort Dodge Beet Sugar Company, with a capital stock of $40,000, has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The organization is the result of a movement that has been in progress in that community for several months. A large number of contracts have been let for beets to be used in 1901 and the financing of the enterprise is well progressed. It includes some of the most prominent business men in that community.

THE Spanish gun given by the navy department to the city of Boone, to be used for decorative purposes, has arrived, according to a recent dispatch. Contrary to general expectations, it is not such a big gun, that is, it does not exceed over ten feet in length, but is bulky out of proportion to its length, as it weighs, according to the freight bills, about 15,000 pounds. It is an 8.5 cast iron, muzzle-loading rifled howitzer from the Estella battery defenses of Santiago de Cuba. In presenting this gun the navy department says it is for decorative purposes only, and the department disclaims any responsibility should it be fired off.

JOHN FISHER, a Sioux City gambler, who was shot and instantly killed at El Reno, Oklahoma, a few days ago, after exchanging nine shots with Harry Dunbar, was a fugitive from justice in Sioux City, for whom the sheriff has been searching for the past six years. This is the first known of his whereabouts. His former home was at Fort Dodge, and his brother has gone to bring the remains of the young man to his former home. Fisher had been convicted of robbery and was sentenced to serve two years in the penitentiary. The case was appealed, but the lower court was affirmed, and then Fisher jumped his bond, which had been signed by his mother.

WILLIAM HUFF, an aged gentleman of West Union, was found dead, in a cave three and a half miles east of that place and the circumstances of his death are shrouded in mystery. Huff, who is 65 years of age, disappeared from his home last Christmas morning and since that time a diligent search had failed to discover any trace of his whereabouts. On the evening prior to his disappearance he had a quarrel with his son-in-law over some trifling matter, and in the morning it was found that he had disappeared. It was the general opinion that, smarting from real or fancied wrongs, the old gentleman had left the country. A few days ago, however, his dead body was discovered in a cave on his farm east of the city. The body was lying about sixteen feet inside the entrance of the cave on a large flat rock. When found, the body was lying on its back, with cap and mittens still on, one hand thrown carelessly over the chest, and every indication that death had come peacefully to the old gentlemen. There was no frost in the cave and the body was not frozen, which dispels the theory that he had frozen to death.

CONGRESS.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 12.—The financial bill was discussed by Elkins of West Virginia, Wolcott of Colorado, and Butler of North Carolina. Wolcott pleaded for bimettalism, but declared that Bryanism was its worst enemy. A large number of bills of minor importance were passed, among them one for the preservation of the frigate Constitution.

HOUSE.

An important bill was passed by the house to-day which makes universally applicable the law that now permits the transit of goods in bond through certain ports of the United States. Under it goods in bond can be shipped through any portion of the territory of the United States to foreign ports. It is principally designed to give the transportation companies of the United States a share of the trans-continental trade to the Orient.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 13.—Allison to-day delivered an address in favor of the pending finance bill. In the course of his argument he presented his answers to the points raised against the bill. Jones of Nevada declared the bill was vicious, conferring too great power on national banks and fastening the country to a gold currency.

HOUSE.

Resolutions on the death of Congressman Chickering of New York were adopted, and as a further mark of respect the house adjourned.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 14.—A test vote was had on the financial bill to-day. Chandler proposed an amendment to the committee amendment which authorized the president to appoint commissioners to any international conference called by the United States or any other country to arrange a bimetallic agreement. The amendment was defeated, 45 to 25.

HOUSE.

The house took up the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill in committee of the whole. Hemenway, of Indiana, in charge, explained the bill. Payne, of New York, floor leader of the majority, gave notice that he would call up the Porto Rican bill Monday.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 15.—The senate committee on military affairs to-day reported favorably and unanimously on Representative Hull's bill, to create a military post at Des Moines. This action of the committee assures the early passage of the bill in the senate and the favorable attitude of the war department indicates that it will meet the approval of the president. The senate substitute for the house currency bill was passed to-day by a vote of 46 to 29. Prior to the final passage of the bill, amendments were considered under the ten minute rule. Only two of these amendments were adopted, one offered by the finance committee keeping the door open to international bimetallism, and one by Nelson, of Minnesota, providing for national banks with $25,000 capital in towns of not more than 4,000 inhabitants.

HOUSE.

The house completed 26 of the 124 pages of the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill without amendment. Wheeler of Kentucky introduced a resolution asking that the secretary of state be directed to inform the house if Charles E. Macrum, as consul of the American government at Pretoria, informed the state department that his official mail had been opened and read by the British censor at Durban; also in regard to the secret alliance between the United States and Great Britain. The resolution was referred to the foreign relations committee.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 16.—McEnery, of Louisiana opposed the permanent acquisition of the Philippine islands and believed they should be relinquished. Stewart advocated the admission of the products of any of the island possessions of the United States free of duty. Bill permitting a government for the territory of Hawaii was read.

HOUSE.

Legislative appropriation bill was again under consideration in committee of the whole. The civil service law was under discussion for some time and by a vote of 75 to 67 the appropriation for the civil service commission was defeated.

HOUSE.

Washington, Feb. 17.—The house passed without division the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, after having it under consider cons'deration four days. Chairman Hepburn, of the house committee on inter-state and foreign commerce, submitted the report of the committee in favor of the Hepburn bill for constructing the Nicaragua canal.

APPEAL TO HIGHEST TRIBUNAL.

Kentucky Republicans Want a Decision From the Supreme Court.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 16.—Attorney H. B. Macoy, with ex-Governor Bradley and other attorneys interested in the Kentucky contested election cases appeared before the United States Circuit Judge Taft in chambers and filed notice of an appeal from the decision rendered by the latter on Friday afternoon. The appeal will be taken direct to the United States supreme court. The petition for appeal merely states that Judge Taft erred in declaring that jurisdiction did not lie in the federal court and it was solely upon this ground that appeals will be taken. When Macoy appeared before Judge Taft he had with him several other petitions which were brought by the other minor state officials. The prayer of each is the same. Judge Taft examined them all and allowed the appeal in each.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 16.—The clash between the democratic and republican branches of the government was emphasized last night by the prison officials releasing John Seals, a Louisville convict, on a pardon issued by Governor Beckham. Douglas Hays, a Knott county convict, recently pardoned by Governor Taylor, is still in confinement, the prison officials refusing to recognize Taylor as governor.

BUBONIC PLAGUE.

Situation in Manila Becomes Serious—51 Cases Reported, With 31 Deaths.

MANILA, Feb. 19.—Out of a total of 51 cases of suspected bubonic plague reported, 42 have proved to be genuine, and 32 deaths resulted, half of them being Chinamen. There were 12 cases during the past week, mostly within the walled city, and a hundred inspectors, under the superintendence of Major Edie, health officer, are enforcing the sanitary regulations. Thirty inspectors are Chinamen, who have been furnished by the Chinese merchants. The health department census shows the population of Manila to be about 190,000, including 31,000 Chinese.

Fighting at Colesburg.

PRETORIA, Feb. 17.—An official dispatch from Colesberg says that fighting was resumed on Tuesday, February 13, and that the British had sixty killed and wounded and lost eighty captured. The federal forces had no casualties during the fight.

Two-thirds of the crime of London is committed between the hours of 3 p. m. on Saturdays and 9 a. m. on Monday.

Barnacles on Ocean Cables.

The recent investigations for cable laying in the Pacific ocean have revealed the fact that if not upon rock bottom they become encrusted with seaweed heavy enough to break them. This is like dyspepsia which grows until it breaks down the health. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will cure it, as well as indigestion, liver and kidney troubles.

"Deeds Are Better Than Words."

What does Hood's Sarsaparilla do? The answer comes full-throated from a gigantic chorus of healthy men and happy women. "It does just what it claims to do." It purifies the blood as nothing else can. The number of those who answer thus is legion and their sentiment is unanimous.

Kidney Trouble—"Grip left me with severe pains in my back and kidneys. Could not walk without support. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and was soon relieved. Am also cured of catarrh and indigestion." W. A. Reed, 17 Mowry Avenue, East Providence, R. I.

"I had a terrible cold and could hardly breathe. I then tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and it gave me immediate relief. I don't believe there is a cough remedy in the world anywhere near as good."—W. C. Layton, Sidell, Ill., May 29, 1899.

Cures Night Colds

How will your cough be tonight? Worse, probably. For it's first a cold, then a cough, then bronchitis or pneumonia, and at last consumption. Coughs always tend downward. It's first the throat and then the lungs. They don't naturally tend to get well. You have to help Nature a little.

You can stop this downward tendency any time by taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Then take it tonight. You will cough less and sleep better, and by tomorrow at this time you will be greatly improved.

You can get a small bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, now, for 25 cents. For hard coughs, bronchitis, asthma, and the croup, the 50 cent size is better. For chronic cases, as consumption, and to keep on hand, the $1.00 size is most economical.

HIS WORD OF HONOR.

A Tale of the Blue and the Gray.

BY E. WERNER.

CHAPTER IX.—(Continued.)

"So you have reached this point of success!" Maxwell continued, in his dry way. "Yes, my dear Will, it doesn't always answer to run one's head against a wall; this time the masonry remained firm. You have tangible proof of it, since your progress is impeded. You were raging up and down like a caged lion."

"Do you want to mock me even in this terrible situation?" cried Roland, impetuously. "You do not know how I was disarmed or what it is to meet with base treachery in the house where one seeks happiness and love."

"Didn't I warn you against this Edward, though I knew him only from your description? He was traveling when I called on the Harrisons with you—luckily! Had I had the honor of his personal acquaintance, the whole plan would have been impossible. I pass here for the eminently respectable Doctor Blackwood and, as that worthy man, have been received with the utmost courtesy. Were it known that instead of medicine I was engaged in the iron business at present, the courtesy would probably end promptly—on both sides! I shall shoot this noble Mr. Harrison with the utmost composure if he takes it into his head to enter the corridor. Besides, Ralph is mounting guard at the outside door, to which fortunately a second key was found, and will give us a sign if danger is approaching."

"But, at least, tell me how it was possible for you to accomplish all this in a single half hour, for you cannot have been here longer. You went to the outposts?"

"Where Lieutenant Davis had again created an entirely unnecessary alarm. There is no appearance of fever. Two cases of sunstroke, which were not even severe, and will probably terminate favorably. I've had the men removed to the hospital and sent a report to the colonel. Davis' introduction obtained for me the loan of a suit of civilian's clothes from the owner of the adjoining plantation, and, as I wanted to profit by the beautiful afternoon and my leave of absence, I rode to Springfield."

The accompaniment to this story, told in the most matter-of-fact tone, was the low, harsh grating of the file, which the speaker was diligently using. The whole affair was thoroughly characteristic of John Maxwell. Any one else would have done everything in his power to keep his friend from such a venture, and, when all failed, would at least have been anxious and troubled about him. John did neither. He considered the former useless, the latter superfluous; but, without wasting another word, he rode straight into the jaws of danger after his man and considered it the simplest and most natural thing in the world.

William stood close by the window, breathlessly watching the work of liberation, as well as the dim light of the room permitted. He could do nothing to help.

"Have you talked with Florence?" he asked. "Does she know your plan? She is now alone at her father's death bed—alone with the scoundrel who betrayed me!"

"Hardly, for I have forbidden him to enter the sick chamber; and besides, he has a visitor—the magistrate from the city, who was summoned here for the wedding. They are in a hurry, it must be admitted. Mr. Harrison wished, under any circumstances, to become a Benedict today."

"The magistrate? So he has really come? I should like to wring his neck!"

"You will please refrain from that," said Maxwell, reprovingly. "Mr. Thompson is a good friend of mine, whom I hold in great esteem. It was he who originated the peerless idea of considering me Doctor Blackwood. I won't have his neck wrung on any account, and it would be very impractical on your part. A justice is an extremely important character. For instance, he is absolutely necessary at your wedding."

"My wedding?" repeated William, in amazement. "What do you mean?"

"Why, I think the best plan will be to wind up the business on the spot. You want to marry under any circumstances. The bride, the magistrate and the witnesses are all here, so I don't see what is to prevent you except this confounded iron grating, which I shall finally cut through. If Florence is your wife, you can take her with you to some place of security, then your amiable cousin can keep house here as he chooses. He can't wholly ruin the plantation or carry off the buildings; and, as soon as the war is over, you can assert your wife's claim."

"But, John, have you gone daft? Such a plan in the house where Edward rules and will summon all the servants to his aid the instant we appear. He did so just now, at the time of my arrest."

"Pshaw, the servants! They are only negroes, and not one will lift his hand against us as soon as we say we are officers in the Union army. The fellows are constantly coming in throngs to seek protection with us. You were not known to them, or else they were afraid of Captain Wilson and Harrison. The servants are not to be feared. I'll undertake to deal with the justice and his companion. So no one is left except your beloved future relative—and he must be made harmless."

THE FILE HAD WORKED UNWEARIEDLY.

"You mean that we are to attack him in his room?"

"No; that is too uncertain, and will create an unnecessary stir in the house. I have a better plan. As soon as you are at liberty, Ralph shall announce, apparently in great trepidation, that his young mistress has suddenly disappeared. He has looked for her in vain. Of course, she can be only in one place. Harrison will rush here as fast as possible to frustrate the attempt at liberation, and we shall have him in our hands. Then he can occupy the place which he so kindly selected for you, and you can use his marriage contract—the simplest exchange possible."

"But that is a partial deception," replied William. "Am I secretly, craftily, to steal a right which was promised me openly in the presence of all the world? Am I to urge Florence to a marriage in this terrible hour which robs her of a father—"

"Stop, Will! My patience is being exhausted!" Maxwell angrily interrupted. "Don't bother me again with your German slowness and stupidity, or I'll leave you behind bolts and bars. One can't lead good fortune straight to your arms. You must first inspect it on all sides—subject it to a critical examination—to ascertain whether it is thoroughly ideal and free from earthly dross; and meanwhile the light, airy thing flutters out of your hands. In short, do you want to marry Florence or not?"

"Of course I do. But—"

"Very well, then, the matter is settled. Leave the rest to me. True, it's abominable to expect a best man first to drag the bridegroom from behind so many iron bars, but you must have some unusual circumstance connected with it. One thing more: Of course you have no weapons."

"Should I have been captured otherwise? I certainly would not have surrendered with arms in my hands."

"I anticipated that and concealed two pistols about me. There, now I've finished. Try your strength and see if you can tear out the grating."

The file had worked unweariedly all the time, had cut through the larger portion of the grating and loosened the rest, but the iron still held. William tugged and shook in vain, and there was no more time to lose. But the consciousness of danger lent the young man unnatural strength. After a few unsuccessful efforts he again seized the grating and, with a last, violent struggle, wrenched it from its fastenings. The opening was made; and, after a few anxious moments, Roland had forced his way through, and was standing in the corridor beside his friend.

"Here!" said the latter, laconically, handing him a revolver and grasping a second pistol himself. "Now I'll instruct Ralph."

William uttered a sigh of relief when he found himself free and felt the weapon in his hand.

"I thank you, John!" he cried enthusiastically, after his retreating friend. "You are right. We two will rule the whole household."

"Yes, that is just to your taste!" returned Maxwell, tartly. "This time we really must run our heads against the wall, and if it happens to stand firmer than we expect, it will cost us our lives. You have arranged matters so that we have no choice. But keep quiet! Harrison may come at any moment; the fighting will begin, and—you will play the principal role again."

CHAPTER X.

Meanwhile the justice and his clerk were seated at a well-spread table in the dining-room, which also looked out upon the garden. Edward could not send the gentlemen, who had taken the long ride in vain, back to the city immediately; so he had invited them to dinner. Mr. Thompson could not find words enough to express his regret and sympathy for the sorrow overhanging the household, but he saw no reason why he should not have a comfortable meal on that acount. He thought it perfectly natural that Edward should excuse himself and remain in the drawing-room. No one could feel offended with the grief-stricken nephew, but he himself discussed all the more eagerly the good things set before him, and was ably supported by his clerk.

The old gentleman only regretted Doctor Blackwood's absence, and admired the sense of duty which would not permit him even to appear at dinner. He was just giving his factotum a discourse concerning this distinguished physician, at the same time helping himself to a large piece of roast meat. His factotum listened most dutifully and took a still larger slice, when the subject of the conversation suddenly entered.

"Ah, there you are, Doctor Blackwood!" cried the judge. "Sit down. Unfortunately you have come a little late. We have had the roast served."

The doctor bowed in the most charming manner, and signed to the servant, who had just brought in the dishes, to leave the room.

"Thank you. I am very sorry to disturb you, but there is a business matter to be settled, which admits of no delay."

"A business affair? Is there a will to be made?"

"No, on the contrary, the matter concerns a wedding."

Mr. Thompson dropped his knife and fork and stared at the speaker in the utmost astonishment.

"The ceremony is put off. Mr. Harrison told me himself that he was compelled to defer it for the present."

"Certainly, and he will probably do so altogether; but another person has taken his place—Mr. William Roland."

"What? What did you call him?"

"William Roland. The circumstances have entirely changed, and unfortunately I have not time to explain them to you in detail. But, in the name of the betrothed couple, I beg of you to perform the wedding ceremony at once."

The magistrate leaned back in his chair, assuming a dignified attitude and a solemn, official manner.

(To be continued.)

It is impossible that an ill-natured man can have a public spirit; for how should he love ten thousand men who has never loved one.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON VIII, FEB. 25—LUKE IV: 16-30—JESUS REJECTED.

Golden Text—He Came Unto His Own, and His Own Received Him Not—John I:11—Second Year of the Ministry of Christ.

16. "Nazareth, where he had been brought up." He came to preach now among those who had known him from his youth. His family were in moderate circumstances. "As his custom was," all his life long, "he went into the synagogue," a building that took the place of our modern church. "And stood up for to read," as was usual when reading from the law.

17. "And there was delivered unto him the book." In the form of a roll, or double roll, taken from the sacred chest behind the pulpit. Rolls like this were found in the ruins of Pompeii, and hundreds of them are in the museum at Naples. "Of the prophet Esaias." The Greek form for Isaiah. "And . . . found the place." Not necessarily any appointed lesson, but the passage he wanted. "Where it was written." In Isa. 61: 1, 2. The quotation follows somewhat closely the Greek translation.

18. "The Spirit of the Lord." Jehovah, the eternal, almight God. "Because he hath anointed me." Set apart, divinely appointed, as kings and priests were by the ceremony of anointing. "Preach the gospel." Good news. Good spell, i. e., story; or God, which is short for "good," and spell. "To the poor." "In Scriptural language the poor represent all who are destitute of good necessary to their perfection and happiness, especially those who feel their want and are disconsolate."—John Mason. "To heal the broken-hearted," overwhelmed with sorrow for their sins, or their losses and sufferings. "To preach" (a different word from preach in the first part of the verse), to herald, to proclaim aloud to all. "Deliverance to the captives." To all captives, whether in material or in spiritual captivity. "Recovering of sight to the blind." There are three kinds of blindness—Blindness of the body. Mental blindness—ignorance, low ideals. Moral blindness—ignorance of God, of righteousness, of heaven, of the possibilities of the soul, of highest hopes and joys of true life. Jesus came to cure them all. "To set at liberty them that are bruised." The wounds and bruises caused by sin, wounds of the conscience, wounds of the heart, crushed by heavy and hopeless burdens, the victims of outrage and oppression.

19. "To preach (herald, the same as the second preach in v. 18) the acceptable year of the Lord." The year or era in which God has been pleased, for the best of reasons, to bring these blessings to the people. God's chosen opportunity had come.

20. "And he closed the book." By rolling up the roll. Notice how the quotation stops when it comes to the fearful sentence, "and the day of vengeance of our God." "And . . . gave it . . . to the minister." The attendant. "And sat down." "The habitual position of a Jewish teacher."—Professor Vincent. So that his sitting down was the signal that he was about to speak.

21. "This day is this scripture fulfilled." This prophecy was originally spoken to the exiles in Babylon. They were poor, oppressed, broken-hearted, away from home, blind to the goodness and promises of God.

22. "And all bear him witness." Both friends and enemies. Of the facts there could be no doubt. "And wondered at the gracious words." They were indeed marvelous, beyond any event in the history of the world, "full of grace and truth. "Is not this Joseph's son?" The question with some might be one of wonder and admiration that their fellow-citizen could attain such a high position. With others it would contain a sneer at the stupendous pretensions of a common village carpenter.

23. "Ye will surely say." Jesus shows that he knows their thoughts. "This proverb." Greek, parable, "parable," "denoting any kind of figurative discourse, whether a complete narrative or a short sentence couched in an image, like proverbs."—Godel. "Physician, heal thyself." Prove by healing your own sickness that you can heal the diseases of others. "Whatsoever heard done in Capernaum." Jesus had only the December before healed a nobleman's son at Capernaum. "Do also here in thy country." Let us see some of your miracles.

24. "No prophet is accepted in his own country." A general truth, the statement of a common experience.

26. "Sarepta." Greek form of Zarephath. On the shore of the Mediterranean, near Sidon.

27. "And many lepers." (For this story, see 2 Kings 5: 1-14.) Leprosy was then and still is very common in Palestine. "Eliseus." Greek form of Elisha.

28. "And all . . . were filled with wrath." The tense (aorist) implies a sudden outburst. "Truth embitters those whom it does not enlighten."

29. "And rose up." Broke up the service irreverently and rushed forth.—F., F., and B. "And thrust him." With violence. They were a furious mob. "Unto the brow of the hill." As the Roman mob led unpopular persons to the top of the Tarpeian Rock and thrust them down.

30. "But he passing through the midst." It is not said that this was miraculous. It seems at times that the divinity within Jesus shone forth with awe-producing power. "Went his way." He returned once more several months later to give them one more opportunity to repent. But they then, as now, madly threw away their blessings, and, like swine, trampled the divine pearls under their feet.

LAND POSSESSED BY DEVILS.

Evil Spirits Are Supposed to Dominate an Interior African Country.

What an unmodern sound is that of "a devil-possessed land!" Still, Capt. Welbey, who has been wandering in the interior of Africa, declares that he found one there. It is called Walamo, and is believed to be haunted by evil spirits. Capt. Welbey was warned by his escort before he passed its limits that he would become the prey of demons. He found it a most winsome country, full of luxuriant vegetation and picturesque streams. The first omen of danger perceived by Capt. Welbey was the sudden madness of one of his men. This unfortunate rushed into camp a raving maniac. Other cases of an equally terrible and dangerous sort soon followed. The Africans who formed Capt. Welbey's escort assured him that devils took hold of all who were watched by the Walamo inhabitants while they ate. He himself, skeptical regarding these amazing statements, partook of a meal before many Walamoans, who observed him all the while, he declares, with great fixity. Afterward, to his own astonishment, he began to feel exceedingly ill. He does not admit, however, that he went mad, and as numerous explorations were subsequently made by him, he probably did not. A sensible solution of the whole strange problem is doubtless to be found in some malarial or other poisonous condition of the land. Hosts of explorers have thus far dogged the trend of British exploration in Africa, but none, perhaps, has been fraught with such impish mystery as this.

Civilizing the Island of Guam.

Gov. "Dick" Leary of Guam is civilizing the island on the lightning express method. It will be completely Americanized in about a year. In a letter to his brother, an army officer, the governor announces that he has abolished slavery (which was exactly right), compelled some friars to leave the island, amended the marriage laws with regard to polygamy, prohibited the liquor traffic, and forbidden drunkenness. In his drink order the governor sternly said: "Drunkenness is the chief source of all crime and trouble in this island, and must and shall cease." That he is a "benevolent despot" cannot be gainsaid. For example, this order: "For the protection of government interests and as a safeguard against the machinations, devices and schemes of speculators and adventurers, it is hereby ordered that all persons who claim ownership of land in this island or its dependencies are prohibited from selling or transferring any portion of such property without first obtaining the consent of the governor. Violation of this order may be punished by fine or imprisonment or both."

Mineral Production in the United States.

The Engineering and Mining Journal in its annual statistical number says that the preliminary statement of mineral production in the United States in 1898 shows that the total production of metals in the United States for that year was valued at the place of production at $413,738,414, as compared with $314,255,620 in 1898. Of non-metallic substances, the total value of the output was $601,872,631, as compared with $483,091,970 in 1898. Deducting certain unavoidable duplications, such as coal used in coke or iron ore in pig iron, and so on, the net value of the mineral production reached a total of $891,424,082, showing an increase of $151,607,332 over 1898. The gold production was valued at $72,483,055, and the silver was 61,179,689 ounces.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.

GARNER.

This is court week.

Austin Hetland, of Ossian, was transacting business in the city Monday.

There is talk of another new railroad for Garner—a through line to Des Moines.

John Nesbit, one of Ellington's prosperous farmers, was in the city on business Monday.

Dr. Groom, of Britt, was in town Sunday attending the temperance mass meeting.

Several auction sale bills are posted up around town, indicating that the sound of the auctioneer's voice will be abroad in the land.

The Garner Literary Society holds meetings every Thursday evening in the Bell Hall. Interesting programs are given at each meeting, to which all are invited.

The Ladies Progressive Club gave a banquet at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. William Shattuck Tuesday evening last, in honoo of their husbands. A good time is reported by all present.

S. S. Williamson, Mac. Lamson, Sam Thomas, John Anderson, J. J. Leehy and John Leehy left Tuesday on the noon train for Oklahoma whence they went to invest in real estate. They expect to be gone some two weeks.

Great opportunity offered to good, reliable men. Salary of $15 per week and expenses for man with rig to introduce our Poultry Mixture and Insect Destroyer in the country. Send stamp, American Mfg. Co., Terre Haute, Ind.

A temperance mass meeting was held at the U. P. church Sunday afternoon, to protest against any legislation in favor of the saloon interests. Resolutions were introduced and adopted expressive of the sentiments of the meeting, and are to be sent to Senator Harriman and Represenative Way of the Senatorial and Assembly districts respectively. Rev. Fred Merten was chosen chairman and Rev. F. L. Hanscom, secretary of the meeting, while addresses in favor of prohibition were made by county attorney Wichman, Judge Brockway, Rev's. Bell and Albertson.

Editor Ramsay, of the Crystal Lake Reflector, was in the city Monday. The young editor, it is said, has been contemplating moving into another state. In other words he has been entertaining the thought of leaving the state of single-blessedness. in which he has heretofore resided, and going into the state of matrimony. And the frequent visits the young man makes to our city has given rise to the suggestion that one of Garner's fair daughters of Eve will accompany him into the state above mentioned. This, of course may only be imagination, but actions sometimes are more eloquent than eloquence.

County Superintendent Schell has reversed the recent Supreme Court decision on the county seat question. The county records, books, and so forth of the county insofar as the same relate to the County Superintendent's office have been moved into the new court house. The genial superintendent will be found in the new building ready to transact the county business pertaining to his office. But be it understood that whenever Ed. Bailey of the Britt Tribune comes here to do any county business he must wiggle his ponderous frame to the little red brick building on the other side of the intervening farm lands. That's what Ed. voted for, now he has got to take his medicine.

ELL CENTER ITEMS

The cold weather still continues.

Charles Gibbs attended church at Beulah Sunday.

Fred Gates has moved onto one of A. Kelley's farms.

Charley Gilbert has hired out to Jas. Weeks for this year.

Will Vodermark transacted business at Ell Center Monday.

The weather the past week might be called 'fur coat' weather.

Jos. Kearney gave a dance to his friends last Thursday evening.

W. Carr was an Ell Center caller last Sunday, the guest of Mr. Henderson.

B. Shoels starts for Minnesota this week where he will reside in the future.

George Pomplin visited his grand parents, J. W. Allen's, the latter part of last week.

Cyrus Howe will move to his old home in Wisconsin this week. We are sorry to see them go.

L. Fuller had the misfortune to freeze his face last Thursday evening while coming to the literary.

Frank and Will Badker hauled two loads of farming utensils up near Crystal Lake preparatory to moving.

Old Glory floated at half mast from the Ell Center flag pole on February 15, in mourning for the heroes of the Maine.

Jos. Venoskee and wife, Isaac Ptacek and wife, James Brozik and James Fiala are in Franklin Co., this week attending the wedding of a friend.

Agents on salary of $15.00 per week and expenses; the greatest agent seller ever produced; every stock and poultry raiser buys it on sight. Hustlers wanted. Refference. Address, with stamp, American Mfg. Co. Terre Haute, Ind.

It is with profound sorrow and grief that we chronicle the death of little Johnny, the infant son of Wm. Guth and wife, on Saturday, February 17th. The remains were tenderly laid to rest in the Klemme cemetery on Monday. The bereaved parents have the sympathy of the entire community in their hour of bereavement.

Miss Tona Fiala and Miss Olive Braund gave a dance in honor of their birthday Saturday evening. They were the recipients of many handsome presents The dance was all that could be desired. After all had danced until they were satisfied, light refreshments were served. May the rest of their birthdays be as pleasantly remembered, is the wish of their many friends.

Harry Burman is experimenting on rural free delivery between his place and Ell Center. Harry thinks that if it proves a success he will apply for permanent carrier on that route. He says he will be willing to carry it free of charge for a while in order to get the route permanently established. Say Harry wouldn't it be a good plan to extend your route from the Center to Mrs. Monahen while L. Fuller is confined to the house by reason of his feet getting frozen.

If there was room under his hat for Editor Wellemeyer's bump of self-esteem to expand, what a lightning climber he would be in his own estimation.—Signal.

If the senior editor of the Signal would put in more of his time gathering news for, what had every right to be, the best paper in the county and spend less of his time playing 'mucle' be more consistent, more public spirited, and attend church more as Brackett—he would be less objective, Go take something—your liver is out order.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

H. W. Schoper, was a Garner visitor Monday.

Miss Emma Terhufen was quite sick last week.

Mrs. Hawley hes been quite sick for the past week.

Mr and Mrs. Chas. Suckow drove to Garner Friday.

E. M. Wellemeyer, of Garner, was in Klemme, Monday.

Wm. Wesenberg, of Goodell, was in town on business today.

Little Lola Kluckhohn has been very sick the past week.

Tom Fotheringham was in Klemme Saturday last on business.

Phil Ell has been down sick with 'grip' but is able to be out again.

Henry Mauss, father-in-law of Tom Blank will move to Klemme in a few weeks.

Louis Weline, who has been visiting with S. J. Carlson the past week, returned Monday.

H. W. Schoper is receiving a large amount of new farm machinery for the spring trade.

Mr. and Mrs. Hawley will shortly move into the Wm. Stillie house in the north part of town.

W. R. Bloom shipped several cars of fine porkers Sunday morning, purchased of S. F. Schlegel.

Webster Sage came down from Garner Saturday evening for an over Sunday visit at the editor's house.

Frank Kluckhohn had the misfortune to badly scald his foot and is confined to the house in consequence.

The City Dads held their regular meeting Monday night. No business of special importance was transacted.

We are deep in the work of getting out the 'Course of study' for the Klemme schools and could not put as much time on our paper as usual.

Some people may catch dead rabbits in a trap, but Hury is the only one we have heard of so far that tried to kill a frozen rabbit with a club.

The Epworth League program at the English M. E. Church last Sunday evening, was a success in every particular. The paper read by Miss Merrick was exceptionally fine.

Mrs. Wm. Schneider, of Garner, was in Klemme, Tuesday evening, in the interest of the W. C. T. U. and W. F. M. S. societies. Wednesday morning we enjoyed a pleasant call from the estimable lady.

J. S. Fuller of Buffalo Center, was a pleasant caller Wednesday. He knows a good thing when he sees it and has ordered the TIMES sent to him for one year. He will farm 240 acres this year and has been doing well since he left Hancock Co.

A couple of gilt-edge sports started east Tuesday, via. the cutter route, and when about five miles out the cutter broke. It was an amusing thing, to see Lewis and Chris Lau, work their way home. It was especially hard on Lewis.

The Farmers' Club will meet at Center school house Saturday afternoon, February 24th. All representative farmers of German township are cordially invited to attend. These meetings are becoming interesting and profitable, and we hope there will be a large attendance.

E. Remer, Chris Lau, Wm. Lau, and Oscar Carlson attended the shoot at Manawha last Thursday. With all due courtesy to the shooters of our sister town on the west, Klemme sports believe they can miss more than any. Our boys had little trouble in getting most of the prize money. 'Rah for Klemme.

Wm. Guth and wife mourn the loss of their infant baby boy. The little one was taken sick aqout a week ago, with a bad cold and no danger was apprehended, but it was suddenly taken worse, and Saturday morning death claimed their only son. The sympathy of all is extended to the sorrowing parents.

Probably the largest check ever drawn for stock in Klemme markets, was that given in payment for 208 head of hogs, purchased by W. R. Bloom of S. F. Schlegel. The check was for almost $2,400.00. The hogs were an exceptional fine lot and brought top prices. We believe this deal was the largest individual transaction in that line, ever made in Hancock county.

The B. C. R. & N. people realize the importance of Klemme as a shipping station and will, as soon as the weather will permit; erect a platform scales so that shippers can weigh their stock before loading. Supt. Ward was here the other day, looking over the ground for the most suitable place to put the new scales. Meanwhile arrangements have been made with W. R. Bloom, to do all such weighing for the company.

GERMANTOWN.

Daisy Schuldt suffered a few days from an attack of tonsilits.

Work on or rather in the Ger M. E. church was commenced last Monday.

Mrs. Louis Sampson gave an old time 'rag bee' at her home last Thursday

Tom Fotheringham was a guest at the home of Charles Stiehl Sr. last week.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Wellemeyer visit the Garner High school one day last week.

Rev. F. H. Wellemeyer assisted Rev. Fiegenbaum in revival meetings at Garner last Wednesday.

Mrs. Fred Grieve Sr, and Fred Erdman and wife of Hayfield were Germantown visitors one day last week.

There was an old fashioned quilting at Mrs. Charlie Schuldt's Tuesday of last week. The ladies say they had a good old visit with their neighbors.

Last Friday evening was the beginning of a new term for the singing class Great interest is manifested in the study and good work that is being done.

There were two attractions last Wednesday night. A party at Henry Katter's and a spelling school at the Merten school. Those who attended the spelling school say they had fun as long as it lasted, which was until about nine o'clock. Those who were fortunate enough to be numbered among the highly honored guests at the former, say they had a fine time and a long time for it. To judge from the 'early' hour of their departure Misses Anna and Tillie Katter are surely the most charming of hostesses.

The following is the program for the Germantown Literary Society to be held in the Center school house. Thurs March 1st, 1900.

RECESS.

Screamer. H. J. Schuldt, L. Keiser and Aug. Stille.

Debate, Resolved: That Grant was a greater man than Washington.

Affirmative, Martin Friedow, E. A. W. Upmeyer.

Negative, J. E. Stille, J. J. Stille.

Chas. Lenz, Sec'y. Aug. C. Schuldt, Pres.

STRANGE TALES TERSELY TOLD.

A Dutch clergyman was in the habit of giving out two lines of a hymn at a time for the choir to sing. One dark, rainy day he could not see the words, and said: "Mine eyes ish dim. I cannot see; I left mine specks at home." The choir, supposing this to be the hymn, struck up the tune of common metre. The old fellow bawled out: "Mein Gott mein Gott, dat ish no hymn. I only said mein eyes vash dim." The choir sang these two lines, the old fellow saying: "I dink the debil's in you all. Dot wash no hymn to sing at all."

The Wrong Firm.

A commercial traveler on his first trip called upon a well known chemist. He was nervous as he put his hand in his pocket and drew out a card.

"I represent that concern," said the young man.

"You are fortunate," replied the chemist.

The traveler was encouraged.

"I think so, sir," he said, "and the chemist who trades with us is even more so. My firm has the finest line of cosmetics in the world."

"I shouldn't have thought it," slowly responded the man of medicines; "her complexion looks natural," and he handed back the photograph which the young man had given him in mistake.

The traveler didn't wait for his order.

The quarterly statement of the Klemme State Bank, published above, shows that institution to be in a flourishing condition.

Original Notice!

Notice is hereby given that all parties are duly warned not to let, lease, loan, or give over to, into the possession of, or otherwise allow one L. Lewis and Chris Lau to use, utilize or manipulate any cutter, sleigh, sled, or vehicle for travel on ice or snow, because they are not responsible parties and do not use due diligence in keeping in the smooth part of the road, and without fear of the wrath to come, break and destroy, all such property so borrowed and refuse to repair such property, and are liable to damages therefore. They did on the 20th, day of February, A. D. 1900 smash Chas. Bracher's fine swell-body cutter and also that of Chas. Krouse, and the claim is set up in defense that the cutters were defective and not fit to loan to a friend, and therefore no damage should be asked. And they further claim that the labor and inconvenience of walking seven miles should be taken into consideration and damage is asked in rebuttal for causing either of the defendants to so exert themselves. With this pleading, plaintiff rests the case with the honorable court and jury.

NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 12.—The features of the session were the passage of the bill by Fitchpatrick granting a one-tenth of a mill building tax for the State Agricultural College at Ames, and the introduction of a bill by Finch to regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors to minors and inebriates. The bill increases the crime attaching to this violation by providing that the same penalties shall attach to the sale of liquor to these classes of persons as to violators of the mulct law. Garst, by request, introduced a bill asking for $66,000 for the location and erection of monuments in honor of Iowa troops on the battlefield of Shiloh. None of these monuments is to cost to exceed $4,000 except the one representing the state, which may cost $15,000.

HOUSE.

The following bills were passed: Providing that sidewalk taxes shall be collected as other taxes; correcting code in relation to licensing peddlars; providing for the appointment of public examiners, defining their duties and fixing their compensation and providing for a uniform system of keeping the books of county treasurers. Among bills introduced were the following: Creating a plumbing board in cities; requiring judges of supreme courts to live in Des Moines and allowing $1,500 a year for expenses; providing for sale of meandered lakes and providing for the manner thereof; permitting the dairy commissioner to appoint a deputy and three assistants.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 13.—Senate concurred in house resolution for final adjournment March 1. Harriman filed a motion for reconsideration. Senate adopted and house concurred in resolution for adjournment at 11:30 Wednesday to permit members to pay respects to ex-Governor Larrabee, retiring member of the board of control, before his departure for Europe. Hubbard introduced a bill to legalize all sales of liquors under void mulct petitions prior to supreme court decision. Hazleton's bill defining powers of mayors was passed, as was also Ball's bill relating to duties of administrators, guardians, trustees, and referees depositing funds with the clerk of the district court.

HOUSE.

After a prolonged discussion the Prentiss bill to provide that all superintendents of hospitals for the insane do not be appointed from the same school of medicine was defeated by a vote of 37 to 53. Elker's bill for the exemption of personal earnings to the amount of but $8 per week was referred to the judiciary committee. The bill by Bennett to require five statements to be made annually to the auditor by state savings banks instead of four passed. Its purpose is to make the requirments for state and national banks uniform. Among bills introduced were the following: By McCurdy, to provide for the surveying and patenting of swamp lands recovered from drainage of meandering lakes; by Clark, to give supervisors right to select one paper printed in a foreign language for publication of proceedings; by Clark, providing that when outside help is employed in collecting delinquent taxes, all money collected must be paid into the county fund; by Conley, providing bounty for foxes.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 14.—Hazleton's bill to give town councils power to compel property owners to lay sidewalks of brick, stone, or cement was considered, but no action taken.

HOUSE.

As a result of the warmest and longest debate in the house this session the Elker bill to exempt but $8 of a man's weekly earnings was referred to the committee on ways and means. Among bills introduced were the following: By Blake, for encouragement of beet sugar industry; by Shambough, giving any one the rihgt to kill a dog that comes on his premises and disturbs his stock; by Wise, providing that the bureau of labor include a bureau of labor statistics.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 15.—After another lengthy discussion the senate this morning passed the Hazleton sidewalk bill by a vote of 39 to 8. The Emmert bill for the suppression of tuberculosis by requiring the inspection of all imported breeding and dairy cale, was under discussion by the senate all day, but had not reached a vote at the time of adjournment. Among the bills introduced were these: Appropriating $1,000 for continuing the education of Linnie Haguewood; establishing a reformatory for women at Anamosa; appropriating $2,000 to complete the classification of books at the state library. At an afternoon session the bill was laid on the table by a vote of 31 to 20.

HOUSE.

The normal school bill came up and was considered at length. An amendment by Byers, reducing the number of schools from three to one, was adopted. Warren of Mion introduced a substitution bill to locate the school at Knoxville and use the building now occupied by the institution for the adult blind. The bill was then referred back to the committee. Business was suspended for a few minutes while the house listened to an address by Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, which was happily received.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 16.—Five bills passed the senate this morning. They include Cashire's gambling bill, the Penrose bill to appropriate $2,500 for the purchase of 50,000 railroad maps for free distribution, the house bill making city treasurers custodians of the water works funds in cities, and the house bill giving school districts the power to receive bequests. The senate spent an hour or more discussing a substitute bill for the measure which has passed the house in the interest of the innocent purchaser of grain. It was again referred to the committee on agriculture. Mullen's bill providing that all presidential electors be chosen at large rather than by districts was passed. Several bills of minor importance were passed.

HOUSE.

The normal school bill was taken up. The report of the committee recommending the Byers amendment and killing the Warren substitute to locate the school at Knoxville was adopted and the fight opened with an amendment by Warren stating that nothing in the bill should prevent the joint convention to be called for locating the school from using state property for that purpose. The amendment was carried and then the bill was defeated by a vote of 46 to 47. Byers filed a motion for a reconsideration. At an afternoon session Kendall's bill for weighing coal before screening, unless otherwise agreed upon in contract, caused a lively debate. It was referred to the judiciary committee. Veneman's bill to levy a tax to provide for the erection of necessary buildings of the Iowa agricultural college was passed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 17.—The committee on suppression of intemperance reported favorably this morning Senator Wallace's bill prohibiting the sale of intoxicants within five miles of any educational institution in the state. A bill appropriating $2,000 to defray the expenses of the expenses of the commission to locate monuments to union soldiers at Vicksburg was passed. Among bills introduced were the following: By Arthaud, providing for the creation of normal departments in each county; changing salaries of county superintendents from $1,000 to $1,300 per year.

HOUSE.

Resolutions were adopted requesting Iowa's senators and representatives to work for free rural delivery of mails, and for better equipment of the national guard of the state. These bills were passed: Making use of blasphemous language a misdemeanor instead of an indictable offense; authorizing publication of 30,000 railroad commissioners' maps. House reconsidered bill providing tax for agricultural college and concurred in senate measure. Among bills introduced were the following: By Cowles, creating a board of high school commissioners; by Stratton, creating board of school examiners in each county; by Eaton, to create and enforce liens for purchase price of personal property by making it possible for every person selling or furnishing articles of personal property to have a lien upon it for the purchase price after filing an itemized statement.

DES MOINES, Feb. 19, 1900.

A movement is said to be on foot to secure a pardon for Delilah Fails, an inmate of the penitentiary at Anamosa, serving a twenty-year sentence for the murder of Jacob Kern in 1897. Kern, it is claimed, was a villain of the deepest dye and had succeeded in gaining an intimacy with Miss Fails. Even the man's own son, a young man of 17 years at that time, out of sympathy for the unfortunate girl, entered into a conspiracy with her to put his father out of the way, and on August 23, 1897, they waylaid him in what is known as the "Big Woods," southeast of Waverly, Bremer county, and shot him. At the time of the murder the son was 17 and the girl 21 years old. The trial was held in Waverly and December 8, 1897. Miss Fails pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree and was sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary, and young Kern for twelve years. Col. W. H. McClure is conducting the movement for the release of Miss Fails, and it is said a petition for her pardon has been liberally signed by prominent people, both in Black Hawk and Bremer counties.

An effort will be made soon, it is said, to secure a pardon for the man named Woods, who was convicted of complicity in the dynamite outrage at Muscatine a few years ago, in which an effort was made to wreck the homes of John Mahin and E. M. Kessenger.

The State Agricultural Society is in receipt of two or three proposals to put on a Mexican bull fight during the state fair.

On the morning of the 14th both houses of the legislature adjourned and repaired in a body to the board of control rooms in the basement of the capitol building, where they waited upon ex-Governor Larrabee and told him good bye before he retired from public life in Iowa and started on his trip to Europe. The visit of the legislators was brief. Lieutenant-Governor Milliman on their behalf bade Governor Larrabee God-speed as he retired from "twenty-five years of active service in public life in Iowa," and to this Governor Larrabee responded briefly. He was so overcome by the demonstration on the part of the general assembly that he could scarcely speak. He thanked them for the evidences of their good will and friendship, saying that as a public servant he had tried to do his duty, with little regard for his own comfort and convenience. He spoke particularly of the manner in which his labors on the board of control had been lightened by the willing co-operation of his colleagues. After the speech-making the visit terminated informally by a general handshaking with the governor, who left the city that evening and sails for Europe in a short time with a family party.

The house committee on printing recommended for passage the bill by Clarke, of Dallas,, to abolish the office of state printer and binder. Not long ago the committee determined to put the bill over for two weeks, but this delay was not liked by its friends. The author of the measure appeared before the committee and urged final action upon it, inasmuch as he desired to introduce another if this was not acted upon. Some of the friends of the present system objected to reporting the bill before the investigation as to the current rates of printing and binding; but this objection did not appeal to the majority of the committee.

President Beardshear and the trustees of the Iowa College of Agriculture are encouraged over their efforts to loan the endowment fund of the college, since the bill has passed allowing the loaning thereof at a discretionary rate, instead of six per cent. There is over $200,000 to be loaned and applications for $50,000 have already come in. It is expected the entire fund can be loaned soon. The rates vary from 5 to 5½ per cent. The total endowment fund is about $650,000.

Thomas Kelly, a life convict in the penitentiary at Anamosa, and who was to have been pardoned within a day or two by the legislature, died in his cell a day or two ago. Kelly was convicted of killing Charles Archibald, an old hermit and miser, in 1888, in Chariton. Kelly's wife was supposed to have been implicated. The murder was committed for the purpose of robbery. The murdered man and the Kellys lived in houses located in the same yard and the murderer was tracked and convicted on the evidence of a trail of blood leading from the house of the murdered man to his residence.

War Denounced as a Crime.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—Supporters of the Liberal party to the number of 300 or 400 held a private meeting at the Westminster Palace hotel to protest against the government's war policy. The resolutions adopted declared the war "crime and a blunder," committed at the instigation of irresponsible capitalists; demanded the publication of the full correspondence regarding the Jameson raid; protested against the increasing armaments; reaffirmed the liberals' gratitude to Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, John Morley and James Bryce, and decided to open a permanent fund to carry on a vigorous political propaganda for the principles announced.

STORYETTES.

Some evenings ago (says the New York Tribune) a man was seated in the corridor of one of the large hotels smoking a fragrant cigar. On the lounge next to him were seated a woman and her daughter, the latter next to the smoker. The draft blew the smoke across the younger woman's face, to which the smoker remained oblivious or indifferent. Finally, after several quite audible remarks to her mother apropos of the rudeness of men in general, which passed rapidly into a somewhat hectic comment on this smoker in particular, turning savagely to the tormentor, she said: "If you were my husband, do you know I'd poison you?" "And do you know, madam," replied the man, calmly removing his cigar, "were you my wife, I'd take that poison?"

On the opening day of the session of the Fifty-sixth congress (says the Criterion), a tall, gaunt man, shambling of gait, with "high water" trousers, a slouched hat mashed in any old way, and an overcoat that needed brushing, presented himself at the center door of the house of representatives. He started to walk right in, but was stopped by one of the doorkeepers, who said to him, testily: "Say, don't you know you can't go in there?" "No, I didn't know it, my friend; I thought I could," he said, mildly. "Nobody but members allowed in to-day." "Well, I'm a member; Congressman Cushman, of Washington." "Oh! I beg your pardon; walk right in." As Mr. Cushman strode into the hall the astonished doorkeeper looked after him for a moment, and then, turning to his assistant on the door, said: "Say, Bill, did you see that? Well, after that I ain't got the nerve to stop anything."

When William Jennings Bryan first went to Nebraska he was hired to take the stump against Thayer, who was running for governor, and said some hard things against the candidate. "Thayer was elected," Bryan is quoted as saying in the Chicago Times-Herald. "After he took the governor's chair he was called to be toast-master at a banquet at which I was set down for a speech. I did not care to go to that banquet. I did not wish to meet the governor. I remembered all that I had said about him, and I felt cheap. But I went, and sat there through the early proceedings quite uncomfortable. Finally it came time for the governor to call upon me. He rose from his seat with the program before him and slowly said: 'Mr. Bryan—Bryan.' Then he slowly turned his eyes upon me and addressed me: 'Do you speak or sing?' That is all I ever heard from Governor Thayer as to what he thought of my campaign speeches against him."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

SUCCESS FOR THE DAIRY.

To secure the best results in the care of milk and butter, attention must be given details. The milking must be properly done, and all vessels used must be kept scrupulously clean by washing morning and night in hot water with Ivory Soap, then rinsing well in cold water and setting out to air and sun.

ATTITUDE OF PRESIDENT.

Holds Constitution Does Not Apply to Colonies.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—The World publishes a summary of a long statement made by President McKinley to Henry Loomis Nelson as to the American policy toward the newly acquired islands. The article is vouched for as an authoritative interpretation of the president's views. According to Mr. Nelson, "it is Mr. McKinley's belief and it will be his purpose to carry the belief into operation, that the constitution does not apply to any of our new islands; that those people are not fit for self-government beyond that proposed for Hawaii; that our new possessions must not be permitted to injure any of our protected interest, and that free trade with Porto Rico is right because our protected interests will not be injured thereby."

FIGHTING ON TUGELA NOW.

Buller Evidently Seeking to Recover Lost Ground.

LONDON, Feb. 19.—Dispatches from Durban, dated late Saturday evening, give reports of the renewed fighting on the Tugela, where the censor stopped all the telegrams. Arrivals at Durban from the Tugela say that important operations are in progress and that fighting has occurred daily since the commencement of the week. In these engagements the British casualties have been comparitively light. According to these unconfirmed reports, General Buller had reoccupied Vaal Krantz and the Boers had retreated in the direction of the Free State. In the meantime wounded officers and men are arriving daily at Durban and are placed aboard the four hospital ships now there.

OFFERED A BIG BRIBE.

Senatorial Investigating Committee Uncovers a Sensation.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Attempts to corrupt the Montana supreme court in the interest of Senator W. A. Clark have been charged before the committee of inquiry. The charges were preferred by Justices Hunt and Piggot, two of the three members of the court. Chief Justice Brantley, it is predicted, will add testimony even more sensational than that given. Justice Hunt charged Dr. Tracey, his family physician, with an offer of a bribe of $100,000 if he (Hunt) would stop the proceedings in the welcome disbarment case. Attorney General Nolan, who prosecuted Lawyer Wellcome, said Dr. Tracey was also his physician and that he (Nolan) had been made a similar offer by him. His charge against Dr. Tracey was even more direct than that of Justice Hunt.

KRUGER NOT WORRYING.

Says Cronje's Retirement Need Cause No Uneasiness.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—A dispatch which President Kruger is said to have sent to The Hague since the successful move of General French for the relief of Kimberley, reached a former official of Holland in this city Saturday. The message, which was apparently sent with a view to quieting the apprehensions of the friends of the Boers, reads:

"No uneasiness. Federal operations west fully planned."

The recipient of this dispatch, who conceals his identity from the public, received and published a dispatch announcing the defeat of the British at Spion Kop twenty-four hours before the news of that event was made known through British sources.

DEWEY'S NEW POSITION.

Assigned to Duty as Advisory Counsel to Secretary of the Navy.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Having completed his duties as a member of the Philippine commission, Admiral Dewey will be assigned to duty as advisory counsel to the secretary of the navy. His duties will not be arduous, and unless a war should occur and he be required to help frame a naval policy or map out campaigns, it is not likely that he will have much more to do than Admiral Porter. Only on the more important questions pertaining to the navy will he be called upon for opinions.

Munitions of War Captured.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—A dispatch to the war office from Lord Roberts says:

JACOBSDAL, Feb. 17.—General Kelly-Kenny's brigade captured yesterday seventy-eight wagons laden with stores, two wagons of Mauser rifles, eight of boxed shells, ten barrels of explosives and a large quantity of stores, all belonging to Cronje's laager, which was still being shelled by our artillery when Kitchener dispatched his messenger.

Boers Claim Partial Victory.

PRETORIA, Feb. 19.—It appears from further reports of the fighting at Jacobsdal that 2,000 British troops got through the federal position at Modder river and entered Kimberly. The federals intercepted the rear guard of the British and captured great booty, many oxen and a number of prisoners.

Two-thirds of the crime of London is committed between the hours of 2 p. m. on Saturdays and 9 a. m. on Monday.

A MINNESOTA FARMER

WRITES OF WESTERN CANADA WHERE HE IS NOW LOCATED.

The Farms in His Neighborhood Are Being Rapidly Taken Up by Former Residents of the United States.

The following extracts from a letter written to Mr. Benj. Davies, Canadian government agent at St. Paul, Minn., give an excellent idea of what is said of Western Canada by those who have gone there during the past two or three years.

"When we first arrived here and took up our homes on the prairie near Dalesboro, Assa., for a short time we had a fit of the 'blues,' but now all hands are settled to business, hale, hearty and contented, enjoying the finest winter we have ever seen. We have got very comfortably situated, with considerable preparations for a crop, and all hopeful. I think this is a very fine country, and if the past season's crop is not an exception, which they claim not, I believe this is going to be the wheat field of the West. It is filling up fast. In this township last spring there were 25 quarter-sections of land vacant and today there is not one. I can stand at my house and count ten houses where there was not one last spring, with six more to go up this spring. This is only a sample of what is going on all round. We intend to build a church next summer, right close to my place, so we will be strictly in line. It would have amused you to have been here last spring. There were crowds of land-seekers, and sometimes in the spring the prairie is not very inviting, and of course lots were discontented. There was one in the crowd who jumped on me for putting a letter in the paper, only for which he never would have come here, and he was very hostile, but eventually he got a place and today, claims he would not take a thousand dollars and move out, so I am glad he is satisfied.

"Well, my dear sir, as Arthur Finney is about to move out in March, with his family, and also one of my sons, anything you can do for them to assist them along and to make things smooth as possible, will be greatly appreciated by me. I will close for this time, and will write from time to time to let you know we are living. Drop us a few lines to let us know how things are moving in St. Paul.

"Yours Respectfully,
"ALEX. CAMERON."

NICE OLD QUAKER LADY

Cured of Catarrh By Peruna After 20 Years' Suffering.

MRS. POLLY EVANS, A LIFE-LONG FRIEND OF PERUNA.

"My wife (Polly J. Evans) says she feels entirely cured of systemic catarrh of twenty years' standing. She took nearly six bottles of thy excellent medicine, Peruna, as directed, and we feel very thankful to thee for thy kindness and advice. She did not expect to be so well as she is now. Twelve years ago it cured her of la grippe. I want to tell thee there has been a great deal of Peruna used here last winter. Peruna does not need praising. It tells for itself. We can and do recommend it to anyone that is afflicted with catarrh."

As ever, thy friend, John Evans, South Wabash, Ind.

When catarrh has reached the chronic stage, of course it has gone beyond the reach of all local remedies. Nothing but a systemic remedy can reach it. Peruna is the only remedy yet devised to meet such cases. Peruna eradicates catarrh from the system. It does its work quietly, but surely. It cleanses the mucous membranes of the whole body. It produces regular functions. Peruna restores perfect health in a natural way.

No one should neglect to procure one of Dr. Hartman's free books on catarrh, sent to any address by The Peruna Medicine Company, Columbus, Ohio.

The claim of other cough medicines to be as good as Chamberlain's are effectually set at rest in the following testimonial of Mr. C. D. Glass, an employe of Barlett & Lunis Co., Gardiner, Me. He says: "I had kept adding to a cold and cough in the winter of 1897, trying every cough medicine I heard of without permanent help, until one day I was in the drug store of Mr. Houlehan and he advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and offered to pay back my money if I was not cured. My lungs and bronchial tubes were very sore at this time, but I was completely cured by this remedy and have since always turned to it when I got a cold, and can find relief. I also recommend it to my friends and am glad to say it is the best of all cough medicines." For sale by HARR, the druggist.

The Petrified Man.

According to a Billings, Mont., dispatch in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, John Johnson, known throughout the west as "Liver-Eating Johnson," a government scout and spy, and who is believed to have killed more Indians than any other man, either living or dead, that ever rode the arid wastes of the west, reached this city recently en route to the soldiers' home at Los Angeles. He recognized the ossified man found in the Missouri river, near Fort Banton about a year ago, as being the petrification of a man he knew at Fort Benton. The petrification looks as natural as life. It will go east from here, and then to the Paris exposition.

The Satire in Whittier's Slippers.

One evening as I sat with Mr. Whittier before his Franklin stove he hospitably brought forward a pair of slippers and laughed as he pointed at the satirical device embroidered upon them. He said Gail Hampton worked them for him when his wartime poems were being published. They represented a pair of belligerent American eagles, armed with the thunderbolts of Jove, and they were done in the soberest Quaker drab—thunderbolts and all! "Thee sees," he said, "she is as sharp with her needle as with her pen!"—Samuel T. Pickard, in Ladies' Home Journal.

The Tagalog Is a Wily Foe.

The hunted one is a barefooted little brown man, in cotton shirt and trousers, who, equally courageous, has more skill than the old foe of our army, the American Indian. Without infusion of foreign blood, the Tagalog mind is simple only to the white man, who looks upon the smiling Tagalog face for the first time. While it is an enigma to us, the half-breed leader, polite, subtle, often well educated, if not the graduate of a Spanish university, can play upon his moods as upon the strings of a harp.—From "White Man and Brown Man in the Philippines," by Frederick Palmer, in the January Scribner's.

When They Rise.

The kaiser rises at 5 o'clock, swallows a cup of coffee and then begins work. The Emperor Francis Joseph is about at 7 o'clock, and breakfasts on coffee and buttered toast. The king of Italy, the king of Sweden, the king of Denmark, the sultan and the prince of Bulgaria rise at the same hour as ordinary mortals. The record for indolence is held by ex-King Milan. He retires to rest at peep of day, rises at midday and takes a long time over his breakfast.

Ice in Royal Residences.

The stores of ice at Windsor, Osborne and Balmoral are very large. At Windsor there is storage room for about 500 tons. There the supply is obtained from the lake beneath the north terrace, from Frogmore, and from the lake between Frogmore and Virginia water. Ice is not only lavishly used in the royal kitchen, but also for reducing the temperature of her majesty's apartments in hot weather. Then it is packed in pretty wooden buckets and stood in the fireplaces.

Their Own Ammunition.

A large amount of the small-arms ammunition now being used by the Boers against the English troops is of British manufacture. As late as 1896 a large English cartridge firm, the president of which is Mr. Arthur Chamberlain, the colonial secretary's brother, supplied the Boer government with millions of rounds of ammunition. This transaction was, of course, well known to the British at the time.

Funeral Reform in England.

Dickens would have been pleased with the title of the "Church of England Burial, Funeral and Mourning Reform association," which at its twentieth annual meeting has issued the following manifesto: "No darkened house, no durable coffin, no special mourning attire, no bricked grave, no unnecessary show, no avoidable expense, and no unusual eating or drinking."

Around the Earth.

The time required for a journey round the earth by a man walking day and night, without resting, would be 428 days; an express train, 40 days; sound, at a medium temperature, 32½ hours. a cannon ball, 21¾ hours; light, a little over one tenth of a second. and electricity, passing over a copper wire, a little under one-tenth of a second.

Military Balloon Photographs.

Military ballooning is, of course, in its infancy, and the present Boer war is practically the first opportunity of testing its efficacy. Each balloon is furnished with nearly a dozen cameras in order to obtain panoramic views of the country, which are of great value to the invading army.

Artificial Sponges.

Artificial sponges are now made in Germany from a mixture of pure cellulose with zinc chloride and sodium chloride. These sponges will absorb water in the same way as the genuine article, and when allowed to dry they become just as firm in substance.

Bark Clothing.

The Indians in the interior of Bolivia wear shirts and hats made of the bark of a tree, which is soaked in water to soften the fiber, and then beaten to make it pliable.

Only Male Jaws at That.

The muscles of the human jaw exert a force of 534 pounds, and those of mastiffs, wolves, etc., far more.

Fine Art Practiced by the Soldiers Now in South Africa.

Frequent mention is made in the dispatches of war correspondents of 'shell-dodging," and the average reader is at first at a loss to understand the precise meaning of the words, until their constant repetition leads one to believe that probably it is possible to see shells in their aerial flight, and consequently the soldiers are able to dodge them. A sergeant major of artillery, who has seen some active service all over the world, gives us some information about the true art. In all his long experience he said he had only seen three or four shells actually in the air, and they came from the gun he himself fired. He explained that there are few guns with a somewhat slow muzzle velocity, and the men firing these can sometimes catch a glimpse of the shells in their flight; but it would be impossible for any man to see a shot coming toward himself. Dodging shells is done by getting under cover immediately before a gun is actually fired. "For instance," said the sergeant major, "if I were climbing a hill, at the top of which a gun was directed against me, I could tell exactly when a shell was likely to come bounding along. Before the order is given to fire the men in charge of the piece 'stand clear,' and that is the warning note, so to speak. Keep your weather eye on the gun directed against you, and when the gunners stand clear you dodge the shot."

The Upturned Mustache.

Apropos of the statement that several portraits of Charles I. by Van Dyck, showed the same fierce mustache which the kaiser is so fond of, a German monthly now comes forward and observes that the "upturned mustache" was really invented at the court of Philip IV. of Spain. Charles I., being Philip's brother-in-law, subsequently set the fashion in England, and thence it spread to Belgium, Germany, Sweden and France. Louis XIII. was practically the last monarch to wear this type of mustache, until its revival by William II.

An Old Question Again Brought Up.

The old question as to the name to be borne by a lady after her divorce, has once again cropped up in the English courts in connection with the very interesting suit brought by the earl of Cowley to prevent his divorced wife, now married to a Mr. Biddulph Middleton, from continuing the use of the title of countess of Cowley, and the armorial bearings of the Cowley family. A large array of counsel has been engaged and every authority bearing upon the subject is being introduced into the case, which has not yet been decided.

A Novel Industry.

The severe frost has started a novel industry in Norfolk, England, where an ice harvest is now being gathered. Barges the other day arrived at Yarmouth with cargoes of ice from half an inch to an inch thick, collected on the South Walsham Broad and the upper reaches of the river. This ice, known in the trade as pancake ice, on account of its thinness, realizes several shillings per ton, and was sold to local trawlers, who will use it as a cheap substitute for Norway ice.

1,000,000 DEATHS!

From Cholera During the Past Year.

The Germs of this Fatal Disease are Lurking Everywhere! Thousands of Dollars saved by this Wonderful Discovery.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars has been lost in the poultry business on account of the devastation among the flocks, caused by cholera, roup gape and other fatal diseases. There have been many remedies advanced but none seem to be so successful as the American Poultry Mixture. This will cure chickens in the last stages of cholera or roup, and is excellent for gapes. Do your fowls suffer from violent diarrhea dropping of the wings, stupor or excessive thirst? These are the first symptoms of cholera. Cholera is a germ disease and being infectious spreads rapidly through the entire flock. Take time by the forelock; don't stop to experiment with unreliable or untried remedies. Use this mixture at once and the sanitary measures they recommend in connection. Don't give the fowls up. Cholera is a terrible disease but this remedy cures it every time. It is also guaranteed for roup, which can be told by hoarse breathing, swelled eyes, discharge at the nostrils resembling catarrh. Fifty dollars is offered for any case the mixture will not cure. If some of your fowls are diseased it will prevent the rest from catching it. Try it. It is cheap, reliable and effective; a scientific preparation; goes more than three times as far as any other remedy; does more good than all of them combined. It is used and indorsed by the most experienced and largest breeders of plain and fancy poultry in all parts of the world. The manufacturers guarantee every package or refund purchase money. If your druggist don't sell American Poultry mixture, he's behind the age In that case send $1.00 for sample box to American Manufacturing Co., Terre Haute, Indiana,

He Fooled the Surgeons.

All doctors told Renick Hamilton, of West Jefferson, O., after suffering 18 months from Rectal Fistula, he would die unless a costly operation was performed; but he cured himself with Bucken's Arnica Salve, the best in the world. Surest Pile cure on earth. 25c a box at Harr's drug store.

The sausage factory is now running on full time on American mules. It is a hard fate for a liberty loving son of a jackass to be sent to Africa to fight and then fall a victim to canibals.

NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 19—Most of the senate session was devoted to a discussion of Young's bill, relating to the disposition of dead bodies. It was referred to the committee on public helath. Among bills introduced was one by Mullan to increase the pay of supreme court reporters to about $2,000 a year.

HOUSE.

Eight new bills were introduced. One by Temple proposes to reduce the number of supreme judges from six to five, to create an appellant court of the three judges to have jurisdiction over cases involving sums up to $3,000. This is to relieve the supreme court. One by Byers prohibits directors of corporations from electing officers from among themselves with out the consent of three-fourths of the stockholders. The bill licensing barbers was passed. It provides for a board of examiners, and that barbers must pass an examination before being permitted to work at the business. Bill by Downing providing that ten days' notice must be given of intention to circulate a mulct petition was passed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 20.—Attorney General Remley's report on the building and loan and insurance business of the state was presented and read, after which it was ordered printed. Among bills introduced was one by Lewis for an act placing all public and private insane hospitals under charge of the board of control. House bill providing for a one-tenth mill tax for building purposes at the agricultural college passed.

HOUSE.

After a hard fight, the Clarke bill for the abolishment of the office of state printer and binder, which had been made a special order for today, was postponed for one week, and the investigating committee ordered to report at that time. The bill to amend the military code of the state passed the house without opposition. Its most important change is doing away entirely with the brigade organization in the Iowa National Guard. According to one of its provisions the salary of the adjutant general is increased from $1,500 to $2,000 in times of peace, and he is given compensation equal to that of colonel in time of war. The bill by Temple to amend the code so as to make it possible for insurance companies to receive loans upon their own policies and not wait until three years after the policy is taken out as now required, was passed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 21.—The name of Gifford S. Robinson, of Sioux City, late supreme judge, has been sent to the senate by Governor Shaw as a member of the board of control to succeed ex-Governor Larrabee. The appointment was referred to a committee consisting of Junkin, Perrin, Classen, Lyons and Bolter. In both houses to-day a joint report of the ways and means committees of the assembly was made, containing a detailed statement of the available revenue for the ensuing biennial period and an estimate of the amount which may be safely appropriated by this legislature for extraordinary purposes. The report shows that there is available for extraordinary appropriations $1,275,446. The senate passed the bill making it a crime for any person after marrying a woman to escape prosecution for seduction to desert her within five years thereafter. The bill giving cities of the first class authority to levy a three-mill tax for maintenance of a fire department was also passed.

HOUSE.

A bill was passed which provides that the board of examiners may at their discretion issue to graduates of higher institutions of learning certificates upon the same conditions which they do to graduates to the state normal. The bill by Wilson, of Washington, allowing members of the national guard 10 cents per hour for drill, not to exceed 20 cents per week, was passed. Overfield's bill, which makes the assessed valuation of property the basis for its assessment the following year, was also passed. A large grist of bills of minor importance was introduced.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 23.—The appointment of Judge G. S. Robinson as a member of the board of control was confirmed, 40 votes being cast in favor of confirmation and none against. Blanchard introduced a bill to repeal present law relating to assessment and taxation of telephone and telegraph companies and enact a substitute which will place the assessmnnt on the same basis with that of railroad property. Senator Cheshire introduced two new measures relating to taxation. They are to make the same principles now applying to the assessment of sleeping and dining car companies apply to freight cars and cars of equipment companies. The senate passed the bill by Wallace repealing that section of the code which requires hedge fences to be trimmed to five feet every two years, and leaves the question discretionary with county trustees. Crossley's bill allowing $500 for traveling expenses of state superintendent was defeated.

HOUSE.

The house passed the bill by Lyman to allow savings banks to make loans on farm lands to two-thirds, instead of half the actual value of the land. Kirkwood's bill to transfer Harrison county from the Fourth to the Fifteenth judicial district and to provide an additional judge for the latter, was also passed. The house killed the Elker bill, after first voting down a substitute to increase the amount of personal earnings to be exempted $8 to $10. Bill providing that road supervisors shall cut weeds along roads in their districts before August 1 each year was passed, as was also the bill requiring the redemption of usused railroad tickets.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 24.—Aside from the introduction of a number of bills of minor importance no business was transacted.

HOUSE.

There was no quorum in the house and no business of importance was transacted.

BOER LOSSES NOT HEAVY.

Their Reports Show Determination to Hold Out.

PRETORIA, Feb. 21.—A message from Cronje is to the effect that his loss yesterday was fourteen dead and wounded. DeWet's loss was nil. Commandant Fronoman reports that from February 15 to February 20 he was almost surrounded by the British at the Modder river, when with a small number of men he broke through to the river. On Sunday there was a heavy fight. The British prepared to lay siege to the Boer laager, with fighting general. We were surrounded by 2,500 British five miles from the chief laager. At night we cut our way through with the loss of seven dead and sixteen wounded. The loss of the British was heavy. Yesterday we cut our way through to reach DeWet, who was in the neighborhood. Fifty-three prisoners, formerly taken, have been forwarded. It is reported that the British were continually attacking Koodoos Rand yesterday with infantry and lancers, but that they were driven back.

The earnings of the Chicago Great Western Railway (Maple Leaf Route) for the second week in February, 1900, show an increase of $25,780.78. Total increase since beginning of fiscal year (July 1) to date, $631,024.68.

DES MOINES, Feb. 23. 1900

In the case of Siders vs. Clarkson, a suit against the State Register for libel, the jury returned a verdict awarding $1,500 damages.

John Wood, the boy burglar, was sentenced to the state penitentiary at Ft. Madison for a term of six years at nard labor. He is only 17 years old, but received one of the strongest sentences and lectures that Judge Prouty has yet imposed upon any offender. Wood is the young man who, with Fred LaSelle, broke into Lundy's general store at Altoona and stole a quantity of merchandise valued at about $15.

The famous anti-pass bill has been reported for passage in the house by the judiciary committee. Several amendments were incorporated into the original bill. One strikes out from the classes of persons affected by the all bill, state officers, county officers, judges of the supreme, district and superior courts, all members of the general assembly, etc. In fact, only one class of persons is left, and that is delegates to political conventions. To this class is added alternates and proxies. As if the amendment already named was not sufficient, the bill changes the provision that permits all clerks, and employes of railroad companies to give evidence and prohibits all interference with them for so doing by the company, is stricken out and in its place is put a provision permitting them to testify, but merely preventing the company from bringing legal action against them for testifying.

The bill by Stewart for the establishment of a woman's reformatory has been recommended for passage by the house committee on judiciary. The bill is an important one and is in line with the recommendations made by the board of control and the state humane societies. The bill calls for the appropriation of $2,000 to open the institution and furnish it, the building being already owned by the state near the penitentiary. There will be a woman superintendent in charge at a salary of $1,000.

The senate committee on judiciary discussed the prize fight bill, originally presented by Lister, and designed to subject all boxing contests for which admission is charged, or prizes are given, to the same penalties as prize fights. The committee after quite a long debate developed unexpected sentiment. Members declared they didn't believe any new laws were needed on this subject, and some of them said that anyhow they didn't care to put a stop to all sparring exhibitions, of however innocent character, because some of them occasionally got pretty vigorous. The result was that the bill was reported for indefinite postponement by a vote of 5 to 4. The five who voted to postpone were Bolter, Lewis, Hazelton, Porter and Mullan. The four who wanted to report the measure were Hubbard, Titus, Blanchard and Eaton.

It is learned by the state auditor's department that the physicians at San Francisco have induced Auditor of State Merriam to go to New Mexico or some other higher altitude during the wet season in California, on the theory that he will be benefitted by the change.

Commandant Horton, of the Soldiers' Home at Marshalltown, has employed the Rev. Jesse Cole for chaplain of the home, permanently. The board has fixed his salary at $1,000.

Inquiry reveals the fact that 561 bills had been introduced in the assembly up to February 23. Of this number nearly sixty have been indefinitely postponed. The senate has taken this action upon twenty of the measures before it and the house on about thirty-seven. The governor has signed sixteen bills, thirteen senate files and three house files, and six measures await his signature. Among the measures which have passed both houses and reached the governor are several legalizing acts, several minor appropriations, including $3,500 for the payment of additional employes of the assembly, $1,400 to reimburse supreme court judges for contingent expenses, and $504.90 for the payment of inaugural expenses, and others pertaining to various matters of interest. Among the more important ones is the bill providing that the endowment fund of the State College of Agriculture may be loaned for at as low a rate of interest as four per cent; another in the interest of West Des Moines, giving school districts of over 5,000 population the right to fix the number of voting precints in schools elections; to allow suits against coal companies or operators to be brought in the county in which the mine is located; the measure in the interest of Clinton, giving certain cities the right to levy a tax for park improvements and to pay for park commissioners; one allowing notice in criminal cases to be served on the attorney as well as defendant; fixing the same penalty for destruction of electric light wires as attaches to the crime of destroying telegraph or telephone wires. The Hayward bill, granting privileges to the medical colleges of the state awaits the governor's signature, having passed both houses and been engrossed.

SCIENTIFIC NOTES.

It is said that successful trials of a telephonic apparatus without wire have been had in Italy. The instruments were installed on moving trains The details of the experiments and apparatus are very meagre.

The Baldwin Locomotive Works has just installed in its erecting shop a gigantic crane which has a span of 158 feet. It will lift 196.000 pound locomotive forty feet in the air, carry it 336 feet and set it down again in three minutes and thirty-six seconds.

Ten thousand horse power will be transmitted from Garvin's Falls, fifteen miles from Manchester, N. H., to that city for lighting, power and street railway business. The water power is one of the finest in New England and the new enterprise can hardly fail to be successful.

Engine No. 1028 of the Reading Road has established a new speed record with a heavy train on the road running between Camden and Atlantic City. The distance is fifty-five and a half miles and was covered in forty-seven minutes, the average speed being 70.6 miles per hour.

Glimpses Across the Sea

Is the charming title of a charming book from the facile pen of Mr. Sam T. Clover, the well known author and newspaper editor. The "Glimpses" are particularly pertinent just now when so many people are considering about going to the Paris Exposition, and many people will be glad to know that the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway has purchased an edition of Mr. Clover's work for distribution. In sending your address for a copy please enclose six cents to pay postage. Geo. H. Heafford, General Passenger Agent, Old Colony Building, Chicago, Ill.

I Am Not a Bald Head

"I had a very severe sickness that took off all my hair. I purchased a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor and am glad to say that it brought my hair back again and I am not today obliged to be classed among the bald-heads."
—W. D. Quinn, Marseilles, Ill., Aug. 25, 1899.

Makes Hair Grow

One thing is certain,—Ayer's Hair Vigor makes the hair grow. This is because it is a hair food. If it were a hair stimulant simply, it could not do this. You must have food to live; stimulants cannot take its place. Ayer's Hair Vigor feeds the hair and it grows. It could not do differently, for it's Nature's plan. It stops falling of the hair, too, takes out all dandruff, and always restores color to gray hair.

$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

Write the Doctor

If you do not obtain all the benefits you desire from the use of the Vigor, write the Doctor about it. He will tell you just the right thing to do, and will send you his book on the Hair and Scalp if you request it. Address,

HARD AFTER THEM.

Remley Pays His Respects to Iowa Building and Loan Associations.

DES MOINES, Feb. 21.—Attorney General Remley's opinions regarding the existing evils in the laws governing the building and loan and insurance business of Iowa, and the needed remedies therefor, were presented to the Iowa senate yesterday, in reply to a request from that body made over a week ago. They are even more sweeping than has been expected. According to Mr. Remley there are many corporations which may be classed under these heads now doing business of an illegal kind in the state and swindling the poorer classes of people every day. Mr. Remley does not point directly at any particular corporation, but the elements of his charges are so sweeping and of such a nature as to assure the bringing out of many prominent men in the state who are connected with large associations of the kind, and who will undoubtedly refuse to rest under the charges which have been made. Mr. Remley expresses the opinion that neither the state executive council nor the attorney general has the power which should be given to these authorities in passing upon the business of the corporations involved. His criticisms on the building and loan business do not so much apply to the domestic associations doing business in the state as to the larger associations where stock is purchased in large amounts by capitalists who desire to obtain exorbitant interest rates on their investments and are thus crushing the poorer classes, the ones which the law was intended to benefit and protect. His criticisms on insurance organizations are aimed at the class of companies known as the farmers' mutuals, and some of the larger life insurance organizations. Many of these companies, according to Mr. Remley, are conducted in a decidedly loose manner, thus bringing all the Iowa companies into disrepute. The recommendations of Mr. Remley for changes in the laws explain largely the fault he has to find with the present methods governing these corporations.

His recommendations in brief relating to building and loan associations are as follows:

First. The law should forbid any part of the principal paid in by the stock holder to be used for expenses. Second. There should be a limit upon the expenses of the associations. Third. All guaranteed stock or preferred stock under any and all names which receives a fixed dividend, whether profits have been earned or not, should be eliminated. The power to impose fines and forfeitures upon persons who fail to pay the installments on their stock ought to be removed. Fifth. The exemption of building and loan associations from the law of usury works a hardship which the former general assemblies could not have seen, in Mr. Remley's opinion. Sixth. The executive council ought to be given more plenary power, including the power to revoke the certificate authorizing the association to do business. Seventh. Provision should be made on which money paid on stock by the party who has borrowed theron, in case of foreclosure, should be treated as an absolute payment on the money borrowed together with the profits, if any, credited on such stock. Eighth. Some provisions should be made to enable associations to go into voluntary liquidation, with suitable provision for the protection of the borrowing member. It might be well also to authorize the assignment of loans made by the liquidating association to some association of similar character, subject to the rights of the borrowing member to have the amount paid on his stock credited on such loan, or to permit two or more associations to consolidate by a three-fourths vote of the stock of the respective associations, on terms which the executive council or some officer of the state should approve as equitable to all concerned. Ninth. Chapter 8 of the laws of the twenty-seventh general assembly, should be repealed. Its effect was to make new and different contracts for those affected thereby, which has worked a hardship in many instances.

In regard to the remedies needed in the insurance code, the following recommendations are made:

First.—All articles of incorporation of companies and associations incorporated under the laws of this state, as well as those incorporated in other states, should be submitted to the auditor of state and attorney general for their approval, and these officers be authorized to disapprove all plans which do not provide proper safeguards for the protection of policy holders. Second.—All companies and associations which make assessments on the members, or by a so-called safety clause reserve the right to make assessments, should by statute be prohibited from issuing so-called paid-up policies, limited payment policies and from accumulating a fund to be paid back to the members as dividends, distribution or surplus, or endowments in any form. Third.—All forms of policies should be submitted to the auditor for his approval and he should be required to disapprove all forms which do not state on the face of the policy all the terms, conditions or warranties by the breach of which the policy is voided, and to revoke the certificate of any company not complying with this provision. Fourth.—All policies

FIX DATE FOR CONVENTION.

Populists Will Meet at Sioux Falls On May 9.

LINCOLN, Neb., Feb. 21.—The next national convention of the populist party will be held in Sioux Falls, S. D., on May 9. Representation is based on the vote for General J. B. Weaver for president in 1892, or if any candidate for state office has since polled a larger vote that vote shall be the basis. Two delegates-at-large are given each state. This was the decision reached in a somewhat extended but harmonious meeting of the fusion wing of the national committee, which concluded yesterday.

FOR MIDDLE-AGED WOMEN.

Two Letters from Women Helped Through the "Change of Life" by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—When I first wrote to you I was in a very bad condition. I was passing through the change of life, and the doctors said I had bladder and liver trouble. I had suffered for nine years. Doctors failed to do me any good. Since I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, my health has improved very much. I will gladly recommend your medicine to others and am sure that it will prove as great a blessing to them as it has to me."—MRS. GEO. H. JUNE, 901 DeKalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Relief Came Promptly

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I had been under treatment with the doctors for four years, and seemed to get no better, I thought I would try your medicine. My trouble was change of life, and I must say that I never had anything help me so much as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Relief came almost immediately. I have better health now than I ever had. I feel like a new woman, perfectly strong. I give Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound all the credit, and would not do without her medicine for anything. I have recommended it to several of my friends. There is no need of women suffering so much for Mrs. Pinkham's remedies are a sure cure."—MAHALA BUTLER, Bridgewater, Ill.

FALLING HAIR

Save Your Hair with Shampoos of Cuticura SOAP

And light dressings of CUTICURA, purest of emollient skin cures. This treatment at once stops falling hair, removes crusts, scales, and dandruff, soothes irritated, itching surfaces, stimulates the hair follicles, supplies the roots with energy and nourishment, and makes the hair grow upon a sweet, wholesome, healthy scalp when all else fails.

Millions of Women

Use CUTICURA SOAP exclusively for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and healing, red, rough, and sore hands, in the form of baths for annoying irritations and chafings, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, and especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used it to use any other, especially for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp, and hair of infants and children. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients, and the most refreshing of flower odors. No other medicated soap ever compounded is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines, in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, viz, TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, the BEST skin and complexion soap, the BEST toilet and BEST baby soap in the world.

All that has been said of CUTICURA SOAP may be said with even greater emphasis of CUTICURA Ointment, the most delicate, and yet most effective of emollients, and greatest of skin cures. Its use in connection with CUTICURA SOAP (as per directions around each package), in the "ONE NIGHT CURE FOR SORE HANDS," in the "INSTANT RELIEF TREATMENT FOR DISFIGURING ITCHINGS AND IRRITATIONS," and in many uses too numerous to mention, is sufficient to prove its superiority over all other preparations for the skin.

Cuticura Complete External and Internal Treatment for every Humor, consisting of CUTICURA SOAP (25c.), to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle, CUTICURA OINTMENT (50c.), to instantly allay itching, inflammation, and irritation, and soothe and heal, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT (50c.), to cool and cleanse the blood.

The Set, $1.25 A SINGLE SET is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring, and humiliating skin, scalp, and blood humors, with loss of hair, when all else fails. POTTER DRUG AND CHEM. CORP., Sole Props., Boston. "All about the Skin, Scalp, and Hair," free.

For a sample package of "Benevolent Assimilation" we can cheerfully recommend the astute editor of the Democrat. If one were to believe all he reads in the Democrat, he must arrive at the conclusion that we owe all but our coming into this world, to Brackett. He cites history, and then dishes up nearly a column of stuff, and throughout the article there seems to be but one foremost desire and that is to get away from the main issue. And then there is another desire, and that is to have people believe he is a much wronged and abused man.

We shall not spend a great amount of time answering the last weeks article. but will touch on a few points only.

We never claimed that we were instrumental in the election of the Hon. John H. Gear to the U. S. Senate. But we did say that Mr. Sage, and the Sibley Herald, in which we were interested, had much to do with the election of Mr. Gear, in-as-much as it was through the influence of Mr. Sage, the influence of that paper and the combined influence of our near friends, that the Big Four, conceded for Cummins, was turned over to and pledged to Mr. Gear. The gain of the four counties was enough to elect.

Can you grasp the idea; can you see a knot-hole if the knot is knocked out? It is difficult for a man of Brackett's calibre, to understand how a paper can have such an influence; and how a man that is full of energy and ambition can accomplish such things. It takes a different style of man than the editor of the Democrat. It takes more of brains and less of the developement of the muscles necessary to clip blood and thunder editorials from the New York Sun or Post. Sabe!

The question is, not who helped put Gear in the senate, but who has been "ratting".

Bro. Brackett says we once claimed to own an interest in the Britt Tribune. Another case of misrepresentation.

The question is not, what papers we have owned, but, who has been "ratting for job work?

Yes, we expect to close up a few gaps Dr., and when you conform with the unwritten law of country printing offices, and stop sawing prices on ads and commercial work, the greatest gap of all will be closed.

He says in conclusion: "We shall continue to advertise for Klemme people so long as they wish to advertise with us the same as you do for the people of Garner or Belmond. This matter was all talked over before you went down there and if your word is good for anything was perfectly satisfactory."

Just a word or two about that little agreement, entered into about the time we came to Klemme, last October. We talked the matter over as you say, and you agreed to make no special effort to secure advertising in Klemme, and was to solicit no commercial work of any kind. You evidently thought we were so thick-headed that you could "be a good fellow" and keep on smouging from us the same as you did from every other man who has attempted to run a paper in Klemme. Our predecessor tried by honorable competition to crowd you out of the field, and when we came here prices were down to the present cost of raw material. You cut below our regular space rate for advertising, and injure our business in so doing. If you had been fair and honorable in your competition we might have been less aggressive in the exposure. Let us apply a small dose of your own medicine—history. Don't you remember Dr., a couple of months ago, along in December, when some of our business men tried to cut loose from you. How you whined because they wanted more space in the TIMES and less in the Democrat. The question was left for us to decide, and we were foolish enough to let you in; and by so doing continued your contracts, and also extended your license to continue the ratting process. It looks to us as if we had more than fulfilled our part of the agreement.

We believe there is nothing to be gained by smirching the columns of a paper with a continuation of a petty quarrel of this kind. And after touching upon one more matter, we believe we will write "the end." Bro. Brackett dwells at length upon the fact that at different times during the last ten years he hired us to work for him in his office. Strange. Was it because he loved us? Hardly that. But it is barely possibly that it was because our work was satisfactory to his customers. Was there ever a time when you could not say that?

It seems to us that you are wrong Doctor, but if you think not, well, it is your privilege. The isssue remains the same. To rat or not to rat, that is the question.

H. N. Merrick and family will start tomorrow for Clear Lake, South Dakota. Mr. Merrick has a fine farm there and we hope he will do well. The Merrick family have long been among Hancock County's best people, and they will be missed, especially in church matters, where they have been a strong factor.

Klemme business men are pushing right to the front and when Spring opens up, this will be one of the best trading points in Iowa. Every train brings in new goods, and farm machinery is stocked up on every hand. If you want to buy anything in the line of merchandise. no matter what, there is no place where a dollar will go farther than in Klemme.

Sam Schneider and Sam Chase of Garner, were in Klemme Saturday, distributing advertising matter for the Ariel Ladies Sextette, who will give one of their rare entertainments in the Opera House, at Garner on this evening. The Smith Sisters, who make up the company, are artists, and any of our people who attend, may be assured of a rare treat, and an evening of unalloyed enjoyment. The price is nominal—25c and 35c.

Prof. Peo, the phrenologist, has been giving a series of lectures in the M. W. A. Hall, and from the crowds attending, we judge he understands his business. As a delineator of character, he certainly is the best we have ever heard. If you do not want to see yourself as others see you, do not have a public examination. It will be a clear case of "Be sure your sins will find you out." But then—he seems to have the happy faculty of blending the bitter with the sweet and it is not so bad after all.

S. F. Schlegel held his sale last Thursday as per announcement, and although the weather was severe, a large crowd was in attendance. Stock sold well, and altogether the sale was considered. Mr. Schlegel will soon move to Texas, and though we don't like Schlegel, we will forgive him, because he is going away. We have purchased a good supply of onions, and hope to be able to shed a few tears on the day of his departure. Putting all jokes aside, we hope, that in that land of perpetual sunshine, Mr. Schlegel will meet with deserved success. And he will, for he is a rustler and that is the kind of men that get to the front.

If you want to buy a fine Ladies or Gents Gold or Silver Watch, go to Harr's. Prices reasonable.

Want work! Two men, and two boys 15 and 16 years of age want work on a farm; address box 241, or inquire of P. Malloy, Klemme, Iowa.

The first issue of the Garner Herald appeared last Friday evening, and is a newspaper such as Garner needs. We venture the assertion that it will be a success.

We received a letter from Miss E. Renziehausen a few days ago in which she states that she will be at home soon and that she has purchased a larger and finer stock of millinery than ever. Watch this paper for the opening announcement.

Astray Notice! Came to my place, 1 mile north and 1 mile east of Klemme, on February 20, 1 bay mare two years old any bay colt about 6 months old. Owner may have same by proving property and paying for this notice. WM. BAACK.

Corwith Hustler: The Hancock Democrat and KLEMME TIMES have come together; or rather the Democrat ran against a buzz saw, not knowing the TIMES man was in motion until the Doctor had lost his head. It is plain that the TIMES is able to hold its own, rat or no rat. Who will be the next to place himself on the TIMES' saw horse.

The Hancock Democrat had another enterprising benevolent assimilation fit last week and gave the town and business men a write-up. Outside of the fact that he had to go away from Garner to find brains enough to do the work, and that the people of that town wanted to see him enjoy an increase in pension, and were not particular who got the benefit of their good money, it was not so worse.

G. W. Hartfelder, of Kanawha, has invented a spring attachment lor a buggy top, that will make him a nice little sum of money if properly handled. It is to be fastened to the back bow of the top, so that when it is put down, or is accidently dropped there will be no danger of bending or breaking the top. It is not bunglesome, nor does it detract in any way from the looks of the top. Its chief charm is its simplicity and the slight cost involved in its manufacture. Geo. has secured letters patent and we expect to see him make a snug little sum out of this little invention.

TO CURE A COLD WHILE YOU SLEEP.

Take "Weeks' Break-Up-A-Cold Tablets." J. L. Harr will cheerfully refund the purchase price if it fails to cure. Price 25 cents.

D. D. Ross went to Belmond on business Tuesday.

H R. Fiegenbaum, of Garner, was a welcome caller at this office on Tuesday.

Wm. Allabin, of Goodell, was in Klemme several days last week in the interest of the Champion Harvester Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Chan Bartholomew started for their new home at Castlewood, South Dakota. Tuesday. A large number of their friends went to the train to bid them good-bye, and wish them success.

Henry Lau Jr. returned from Chicago Monday. He reports Chicago somewhat bigger than Klemme, and that everybody seemed to have something to do. The several cars of hogs which he sold brought top prices and he is correspondingly elated.

Agents on salary of $15.00 per week and expenses; the greatest agent seller ever produced; every stock and poultry raiser buys it on sight. Hustlers wanted. Refference. Address. with stamp, American Mfg. Co. Terre Haute, Ind.

We publish this week the financial statement of the Independent school district of Klemme. Patrons should read it and see how money has been expended, and what appropriation will be necessary to continue the good work another year.

Buff Plymouth Rocks

20 fine birds for sale from $1.00 up. The Buff Plymouth Rocks are, without doubt, the best general purpose fowl raised. Come quick, for they will not last long at the price. HENRY STRAW, tf. Garner, Iowa

ELL CENTER.

Wm. Baack was visiting his friends in Chicago last week.

The weather last Friday and Saturday was a record breaker.

Harry Merten and a lady friend of Garner, attended the Literary Thursday evening.

Dan Karr and sister Jessie, of Clear Lake, attended the dance at Badkers' on Friday evening.

Misses Myrtle Braund and Cora Lawhorn are on the sick list but are better at this writing.

Miss Laura Flint who has been attending school in Klemme, visited her parents last Friday.

James Brozik, James Fiala and Isaac Ptacek returned home Friday from their Franklin Co., trip.

James Coutts and family are comfortably settled in their home on the farm. Their old neighbors are glad to welcome them back.

The Center school visited the Grosbeck school last Thursday and the two schools rendered the Washington's birthday exercises together.

It was decided at the Literary on last Thursday to adjourn until some more convenient date in the future; owing to the bad roads and poor attendance.

Mr. Badker's gave a farewell dance for their friends benefit on last Thursday evening. All fortunate enough to be present were royally entertained. A sumptuous feast was served in which all did ample justice and after wishing the Badkers abundant success in their new home. the guests departed thinking it was an evening well spent.

Great opportunity offered to good, reliable men. Salary of $15 per week and expenses for man with rig to introduce our Poultry Mixture and Insect Destroyer in the country. Send stamp. American Mfg. Co., Terre Haute, Ind.

Having received a car load of furniture and undertaking goods, I am in shape to supply you with anything in the line of furniture etc.,

G. F. SCHULER, Garner, Ia.

GARNER.

The new railroad for Garner is said to be almost a sure thing.

John Kluver, of Crystal Lake, was in town Monday on business.

J. M. Coutts, formerly clerk of the district court, and later editor of the Britt News, has moved from Britt onto his Ell township farm.

W. E. Bradford and Wesley Aldrich, of Britt, are in town this week attending court.

District court is still grinding away, and Judge Smith is disposing of the cases at a rapid rate.

It is said that the temperance people propose to put up a ticket for city officers and fight for it to a finish.

Henry Mann has hired a man to run the dray line, and is now 'sticking' type in the Garner Herald office.

Fred Dietz expects to go to Paris to attend the World's Fair this summer. Mr. Dietz is a native of France.

The city election for Garner will be held on Monday, March 26th, according to the proclamation of the Mayor.

It is said on the quiet that thee will be a warm political fight at the municipal caucusses and election this spring.

C. M. Nagle of Clarion, Theo. Fadford of Marshalltown and Lee Hatch of Forest City, were foreign attorneys who were in attendance at the District Court last week.

The Smith Sisters will give their entertainment at the Opera House tonight. It is needless to say they will have a large house When they were her before the Opera house was crowded.

Garner is becoming one of the best trading points in Northern Iowa. Farmers who formerly traded at Clear Lake, Forrest City and Britt are now coming to Garner, and they all say that Garner will be the biggest and best town of all the rest.

Senator Harriman replies to the resolutions adopted by the temperance mass meeting a week ago Sunday and says he is heartily in favor of the principals promulgated in them. Representative Way replies that he is opposed to it. A majority of the people of the county are with Mr. Way.

GERMANTOWN.

Teachers and pupils of Center school visited the Bredlow school last Thursday afternoon.

Services were held in the Beier and Center school house last Sunday instead of in the church. The church will be ready for occupancy next Sunday. Services will be in the morning.

Carl Riemer, a pupil of the Bredlow school, has won a certificate of reward promised by Supt. Schell to all such pupils who were neither absent or tardy during the term. Carl is at the present writing the second in the county and it certainly speaks well for one so young.

The society is in a prosperous condition and we hope the new officers will help it along.

To Cure a Cold in One Day.

Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. Grove's signature on every box. 25c.

Mrs. Calvin Zimmerman, Milesburg, Pa. says, "As a speedy cure for coughs colds, croup and sore throat One Minute Cough Cure is unequaled It is pleasant for children to take. I heartily recommend it to mothers." It is the only harmless remedy that produces immediate results. It cures bronchitis, pneumonia, grippe and throat and lung diseases. It will prevent consumption. J. L. Harr.

GOODELL

Wm. Lau was transacting business in Goodell Saturday last.

Mrs. S. S. Wyand, of Toledo, Iowa, is here visiting relatives.

Pell Thompson visited with relatives at Dows over Sunday.

Six cars of live stock were shipped from this station last week.

At the U. B. Donation Supper $26. was realized to apply on the pastor's salary.

Mrs. Oscar Gartin and Mrs. Erskine were at Garner several days last week.

Mrs. Aug. Martin and Miss Arnold, of Klemme, were Goodell visitors Monday.

XXXX McLaughlin, of Emmetsburg, was transacting business in town Tuesday.

Daniel Eldred was transacting business here last week. He returned to his home in Dakota the first of the week.

Prof. Peo delivered three lectures in the Opera House last week. They were instructive and entertaining. He reads character very well indeed. He expects to return in May and complete the course.

The Woodman dance last Thursday evening was a grand success. Seventy-five numbers were sold. The Royal Neighbors served the supper, and the total receipts were nearly $57. The M. W. A. neighbors here, as everywhere, are very popular, and their entertainments largely attended.

Gage says Macrum is an ass, while the country may not altogether endorse this statement it is quite certain that Macrum would have stood higher in public esteem had he spoke earlier or not at all.

Count Castllane proposes to sue the editor of the Figaro for libel, and after collecting his judgment then kill him. This program smacks of the true business instinct of a follower of Gould.

CURRENT TOPICS

TILLMAN ON LINCOLN.

In delivering a speech in the senate the other day Ben Tillman of South Carolina paid a tribute to Lincoln. Referring to the Civil War period he said:

"Amid the storm of passion who was the man, the embodiment of all that was best and noblest in northern civilization, and even in American civilization, who stood as the great apostle of liberty? Whose words of fervid eloquence marshaled the northern hosts? Whose high moral purpose, whose grandeur of character and greatness of soul, sustained those hosts in adversity and defeat? Who stood like a colossus towering above the smaller, meaner men who surrounded him, and who must ever stand above them,commanding the admiration and love of all true men everywhere? Who? Abraham Lincoln; and I, from South Carolina, tell you so and feel honored in doing it.

"Whatever motives may be attributed to others, whatever of selfishness or ambition that entered into the calculations of others, I here declare it is my belief that he never had a thought in connection with the whole subject nor uttered a word that did not have its inspiration in the purest patriotism and the noblest aspiration for humanity. He did not consider the Declaration of Independence an academic question. It was a religion."

CONGRESSIONAL FUNERALS.

Mrs. Chickering, widow of the New York congressman, who met his death in an accident last Wednesday, has chosen wisely in declining to countenance the pagan rite known as a congressional funeral. Such obsequies merely furnish an excuse for a junketing party of senators and congressmen, who journey to the funeral in a special train liberally stocked with stimulants and who turn up at the mortuary services redolent of whisky and stale tobacco smoke. The spectacle is unedifying and Mrs. Chickering, like other sensible people, sees in it no honor to the dead and a scandal to the living. The statesmen who were assigned to attend the Chickering funeral may be disappointed, but they can solace themselves by getting drunk in Washington instead of New York.

BOERS REFUSING AID.

Simultaneously with the departure of the fifty-seven men composing the Irish relief corps from New York for South Africa comes the announcement from the European secretary of the Boer relief fund committee that all the money, supplies, and men needed for the present have been furnished to that organization. The committee has stopped receiving money and desires it to be understood that it is in no need of further assistance at present. This seems to indicate that the Boers are not wanting in sympathizers in any part of the world, and that the response of their friends to their first and only appeal for assistance was prompt and generous.

ROBERTS IN THE FREE STATE.

Lord Roberts cheered the English people and strengthened their confidence in him by making his first important maneuver in South Africa with brilliant success. The movement of his force in reality marked the opening of a new campaign. It brought a British army for the first time upon the territory of the Boers and constituted the first step in a new strategic plan. The maneuver was carefully planned and executed with a rapidity and adroitness which seem to indicate that England at last has a capable strategist in the field.

PRIVATE PROPERTY AND LAW.

An important decision in a case involving property and contract rights has been rendered in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. It is justly regarded as a vindication of reasonable industrial liberty and a rebuke to legislators who make assaults upon property in violation of the spirit of the Constitution and American principles of government. The court referred to has set aside an act of congress as invalid because repugnant to the fourteenth amendment, which prohibits the taking of private property without due process of law.

THE CURRENCY BILL'S MAJORITY.

By a vote of 46 to 29 the senate adopted the amended financial bill. The passage of the bill was at no time in any serious doubt, for even the opposition discovered at an early stage that it was impossible to prevent favorable action.

Iowa News

THE city of Boone is to be given a library building to cost not less than $10,000. It will be the gift of Hon. C. J. A. Ericson, the only condition being that the city furnish a suitable site to be used forever for library purposes.

CHARLES ESSEX, the young man who was convicted at the present term of the district court at Chariton on the charge of attempting to wreck the Burlington fast mail on the night of November 23, has been granted a new trial.

IN the preliminary trial of Leslie Eastburn at Bloomfield the defendant was held to the grand jury without bail. Eastburn is charged with murdering Jasper Sutton because the latter objected to the marriage of his daughter to Eastburn.

AT Jefferson a few days ago John Head, the 21-year-old son of Representative Mahlon Head, accidentally shot himself three inches below the heart. The accident occurred while handling a 32-calibre revolver. The ball penetrated the body and has not yet been located. The doctors pronounce the wound serious, but hope for his recovery. His father was in Des Moines attending the legislature. He was at once sent for and is now beside his son.

GEORGE SLAUSON, a young unmarried farmer living two and one-half miles east of Rockwell, was found lying dead on his bed a few days ago. The unfortunate young man was in town the night before and was apparently in good health. The deceased was alone, and the manner and cause of his death will probably always remain a mystery. The coroner and physicians were called and expressed the belief that death resulted from a spasm or heart disease.

AT Boone day last week two cases of suspicious rash were examined by the doctors, who pronounced them small pox. One case is that of Wesley Hardin, aged 35 years, who is quite sick. The other cases are those of two children of William Switzer, who have been sick for some time, no physician having been called. They attended the Fifth ward school and the school in that ward has been closed by order of the health department. All the school children will be vaccinated.

CHARLES ESSEX, on trial at Chariton for attempted train-wrecking, was found guilty by the jury and will probably get a ten-year sentence. He broke down and wept when he heard the verdict. Essex attempted to wreck the C., B. & Q. fast mail train on the night of November 23, last. By placing ties on the track, he hoped to wreck the train, but his attempt failed, owing to the speed at which the train was traveling. It was on a down grade and the train was making seventy miles an hour. The ties were scattered without harm to the train.

AN incendiary fire at Albia destroyed the lumber yards of the W. B. Ballew Lumber company to the extent of probably $10,000. The fire started in the east side of the yards, and a man who slept in a restaurant across the street claims that he awoke in time to see an unknown man apply a torch to the buildings, and then got out into the street in time to see the man, torch in hand, run away from the fire. He gave the alarm, but it was too late to save the bulk of the buildings and piles of lumber. An insurance of $5,200 will not begin to cover the loss.

THE supervisors of census for Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota and the two Dakotas met in Des Moines a few days ago to receive instructions in their duties. Dr. Frederick H. Wines, of New York, assistant director of the census, was present and addressed them at the Savery hotel. He is making a tour of the country, meeting groups of the supervisors at different cities and explaining to them the detail of their duties, so that they in turn may be able properly to drill the enumerators in whose hands will be the duty of actually gathering the facts.

LESLIE EASTBURN, a 21-year-old boy, shot Jasper Sutton, an aged and highly respected citizen of Bloomfield. Three bullets penetrated the abdomen, causing almost instant death. Eastburn called at Sutton's home to take his 18-year-old daughter, Alice, to church. The father met him at the door and ordered him away. An altercation ensued and Sutton followed Eastburn to the road. Finally weapons were drawn by both men, but Eastburn fired first, the other man falling before he could raise his weapon. Eastburn gave himself up, going into Sutton's home and consoling the daughter until officers arrived.

THE Dows hotel at Ames has been closed on account of a case of small pox. A new cook was engaged a few days ago, who was taken sick and who was pronounced to have a genuine case of small pox.

THE Humboldt county grand jury has returned an indictment against Frank Michalak and wife, charging them with being responsible for the death of Michael Chess. Warrants were immediately issued and they were arrested. Their bonds were fixed at $1,500, which they furnished. They will be tried at the April term of the district court.

AT the recent meeting of the Butter Makers' Association, at Lincoln, Neb., Iowa won the first prize in the state delegation competition. The markings were as follows: Iowa 191 entries, average 89.675; Minnesota, nineteen entries, average 90.17; Wisconsin, seventy-two entries, average 87.60; Illinois, fifty-nine entries, average 90.42; Kansas, forty-five entries, average 88.67; Nebraska, fifty-one entries, average 89.07; South Dakota, thirty-four entries, average 85.85.

AT a meeting of the officers of the Fort Dodge & Southeastern road it was decided to start preliminary survey at once. Michael Vincent, of Onawa, was given full charge of the work. The line will be finished as rapidly as possible. President E. H. Rich stated that his trip to New York City was very satisfactory and that the officials of the Iowa Central were deeply interested in the new road and would come to Fort Dodge in a few days for the purpose of further investigation.

M. C. CALHOUN, an old soldier and respected farmer living one mile south of Belmond, was taken before the insanity commissioners through information filed by Henry Palmateer, a young man who desires to wed Mary, the 16-year-old daughter of Calhoun. The latter has repeatedly refused to allow Palmateer the hand of his daughter and has warned him not to visit her. This caused the young man to believe that Calhoun's mind was unbalanced. The commissioners made an investigation and found Calhoun sane in all respects. Calhoun now threatens to take Palmateer before the insanity board.

ABOUT one hundred members of the general assembly accepted the invitation of the State University trustees to spend Washington's birthday in Iowa City. Many of the legislators were accompanied by their families, and committee clerks and other state employes and friends of the university swelled the party to 200. Three special coaches were attached to the train for the accommodation of the party. The party was given a hearty reception and was royally entertained. Addresses were delivered by President MacLean, Lieutenant-Governor Milliman, Speaker Bowen and other members of the legislature, while the chief speaker of the day was Chancellor Craig, of Drake University. At 5:47 p. m. the party left for home.

WOODBURY county has a bill pending before the legislature which involves a rather peculiar question. Among other school loans made by the county out of the state school fund, was one secured by a large tract of land lying upon the Missouri bottom and abutting upon the river. The loan was good enough, so far as the land was concerned at the time it was made. But one spring the river began cutting deep into the main land, and the first thing known the land on which the loan had been made had been washed away. Of course the man in whose name the loan had been made told the county to go ahead and foreclose its mortgage and collect what it could from the Great Muddy. He had lost his land and he did not propose to also pay the debt. The county is held responsible by the state for the return of the money loaned out of the school fund, and here is where the county appeals to the state. It wants to be reimbursed for the money lost in the swallowed up land.

MATTERS now look as if the Sioux City Starch Works would soon be gobbled up by the big starch trust, the National Starch Company, and closed down. For some time the independent combination, the United States Starch Company, of which the Sioux City plant is a member, has been negotiating with the National Starch Company with the view of consolidation, and it is now announced that sufficient progress has been made to justify the statement that another two or three months will witness the completion of the deal. If the negotiations end successfully the surviving company will control practically the entire output of starch and glucose in the United States. Associated with the Sioux City plant in the independent combine are the plants at Oswego, Buffalo and Nebraska City. It is stated to be a part of the general plan of the big trust to shut down one or more of these plants after it acquires them, and if the present officers of the United States Starch Company have a voice in the trust's affairs they will vote against the Sioux City works.

CONGRESS.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 19.—The senate spent an hour or more in debating the question of whether congress had power to extend the constitution over acquired territory. No conclusion was reached. The bill providing for a government for the territory of Hawaii was under consideration at the time.

HOUSE.

The debate upon the Porto Rican tariff bill, which is to continue throughout the week and possibly longer, opened to-day. On all hands it is agreed that this bill, although it applies only to Porto Rico, involving as it does the question of the power to govern our new possessions outside the limitations of the constitution, is the most important which will come before this congress. In to-day's debate Payne opened with a general argument in support of the bill, going largely into the material side of the situation, which the bill is designed to relieve. Richardson, the democratic leader, joined issue upon the power of congress to enact the proposed legislation, and Dalzell, of Pennsylvania, backed up Payne with a constitutional and legal argument.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 20.—Kenney spoke against the retention by the United States of the Philippine islands and urging that the Filipinos be accorded the right to govern themselves. Consideration was resumed of the Hawaiian government bill. An amendment was adopted providing that "no proceeding shall be maintained for the specific performance of any contract heretofore or hereinafter entered into for personal labor or service, and there shall be no criminal proceedings for breach thereof."

HOUSE.

Again to-day there were but three speeches in the house upon the Porto Rican tariff bill. Five hours were consumed in their delivery. Hopkins, of Illinois, spoke in support of the bill and Newlands, of Nevada, and Swanson of Virginia in opposition to it. The speakers devoted themselves almost exclusively to the constitutional question involved and were listened to with attention.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 21.—During the greater part of to-day's session the Hawaiian government bill was under consideration. But little progress was made.

HOUSE

Bromwell, rep., spoke against the Porto Rican bill. He opposed it on the ground of policy and not constitutionality. His hostility, however, was not so absolute but that he announced his intention of voting for it if the substitute failed. The other speakers were Ray and Long for the bill and Henry against it.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 22.—In accordance with the the annual custom, Washington's farewell address was read in the senate today by Senator Foraker. A discussion as to the right of the Quay case to come before the senate occupied considerable time, but without action the senate adjourned.

HOUSE.

The debate on the Porto Rican tariff bill brought out several notable speeches in the house to-day, including one by Grosvenor, of Ohio, who answered a number of questions as to the attitude of the president; another by McCall, of Massachusetts, the republican member of the ways and means committee, who dissented from the majority report, and Moody, another Massachusetts republican, who sharply criticised the position of his colleague; McClellan, of New York, and Brantley, of Georgia, also spoke against the bill, and Parker, of New Jersey, in support of it. The debate was continued at a night session.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 23.—In spite of vigorous and influential opposition, Penrose, of Pennsylvania, succeeded in getting the Quay case before the senate, and during the afternoon three notable speeches were delivered. Daniel vigorously supported Quay's right to a seat. Vest and Foraker delivered notable speeches anent the Hawaiion government bill. Both were constitutional arguments, Foraker's being a reply to Vest's.

HOUSE.

An agreement was reached in the house that the vote on the Porto Rican tariff bill be taken up at 3 p. m. next Tuesday, general debate to close Monday. The speech of Littlefield, of Maine, was the feature of the day. He added to his laurels won in the Roberts debate by a speech against the bill, which for brilliancy, wit and logic rivals the best efforts of the recognized orators of the house. Among the others who spoke were Messrs. Jones (Va) and Mattox (Ga.) against the bill, and Messrs. Russell (Conn.), Barnholdt (Mo.), Gardner (Mich.), and Lacey (Iowa) for it. The debate continued at a night session.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 24.—Throughout the session to-day the senate had under consideration the Hawaiian government bill. The discussion took a wide range, but the basis of it was an amendment offered by Platt, of Connecticut, as to the appointment and tenure of office of the judges of the Hawaiian court. No decision was reached.

HOUSE.

The house continued the debate on the Porto Rican bill, Tawney of Minnesota paying his respects to Littlefield of Maine, who had opposed the bill.

WILL NOT GET ISLANDS.

Navy Department Makes Good Its Title to Disputed Possessions.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—The American flag will not come down on Sibuta island or on Cagayan island. Spain has been demanding that these islands be returned to it. The war deparment was ready to make the return, and so was the state dedartment. The navy department was, however, unwilling to surrender anything it had taken, and has made its title good to the islands. The state department will inform Spain that the islands are the property of the United States and will hold them. Sibitu was saved to the United States by the discovery of an old treaty between Spain, Great Britain and Germany, which specifically says that Borneo's holding shall not extend farther than three miles from the coast of Borneo. Sibuta is on the opposite side of the channel separating Borneo from the Sulu archipelago. As to Cagayan island the records show that it was at one time used as a penal colony by Spain, and the latter is therefore stopped from denying that it was used as a part of the Philippine group.

Bear's Paw in Persian Gulf.

BOMBAY, Feb. 25.—The Times of India announces that a large Russian cruiser has arrived at Bandar Abbas, on the Strait of Ermuc, which connects the Persian Gulf with the Arabian Sea. The British third-class cruiser Pomone and the British gunboat have proceeded thither.

Soap made from grasshoppers is said to make the human skin soft and smooth and youthful looking. It is the invention of a Madrid manufacturer, and the beauties of Spain are ecstatic about it.

Paper shingles, laquered and stiffened, are very tough and durable, and can be made in any desirable shape or color. A novel cottages with slanting roofs they are coming into great favor in England.

WILL FIGHT TO THE FINISH.

Gen. Cronje Evidently Has No Idea of Surrendering.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—General Cronje is seemingly making his last stand. He is dying hard, hemmed in by British and with shells from fifty guns coming into his camp. The third day of the fight General Cronje asked for an armistice to bury his dead. "Fight to the death or surrender unconditionally" was Lord Kitchener's reply. General Cronje immediately sent back word that his request for a truce had been misunderstood, and that his determination then, as before, was to fight to the death.

The battle went on. This was the situation of General Cronje Tuesday evening, as sketched in the scanty telegrams that have emerged from the semi silence of South Africa.

Officially Lord Roberts wires that he has scattered the advance commando of the reinforcements that were striving to reach General Cronje. It is regarded as singular that Lord Roberts, wiring Wednesday, should not mention the appeal for an armistice on the previous day, and also that the war office should withhold good news, if it has any.

Without trying to reconcile even the scanty materials at hand, it seems plain that General Cronje is in a bad, and even a desperate situation, and that the British are pressing their advantage.

While the attack on General Cronje proceeds, there is a race for concentration between the Boers and the British.

The engagement with General Cronje's five to eight thousand entrenched men is likely to become an incident in a battle between the masses. The separated fractions of the Boer power are rapidly drawing together to attack Lord Roberts.

General Buller, according to a dispatch from Chievely, dated Wednesday, finds the Boers in positions north of the Tugela largely reinforced. This seems strange.

CANNOT ESCAPE.

British Authorities Believe Cronje Will Surely Be Crushed.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—Since 2:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon nothing has been received from the scene of what the London papers call General Cronje's death struggle. They stated that they believed it impossible for Cronje to escape from the grip of Lord Roberts. The report circulated in Berlin that Cronje had succeeded in making his escape came from the Boer headquarters in Brussells, where it was stated that details were still lacking. The only news from the other parts of the seat of war received during the night is a special dispatch from Colenso, under date of Feb. 24, stating that the British, in spite of strong opposition, were advancing slowly but surely and driving the Boers from the kopjes between Groblers kloof and Hlangwana.

BRITISH MEET HEAVY LOSS.

Repulsed by the Boers North of the Tugela River.

BOER HEAD LAAGER, Natal, Feb. 23.—Yesterday the British crossed the Tugela in large numbers, with cannon, and over sixty wagons. They attacked the Ermelo and Middleburghers' commandoes, but were forced to retire under a heavy Mauser fire. A renewed attempt to storm the Ermelo men was made this morning, but the British were again driven off. The fighting continues. The British losses were very heavy. Eight ambulances were employed in collecting their dead and wounded. The generals report that the commandoes are fighting bravely. Ladysmith fired a few shells this morning at our outposts till silenced by "Long Tom."

Buller Not Yet Successful.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—Ladysmith had not been relieved when the latest news left Natal two days ago. The Boers had then retired half way between Ladysmith and Colenso. If only 6,000 went to the Free State, as both the Boer and British accounts assert, the 12,000 who are left may purpose to maintain the siege and to resist Gen. Buller within contracted lines, although the impression at Gen. Buller's headquarters is that the Boers are merely covering a retreat.

Cronje Reinforced and Well Entrenched.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—A cable dispatch from The Hague to a prominent Dutch resident of New York, printed in the Evening Journal, says:

"Dr. Leyds has received the following dispatch from President Kruger: 'Free State and Transvaal forces together south of Paardeberg. Reinforced and well entrenched.'" English Meet With Heavy Losses.

HOOP LAAGER, Ladysmith, Wednesday, Feb. 21.—There was heavy fighting all Monday and Tuesday, and it still continues since early this morning. Our officers hope to dislodge the British from their position. Last night a body of British troops tried to cross the river, but were beaten back with heavy loss. Our positions are being bombarded from Ladysmith.

HIS WORD OF HONOR.

A Tale of the Blue and the Gray.

BY E. WERNER.

CHAPTER X.—(Continued.)

"I hope, sir, that you are not venturing upon a jest with me, the justice of the peace! How does it happen that you have anything to do with such matters? Who is this Roland, and what does Mr. Harrison say to the affair?"

"Nothing at all, because for the moment he is in a very uncomfortable situation, which prevents any protest. But, as to my authority, allow me to show it to you."

The barrel of a revolver was suddenly presented to the old gentleman, who, with a cry of terror, fled to the recess of the window, leaving both dignity and dinner in the lurch. The clerk, on the contrary, who had listened with mouth wide open, sat as if paralyzed with terror.

"Help! Murder! Robbers!" shouted Mr. Thompson; but terror so stifled him that the cry sounded a piteous whimper.

"Don't scream, sir," said Maxwell, quietly. "We can come to a friendly agreement. As I said, the point in question is merely a wedding. The bridegroom is my friend, Lieutenant William Roland. I have the pleasure of presenting myself to you as Doctor John Maxwell, both of the Union army, which will arrive here in a few hours."

"The whole Union army?" exclaimed Thompson, with a fresh outburst of horror.

"No; not the whole army—there would scarcely be room for it on the plantation—but our regiment. I told you during our drive that the troops were marching in this direction. But we desire, for certain reasons, to have the ceremony performed first. The bride and groom are ready, and I hope you will be, too. I place myself at your disposal as a witness, your clerk will be the second witness, and I suppose you brought the marriage contract with you. We can use it at once."

"Unprecedented! Impossible!" groaned the justice, who now came forward again. His clerk had recovered from his stupor so far as to fly from the range of the revolver. He, too, took refuge in the window recess, where he vied with his employer in trembling.

"May I request you to let me see the document?" asked Maxwell.

"But it contains the name of Edward Harrison," said the magistrate, desperately.

"We'll erase it and put William Roland in its place."

"But that won't do."

"It must do! I most courteously beg you for it."

A movement of the revolver gave this courtesy the necessary emphasis. Mr. Thompson tried to hide behind his clerk, and the latter, with a trembling hand, drew out a paper which he held like a shield toward the oppressor.

"Space for the names has been left," he stammered. "They were to be filled in at Springfield."

"Excellent! Then there is nothing to be erased. Calm yourself, Mr. Thompson. I assure you that I have the highest regard for you, and have told my friend so much about you that he, too, holds you in great esteem. Permit me again to apologize for disturbing you, but there is nothing to prevent your continuing your meal as soon as the ceremony is over. So, if you please—"

The gentlemen did not look as if they were inclined to follow. They left the window with evident reluctance, but they did leave it and, under Maxwell's escort, went to the drawing-room.

Here they found William with Florence, the latter half-bewildered by the rapidity with which events had followed each other. While waiting in terrible anxiety for news, her imagination conjuring up the most terrible possibilities, Roland suddenly stood before her, free and unharmed, and in hurried words told her that she must be ready to be married at once.

He had at last entered with the utmost zeal into Maxwell's bold plan, which had at first seemed out of the question. It was really the only way to secure his bride and prevent any later intrigues of Edward. He had an inviolate right to claim his wife. Happen what might in Springfield, she belonged to him alone. The brief delay which would be caused by the ceremony was really not so dangerous as it seemed. Captain Wilson could hardly have reached the city, and the escort would not arrive before evening. The doctors were not expected for several hours; and as for the servants, Maxwell's judgment of them proved correct.

CHAPTER XI.

From the moment they discovered the identity of the two strangers all hostility was at an end. They belonged to the ranks of the "liberators." Besides, they loved their young mistress as much as they feared in Edward the stern master. The last few months, during which he had had the reins of government, had shown the whole household what was to be expected from the new master. Now he had mysteriously vanished. Perhaps he might even be dead. But not a hand stirred to seek or aid him.

Besides, practical John, who never lost sight of any possibility, had taken care to prevent danger from the few white men who were acting as overseers in the fields. He had summoned the whole establishment, and briefly stated that the Union army was marching in that direction; that one regiment would arrive that evening and hold every human being in Springfield to a strict account, if a hair of his head or Lieutenant Roland's was harmed. The composure with which he related this fairy tale made a strong impression, and the rapidity of all these incidents bewildered them. No one ventured to raise an objection when Maxwell orderd the fastest horses to be harnessed and the carriage brought round; but all hastened to obey, while the doctor proceeded to exchange the courtsies already mentioned with his esteemed friend, Mr. Thompson.

Florence was sitting on a sofa with William standing beside her—both in the greatest agitation and excitement—when the gentlemen entered. Doctor Maxwell, however, was calmness itself, when he made the necessary introductions.

"Lieutenant Roland—the bridegroom—you already know the bride, Miss Harrison. William, I have the pleasure of presenting to you the justice of the peace, Mr. Thompson, who, with the utmost readiness to oblige, instantly consented to gratify your wish."

William looked at the magistrate, whose pale face and shaking knees distinctly showed how he had been induced to show this vaunted obligingness. The affair, which afforded his friend a malicious satisfaction, was extremely painful to him.

"Calm yourself, sir," he said, approaching him. "You are perfectly safe. Neither you nor your companion needs fear. I deeply regret that we were forced to put the request in such a form, but the circumstances compelled it. As soon as the wedding is over, you can return to the city."

The old gentleman again breathed freely. He had imagined the lieutenant a far more terrible personage than the doctor, and now he proved to be the more humane of the two. But Mr. Thompson preferred to place himself close to Miss Harrison as quickly as possible. If he stood close by her side, no one could fire at him.

Meanwhile, Maxwell had given the marriage contract, which had been handed to him, a brief, yet thorough scrutiny, and now again laid it on the table.

"Everything is correct!" he said. "The names are still missing. Please insert them. Mr. William Roland—Miss Florence Harrison! There, now we can begin."

The magistrate had so far recovered that he could commence the ceremony, which was performed very quickly, but in strict legal form. The usual questions were asked and answered, the signatures were affixed, and in less than ten minutes the wedding was over. William, deeply moved, clasped his young wife to his heart.

Maxwell glanced toward the door, where Ralph had appeared during the last moment, but remained standing motionless in order not to interrupt the ceremony. The doctor exchanged a few words with him in a low tone, then turned to the young couple.

"Mrs. Roland, please go to your father. William, you can accompany your wife. There is no fear that your presence will disturb the sick man—don't leave her alone now!"

A significant glance emphasized the words. William understood that the last moments of Mr. Harrison's life were at hand, and putting his arm around his wife he led her to her dying father.

LEAVING BOTH DIGNITY AND DINNER.

How a Boer Signs His Name.

From the London Mail: The Boer may be fairly good at handling a rifle, but he is sadly deficient in his ability to handle a pen. When the average Boer has to attach his name to a document an air of importance pervades his dwelling for several hours. The children are constantly chided, the patient "vrouw" has a preoccupied look and the husband himself puffs even more vigorously than usual at his pipe. Eventually a corner of the table is cleared and carefully wiped. The family Bible is placed in position and the sheet of paper requiring the signature placed upon it. An expectant silence falls upon the company. "Stilte!" cries the wife. "Stilte, kindetjes, papa gaat sein naam teken." ("Hush, children, father is about to sign his name.") The family stands round open-mouthed, and all eyes gaze expectantly upon the paper. With arms bared for the fray, and with pen carefully poised, the Boer bends to his task. The pen is gripped firmly between his horny fingers. In thick, ungainly scratchs, and with slow and painful motion the pen begins to work, and at the end of, it may be four minutes, the deed is accomplished.

Earth a Pyramid in Shape.

Since the earth was first formed many theories have been advanced as to its shape and the process of its formation, but no one until our day ever maintained that its form was that of a huge pyramid. Centuries ago Pythagoras and Aristotle declared that it was spherical, Anaximander that it was shaped like a column, Democritus that it was a concave disc and very much resembled a huge porringer, Empedocles and Anaximenes that it was a plane disk, and Zenofanes that it had roots like a tree, which spread in all directions far into the infinite. Now comes J. Greene, an English scientist, and a government official in the Sandwich islands, with the bold announcement that all these ancient theories, as well as the modern ones, are utterly baseless, since, according to him, the earth has the form of a triangular pyramid, or, in other words, of a regular tetrahedron, with the apex at the south pole and the base at the north.

His Favorite Barber.

HEAVY LOSSES.

Fighting at Paardeberg Drift Was the Costliest of the War.

PAARDEBERG DRIFT, Orange Free State, Feb. 22.—One of the costliest actions of the war occurred at Paardeberg Drift Sunday, February 18. General Kelley-Kenney, in his pursuit of Cronje, caught his rear guard at Klip Drift and followed the burghers to Koodoostrand. The drift action began at daybreak, the mounted infantry driving the Boer rear guard up the river towards the main body, while another body of mounted infantry manouvered on the right front and flank of the Boers. The British main body advanced to out-flank the Boers' laager on the north bank of the river. Kelley-Kenney having seized two drifts, found the Boers strongly enclosed and ordered an attack, with the Highland brigade on the left and Knox's brigade on the center and right, while General Smith-Dorrien's brigade crossed the river and advanced along the north bank. On both the north and south bank the ground is level and the advance across this was deadly and the British losses were heavy. The battle was an exact replica of Modder River. The soldiers were under fire all day long and the fighting had no definite result, as the Boer laagers were barricaded and they remained therein. The British shelled the laager vigorously. The Boers confessed a loss of over 800. The terrific shelling was resumed Monday, when Cronje asked for an armistice. The shelling continued Tuesday, over fifty guns pouring lead into the Boers' camp.

ALARM IS FELT IN LONDON.

Lord Roberts May Have Met With a Serious Reverse.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—Lord Roberts's list of forty-nine killed and wounded officers, including two generals, in the engagements up to Sunday evening, causes anxiety, especially as in the officers' list neither the losses of the Welsh and Essex regiments nor those of the mounted infantry are included. This is about the number that fell at Colenso, where the non-commissioned officers and men brought the total loss to 800. It is considered strange that when sending his casualties, Lord Roberts gives no information as to the result of the fighting. If he has sent such a report the war office is withholding it. Moreover, nothing is known as to what took place Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. This absence of details from Lord Roberts's dispatches, contrasted with his rather full narratives during the first part of his operations, produces uneasiness among military observers.

BOERS TO OPPOSE ROBERTS.

Troops Being Withdrawn From Other Positions for That Purpose.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—The Boers are leaving all the positions held by them on British territory and are concentrating for the defense of their own. Sir Redvers Buller thinks they are about to raise the siege of Ladysmith and this is the large news of the day. General Cements reports that the force confronting him has been greatly diminished. Ten thousand men are estimated to have gone from the Colesberg district alone. The Boers are also retracing their steps from Zululand. Thus they are relaxing their hold on all sides in order to assemble to oppose Lord Roberts. He is pressing on steadily towards Bloemfontein. This is shown by his inconsequential telegram from Paardeberg, fifty or sixty miles away. Doubtless he is miles behind the column that is pursuing the Boers and the next important news may be the occupation of Bloemfontein.

RATIFY BECKHAM'S CLAIM.

Kentucky Democratic Legislators Reaffirm Goebel's Election.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 22.—The democrats of the Kentucky senate and house met in joint session and ratified the secret proceedings taken while Senator Goebel lay dying and Governor Taylor's troops guarded the state house. By a vote of 74 to 2 William Goebel was declared to have been elected governor and J. C. W. Beckham lieutenant-governor, the latter succeeding to the title when the former died. The republican members of the legislature remained away from the joint session, having decided in caucus not to attend.

Bulgaria vs. Servia.

VIENNA, Feb. 22.—Strange rumors are afloat in Vienna, and still stranger things are undoubtedly occurring. Rumors point to impending hostilities between Bulgaria and Servia. There is no doubt that both are massing troops on their frontiers. It looks impossible, however, that war should occur, because neither country possesses the necessary financial sinews, and neither Russia nor Austria would sanction such an outbreak.

The biggest workhouse in the world is in Liverpool. It has accommodations for five thousand inmates.

Statistics recently published show that Russia is the most illiterate country in Europe. Ten thousand of its villages are without common schools.

For Wireless Steering.

An invention for steering any craft, by means of an ether wave on the wireless telegraph principle has been perfected. In naval war it is expected to make the torpedo boat almost infallible. In this respect it will equal the famous Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which never fails to cure constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness and malaria.

ALABASTINE

ALABASTINE is the original and only durable wall coating, entirely different from all kalsomines. Ready for use in white or fourteen beautiful tints by adding cold water.

LADIES naturally prefer ALABASTINE for walls and ceilings, because it is pure, clean, durable. Put up in dry powdered form, in five-pound packages, with full directions.

ALL kalsomines are cheap, temporary preparations made from whiting, chalks, clays, etc., and stuck on walls with decaying animal glue. ALABASTINE is not a kalsomine.

BEWARE of the dealer who says he can sell you the "same thing" as ALABASTINE or "something just as good." He is either not posted or is trying to deceive you.

AND IN OFFERING something he has bought cheap and tries to sell on ALABASTINE'S demands, he may not realize the damage you will suffer by a kalsomine on your walls.

SENSIBLE dealers will not buy a lawsuit. Dealers risk one by selling and consumers by using infringement. Alabastine Co. own right to make wall coating to mix with cold water.

THE INTERIOR WALLS of every church and school should be coated only with pure, durable ALABASTINE. It safeguards health. Hundreds of tons used yearly for this work.

IN BUYING ALABASTINE, customers should avoid getting cheap kalsomines under different names. Insist on having our goods in packages and properly labeled.

NUISANCE of wall paper is obviated by ALABASTINE. It can be used on plastered walls, wood ceilings, brick or canvas. A child can brush it on. It does not rub or scale off.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble, purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c at Harrr's drug store.

EUROPEAN EXCURSION.

The B. C. R. & N. Ry. will start an excursion from the Northeast and Northern part of Iowa to the Christian Endeavor Convention in London, England, and to the Paris Exposition.

Many business men, professional men teachers and those who wish to visit their fatherland will gladly avail themselves of this opportunity. That teachers in our schools and colleges may have the advantage of this rare educational privelege, arrangements have been made with the Anchor Line Steamship Company for the party to sail on one of their finest steamers, the "Furnessia" June 23rd. The remarkably reasonable rate of $118.00 for cabin, or $75.00 second cabin, round trip from New York is charged. For $4.00 additional a round trip ticket can be purchased by those wishing to visit the Exposition, from London to Paris and return. It will be necessary to apply at once in order to secure berths as many will be going over.

Rev. D W. Fahs, D D. of Independence, who recently crossed to Europe on the "Furnessia" and knows all about this steamer and the route contemplated will have charge of the excursion. Those who contemplate going should address him at once at Independence, Iowa, for particulars.

WAR TO THE DEATH

PESTS OF THE POULTRY YARD MUST GO

American Lice Destroyer Kills More Mites, Lice and Other Vermin in a Day Than All Other Remedies Combined.

The war is on! The days of lice and vermin that have done so much to make the life of the poultryman miserable, and his business unprofitable are over. American Lice Destroyer is the proper amunition to use! This preparation is wonderful in its power, and vermin cannot exist twenty four hours after it is applied to the coop or fowls. Every poultryman needs it. It is cheap reliable and effective, one package being sufficient to protect 250 fowls from mites and lice for one year. When this Destroyer is used, profits at once increase. Lice and vermin do more to kill profits than all other causes combined. You know it. Don't go on losing money every week, but try American Lice Destroyer. You may have tried other things without success, but if this fails you can have your money back. We are in this fight to stay, and will back Destroyer against any number of mites or lice you may have. Don t fool away money with 'recipes' or home made makeshifts. Use scientific means. The American Lice Destroyer has been used by thousands of poultrymen; it has been on the market several years and has been tested thousands of times. We know it is all right, and if it doesn't [illegible] work remember you get your money back. What more can you ask? If your druggist don't sell American Lice Destroyer, he's behind the age. In that case send for $1. box at once. Made only by American Mfg. Co., Terre Haute, Ind.

English Women Play Solitaire.

Ladies of the royal court of England, from the queen down, are playing the old-time game of "patience," known as solitaire in this country. Every spare minute is taken up with one or the other of the hundred varieties of the game. "Patience" boards, enabling one to play the game on the knees, are covered with colored satin, embroidered with various suits of the cards. Pockets are arranged for the pack, and a book of directions accompanies each board. The board enables the player to stop a game at any point and return to it later without losing her place. But it is doubtful if the fad will take in this country. It requires a vivid imagination to conjure up such a spectacle as a roomful of American women playing solitaire.

How Hussars Got the Name.

Hussars do not derive their name from any sort of a war cry or cheer. The name is from the Magyar word houtzar, meaning the twentieth. Hussars, as cavalry soldiers, were first confined to Hungary. In 1445 the crown passed a law compelling the peasants to supply one man out of every twenty of their number, and that man a horseman, to the army of the state. The first hussars were recruited from the inhabitants of the immense Hungarian plains—strong, hardy fellows, with sinews supple as steel, who spent their life in the saddle. To the present time the Hungarian hussars are considered to be the finest body of light horsemen in Europe.

Tit for Tat.

It is characteristic that those who are severe on others that they cannot bear severity. Dean Swift, the severest satirist of his day, was one day dining with a company of gentlemen, one of whom he made the butt of his ridicule, with repeated sallies. At last the dean poured upon a piece of duck some gravy intended to be eaten with a roasted goose. The unfortunate gentleman, seeing this, immediately said: "My good dean, you surprise me—you eat a duck like a goose." The company roared, and dean was so confused and mortified that he flew into a rage and left the table.

Strawberries.

Frankford has an interesting curiosity in the form of a strawberry plant bearing twelve good-sized berries, which may be seen in the window of Mrs. J. M. Fredericks' residence, 4344 Paul street. The plant was taken from the yard in the fall and placed in a flower pot. No great care was taken of it or attention paid to it until recently, when twelve blossoms appeared. The berries followed in due time and look especially tempting in this wintry weather, when strawberries are a decided luxury.—Philadelphia Record.

Playing Cards.

The amount of playing cards used in the world is something wonderful. The United States manufactures great quantities, and also imports many for use. Germany possesses thirty-four playing-card factories, which last year produced 5,260,000 packs. Of this quantity 4,987,000 went into circulation, paying a duty of 1,420,000 marks. No duty is paid on those exported, of which a large part come to this country.

Bursts Into More Pieces.

The ordinary shell which was manufactured thirty years ago only broke into from twenty to twenty-five pieces when it burst. At the present time it bursts into 240, while a shrapnel shell, which only used to scatter thirty-seven missiles, now scatters 340. A present-day bomb, when charged with peroxylene, breaks into 1,200 pieces, and it is estimated that it would effectively kill any one standing within 220 yards of the explosion.

A Four-Legged Criminal.

A mastiff was trained to assist thieves in Paris. It was in the habit of bounding against an old gentleman and knocking them over in the street. A "lady" and "gentleman"—owners of the dog—would then step forward to assist the unfortunate pedestrian to rise, and while doing so would ease him of his watch and purse.

Tons of Leaden Death.

Forty million rounds of small-arms ammunition, 11,000 rounds of shrapnel, Lydite and common shell, 851 boxes of fuses and forty boxes of pistol ammunition were recently dispatched to the seat of war. This is one of the largest consignments of ammunition ever sent from Great Britain.

GREAT CITY FOR PADLOCKS.

Phenomenal Way in Which They Flourish at Irkutsk.

Irkutsk, the accepted capital of oriental Siberia, is a city of padlocks. It has only about 51,000 inhabitants, yet there are more padlocks on the shutters and doors of Irkutsk stores than can be found in an American city of 200,000. There are as many as three padlocks on some store doors, and every lower story shutter bears from one to five. The padlock weighs from one to fifteen pounds. The popular size is five pounds and two and one-half inches thick, says the Chicago Record. The closing of a store is an affair of consequence. The heavy shutters are swung together, the ponderous iron bars are put in place, the padlocks are adjusted and locked, and then comes the final and serious ceremony of locking the door. The door is shut, the bars are placed, and the padlock is fixed and locked, and the verdant stranger thinks the closing operation is over. It is not. A piece of cord is drawn through the hasp of the padlock, and the two ends are held against the door by a clerk or boy, while the proprietor melts a piece of sealing wax and sticks the ends to the door. On the hot wax he places his private stamp. A promenade on an Irkutsk business street after closing time shows the huge padlocks, the two lines of string and a fat dab of red wax as big as a silver dollar. In case sealing wax is dispensed with, the padlock is tied in a rag, the string being knotted in a peculiar way. The business man of Irkutsk has no faith in a stringless padlock. I learned that through the wax and rag medium the owner of a store knew if his lock had been tampered with during the night.

CAMPFIRE SKETCHES.

SOME SHORT STORIES FOR THE VETERANS.

The Sensations of Battle—Major Arthur Griffiths Describes How It Feels to Be Under Fire—Some Bloody Battles —Old Forts Reoccupied.

The Light at the Window.

(Old Favorite Series.)

One long, last kiss at the shieling door,
Ere he sadly passed down the mountain path,
And she saw her soldier boy no more
Till he marched with his comrades up the strath.
Their tartan plaids and their plumes grew dim,
But the wail of the pibroch echoed shrill,
As softly breathing a prayer for him,
She turned to her home on the heath-clad hill.

She folded his homespun suit of gray,
And gathered sweet wild thyme to lay between,
And hung his crook in the old fond way,
She used when her Colin came home at e'en.
When gloaming fell and the wheel was dumb,
She lit her dim lamp at the window pane,
Though she knew her laddie ne'er would come
From herding his sheep on the hills again.

Long years had sped, but the light gleamed still
Through the summer starlight and winter frost,
Ere Colin climbed up the mist-wreathed hill,
And her fond arms circled the boy she lost.
"Oh, welcome, darling, though late, so late,
Let me kiss you, sweet! ere my spirit flies,
To watch at the gate of heaven and wait
Thy feet at the threshold of Paradise."

—Virginia Gabriel.

The Sensations of Battle.

Major Arthur Griffiths, who served in the Crimean war, contributes an exceptionally interesting paper to Pearson's Magazine, describing how it feels to be under fire. Touching on his own experience, he writes: "We were a set of silly, reckless youngsters in the Crimea ,and chafed much at the enforced inaction that was so often the rule for long hours together in the trenches before Sebastopol. A favorite game with the most dare-devil amongst us was to brave the dangers of drawing down fire simply for a little variety. One method was to show above the trench by standing on top; another was to go out into the open in rear, and the fun was to wait till the place became too hot to stay in. It was not a game that could be quite commended, and the players, when caught at it were severely rebuked by their superiors. Demeanor under fire is very much a question of nerve and temperament, but it depends also upon ignorance, and not a little, too, upon teaching and example. It is generally understood that new troops who have not experienced the effects of fire, who know it only theoretically, think far less of it than the veterans who have borne it on many hard-fought fields. It will be a point of honor with the latter not to duck their heads when the death dealing missiles sweep over them. But they will not like it. No one does who has tried it, that may be safely asserted; and the old hand who stands his ground like a hero will not hesitate to tell you he was in a 'blue funk' all the time. The tyro, moreover, is occasionally liable to fits of excusable discomfort when first exposed to the risk of being shot. By far the best illustration of this is the historical incident in the early career of Colin Campbell, afterwards the famousField-Marshal Lord Clyde. He was a raw ensign newly joined, a mere child in years, when he first saw fighting at the Battle of Vimiera in 1808. His captain, an old campaigner, noticed his unsteadiness, and promptly applied his own cure. This was to take the youngster by the hand, and lead him out well to the front of the regiment now fully engaged, and walk him slowly up and down under the hottest of the fire. Colin Campbell soon gained complete confidence, and never suffered from nervousness again. His later career was crowded with fine feats of daring, of bold leadership, and undaunted pluck. When seriously wounded in the assault of San Sebastian he would not leave the field, nor when in hospital disabled would he stay there, but hobbled to the front to take his place in the ranks on hearing that Wellington had invaded France."

Some Bloody Battles.

Three of the greatest battles of the century in the sense of being the bloodiest were: Leipsic in 1813 (90,000 men lost); Borodino in 1812 (loss, 74,000, and Belle Alliance in 1815 (loss, 61,000). In the battle of Waterloo the loss of the allies is stated in an up-to-date history of England as 22,976 killed and wounded, while the French lost over 30,000, besides many prisoners. There were many big battles in the Crimean war—probably quite as big and bloody as any that have yet occurred in South Africa, and according to historical authority already referred to, the losses of the allies amounted in all to no less than 250,000 men,while those of the Russians have been placed as high as 750,000. The allied loss at Alma was 619 killed and 2,860 wounded; the Russian loss was reported to be about 8,000. At the fall of Sebastopol 18,000 Russians were killed and wounded and 22,000 made prisoners. The numbers engaged in the Wilderness (the largest battle in the American civil war) were 141,000 Federals and 52,000 Confederates; each side had one-seventh of its strength put hors de combat, whereas at Grant's battle at Pittsburgh each lost a full fourth. The battle of Koniggratz (or Sadowa) in the Austro-Prussian war of 1866 was, next to Waterloo, the most decisive and important battle of the century; it was also one of the bloodiest. The Prussians lost in dead, wounded and missing 359 officers and 8,794 men and the Austrians 1,147 officers and 30,244 men. The proportion of the losses to the total force engaged on each side was—for the Prussians, one twenty-third; for the Austrians, one-seventh; for both together, one-eleventh. At Leipsic the proportion of the losses was one-fifth; Borodino, one-third; Belle Alliance, one-third. There were heavy losses in the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-71, particularly at Rezonville and Gravelotte, the French loss in three days being 15,000 in killed alone.

Napoleon on the Defensive.

One of the "Talks with Napoleon" quoted from Dr. O'Meara's diary in the February Century records Napoleon's indignation at being, as he considered it, spied upon, while living at St. Helena. "I understand," said he, "that an officer is placed here to report about me, and to see me two or three times in the twenty-four hours, and that they were talking of making him go into my chamber to see me if I did not come out. Any person," said he then, with considerable agitation, "who endeavors to force his way into my apartment will be a corpse the moment he enters it. If he ever eats bread or meat afterwards I am not Napoleon. This I am determined on. I know that I will be killed afterward, as what can one do against a camp? But what of that? I have faced death many a time. Besides, I am convinced that the governor, this chief of jailers, has been sent out on purpose to poison me, or put me to death some way or another, or under some pretext, by Lord Castlereagh. I have seen," continued he, "Russians, Prussians, Arabs, Cossacks, Tartars, Spaniards, Persians, Turks" (here he enumerated a great many more), "and never in my life before did I behold so ill-favored and forbidding a countenance, or so down and horrid a look. He carries crime imprinted on his countenance. (Il porte le crime empreint sur son visage.) He is a man, to judge from his physiognomy, that one would select for the committal of any atrocious crime, and as such has been selected out by your ministers, I suppose, on purpose to make away with me."

Old Forts Reoccupied.

Fort Moultrie and Fort Sumter and Sullivan's island in Charleston harbor, which figured so largely in the early events of the civil war, have been repaired, and are now occupied by garrisons of regular artillery, in charge of large-caliber rapid-firing guns. For many years after the war these venerable fortifications were deserted by everybody except tourists. The government kept a decrepit sergeant on duty to prevent relic hunters from tearing them down and carrying away the fragments, but since the war with Spain the old fortifications have been armed with modern artillery, and no one is permitted to enter them except with an order from the secretary of war. The headquarters of the First Artillery are at Sullivan's island, and there are garrisons in both Sumter and Moultrie.

Pistol Saber for Cavalry.

Proposals are being entertained by the French military authorities for a new weapon, called the pistol saber, which, if adopted, will be put in use in several cavalry regiments. This is an ordinary saber provided with a small firearm lodged in the hilt. On encountering a resistant surface the blade recedes and discharges the pistol, a recoil of about a tenth of an inch being sufficient for the purpose. The shot will, it has been ascertained, penetrate a steel breastplate. It is expected that the new weapon, which weighs only one-third more than the ordinary saber, and which, of course, when the pistol is not loaded, can be employed in the usual way, will prove very serviceable, particularly in engagements between bodies of cavalry.—Paris Correspondence.

Rather Cold-Blooded.

From "How Soldiers Fight," by F. Norreys Connell: Of the tactics of infantry there is no end, but there are some simple rules for the individual foot soldier to remember when lost in the chaos of battle. If you cannot bayonet your enemy, shoot him; if he goes away aim at the base of his spine. But do not let your attention be distracted from business by the consideration that other people are making a mark of you. It is your duty to kill the highest possible number of those opposed to you, not to save your own skin.

CONGRESS.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 26.—Turley of Tennessee presented a constitutional argument against the seating of Quay, which was given close attention by his colleagues. Consideration of the Hawaiian government bill brought out a lively discussion between Tillman and Spooner, in which the former admitted that ballot boxes had been stuffed and negroes had been shot in the south to maintain white domination. An amendment was made to the bill striking out the property qualification of voters for members of the legislature, but little other progress was made. Frye reported the shipping subsidy bill.

HOUSE.

The general debate upon the Porto Rican tariff bill was today extended until tomorrow night and addresses were made by a dozen representatives.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 27.—Depew delivered a speech, addressing himself to the resolutions offered on the Philippine question, particularly to that proposed by Beveridge of Indiana, declaratory of the policy of the United States toward the Philippine Islands. At the conclusion of Depew's speech Turley of Tennessee resumed his argument against the seating of Quay of Pennsylvania.

HOUSE.

The general debate on the Porto Rica tariff bill closed today in a blaze of glory. The galleries were banked to the doors and every seat on the floor was occupied when the rival champions of the respective sides, Dolliver, of Iowa, and Bailey, of Texas, made the closing arguments, each speaking for an hour and a half. The address of Dolliver elicted unbounded enthusiasm from the galleries and floor.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 28.—Aldrich, chairman of the finance committee, made an explanation of the work of the conferees on the financial measure. McLaurid of South Carolina delivered an address on the Philippine question. He declared himself for expansion, being the first democrat in the senate to do so. Allen delivered a speech in opposition.

HOUSE

The Porto Rican tariff bill, amended as agreed upon at the conference of republicans so as to reduce the tariff from 25 to 15 per cent of the American tariff, and limiting its life to two years, was passed by a vote of 172 yeas to 161 nays. Six republicans, Messrs. Crumpacker (Indiana); Fletcher, (Minnesota); Heatwole, (Minnesota); Littlefield, (Maine); Lorimer, (Illinois), and McCall, (Mass.), voted against the bill and four democrats, Messrs. Davy and Myer, (Louisiana); Devries, (California), and Sibley, (Penn.), voted with the republicans for the bill.

SENATE.

Washington, March 1.—The bill providing a form of government for Hawaii was passed without division. Clay of Georgia delivered a carefully prepared speech on the Philippine question. He favored the adoption of the Bacon resolutions, declaring it to be the policy of the United States to turn over the islands to the Filipinos as soon as a stable government could be established by them under the protection of this country.

HOUSE.

The democrats scored their first victory of the session in the house on the motion to take up the contested election case of Aldrich vs. Robbins from the Fourth Alabama district. On two separate votes the democrats with the aid of two republicans, Mondel, of Wyoming, and H. C. Smith, of Michigan, beat the republicans upon the question of consideration. An agreement was made to consider the Loud bill relating to second-class matter on March 20.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 2.—To-day the sensational circumstances in connection with the failure and tragic death of Dr. Gilman, late superintendent of the hospital for the insane at Mount Pleasant, were recalled by the introduction in the Iowa senate of a bill by Senator Classon to reimburse a list of insane patients from whom money was taken while Dr. Gilman was superintendent at Mount Pleasant. The bill asks for $5,000. Titus introduced a bill providing that all constitutional amendments and other special questions to be voted on at general elections shall be submitted to the voters on separate ballots, and Wallace introduced one providing that township trustees shall purchase guide posts for highways. Crossley's bill giving state superintendents $500 for traveling expenses was passed. Buchanan's bill, taking the building and loan management out of the auditor's office and making it a separate department was favorably reported.

HOUSE.

The house passed several bills, among them the bill to prevent the soldiers at the home at Marshalltown from being deprived of their pensions and the Eaton bill consolidating the miscellaneous part of the state library and the historical department.

SENATE.

Washington, March 3.—The senate held a brief session, adjourning early on account of the death of Representative Epes, of Virginia. Ross, of Vermont, spoke in opposition to the seating of Quay, and Teller spoke in criticism of the conference report upon the currency bill. Pettigrew introduced and the senate passed a resolution instructing the secretary of war to send to the senate the proceedings in the court martial against the then Lieutenant Colonel Corbin, now adjutant general of the army. The resolution also calls for other information bearing upon General Corbin's military record.

HOUSE.

Hay announced the death of Epes, of Virginia, and after the adoption of resolutions of respect and sympathy, as a further mark of respect the house adjourned.

NOTHING TOO GOOD FOR THEM.

Great Britain Will Royally Reward Her Victorious Generals.

LONDON, March 5.—A dukedom for Lord Roberts, an earldom for Lord Kitchener and a peerage for General Buller, thus say the prophets already busy at this occupation. If only the marvelous wave of enthusiastic rejoicing that swept over the country last week could find its prototype in material rewards, Lord Roberts and his fellow heroes of the hour would all be made dukes forthwith.

LAFAYETTE DOLLAR.

First One Coined Presented to the President of France.

PARIS, March 5.—Robert J. Thompson, secretary of the Lafayette monument commission, as special commissioner of the United States, representing President McKinley, and in his name presented President Loubet the first Lafayette dollar, which was enclosed in a casket costing a thousand dollars. The presentation took place at Elysee palace.

Boer Prisoners Number 4,460.

CAPETOWN, March 5.—The railroad is now repaired northward from Kimberly to Riverton. The engineers are pushing the work rapidly. The Boer prisoners captured at Paardeberg total up 4,660. About three thousand of them are on their way here.

"Three I's" Extensions.

Mishawaka, Ind., March 5.—The Indiana, Illinois & Iowa Railroad company, recently granted a franchise to enter this city, has purchased the St. Joseph, South Bend & Southern road. By securing it, the "Three I's" secures a connection with Lake Michigan.

HON. GEORGE KERSTEN, OF CHICAGO.

Hon. Geo. Kersten, a well-known Justice of the Peace, of Chicago, says:

"I was afflicted with Catarrh for nine years. My catarrh was located chiefly in my head. I tried many remedies without avail. I applied to several doctors, but they were not able to cure me. I learned of the remedy, Peruna, through the daily newspapers. After taking the remedy for 18 weeks I was entirely cured. I consider my cure permanent, as it has been two and a half years since I was cured."

Any man who wishes perfect health must be entirely free from catarrh. Catarrh is well-nigh universal; almost omnipresent. Peruna is the only absolute safeguard known. A cold is the beginning of catarrh. To prevent colds, to cure colds, is to cheat catarrh out of its victims. Peruna not only cures catarrh, but prevents it.

All families should provide themselves with a copy of Dr. Hartman's free book entitled "Winter Catarrh." This book consists of seven lectures on catarrh and la grippe delivered at The Hartman Sanitarium. It contains the latest information on the treatment of catarrhal diseases. Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio.

Half good won't do!

A "may-cure" cough medicine won't do. If it will "perhaps" do its work, it's worse than worthless. If it's good, it's worth ten times its price.

Do you know where to draw the line between the good and the bad? This testimonial should help.

"I had a bad cough for six weeks and could not find any relief whatever. My little girl read about Ayer's Cherry Pectoral being such a wonderful remedy for coughs, so I bought a bottle. It relieved me at once. Before I had taken a quarter of a bottle my cough was entirely cured. I think it is the most wonderful cough mixture ever known."—L. HAWN, Newington, Ont., May 3, 1899.

MAN'S MECHANISM

Delicate Machinery That Needs Constant Care.

Absolute Cleanliness and Regulation as Necessary as for Any Other Kind of Machinery. How to Keep it in Working Order.

There's a screw loose somewhere!

One little screw in the big machine gets a trifle loose and the whole apparatus clogs, baiks and refuses to work properly.

A skillful engineer can tell by the "feel" of his engine when there's a screw loose.

Occasional constipaton—call it costiveness or biliousness—needs prompt attention. It clogs the whole delicate mechanism of man, and must be removed skillfully without force or shock. Only a vegetable laxative should be used, and Cascarets Candy Cathartic, which you can eat like a piece of candy, are the most agreeable, natural and effective of all laxatives.

Cascarets are the only antiseptic cathartic, and not only make the liver lively, remove obstructions in the bowels, strengthen the intestines, but kill all germs of disease in the body. Therefore prevent as well as cure.

Buy and try Cascarets to-day. You'll find that it's what they do, not what we say they'll do, that will please you. All druggists, 10c, 25c and 50c, or will mail for price. Send for booklet and free sample. Address Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago; Montreal, Can.; New York.

LADYSMITH IS RELIEVED.

Buller Wires That the City Has Been Relieved.

LONDON, March 2.—The war office has received the following from Buller:

"LYTTLETON'S HEADQUARTERS, March 1, 9 a. m.—General Dundonald, with the Natal Carbineers and Composite regiment entered Ladysmith last night: The country between me and Ladysmith is reported clear of enemy. I am moving on Nelthorpe.

"NELTHORPE, March 1.—I have just returned from Ladysmith. Except a small guard north of Surprise hill, the whole of the enemy lately besieging the town retired in hot haste, and to the south of the town the country is quite clear of them. The garrison was on a half a pound of meat a man per day, and were supplementing the meat rations by horses and mules. The men want little nursing before being fit for the field."

Boers Saved Their Guns.

The Boers seem to have gotten quite away from around Ladysmith without losing a gun or their baggage. Van Reenan's pass is only about twenty miles from Ladysmith. The enemy had artillery in action Tuesday, and they probably utilized both railroads in retreating, sending the heavy pieces to Pretoria and the lighter ones into the Free State.

PRESIDENTS TO MEET.

Kruger and Steyn to Hold a Conference in the Free State.

LONDON March 5.—President Kruger is said to have left Pretoria with the intention of meeting President Steyn. The place where they are to meet is not mentioned, but it is believed to be somewhere in the Orange Free State. Those in South Africa who are conversant with the effect of the recent reverses on the Boers express the opinion that the meeting of the two presidents is preliminary to a suggestion for negotiations for peace. But in this case it must be due to pressure brought to bear upon the presidents by the burghers and Afrikanders in the British colonies rather than in the personal inclinations of the presidents, as all available information depicts them as being as determined as ever to persist in the war until their resources are utterly exhausted. But the closest observations do not anticipate any sudden cessation of hostilities, and, certainly reports from the theatre of war do not tend to encourage the advocate of immediate peace. The Boers apparently are rallying with their accustomed ability to repair temporary reverse, and Great Britain has yet to test their force as defensive power under new conditions of war.

INSURGENTS ARE ACTIVE.

Little Prospect of Restoring Order in the Philippines.

MANILA, March 5.—Reports reach the Associated Press from various sources, including army officers and the heads of commercial houses with agents throughout the islands, of continued activity among the insurgents, who are endeavoring to keep alive the armed opposition to the United States and are planning to continue the insurrection with guerrilla warfare on a larger scale when the rainy season begins. A person holding a position second only to that of the governor general says he is convinced that the insurgent organization has been remarkably rehabilitated during the past month, particularly in the northern provinces. He says the insurgents have a secret organization even in the strongest garrisoned towns, affording perfect means of communication, and that the machinery is managed from Manila, some of the leaders being Filipinos pretending to be supporters of the American administration. Two correspondents of leading American weeklies who have traveled for a month in Benget and Ilocos with letters from insurgents chiefs, going alone fifty miles from garrisons and being everywhere hospitably received, say the people make no secret of their sympathy with the insurrection

Chicago Strike Situation Assumes Most Serious Aspects.

CHICAGO, March 4.—Labor troubles in Chicago have assumed a most serious aspect. A general strike order has been issued by the International Association of Machinists calling out 7,000 men to join the 32,500 now idle in the building industries and other trades. By the machinists' strike every one of the 210 machinery manufacturing plants of the city is either seriously embarrased in its work or completely tied up. Several hundred non-union men refused to go out, but every shop is being watched by union pickets and efforts will be made to dissuade the men from continuing at work. To enforce the Chicago tie-up and prevent the manufacturers from having any work completed in other cities, the shop committees in every plant in the country have been notified by President O'Connell to be on the lookout for Chicago orders and report at once. At any plant where Chicago work is found the men will be called out at once.

Sore Hands

Red, Rough Hands, Itching, Burning Palms, and Painful Finger Ends.

One Night Treatment

Soak the hands on retiring in a strong, hot, creamy lather of CUTICURA SOAP. Dry, and anoint freely with CUTICURA, the great skin cure and purest of emollients. Wear, during the night, old, loose kid gloves, with the finger ends cut off and air holes cut in the palms. For red, rough, chapped hands, dry, fissured, itching, feverish palms, with shapeless nails and painful finger ends, this treatment is simply wonderful, and points to a speedy cure of the most distressing cases when physicians and all else fail.

Sore Hands 8 Years Cured.

Pain So Intense Would Nearly Twist Fingers From Sockets. Hands Puffed Up Like a Toad. Water Ran Through Bandages to Floor. Had to Walk the Floor Until Would Fall Asleep. Fingers Would Peel Like an Onion. Doctors Could Not Cure.

Eight years ago I got sore hands, commencing with a burning sensation on my fingers and on top of the hand. When I rubbed them, you could see little white pimples. I felt like twisting my fingers out of their sockets. I had high fever, and cold chills ran over me, and so I kept it going until I was tired out. Nights, I had to walk the floor until I fell asleep. My hands peeled like an onion, the finger nails got loose, and the water ran out, and wherever there was a little pimple there the burning fire was—that happened at least ten times. I am running a blacksmith shop, horseshoeing, and I would not shut up the shop for anybody, but it was hard. My hands puffed up worse than a toad. When I drove horse nails, the water from my hands ran through the bandage, on to the floor. My customers refused to look at my hand. I had a friend take me to the doctor; he gave a solution of something to bathe my hands. I went to another doctor, I think, for a year. I found your advertisement in a Utica newspaper, and I got the CUTICURA remedies. As soon as I used them I began to gain, and after using a small quantity of them I was entirely cured. I would not take fifty dollars for a cake of CUTICURA SOAP if I could not get any more. I would not suffer any more as I did, for the whole country.

Cuticura Complete External and Internal Treatment for Every Humor,

The Set, $1.25 consisting of CUTICURA SOAP (25c.), to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle, CUTICURA OINTMENT (50c.), to instantly allay itching, inflammation, and irritation, and soothe and heal, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT (50c.), to cool and cleanse the blood. A SINGLE SET is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring, and humiliating skin, scalp, and blood humors, with loss of hair, when all else fails. Sold throughout the world. POTTER DRUG AND CHEM. CORP., Sole Props., Boston, U. S. A. "All about the Skin, Scalp, and Hair," free.

Millions of Women Use Cuticura Soap

Exclusively for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, in the form of baths for annoying irritations, inflammations, and chafings, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, and especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used it to use any other, especially for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp, and hair of infants and children. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odors. No other medicated soap ever compounded is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, viz., TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, the BEST skin and complexion soap, the BEST toilet and BEST baby soap in the world.

It is getting along toward cleaning up time and we want to remind the Board of Health, that there will be several places that will bear inspection.

Have the Directors of our town schools served the public satisfactorily? If so, just elect them for the next three years, and let them continue the good work. If not, then exercise your duty and elect some one to take their place.

Some of the tax-payers may wonder, at the amount of school tax they had to pay this year. It is all because the Board of Supervisors levied $500.00 more tax than was called for. Do not think that the money is wasted, for you will be taxed less another year.

Our job department has been kept more than busy the past two weeks and we want our patrons to know that we appreciate it. We hope the good work will continue, and we will say right here, that we will meet honorable competition, but want a fair profit on what we do, the same as you expect from us when we buy your goods. That's fair,—don't you think so?

Hundreds of women through the country have taken up the latest fad of offering a year's subscription to the Ladies' Home Journal as a prize at progressive eucher parties. Awards without number have been made during the past winter. The fad has a humerous side to it, since last year the magazine insistently opposed the rage for women's card parties.

The nineteenth century will leave behind a great legacy of mysteries which it could not solve, and which probably will remain mysteries to the end of time. The most notable of these are to be recalled in detail in the April Ladies' Home Journal in an article on "The Mysteries of the Century." Each one set the whole world agog with excitement and speculation in its day, but has faded almost completely from the mind of the public.

Our readers will pardon the delay of this issue, when we inform them that we are "daddy" of a bright little baby boy, which came to our home Wednesday evening. After we become accustomed to the change, and cure the cold contracted while seeking a few minutes repose on the roof, we hope to be able to turn our attention again to the affairs of the office. The office 'devil' says the kid is a welcome addition to the family circle, and we presume he is right. We would not take a million dollars for this one, but would not give fifteen cents for another.

We are in favor of having a man to be at the head of our schools next year, and that, too, one of the best to be had, even if he has to be paid a little more money than our present principal. This is not saying that the present principal has not given good satisfaction, for we believe there are no reports to the contrary. In all of the schools around us, experience has taught the directors and patrons that better results are to be obtained where men are at the head of the schools. The larger pupils, of the seventh, eighth and ninth grades, do better work, are more easily handled, and when they are inclined to be a little unruly, as is the case in nearly every school, a man commands respect while the best lady principal in the land, in such cases, would be a failure. We have been asked our opinion and give it. We believe it is not a question of ability, but discipline, that is needed, to secure the best results in Klemme schools.

Rudyard Kipling's first piece of sustained work since his illness last year turns out to be a series of humorous animal stories which are said to show all the freshness and zest of a man who has had a long rest. Kipling loves to write an animal story better than anything else, and when his physicians allowed him to return to work he instinctively turned to this series which he had had in mind for years. There are nine stories, and each one is supposed to tell the origin of the most conspicious part of the animal portrayed. Thus, in "The Elephant's Child" he tells a most droll story of how the elephant happened to get a trunk, and in "The Sing-Song of Old Man Kangaroo" he gives the history of how the kangaroo got his long legs, for, Mr. Kipling says there was a time when elephants had no trunks, and kangaroos' legs were not as long as they are now. The stories, it is said, show Mr. Kipling at his very best. They are expressively funny and have that rare quality of appealing to old as well as young. The author has sent the entire series to the Ladies' Home Journal, and that magazine will begin their publication in its next issue.

Busy Year for B., C R. & N.

The coming year will be one of great activity for the B., C. R. & N. It is now practically certain that the Germania-Albert Lea extension will be built.

The survey has already been made and the bids for the grading are now being received. The rails for the new extension are piled up at Rockford, ready to be transported when the proper time comes. There will also be a further extension of the Worthington branch. Surveyors have been working north and west from Willmot, Minn., into South Dakota, presumably toward the Black Hills, and it is probable that this work will be commenced during the year. Another corps of surveyors are now running a line north from Albert Lea. It is not known just where they are going but it is said they will go as far north as Owatonna It is probable however, that this is only the beginning and that ultimately the B., C. R. & N. will be extended to Minneapolis and St Paul. It is also rumored that the extension of the Decorah division to La Crosse, Wis., is being considered.

Joe German has moved into the house recently vacated by H. M. Walling.

It is said that H. M. Anderson has an ambition to be a democratic candidate for Mayor.

The democratic city caucus is called to meet at the city hall Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock, to nominate a city ticket.

The opera house was plum full of people Thursday night at the Smith sisters entertainment. The program was excellent and the music of the highest order.

Will Clark has moved his restaurant to the Bush building, one door south of the Schuler block, where he will be found to greet the patrons with a winning smile and a good lunch.

E. P. Fox, and Chas. Terwilliger are advertising the horses of the C. R. G. & N. W. Ry., for sale. These were the horses who rendered themselves immortal by doing the power work for the construction work of the Klondike railroad.

The old adage that when March comes in like a lion it will go out like a lamb did not hold good this year. Parts of the day were very mild, while there were some portions a little rough It seems to have been a case of the lion and the lamb lying down together.

A large audience was present at the Garner Literary Society Friday evening, when for the second time the question of whether women have more influence over men than money has, was discussed. Quite a number of young ladies were present and listened attentively to the debate. The beautiful creatures must have made it hard for the fellows on the money side to uphold their case.

The new newspaper, 'The Garner Herald' published by Mr. S. L. Sage, formerly of Sibley, is a new enterprise which has become established in Garner. The paper is republican in politics, and has the appearance of being a lively, wide awake paper. It is a seven column quarto, and has about three times as much editorial and news matter as county papers usually have. We welcome Mr. Sage and his paper to our midst and wish him abundant success. Garner needs more business establishments with the push and energy that the Herald has. It is push that makes a town. Sleeping will never build a city.

It is reported that the Democratic City Central Committee at a meeting held in Att'y Hughes' office a few nights ago could not agree on the date of their caucus. The members of the committee are W. H. Hughes, Dr. H. T. Schneider and A. Kelley. Hughes and Schneider were in favor of holding a caucus before the republicans, and be independent of any fusion movement, while Kelley was in favor of holding the caucus after the republicans, so as to take advantage of republican weakness or to create a mongrel or fusion arrangement. Hughes and Schneider are true blue Bryan democrats and want theirs straight. If Bryan should be elected President, these two stallwart sons of free silver ought to be very close to the administration.

GERMANTOWN.

Charlie Schuldt expects to move to Garner soon.

Rev. F. H. Wellemeyer returned home from Springfield, Minn, monday.

The ladies of the Ger. M. E. Church laid the new carpet which they so generously purchased for the church last Saturday.

Another spelling-school was held at the Merton School house last Wednesday evening. To judge from the frequent occurrence of these they must be very enjoyable affairs.

There will be a meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society in the church next Tuesday Mar. 13 at 2:00 P. M. All members are earnestly requested to be present. Visitors are welcome.

The Sunday School and the Epworth Leaguers of this district had a jubilee this week at the Germantown M. E. church. About thirty delegates arrived Tuesday, and were conveyed by sleighs to the place of meeting. Tuesday and Wednesday were Sunday School days, and Thursday (today) is taken up by the Epworth Leaguers. Many prominent members and speakers were present from abroad.

ELL CENTER.

J. W. Allen is our new director.

Peter Josten has moved onto his father's farm.

Rev. Paterson and wife were Ell Center callers last Saturday.

Jas. Lawhorn gave a social hop at his place last Thursday evening.

C. Liscomb has moved onto one of A. Kelley's farms recently vacated by Cyrus Howe.

C. W. Allen moved onto the old Ell farm last Friday, W. Walton moving to Garner.

Henry Carr, who had the misfortune to have his shoulder dislocated, is getting along nicely.

Miss Pearl Elder was the honored guest of her uncle, John Zook, last Saturday and Sunday, in Klemme.

Mr. Cumings, of Illinois, is now a resident of Ell township. He moved onto the Badker place last Friday.

Mrs. J. W. Allen was called to Geneva last Thursday by the death of a niece. She returned Tuesday.

James Carr purchased some fine cattle of Mr. Becker, near Klemme, and Mr. Lenz of German township last Friday.

Delbert Slaght and wife are the proud possessors of a little baby girl. Mother and chid are doing nicely and Dell is as happy as a clam.

A little girl baby arrived at Mr. and Mrs. Fred Walker's. We would have reported it sooner but Fred was too proud to speak to us common mortals or tell us about it.

Roy Burman, John Braund and the Misses Belt and Braund drove over to Clear Lake Saturday evening to attend the party at Jas. Karr's. They report a most enjoyable time.

Glenn Munlot has returned from Newton and is working for Fred Meyers. Mr. Meyers is one of the few farmers who appreciate a good hand, as this is the third year Glenn has worked for him.

The Glanvills have moved up from the south part of the state and taken possession of Grobecks' farms and also one of Digg's farms. They drove through with covered wagons, 140 miles and owing to the bad roads were over two weeks on the way.

T. Gauley, the great dog trainer is still on deck. Tonny says he has no fear of any of the young men calling during his absence since he has secured that sagacious dog of his. We wonder what he will undertake next. Say Tom, would it not be a capital idea to have him guard your meat market while you are in Garner delivering meat?

The following is the program for the Ell Center sociable to be held on March 15, 1900, for the benefit of a school library. Everybody cordially invited to attend. Admission for gentlemen 10 cents, ladies with baskets free.

Mrs. Louis Grosz, formerly Mrs. J. F. Hartfelder, was born near Dinglespiel, Germany, May 8, 1832. Came to America at the age of 21, and lived at Oswego, N. Y., where she became acquainted with and was united in marriage to Mr. Hartfelder. Shortly after her marriage, she and her husband came west and located at Mt Carrol, Ill. There were no railroads west of Chicago, and Mr. Hartfelder engaged in the freighting business, making regular trips between the steamboat landing, now Savanna to Mt Carrol and Lanark, Ill. Afterwards they came to Iowa, and settled near Frenchtown, Blackhawk county; but there being few settlers, and the Indians numerous they soon returned to Mt Carroll where they engaged in farming. In the year 1870 her husband died, leaving her with six small children—Mary, now Mrs. Grosz; Sara, now Mrs. Behringer; George, John, Conrad and David, all living except David. In 1872 she was married to Louis Grosz. One child was born from this union, Annie, now the wife of A. H. Burke. In 1885 Mr. Grosz died, and her children having settled down and with homes of their own, she sold her effects and came to live with them, and it was at the home of her son John where she breathed her last. She was a member of the Luthern church, a devoted christian mother, and her place by the fireside is vacant, but there is the assurance of peace and happiness in the heavens above.

But she has crossed the river,
She is with the angels now,
She has laid aside earth's crosses,
And the crown is on her brow.
She is clothed in clean, white linen
And she walks the Streets of Gold,
O loved one, save forever
Within the Saviour's fold.
No sorrowing thought can reach thee,
No grief is thine today;
God gives thee joy for mourning,
Thy tears are wiped away.
They are waiting in that city,
Where the saints and angels wait
And we'll know thee, dearest mother,
When we reach the pearly gate.

The Klemme Times.

KLEMME, - - - IOWA.

An automobile operator, according to the rules laid down, must be able to use both hands and both feet. What's the matter with his making some use of his head occasionally, also?

An indication of some of the important industrial effects which may be expected to follow the opening up of China is given in recent reports concerning the Chinese tree called the "tu chung." Both French and English botanists assert that this tree contains a valuable substance resembling rubber, or gutta-percha. Mr. Weiss of Owens college believes that the substance is a true caoutchouc, and that the tree will become of great economic importance.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times, remarking that "it will not do to place overmuch reliance upon Russia's official assurances that nothing will be done to embarrass England in the present situation of affairs," gives additional details showing that the delays in the ordinary traffic on the Central Asian railway are not caused, as has been officially stated, by snowfalls, but are due to the passage of Russian troops, estimated at 20,000, who are being concentrated in the vicinity of Kushk. Russia is going to do something soon that will not be good for Great Britain.

The United States civil service commissioners declare in their annual report that the carrier service and the railway mail service have almost reached the maximum point in stability and efficiency. The force of over fourteen thousand carriers lost last year only about two hundred by removals, and the relative loss of the railway mailmen was almost as small. The statement is a portion of the basis for the official announcement that during the last sixteen years persons appointed through the commission's examinations have suffered removal only to the extent of less than 1 per cent a year. The merit system is willing to be judged by its fruits.

Religious bodies, great and small, seem to be experiencing a baptism of sacred enterprise. They are mobilizing their forces, as if making ready to enter the coming century under that invisible Leadership which rides forth "conquering and to conquer." There is a notable decline of controversy, a growing passion for unity, and an urgent demand for the application of truth to life, or for bringing all human affair into harmony with the higher spirit. The sense of stewardship over the Lord's goods is placing large and willing offerings at the disposal of church extension boards or in the treasuries of educational and philanthropic institutions. Best of all, perhaps, is the spread of good-will and neighborly helpfulness among all classes.

The recent appointment of a stenographer at $5,000 a year, as authorized by the house committee on accounts, recalls the fact that there are now three stenographers employed by the lower branch of congress who draw as much money for salary as members of the house or senate. In what other country does a member of the highest legislative body and a short-hand writer draw the same pay? It is admitted that while congress is in session these stenographers, at $100 a week, have a great deal of work to do, but for a portion of each year they have nothing to do. The committee report authorizing the third high-priced stenographer says: "During the present session of congress the demand upon the two stenographers has been greater than usual. On many days six committees required their services. It is becoming more and more the custom to report the proceedings of committees, as it has been found that the testimony then taken has proved of great value in subsequent proceedings, especially upon questions involving appropriations of money."

There is no forthcoming public document whose appearance is awaited at Washington with greater interest than the report of the industrial commission, and that part of the report relating to trusts will be read far and wide. For nearly a year and a half the commission has been gathering testimony from witnesses before it on agriculture, on labor, on transportation and trusts. Railroad presidents and general managers, representatives of immense manufacturing interests, officers of such corporations as the Standard Oil company, farmers, factory inspectors of both sexes, and representative of labor organizations, such as the railway trainmen and the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, the American Federation of Labor and the Knights of Labor—all have contributed to the vast fund of information now in the hands of the commission.

Iowa News

THE trial of S. W. Johns, accused of the murder of Walter W. Root, at West Liberty last October, resulted in a verdict of "not guilty" returned by the jury.

JOE PAYNE, ex-sheriff of Dallas county, and a prominent citizen of Adel, was killed at Welch, Louisiana, a few days ago by a train. Mr. Payne went to the south about a month ago, intending to make an extended visit there to cover the remainder of the winter.

IN the Polk county district court a few days ago Judge Charles A. Bishop decided that mutual insurance companies are not required to pay local taxes, as there is no provision for it in the statutes and the 1 per cent state tax has been practically held unconstitutional by the supreme court. Judge Bishop holds that in this case, where the Bankers' Life Association is involved, such companies will entirely escape taxation until the law is changed.

IN the Pottawattamie county district court a few days ago Judge Thornell handed down a decision in the case of the state of Iowa vs. Levi Brown, sustaining the defendant's demurrer to indictment. The decision is of more than ordinary importance, as it holds that the state laws prohibiting the sale of oleomargarine, the color of which resembles the genuine product but which has not been purposely colored to imitate butter, is unconstitutional.

A. I. BRECKINRIDGE, who has been secretary of the Perpetual Building and Loan Associatian of Waterloo, from January 1, 1892, to December 1, 1899, was arrested on the charge of embezzlement. It is alleged he has robbed the association of nearly $20,000. The robbery has been going on since 1893, but the greater amount was taken in 1896, the shortage for that year footing up nearly $12,000. Breckinridge is prominent in Masonic and other fraternal orders, and vestryman in the Episcopal church.

AT Fort Madison one day last week Hazel Rogers, a bright and popular 12-year-old child, committed suicide by placing the muzzle of a revolver against her breast and sending a bullet through her heart. The deed was deliberately planned. The child procured the revolver from her mother's room and carried it to her own room. No reason is known for the deed except possibly a child's love affair. The child was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Rogers. Mr. Rogers is a Santa Fe fireman. He says the life of the child in the home has been most happy. The parents are overcome with grief.

THERE was another jail delivery at Primghar one day last week, the third one to occur in O'Brien county within a year. William B. Tate, who had been in jail for a couple of months on the charge of burglarizing a freight car on the Milwaukee tracks at Sanborn, sawed out of jail and made his escape in broad daylight. Tate belonged to what is known as the Daley gang, which has been operating in the vicinity of Sanborn for several months past. Their business was robbing dry goods and clothing stores, and selling the goods to the railroad men and others at greatly reduced prices. Some time ago the gang came to grief and the ringleader was sent up, from Clay county, for three years.

R. B. FAGEOL, of Des Moines, has manufactured and invented an automobile, which it is proposed to manufacture in that city. Patent claims are pending. The young man worked out his idea while in the employ of the Chase bicycle works. He is only 21 years of age. Contracts have been drawn with Messrs. Stillwell, of Kansas City; Todd, of New York; Evans, of the Essex building; W. P. Chase, and others for the organization of a $100,000 company to manufacture the carriage. The new carriage only weighs 350 pounds and will be moved by gasoline. The running gear of the machine is its strength. Some marvelous mechanical effects have been secured.

ELSIE GARDNER, of Sioux City, who on the morning of February 11 fatally stabbed her paramour, Tom Haas, was discharged from custody after a two days' preliminary hearing on the charge of murder, having established a case of self-defense. In her testimony the Gardner woman told a story of horrible brutality and abuse at the hands of Haas. She lived with him as his mistress for ten years, during which time he beat her into insensibility again and again. He forced her to earn money for him in most questionable ways and twisted her arms, gouged her eyes and otherwise tortured her to get from her the little money she possessed.

SOME two months ago a 6-year-old daughter of Gus Faber, living near Fontanelle, swallowed a kernel of corn which lodged in her windpipe and was finally drawn into one of her lungs. She strangled badly and coughed up considerable blood for several days. The doctors were unable to remove the corn and finally the child was taken to Creston, where X-rays were applied and the kernel plainly located well down in the lungs. It was deemed unwise to operate for it, as there is a possibility of it decaying and being coughed out or that it may become encrusted in the lung and not cause much further trouble.

JOHN WEST, alias "Joplin Red," who was found dead in bed in a Des Moines hotel, did not die a natural death. This fact has been established by the autopsy just completed by County Physician Shope. In the report furnished the coroner he states his opinion that West came to his death from some unknown poison, taken into the stomach voluntarily or otherwise. It is stated that West's former pals were not adverse to his being made away with, and that they succeeded in accomplishing what they may have considered necessary to their own safety. Shortly before his death West returned from Chicago with between $600 and $700, which it is supposed he got by giving information of a proposed attempt to rob the Adams Express Company.

A SHOCKING tragedy occurred at Weir City, a coal mining suburb one mile south of Bussey. A dance was in progress at the house of a miner named John Davis and several young men from Bussey were in attendance. William Holloway, son of Dr. J. G. Holloway, got into an altercation with Davis and was ejected from the house. It is stated that Holloway started in again with a knife in his hand and that Davis drove him out with a stick of wood. Davis then got his rifle and took up a position to guard the door and when Holloway again appeared in range Davis fired and Holloway turned and walked half way around the house and fell, expiring almost instantly and without uttering a word after he was shot. The ball passed through his left arm into his side, ranging through the body in a slightly downward course. Davis at once gave himself up and is now in jail.

JUDGE FELLOWS has rendered a very important decision in a liquor injunction case which closed all the saloons in Winneshiek county, except in the city of Decorah. The case is M. L. Hill vs. Thomas Kane, a saloon keeper at Ossian. The point decided is that the board of supervisors in canvassing the mulct petition did not properly perform their duty. The supervisors' record shows that in their canvass they scrutinized and certified to the findings in the several wards in Decorah, but made no certificates as to findings in the several incorporated towns of the county, which the court holds they should have done. This leaves the saloon keepers in West Decorah, Ossian, Calmar, Spillville, Fort Atkinson and Jackson Junction subject to injunction as was Kane, the defendant in this action, while those in Decorah are safe. The time has expired in which the board of supervisors may act in the premises, and there appears to be no relief except in securing an entirely new consent petition.

IN the district court at Mt. Pleasant William Flamm is suing Samuel Lee for $10,000 damages. The suit grows out of the mysterious shooting of Miss Jennie Lee, daughter of the defendant, and the arrest of Flamm as the alleged perpetrator of the crime. William Flamm was a suitor for the hand of Miss Jennie Lee, the daughter of Samuel Lee, of New London. Flamm declares that they were engaged to be married and that on the strength of that understanding he undertook the preparation of a home for his bride. Miss Lee, however, insisted that she did not understand any such thing, and when Flamm pressed his suit refused to marry him. One evening last October while Miss Lee was sitting in a room in her father's house some one on the outside fired a revolver through the window at the young woman. A slight wound was made. The would-be assassin escaped. Suspicion was at once directed toward young Flamm as the probable person that attempted the murder, and he was at once arrested on an information sworn out by Mr. Lee, the father of the young lady. When the case was called for trial, however, there was no evidence connecting Flamm with the shooting and he was released. The identity of the person who fired the shot is still a mystery. As soon as he was released, Flamm began suit against Lee for $10,000 damages on account of his false arrest. A similar suit was also begun against Edgar Peterson, a brother-in-law of Miss Lee, who is also charged with being instrumental in the arrest of Flamm.

NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 26.—Harriman's bill providing for a department of agriculture was under consideration to-day. An amendment providing that horticulture be not looked after by the proposed department was defeated. A vote was not reached. Finch introduced a bill proposing a system of parole for criminals.

HOUSE.

Representative Head of Green introduced a resolution asking that a committee be appointed to investigate the charge that John Cownie, member of the board of control, is also holding a government position contrary to law, and asking also that the committee be empowered to institute an inquiry to ascertain if Governor Shaw, Secretary of State Dobson, Auditor Merriam or Treasurer Herriott hold any office in private corporations over which they have control for purposes of taxation as members of the executive council. Carr introduced a bill to apply the Australian ballot to school elections. A large number of bills were killed by being indefinitely postponed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 27.—Consideration of Harriman's bill was resumed. Garst offered an amendment requiring that the year book to be published by the proposed agricultural department be printed by contract. A debate ensued which was not concluded at time of adjournment. The senate voted to reconsider the vote by which it was decided to adjourn sine die March 1, and the resolution now lies on the table. Lewis introduced a bill providing that building and loan companies shall not be permitted to charge interest in excess of 8 per cent, the legal rate in Iowa.

HOUSE.

The Hughes anti-pass bill was taken up as a special order this morning at 10:30. Two reports had been submitted. The majority report amended the bill to apply only to delegates to political conventions; the minority report recommended the passage of the bill in its original form. After a hard fight the minority report was substituted for the majority report by a vote of 54 to 34. After a hard fight which lasted during the entire session the bill was defeated by a vote of 50 to 39.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 28.—The appointment of Joseph McGarraugh to be custodian of public buildings was received from Governor Shaw and the senate went into executive session to consider it. Considerable opposition developed and a committee was appointed to interview the custodian as to certain reforms. Garst's amendment to the Harriman agricultural bill, providing for the competitive system of bids in handling the year book of the proposed department, was adopted, 23 to 22. After the salary of the secretary had been fixed at $1,500 a year the bill passed with only one vote against it. The senate also passed a measure to grant a 30-day extension of certificates of Iowa insurance companies, so that they will not be compelled to pay the unconstitutional tax of 1 per cent.

HOUSE.

The house, without a dissenting vote, adopted the Head resolution offered Monday to have the members of the executive council investigated in regard to their individual business connections with building and loan and insurance organizations of the state. The Clarke bill abolishing the office of state printer and binder was then taken up and Clarke made an eloquent address in favor of its passage. Temple followed in an address in opposition. Prentiss, Ayers and Stallcop then delivered addresses, and after a fight which lasted nearly all day the bill was defeated, 45 to 48. Immediately following the defeat of the bill, Ayers of Chickasaw introduced a resolution directing the speaker to name a committee of five to report on any abuses in the offices and if necessary draft a bill for their correction. Another was introduced by Lyman of Poweshiek, by which the state printer and binder seek to have the law revised, to remove alleged inconsistencies, whereby it is claimed they do not receive pay for some of the work done.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 1.—By a vote of 40 to 5 the senate passed the hunter's license bill. Committee on constitutional amendments reported favorably the equal suffrage amendment and also the resolution requesting Iowa's representatives in congress to work for a law permitting the election of United States senators by direct vote. Bill providing for establishment of a reformatory for women at Anamosa was reported favorably. Healy's bill to amend the code relative to debts for labor was defeated.

HOUSE.

Dunham's resolution instructing the printing committee to draft a bill making such changes in the prices to be paid the state printer and binder as they may deem wise, was adopted. Hughes gave notice that on next Wednesday he would call up the motion to reconsider the vote by which the anti-pass bill was defeated. Hinkle's motion that the suffrage bill be made a special order for next Thursday prevailed. These bills were passed: Providing for the teaching of the elements of vocal music in all the public schools of the state; enacting a state board of veterinary examiners; making clear thatpresidential electors shall be elected by thestate at large.

SENATE

Washington, March 2.—Pettigrew secured the adoption of a resolution calling on the president to furnish information relating to the saloons established in Manila since American occupation and the amount of liquor sold there. A resolution was offered by Turner, of Washington directing the secretary of war to inform the senate of the amount of money expended in payment of travel pay and commutation of subsistence to those officers and men returning from the Philippines and what bounty or reward was paid with regard to the enlistment of soldiers. Adopted. Senator Penrose called up the Quay case and Hoar addressed the senate in support of Quay's right to a seat in the body.

HOUSE.

Within two hours after the reading of a special message by the president, recommending the immediate passage of a bill to place in his hands all the moneys collected upon Porto Rican goods since the Spanish evacuation of the island, amounting to $2,000,000, to be used for the relief of the Porto Ricans, in the house to-day, the house had passed and sent to the senate a bill to carry out the recommendation. The democrats opposed the bill because it placed no limitation upon the president's discretion in the use of the money. By a vote of 136 to 129 the house took up the Aldrich vs. Robbins contested election case.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 3.—The Titus bill providing that the labor of Iowa convicts shall be utilized in the manufacture of supplies for state and county in order that it shall be kept from competition with free labor, was reported for passage by the majority of the judiciary committee. A minority report recommended that it be referred to the committee on ways and means. The minority report was adopted. The senate voted to adjourn over next Wednesday to visit the new asylum at Cherokee. The Cheshire bills were reported for passage. Sokol's bill, providing that county superintendents shall have charge of the distribution of free text books, was passed.

HOUSE.

These bills passed the house: Raising the salary of the turnkey and guards at the state penitentiaries; giving cities and towns power to prevent the maintenance of gambling houses; authorizing the approval by the judge of the court in vacation of conveyances and reports of sales and mortgages made by executors and administrators; raising the salary of the superintendent of the Soldiers' Orphans' Home at Davenport from $1,200 to $1,500 per year; prohibiting the use of gasoline, benzine, naptha and other explosives in tenement houses in cities.

A violent sneeze so shook the body of Wm. A. Housell, a detective, of New Brunswick, N. J., that it caused temporary paralysis of the spine.

DES MOINES, March 4, 1900.

The bill providing for the establishment of a woman's reformatory at Anamosa has met with such general approval that the friends of the reformatory system have framed a similar bill providing for a reformatory for men. The Anamosa penitentiary is far superior to the institution at Fort Madison and has been chosen as the more suitable location for the proposed reformatory. Senator Emmert has introduced a bill in the senate which provides for the necessary changes in the institutions, and appropriates $30,000 for the erection of a school building, the only additional building required to change the Anamosa prison into a reformatory. The older convicts and those who are convicted repeatedly will be confined at Fort Madison. All convicts under 25 who have been guilty of murder, burglary or other serious crimes are to be sent to the reformatory. Convicts under 35 who are in for slight crimes and who have not been convicted more than twice are also to be sent to Anamosa. Inmates are to be graded according to their conduct. They are to be sent to school for a certain time each day and are to be taught trades. When they have reached a certain grade of deportment they may be paroled on good behavior.

Chris Hansen and Arthur Kyle, officers of the Retail Liquor Dealer's association, accompanied by their attorney, Fritz Conrad, have filed for record with the county auditor the new saloon consent petition on which the association has been working for the past two weeks. The petition carries over 5,000 signatures, but of these the association claims only 4,736 are good. It requires 4,324 names to make the petition good. If the figures of the association officers are correct the petition has a majority of 412 names over the number required.

The total net collections of the Des Moines revenue office for the month of February were $12,075.83, against $12,163.56 for February, 1899. The following items make up the gross amount: Cigar stamps, $2,166.30; tobacco stamps, $127.80; documentary stamps, $7,596.95; proprietary stamps, $2,259.08; total, $12,150.13; less discounts of $74.30, leaving $12,075 83. There were twenty-three business days in the month. Average net collections per day, $525.04.

Judge Conrad rendered an important decision in the case of David Andrews vs. Mark Chiesa. In this case the plaintiff sued for the benefit of the school fund, to recover $4,000 for sales of liquor it is alleged were made by defendant to his father, an habitual drunkard. The statute, before the code revision, provided that where a sale of liquor is made to a drunkard, a minor, or to a person whose relatives have forbidden sales being made, the person aggrieved might bring action for the benefit of the school fund, and recover $100 for every illegal sale shown. It developed on the trial of case that the code commission's report, that the statute be continned as it was, was not regarded by the legislature, and that it dropped out the words, "for each offense." Relying on this, the defense contended that it was intended by the legislature that a person could recover for but one sale prior to the time of bringing the action and not for all the sales proven. It was argued that in the past persons interested have permitted sales to be made in large numbers, that they might sue for large amounts, and that the legislators, knowing this, were of the opinion the intent of the law, which was to prevent these sales, had been violated, so dropped the words, intending thus to force suit to be instituted as soon as one sale is made, and to revent the abuse of the rights vested by the statute. Judge Conrad held that this is the only interpretation of the statute, and directed the jury to find, if it found at all, for one sale only. He said that it was clearly intended that but one sale can be sued upon at a time, and suit maintained for only one sale made prior to the commencement of the action.

A bill which abolishes the office of custodian of public buildings and grounds has been framed and brought before the senate committee appointed to consider the name of J. D. McGarraugh, whom Governor Shaw nominated for the office of custodian. The bill stipulates that the person appointed custodian must be a practical electrician, an experienced engineer and a man thoroughly versed in heating and ventilation. In addition to being custodian the man appointed is also to act as engineer and have complete charge of the lighting, heating and ventilation of the capitol.

FILIPINOS AMBUSHED.

MANILA, March 4.—Colonel Anderson with the Thirty-eighth infantry, employing the insurgents own tactics, ambushed the enemy near Batangas. Through spies Colonel Anderson learned that a detachment of insurgents would pass a certain road. He posted his soldiers concealed among the trees lining the road and when the enemy arrived the Americans volleyed unexpectedly, killing twenty-four insurgents, wounding thirty and capturing several. Some arms and ammunition were also captured. The effect of this blow has been salutary. The enemy in that locality are dismayed.

CHAPTER XI.—(Continued.)

Maxwell remained behind; as a physician he was too familiar with death to be awed by that of a man who had been almost a stranger to him and had never possessed his sympathies. Scarcely had the immediate relatives left the room, when, to the magistrate's horror, he took a seat close beside him.

"Let me give you our warmest thanks," he said, in the friendliest tone. "Now pray order the rest of the dinner to be served. I'll call the waiter at once."

"No, thank you," replied the old gentleman, uneasily. "I prefer to leave at once. Mr. Roland promised to let us return to the city."

"Yes, the carriage will be at your disposal in half an hour at latest. The young couple, to whom you will doubtless be ready to yield precedence, start first; and until then I shall have the honor of entertaining you."

Mr. Thompson glanced timidly at his neighbor's coat-pocket, where he knew that the revolver was concealed, but did not venture to decline the offered entertainment and yielded to his fate. Fortunately he was not subjected to too long a trial.

Meanwhile a short but touching scene had occurred in the sick room, where Florence, amid burning tears, saw her father draw his last breath. He passed away in sleep, without regaining consciousness. Harrison's death broke the chain which bound his daughter.

Weak and irresolute as Florence had seemed, the inevitable found her calm, and the consciousness of the peril which every moment's delay increased for her husband sustained her strength. She knelt to kiss the dead man's brow and bid him farewell; nothing now held her to Springfield.

Meanwhile William, in a low tone, gave the old servant the necessary orders.

"Ralph, we shall leave the care of your dead master in your hands. You will render him the last services and remain here until the funeral is over. Then seek us at the place I have described to you. Escape is not difficult now, and the road is not long. See that Edward Harrison is not found and released before an hour has passed. He is gagged and bound, but there is no danger concerning his life. The longer you can prevent his being discovered the greater will be our chance of safety. If you are questioned, you know no more than the other servants and had the best intentions in bringing the message. They cannot help believing you, and in three days we shall expect you."

Florence had also risen and held out her hand to the old man.

"Farewell till we meet again, Ralph! I cannot even attend my father to the grave, and must leave the last offices to be rendered by the hands of strangers; but he will forgive me; he knows that my husband's life is at stake. Farewell."

The carriage had rolled up to the terrace outside. They avoided the way through the ante-room, where all the servants had assembled. William led his wife through the drawing-room, where Maxwell joined them, after taking a friendly leave of Mr. Thompson and assuring him of his high regard. The young couple entered, John took the reins from the driver's hands, ordered him to remain and sprang on the box himself. The carriage dashed off at the horses' utmost speed.

Five minutes later, the magistrate's face appeared in the open doorway, and behind him the tall figure of his clerk. Both gazed curiously and timidly after the carriage, which was no longer visible. Only a cloud of dust in the distance showed that the spirited animals were doing their duty.

"There they go!" said the justice, drawing a long breath. "Thank heaven! That Doctor Maxwell is Satan incarnate!"

"A horrible fellow!" echoed the clerk. "I believe he would have shot us both down in cold blood if you hadn't performed the ceremony."

"Yes, a horrible fellow!" repeated Mr. Thompson. "But an original, remarkable character, too; and he has a very high regard for me. He told me so three times."

CHAPTER XII.

It was sunset at the Union camp. Colonel Burney had summoned all the officers of the regiment to one of the little festivities which are often improvised on the march or in camp.

A certain feeling of anxiety pervaded the group. Lieutenant Roland, though expected every minute, had not yet arrived. The colonel had no reason to conceal the fact that he had given the young officer a leave of absence or its purpose. True, dangers and risks were everyday occurrences in this war; people regarded them as matters of course and wasted few words over them, but Roland was, as his friend expressed it, "the darling of the regiment."

"I ought to have refused the leave," said Colonel Burney, angrily. "I fear the matter will end badly. He ought to have been here long ago, had the adventure proved successful."

"We often reconnoiter within the enemy's lines," one of the officers remarked. "True, Roland is alone, but he is less likely to attract attention on that account. The dangers which threaten him on way—"

"Are the least," interrupted the colonel. "What I fear is treachery within the house where he believes himself safe. He would listen to no counsel, but I had a presentiment of evil from the beginning."

"We won't anticipate the worst at present," remarked another officer. "Roland may be compelled to make a circuit or wait for the darkness. Doctor Maxwell has not returned, either."

"Maxwell is at the outposts; there is no danger in that quarter. I am glad that my fears concerning the fever proved groundless. The doctor sent me the most reassuring news."

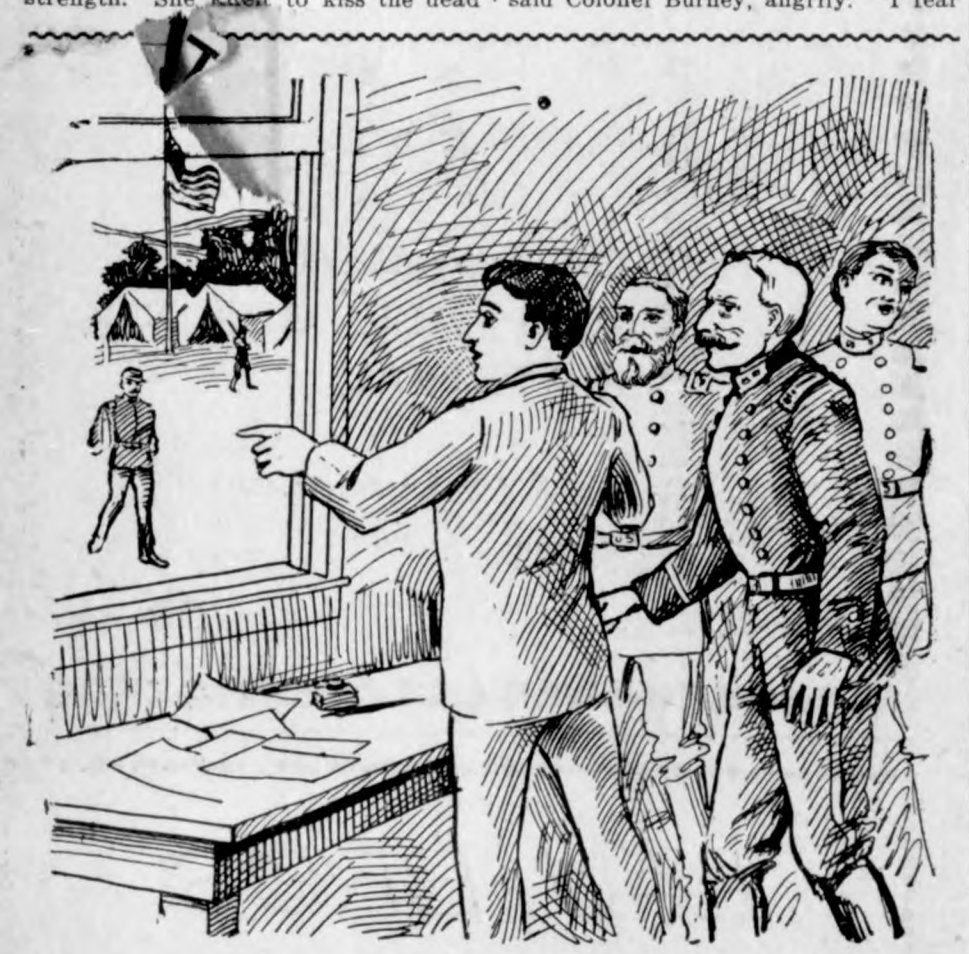
"Good evening, gentlemen!" said a familiar voice at the door. "This solemn assemblage is probably on account of the victory of which I heard on my arrival. It will give an unexpected turn to the campaign."

"And a fortunate one," replied the colonel, beckoning Maxwell to enter. "Sit down, doctor. We were just speaking of your friend, who has not yet returned. I am beginning to be seriously anxious about him."

"William is already here," said Maxwell, taking the proffered seat. "I left him five minutes ago."

"Thank heaven! So you met him on the way back?"

"No. We returned from Springfield together."



"AH, THERE COMES WILLIAM."

"From Springfield? What were you doing there?"

"Very different things—some pleasant, some disagreeable. In the first place, I had to bring Lieutenant Roland from behind iron bars, then to secure the worthy Mr. Harrison, who wished to brand us as spies; then to subdue all Springfield, including a justice of the peace, and, finally, to act as best man—all in a single hour. I think, gentlemen, I have accomplished the utmost amount possible within this brief time."

The officers glanced first at one another, then at the speaker whose love of banter they knew, and the colonel said disapprovingly:

"Don't jest, doctor. Such things are no laughing matters. If Roland is really here, why doesn't he report at once?"

"Because he is escorting Mrs. Roland to his quarters. One can't blame a man who has been married only three hours, if he cares first for his young wife. He will be here punctually at sunset."

"His wife? Do you mean Miss Harrison?"

"Pardon me, I mean Mrs. Roland, who has accompanied her husband. I mentioned that I attended the wedding."

The words sounded so plain and positive that doubt was no longer possible. But Maxwell was now assailed with questions from all sides. Everybody pressed forward, and he found himself compelled to relate briefly what had happened.

"Our return was accomplished without the least danger," he said, in conclusion. "In an elegant carriage and accompanied by a lady, we were beyond the pale of suspicion and reached the outposts safely, where Lieutenant Davis received us with the utmost courtesy and went into raptures over Mrs. Roland. But he is right. William is a dare-devil and incorrigibly obstinate, but we must admit that he has good taste. His wife is charming."

The last remark seemed to interest the younger officers extremely. They wanted to learn all sorts of particulars about Mrs. Roland and were greatly disappointed when informed that the young bride was very much agitated by her father's death and probably would see little of her husband's comrades for some time.

"Ah, there comes William!" he exclaimed, interrupting himself. "Congratulate him. He wears his new dignity somewhat timidly."

It was really William, who had come to report his return. He was warmly greeted by all. The colonel especially received him with great cordiality.

"Welcome, Lieutenant Roland! Here you are at last! Doctor Maxwell has already told us the whole adventure of which you were the hero."

"Not I but John Maxwell was the hero," said William, holding out his hand to his friend with ill-repressed emotion. "Had it not been for him, I should have lost happiness and life. I shall never forget what he did today."

Maxwell laughingly refused his thanks.

"Let that pass, Will; we shall wrangle again at the very next opportunity. Germans and Americans always quarrel, and our armistice won't last long. Today I risked my life for you; tomorrow you will, perhaps, peril yours for me; so we shall be quits. At any rate, you returned punctually—at sunset!"

He pointed toward the window. The sun was just sinking below the horizon, and its last beams were fading.

"Yes, I gave my word of honor that I would do so," said William, with the deepest earnestness. "But that I kept it—was able to keep it—I owe to you alone."

THE END.

Li Hung Chang's Grandsons.

The two grandsons of the Chinese statesman Li Hung Chang visited the University of California by invitation of Prof. Fryer, who was acquainted with them in China. They arrived on the steamer China on Monday, but were not able to land until Tuesday afternoon. They went to the Occidental hotel, and are staying there with Mr. Walter Lambuth, who is escorting them to Nashville, where they will perhaps enter Vanderbilt university. The young men will at first live in a private family near the university and take a course to fit them for entering. They dress in American style and have discarded their queues. Although well educated from a Chinese point of view they have been studying only English two years with a private tutor at their home in Nanking and Yangchow. They have pleasing and unassuming manners.—Oakland (Cal.) special New York World.

SNAKE RIVER VALLEY

RICHEST FARMING COUNTRY IN THE WORLD.

A Complete System of Irrigation Relieves the Anxiety About Rain That Prevails in Other Parts of the United States—East and West Compared.

We are permitted to publish an extract from a private letter written by a gentleman who has recently been devoting his time to the personal investigation of practical farming by irrigation in the west. His vivid portrayal of the advantages of that system will no doubt interest our readers. He says:

"There is a vast, an immeasurable difference between farming in the east and farming in the west. If the farmers of the east could only be made to understand the advantages enjoyed by their western brethren, I verily believe there would soon be no land for settlement in the great irrigation states. The irrigation farmer has absolute certainty of crop, and certainty of its perfect maturity. He never plants that he does not reap, and when I say reap I don't mean the reaping of scattered stands of half matured grain such as the eastern farmer cuts at the close of a dry season; but the reaping of fields that frequently average 50 bushels of wheat to the acre—every grain of which has reached the perfection of development. There is no anxious scanning of the skies for the 'cloud no larger than a man's hand' and fervent prayers that it may envelop the heavens and send down water to the thirsty fields. The irrigation farmer never thinks about rain. He watches his growing crops, and the day and the hour moisture is needed, he is out with his hoe flooding his fields with water from canals that skirt them.

"Everything grows in the west that grows anywhere else in the United States north of Tennessee. Potatoes frequently yield 500 bushels to the acre, and barley is grown far better than any raised in the east. The fruits are delicious. I never saw any to compare with those grown in Idaho, where apples, peaches, plums, cherries, pears, apricots abound, and where there are thousands of acres of Italian and German prunes which I am told have made fortunes for their owners.

"To my mind, Idaho is the best watered and most inviting arid state in the Union. I made a careful investigation of the great Snake River valley in that state, along and tributary to the Oregon Short Line Railroad, and saw there evidences of prosperity such as I have never seen elsewhere in the United States. This wonderful valley is said to contain over 3,000,000 acres of arable land. It is threaded with great irrigation canals in every direction, and there are vast tracts awaiting only the touch of the farmer to make them productive. The sun doesn't shine on finer or more fertile land. When I saw the happy homes, the well filled granaries, the sleek, fat stock, and the smile on the face of nature reflected in a smile of contentment on the faces of the farmers, my heart went out in pity to the thousands in the east who are struggling along from year to year, toiling against adverse climatic conditions, and never knowing how soon a drouth will wipe out the profits of prosperous years.

"Lands can be had in this Snake River valley almost for the asking, but they are going, day by day. The Oregon Short Line is making extraordinary efforts to bring the advantages of Idaho to the notice of eastern farmers, and is flooding the country with conservatively written descriptions of the state. Write to the General Passenger Agent of this Railroad at Salt Lake for printed matter about Idaho, and read it carefully. It will be a revelation to you and I sincerely believe will end in your removal to the west."

Banker Routs A Robber.

J. R Garrison, cashier of the bank of Thornville Ohio, had been robbed of health by a serious lung trouble until he tried Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption. Then he wrote: "It is the best medicine I ever used for a severe cold or a bad case of lung trouble. I always keep a bottle on hand." Don't suffer with Coughs, Colds, or any Throat Chest or Lung trouble when you can be cured so easily. Only 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at Harr's drug store.

NEW CHAIR CAR SERVICE.

Between Watertown, Ellsworth and Chicago via. B. C. R. & N. Ry. Commencing Sunday Nov. 19th, a free reclining chair car will be placed on trains Nos. 608 and 605 between Watertown and Chicago by the Burlington Cedar Rapids & Northern Ry. This car leaves Watertown daily, except Sunday at 11:15 a. m. arriving at Chicago 7:59 the following morning. This car runs to and from Sioux Falls Sundays, thus giving daily chair car service between Ellsworth and Chicago. Passengers going east from Chicago will have ample time to make any transfers to connect with all morning eastern trains.

These trains are very fast, and, with this new additional service, passengers can feel assured of first class accommodations. JNO. G. FARMER,

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble, purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c at Harrr's drug store.

EUROPEAN EXCURSION.

The B, C. R. & N. Ry. will start an excursion from the Northeast and Northern part of Iowa to the Christian Endeavor Convention in London, England, and to the Paris Exposition.

Many business men, professional men teachers and those who wish to visit their fatherland will gladly avail themselves of this opportunity. That teachers in our schools and colleges may have the advantage of this rare educational privelege, arrangements have been made with the Anchor Line Steamship Company for the party to sail on one of their finest steamers, the 'Furnessia" June 23rd. The remarkably reasonable rate of $118 00 first cabin, or $75.00 second cabin, round trip from New York is charged. For $14.00 additional a round trip ticket can be purchased by those wishing to visit the Exposition, from London to Paris and return. It will be necessary to apply at once in order to secure berths as many will be going over.

Rev. D W. Fahs, D. D. of Independence, who recently crossed to Europe on the "Furnessia" and knows all about this steamer and the route contemplated will haqe charge of the excursion. Those who contemplate going should address him at once at Independence, Iowa, for particulars.

Sunday School Convention.

The annual convention of the Upper Iowa District of the Sunday School and Epworth League convened on Tuesday afternoon, March 6th, at the Germantown M. E. church.

Presiding Elder, E. W. Henke. conducted the opening praise and prayer service at 3:00 p. m.

After the business session the first subject on the program was taken up: "The need of district Sunday School conventions and benefits derived from them." The two persons who were to handle this subject being absent, it was given over to general discussion. The opinion of all present seemed to be that though the holding of conventions may appear to be an extravagant expenditure of money, still if only one sinner should be brought into the fold of safty, or one tired, lagging christian fully consecrated, it would be worth many times the money expended, for only eternity can tell what the fruit will be. The meeting closed with the doxology and benediction.

TUESDAY EVENING.

After the opening Devotionals and an anthem by the choir, "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord," Rev. Otto Neiderhuth preached a sermon from Isaiah 40:31. He especially emphasized that the faint and weary could renew their strength if they but come to the Lord. An altar service and 15 minutes devoted to testimonials closed the meeting.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

Rev. Carl Krueger of Mason City, conducted the devotional exercises. Fred Erdman Sr. of Hayfield and Rev. Wm. Klaus of Ft Dodge, read carefully prepared papers on the second subject—"In what does the real success of the Sunday School consist and how can it be increased?" The following facts were clearly demonstrated—That real success consists in bringing the children to Christ; inculcating in them the real end of living; winning their worldly parents for Christ. That this success can be secured and increased through the unwearied efforts of consecrated officers and teachers.

The next subject was thrown open to general discussion at once on account of the absence of those who were to write on the subject:—"Obstacles with which we have to contend in the S. S. work."

Indifference of children, parents and many teachers and officers are serious hindrances. The lack of thorough preparation of the lesson on the part of teachers and scholars, as also failure on part of teachers to inspire in the pupils a desire for study. Defective German and lack of helps.

Mr. Wm. Bredlow read an excellent paper on the subject—"Why are so many of our S. S. children lost for God and the church"—Among other things Mr. Bredlow said that great blame rested on the parents, on the teachers and on the church. If the pupils are absent why don't the teachers find out the reason—why don't the teachers do more personal work. Parents can do much to remedy this sad state of things by refraining from criticizing the pastors and S. S. workers in the presence of the children and endeavoring by right living to be an example to them. The church can help effectually by having catechism classes and bible study classes for the children as an antidote for backsliding. The morning session closed at 11:00

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

Rev. H. R. Fiegenbaum was in charge of the consecration service.

The question of S. S. helps was now brought up for general discussion. The opinion expressed by many was that if we would but avail ourselves of all the helps that are published for our use we would meet with few difficulties in that particular.

A paper was read by Rev. A. M. Brenner on the subject,—"The baptismal vows of parents and the training of children. The baptismal vows embrace:—That parents dedicate the child to God, that they give him instructions concerning the nature and the signification of baptism; that they hold before him the highest standard of christian living and teach him as a means to that end. The scriptures, the Lord's prayer, the catechism. The training consists in the parents carrying out these vows and the pastor most decidedly assisting the children to step heavenward.

The 7th, subject, that of conversion of children, was handled by the Stpt. of Reinbeck S. S. and Rev. F. H. Wellemeyer. The principal points brought out were 'that it was Christ's injunction; that they are more easily led to Christ because of their childlike faith and because they've found no bad habits which will lead them into sore temptation; that it fits them for life. The objection brought up that they backslide was satisfactorily met when one brother showed that the people who were converted in later life were not nearly as steadfast and that if we looked over these children of a larger growth we could find few as true as the little ones.

George Gruetzmacher and Rev. Carl Krueger read instructive papers on the next subject—'The bible study class and how can the instruction therein be made conformable to its purpose" The purpose of the bible class is to lead the students to search the scriptures, and to bring them to Christ. This can be realized if the teachers are pious, well acquainted with the word of God, and affable. Also, if the pupils study their lessons and take an active part in class; and perhaps most important of all if the instruction be spiritual, intellectual and practical.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

Rev. H. Kaste, after the customary preliminaries of the service, preached an eloquent sermon from Hebrews 13:8 An altar service was held after the sermon and the prayers, songs and testimonies that followed reminded one of an old time Methodist camp-meeting. 'Twas a wonderful meeting and one long to be remembered.

LEAGUE CONVENTION.

THURSDAY MORNING.

Rev. S. A. Lempke conducted the devotionals.

Greeting was received from Rev. H. C. Hilmer—Presiding Elder of the South Dakota district. Upon motion, Rev. Otto Neiderhuth was apointed to reply at once in a greeting directed to Rev. Thiel--preacher-in-charge at Crandon S. Dakota, where a similar convention was in session.

After this the first topic of the E. L. convention was taken up:—Does the League in reality carry out the meaning of its motto: "Look up, lift up."

Miss Selma Hirsch of Charles City, read a paper on this subject, which was received with such enthusiasm that by the vote of the convention it was decided to have it published in the church magazine—"House and Herd."

Rev. Chas. Horney, of Le Mars, followed with a paper on the subject. Rev. Horney took an optimistic view, while Miss Hirsch took the middle ground. Some of the leaders in the discussion were decidedly pessimistic in their views. The conclusion arrived at was that the motto is set as a high mark which we are to strive to reach and not complacently think we are making its meaning real when we are so often found wanting.

Rev. F. W. Schafer and Miss Ella Witter of Storm Lake, read papers on the second subject—"The proper relation between the older members of the church and the Epworth Leaguers. Miss Witter showed plainly that the bond of love and sympathy between them should be the very closest.

The older members should watch over the younger ones, win their confidence and comfort them; not rebuke them sharply, for in so doing a breach will come between them. The leaguers on the other hand should be respectful, sociable, affable, submissive and should be ready to take advice kindly. Each should take an interest in the other's meetings. The league should not miss the older people in its ranks nor should the young people absent themselves from the church prayer and classmeetings. It was decided by a vote of the convention that Miss Witter's essay be published in the "Advocate" since beyond a doubt it was one of the very best delivered.

The next stbject taken up was 'The League as an educating medium." Mr. Koester of Gladbrook read a paper on the subject which was followed by a very scholarly production by Rev. W. J. Loeck.

Experience has shown that the league, with the help of God, may become a powerful factor in the education of many, especially those whose opportunities have been meager. There is room in the three departments, spiritual, intellectual and social, to develop every talent.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

Rev. F. H. Wellemeyer had charge of the consecration service.

Papers on the next three subjects were read at the beginning of the session, to save time, and the discussions followed.

The missions of the league—home and foreign—were ably presented by Rev. Fred G. Henke of Eldora. "How to secure an active participation of all our young people" Katherine Buchler and Rev. J. W. Feller. "Furtherance of the Spiritual Life" Miss Vieth Miss Lydia Schwieger and Rev. J. A. Lempke.

Time and space does not permit a full report of the session or of Prof. Hirsch 's lecture. We will try to make room for it next week.

I Had Consumption

"I had an attack of the Grippe which left me with a terribly bad cough. I was unable to work for a whole year. All my friends said I had consumption. I then began to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and it cured me promptly and completely." — A. K. Randles, Nokomis, Ill., Aug. 3, 1899.

Now I Am Cured

Forgetfulness does terrible things sometimes. It often brings on consumption, often prevents recovery. You forgot to buy a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral when your cold first came on, so you let it run along. Even now it will not disappoint you. It cures consumption every time when a cure is possible. We speak positively, for we know all about it. There's a record of sixty years to fall back on. For all throat and lung troubles there isn't a remedy in the world equal to it.

AN APPEAL TO HUMANITY

We need your assistance in announcing to the world the GREATEST REMEDY that Science has ever produced, and you need our assistance to secure relief for yourself and friends through SWANSON'S "5 DROPS."

A REMEDY SUPREME As surely as the American Navy has conquered and will conquer all that opposes it, so will "5 DROPS" unfailingly conquer all diseases like Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Catarrh of all kinds, ASTHMA, Dyspepsia, Backache, Sleeplessness, Nervousness, Heart Weakness, Toothache, Earache, Creeping Numbness, Bronchitis, Liver and Kidney Troubles, etc., etc., or any disease for which we recommend it. "5 DROPS" is the name and the dose. "5 DROPS" is perfectly harmless. It does not contain Salicylate of Soda nor Opiates in any form. The Child can use it as well as the Adult.

5 DROPS [TRADE MARK.]

Read carefully what Mr. L. R. Smith, of El Dorado Springs, Mo., writes us under date of Nov. 27, 1899, also Martan Bowers, of Caraghar, Ohio, under date of Dec. 16th, 1899:

NEURALGIA

I do not know how to express how wonderful I think your "5 DROPS" medicine is. I was suffering intensely with NEURALGIA and thought for a month that I would have to die. One day a lady called to see me and brought me an advertisement of your "5 DROPS." I resolved to try it and sent for a sample bottle. Have been taking it for three weeks and have not had an attack of suffering since I took the first dose. I believe it has saved my life. This statement is positively true. I shall also take pleasure in recommending your "5 DROPS" for the cure of NEURALGIA.

L. R. SMITH.
El Dorado Springs, Mo., Nov. 27, 1899.

RHEUMATISM Your "5 DROPS" came to hand on the 11th of last month and was glad to receive it for I was suffering at the time with untold agonies. The first dose helped me out of my pain on short notice. Bless the name of God for it. It will do all you say it will, and more too. I had severe pains all over my body, when night came I could not sleep. The worst pain was in my left leg. I could not put my foot to the floor without suffering great pain. Have used four different kinds of medicine for RHEUMATISM and got no relief until I got your "5 DROPS," which gave me immediate relief as above stated. MARTAN BOWERS, Box 83, Caraghar, Ohio. Dec. 16, 1899.

30 DAYS to enable sufferers to give "5 DROPS" at least a trial, we will send a sample bottle, prepaid by mail for 25c. A sample bottle will convince you. Also, large bottles (300 doses) $1.00, 6 bottles for $5. Sold by us and agents. AGENTS WANTED in New Territory. Don't wait! Write now!

NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 5.—McArthur's resolution memorializing Iowa congressmen to support rural mail delivery extension was passed. Other bills were passed as follows: Reducing official bonds of prison wardens and guards; providing for the payment by the state of costs and fees incurred in prosecutions for escaping from the penitentiaries; correcting medical practice act to meet the decision of Judge Gamble, who held it unconstitutional because it discriminated between classes of physicians.

HOUSE.

The house voted to adjourn over Wednesday for the purpose of visiting the Cherokee asylum. Clarke, of Dallas, introduced a resolution providing for sine die adjournment on March 17. Blake introduced a resolution allowing the governor to appoint commissioners, without pay, to the Paris exposition to make a report on matters of interest to the material resources of Iowa.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 6.—Among bills introduced was one by Fitchpatrick authorizing the establishment of a home for inebriates. House bill providing that farm leases shall be recorded in order to protect the innocent purchaser of property subject to lien under such leases came up and Bolter offered an amendment to kill the committee substitute. Several strong speeches were made, and the amendment was still pending at time of adjournment.

HOUSE.

Lyman introduced a bill similar to the one already in the senate to repeal the legalizing act enacted by the last general assembly legalizing the contracts of building and loan associations entered into prior to 1897 and involving a usurous rate of interest. The motion to reconsider the vote by which the Byers bill for the erection of one new normal school was lost several weeks ago carried in the house this morning by a vote of 53 to 33. After a fight which lasted all day the bill was passed by a vote of 55 to 37. The bill provides for one additional school to be erected in 1901. It is to be under the management of the board of trustees provided for the Cedar Falls normal, under section 2709, and one trustee additional. The location of the school is to be fixed by the general assembly one week after the passage of the act. Any incorporated town or city in Iowa may become an applicant for the location of the school.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 8.—The senate passed the house bill by Sauer providing that the polls of the state shall be kept open until 7 o'clock in the evening, instead of 6 as now. Most of the time in both morning and afternoon sessions was devoted to the landlord's lien bill. The measure was finally laid on the table.

HOUSE.

After an all morning discussion the joint resolution to submit to the people a proposition to amend the constitution and provide for woman's suffrage was lost in the house by a vote of 55 to 43. Stewart, Hughes, Lyman and Blume spoke against the resolution. Eaton and Byers made warm appeals in its behalf. After the roll call Hinkle, of Wayne, who introduced the resolution, changed his vote in order to move a reconsideration. The bill by Blake to exempt from taxation for the next ten years the property of all beet sugar industries in the state was passed by a vote of 75 to 17. Communications were read to the house from the treasurer and auditor of state in response to the resolution passed a week ago requesting members of the executive council to tell in what building and loan or insurance companies they were interested, what offices they held and what salaries they received. Treasurer Herriott said that he was not in official relations with any corporation over which he had jurisdiction but that he was a member of the Northwestern Life, of Des Moines and in the last four years he had drawn a salary to the amount of $350 for the entire period. The communication from the deputy auditor stated that Mr. Merriam was away but that so far as the writer knew he had no personal relations with any such company. No action was taken on either report.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 9.—Senate voted to limit all speeches to ten minutes. Building and loan bill was made a special order for next Friday. A resolution extending sympathy to the governor in the death of his father was adopted. Moffitt introduced a bill providing for final adjournment March 20. The bill creating a state library commission was passed. The telephone, express and telegraph taxation bills were made special orders for Wednesday.

HOUSE.

The bill by Stewart for the establishment of a woman's reformatory at Anamosa passed the house without a dissenting vote. It provides that women over 16 who have been convicted of crimes other than murder and girls over 14 who are unfit for the reform school at Mitchellville shall be removed to the reformatory at Anamosa. Miller's bill, subjecting all banks to the same limitations as are now and may afterwards be prescribed for receiving deposits for state banks was passed. The bill by Wise to give owners and operators a lein on the grain threshed or corn shelled after filing a statement, failed by a close vote. The Byers bill to protect minority stock-holders by prohibiting directors from electing officers from among themselves and fixing all salaries without consent of three-fourths of the stockholders passed 69 to 27. The anti-pass bill came up on a motion to reconsider the vote by which it failed to pass. A motion to table was carried, 52 to 44.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 10.—Eight bills were passed by the senate at the morning session. Among them were these: Providing that all constitutional amendments shall be submitted to the people on separate ballots; providing that railways, with the consent of the commissioners, may condemn additional right-of-way for straightening tracks; appropriating $2,000 for support of the State Horticultural Society at Iowa City for the next ten years.

HOUSE.

Most of the session was spent in debate of the bill by Dows to empower loan and trust companies and state and savings banks to act as executors, guardians, trustees, etc. The bill was defeated, 39 to 20. Secretary of State Dobson filed his report on his connection with building and loan and insurance companies. He says he has no connection with building and loan companies, but is president of the National Life and Trust company with a salary of $400 a year.

Will Destroy Johannesburg.

LONDON, March 10.—A correspondent of the Daily Mail at Lorenzo Marquez says:

"I am reliably informed that high officials openly avow that the British flag shall never fly at Johannesburg. The place will be razed to the ground and the mines put in readiness to be electrically exploded from the fort as occasion requires. Most of the gold mines, except those which the government controls, are in a shocking state. They are flooded and the machinery is rusting and being wilfully smashed."

Lincoln's Remains.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 12.—The remains of Abraham Lincoln have been transferred from the crypt of the national Lincoln monument to a temporary vault just north, the removal being necessary because of the demolition of the monument preparatory to an entire reconstruction on a different plan, for which $100,000 were appropriated by the last legislature.

DES MOINES, March 12, 1900.

The senate judiciary committee decided to report for passage the bill by Senator Hazleton to allow district judges compensation for their expenses while attending court away from home. At present the district judge who travels a good share of the year receives no special compensation for it. Hazleton's measure is to allow them the actual amount of traveling and living expenses while away from home, not to exceed $500 a year. The bill has the support of the lawyers and while some opposition has developed, it is expected to pass.

The house appropriations committee voted to report for passage a bill requiring all students of the State Agricultural College who are not exclusively studying in the agricultural departments to pay tuition, whereas all tuition has been free heretofore. The committee voted to cut the appropriations asked for the agricultural college from $243,000 to $127,000, and to make the support fund for the biennial period instead of permanent. The appropriations committee recommended for passage a bill to appropriate $50,000 to erect monuments to Iowa soldiers on the battlefield of Shiloh, and to appoint a commission to locate the position of Iowa regiments at Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge. The committee also reported for passage a bill for the appropriation of $21,000 to finish the state historical building. The committee voted to raise the per capita support fund for the Mitchellville reform school from $10 to $12 per month.

The supreme judgeship contest is getting interesting. New candidates are developing with great rapidity, especially so long before the state convention. Seven candidates are now being talked of, and most of them are doing active work. During the last day or two several candidates have been in Des Moines, and the legislature is considered an especially fertile field to work. The candidates announced are: Emlin McClain, of Iowa City; Judge T. M. Fee, of Centerville, a candidate last year; Judge Z. A. Church, of Jefferson, Greene county; Judge H. M. Remley, of Anamosa, and Colonel Charles A. Clark, of Cedar Rapids. All of these men have announced their candidacy. In addition, L. C. Blanchard, of Mahaska county, will probably be a candidate. Judge Robert Sloan, of Keosauqua, one of the defeated candidates last year, is being mentioned, but has not definitely announced that he will be in the field. Judge James Davis, of Keokuk, was also in Des Moines a few days ago, and it is rumored that if he does not land the federal judgeship, for which he is a candidate, he will be in the list of supreme judge aspirants.

Senator Hazleton, of Pottawattamie, has secured the passage of the following resolution by the senate: "That the governor be and is hereby authorized to appoint in commission such number of delegates as may seem to him proper, and to empower the same to investigate in behalf of the state of Iowa the financial, commercial, manufacturing, agricultural, horticultural, mining, economic, judicial social moral or religious condition and interests at any exposition of this or any foreign country; the food, mines, manufacturing and commercial resources and prospects thereof; the breeds of domestic cattle, food and cereals grown therein, and to make report thereon, provided, however, that such investigation shall be prosecuted without charge to the state of Iowa for services rendered or expenses incurred."

Another evidence of the fact that the Duluth & New Orleans railroad will build its line to Des Moines during the coming season is given in an item from a paper of that city stating that grading outfits have arrived there preparatory to the work of grading the new road. The rails for the construction of the road will arrive in Nevada and Des Moines early in May. It is the intention to commence construction at both ends of the road. The new road officials believe they can carry passengers to the state fair the first week in September. There is every prospect at this time of their doing this.

The house elections committee, with little opposition, has recommended for passage the Hawk bill, to use of voting machines. The bill was slightly modified in accordance with suggestions from Attorney General Remley. The bill provides that at all elections held hereafter in Iowa ballots or votes may be cast, registered, recorded and counted by means of voting machines. The board of supervisors of any county or the council of any city may purchase machines and order their use in any of the voting precincts in the county, city or town. The committee recommended a substitute to the Bennett bill, providing the writing of a name in a blank space without a cross opposite, a cross opposite a blank space without writing a name, or a failure to mark a constitutional amendment or like proposition, will not destroy the validity of the rest of the ballot.

WATERING THE LAND

HOW IRRIGATION IS PROGRESSING IN IDAHO.

Heretofore Arid Regions Being Rapidly Transformed Into Gardens—Farmers' Societies in Many Instances Own the Irrigating Works.

(Boise, Idaho, Letter.)

Most of the people who farm in the rainfall regions suppose that the irrigation of land is a complicated process and that the art of doing it can only be acquired after years of experience, whereas, as a matter of fact, it is about the easiest and most simple work the western farmer has to do. In most cases the children attend to it under the direction of their parents, and any boy of 10 or 12 can do a man's work when it comes to irrigation.

The western farmer is wholly indifferent as to rainfall. He doesn't depend upon it in the least. The water that interests him is that which flows down into the valley from the melting snows in the mountain ranges. These waters he diverts into great canals which run along the rim of the valley about the irrigable lands and are tapped at stated intervals by what are called "laterals" or sub-ditches which flow from farm to farm and out of which the farmer takes the water for his fields. In some cases the waters of these mountain streams are acquired by the community of farmers along their course, each one holding as many shares of stock in the co-operative canal scheme as he owns acres of land, and being entitled to so many inches of water for every acre of his ownership. This is the usual plan. But when the construction of the main canal, owing to engineering difficulties, is too expensive a piece of business for the farmer to afford, irrigation companies undertake the work and build the canal into portions of the country where large areas of land are to be reclaimed. These Irrigation companions are "common carriers" of water and furnish it for a nominal price per acre per annum to the farmer. Sometimes these Irrigation companies own large tracts under their ditch which they sell in small farms with the water right, to settlers at a nominal prices per acre. In other instances they do not own land at all, leaving that to be acquired by the settler under the various acts of congress.

Perhaps no portion of the Union is now making such active progress in irrigation development, or is receiving so large a quota of immigrants as southern Idaho. There are millions of unoccupied acres in that state which only await settlement to become as productive as the lands upon the Nile. Efforts are being put forth by the state authorities to bring the advantages of these lands to the notice of the eastern farmer, and the several railroads of the state are engaged in the work.

Perhaps the easiest and the best way to acquire information is from the General Passenger Agent of the Oregon Short Line at Salt Lake City, from whence conservatively prepared pamphlets descriptive of irrigation methods and containing reliable information about the various localities now open for settlement, are being mailed free.

The time is certainly not far distant when the unoccupied public domain of Idaho will be entirely taken up, a condition which will be most unfortunate to those who delay taking advantage of the rare opportunities now offered.

SAPPHIRES ARE NOT ALL BLUE

Other Tints Are Sometimes Found Among Ceylon Gems.

"It is commonly believed that the sapphire is known only as a gem of a rich velvety blue in color," observed an experienced dealer in precious stones to the writer the other day. "As a matter of fact, the sapphire occurs in various hues. In Ceylon, for instance, where the finest specimens of this gem are found, it ranges from the soft velvety blue to the peacock blue, graduated in the latter to an almost faultless white. It also occurs in whites, greens and yellows, the latter shade being known as the oriental topaz and the green the oriental emerald. The white sapphires are often found clouded or streaked with blue, so that many specimens are cut which are white when looked at transversely, but having a bit of fine blue tint on the under point. Then there is the red sapphire, or Ceylon ruby. It is valued as highly as the finest Burmese rubies. These most highly prized are of rich pigeon blood or rose-red color. Some very fine sapphires have been found in Montana during the past ten years. The American gems are light blue, blue-green, green and pink, but the deep blue and red stones, which are chiefly in demand as jewels, have so far never been discovered in any part of this country."—Washington Star.

Governor Stanley, of Kansas, has granted conditional pardons to several convicts of that state, they agreeing not to drink intoxicants, not to gamble, violate any law, or shirk labor.

Spite work, under no circumstances, should ever be permitted to find its way into a state's code.

CONFLICT IN KENTUCKY

Arrest of Goebel's Alleged Murderer Causes Trouble.

FRANKFORT, March 12.—The reinstatement of the military power in complete control of the state executive building and the refusal of the military authorities to allow the local police and civil officers to enter the building for the purpose of arresting Secretary of State Caleb Powers and Captain John W. Davis, charged with being accessories to the Goebel assassination, and the probability of a conflict between the civil and military authorities, made the situation look serious during most of the day Saturday. At an early hour the city marshal made an effort to enter the capitol to make the arrest. He was prevented by the soldiers who had been summoned by Gov. Taylor. The marshal called upon Sheriff Suter, who likewise tried to make the arrest and was repulsed. He then stationed a complete line of guards around the building, to prevent the escape of Powers and Davis, and appealed to Governor Beckham. At 8 o'clock in the evening a squad of soldiers rushed from the building and hurried to a Chesapeake & Ohio train, which they boarded for Lexington. A few minutes later it was learned that Powers and Davis, disguised as soldiers, were in the squad. The authorities at Lexington were wired and when the train reached Lexington it was met by the entire police force of the city. Powers and Lieutenant Peake resisted. Powers was clubbed and Peake arrested, but later released on bond. Powers and Davis were placed in jail under guard of the local militia. On the person of each was found a pardon signed by Governor Taylor. The events of the day served to show very forcibly that the state guard as at present organized does not unanimously recognize Taylor as governor. Lieutenant Sparks refused to muster in the London company in response to a telegram from Governor Taylor, ordering him to bring the company here, and the Lexington companies also refused.

LOUISVILLE, March 12.—Judge Fields of the circuit court handed down an opinion that he had no jurisdiction in the cases brought to determine the governorship controversy. He holds that the constitution vests in the legislature power to decide contests for this office.

PEACE SEEMS POSSIBLE.

Early Cessation of Hostilities is Not Improbable.

LONDON, March 12.—In the absence of important news from the seat of war, speculation is rife regarding the probability of an early peace. President Kruger's appeal to Lord Salisbury for a cessation of hostilities, announced on Friday, is taken as foreshadowing that the end will soon be in sight. The government's views are probably enunciated in the following semi-official statement, just issued:

"It is understood that the government does not consider that the time has yet come for any authoritative statement as to ultimate terms of peace, and no member of the cabinet has authorized any published statement on the subject. It is, of course, generally understood among all political parties in this country that, so far as the South African republics are concerned, the status quo ante-bellum cannot remain unaltered after the close of hostilities. Their part of the system which involved a large measure of political and military independence will, of course, be materially modified as a result of the war, but the growing prospects of restored peace must be further advanced before her majesty's government can either finally formulate proposed terms of settlement or make any announcement of their plans."

THE NEW TREATY.

Foreign Relations Committee Recommends Its Passage.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The senate committee on foreign relations agreed to report the Hay-Pauncefote treaty amending the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, with an amendment granting authority for the defense of the canal by this country when constructed. The committee is practically unanimously in favor of the amendment to the treaty. Some objection was made by Senator Morgan, of Alabama, but he will not oppose the measure in the senate. Quite an elaborate report has been prepared by Morgan, which will be submitted to the senate in executive session when the treaty is reported. It is the opinion of the committee that the senate will, with but little delay, ratify the treaty as amended.

Joubert Reported to Have Resigned.

LONDON, March 10.—The Berlin correspondent of the Daily Mail says:

"I learn that there is dissension between President Kruger and General Joubert and that the latter has resigned. Probably President Kruger will assume the chief command. General Schalkburger and other prominent commandants are also likely to resign for similar reasons and because President Kruger ignored their advice to make peace overtures after the first Boer victory."

6,434 Letters a Day.

The John A. Salzer Seed Company, LaCrosse, Wis., received 6,434 orders last Monday, which is a monster day, but they expect to double this number by the middle of March. The firm is having a great trade in its specialties—potatoes, speltz, Bromus Inermis, rape, Big Four oats, Three-Eared corn and earliest vegetables. There is a wonderful demand for onions, cabbage, peas and bean seed this year. Early Bird radish and Lightning cabbage, the earliest of this kind in the wide, wide world, are having a tremendous sale.

AMERICAN TRANSVAAL FUND.

To Aid Widows and Orphans of the Boers.

A pathetic appeal of the committee of Africander and Bond members of parliament was issued at Cape Town, Oct. 10, 1899, signed by Messrs. N. F. DeWaal, Joseph N. Hoffman, J. H. Hofmeyr, Thomas P. Theron and D. J. A. Van Zyl, which says among other things:

"What may, what can, we colonial Africanders do in this sorrowful time? Join in the work of warfare with the weapons? The law and our duty as British subjects forbid this, even should other circumstances not oppose such a course of action.

"But what neither the law nor the duty of the subject forbids, and what, moreover, agrees in every respect with all principles of religion and humanity, is the offering of help to the wounded, to the widows and the orphans."

In the name of the Africander bond, on behalf of the citizens of the South African republic and their noble ally, the Orange Free State, I appeal to all Americans to show their sympathy with the brave people who are now, in the words of John Hancock, literally offering all that they have, all that they are, and all that they hope to be, upon the altar of their country, fighting to the death the arrogance and imposition of the great British empire, in order to remain free and independent, as did our American forefathers in 1776 and 1812. THERE WILL BE NO BOER WOUNDED ON THE BRITISH-AMERICAN HOSPITAL SHIP.

Send to me your subscriptions, small and large, and I will send the amount to Mr. C. C. de Villiers, Cape Town, the honorable treasurer of the committee of the Africander bond, to be expended under that appeal. I sent $2,000 on Feb. 23, 1900.

Sleep for Skin-Tortured Babies

In a Warm Bath with Cuticura SOAP

And a single anointing with CUTICURA, purest of emollients and greatest of skin cures. This is the purest, sweetest, most speedy, permanent, and economical treatment for torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, bleeding, scaly, crusted, and pimply skin and scalp humors with loss of hair, of infants and children, and is sure to succeed when all other remedies fail.

Millions of Women Use Cuticura Soap

Exclusively for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, in the form of baths for annoying irritations, inflammations, and chafings, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, and especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used it to use any other, especially for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp, and hair of infants and children. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odors. No other medicated or toilet soap ever compounded is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, viz., TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, the BEST skin and complexion soap, the BEST toilet soap and BEST baby soap in the world.

Cuticura Complete External and Internal Treatment for Every Humor, consisting of CUTICURA SOAP (25c.), to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle, CUTICURA OINTMENT (50c.), to instantly allay itching, inflammation, and irritation, and soothe and heal, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT (50c.), to cool and cleanse the blood. A SINGLE SET is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring, and humiliating skin, scalp, and blood humors, with loss of hair, when all else fails. The Set, $1.25

Up Against It.

Kanawha Record:—The Garner court house committee have asked the like committee of Britt to join with them in an effort to get a petition of the people before the legislature to enact a law allowing a vote upon the question of location in the year 1900. And further, that it be understood and agreed that no remonstrance would be circulated or filed against the proposed removal either to Garner or Britt, and the right of submission to a vote on behalf of either town be determined on the sufficiency of the petition alone

As far as we have noticed, Britt does not intend to accede to the proposal. A plain admission that her people do not expect to get the court house. Without assurance of being the favored county seat, Britt seeks to retard the location and the occupancy of the new Garner court house. There are many reasons why in all fairness the old court house should be vacated in favor of the modern building erected for the purpose by Garner. Reasons of advantage and profit to every county officer, taxpayer and anyone doing business at the court house.

There is a growing sentiment, now in the majority, that the people in Kanawha and this part of the county prefer the location at Garner. We believe when the time for action comes, be it in 1900 or 1903, that this town will hold the balance of power in her hands and it will not be cast in favor of Britt.

A Good Medicine for Children.

"I have no hesitancy in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says E. P Moran, a well known and popular baker, of Petersburg, Va. "We have given it to our children when troubled with bad coughs, also whooping cough, and it has always given perfect satisfaction. It was recommended to me by a druggist as the best cough medicine for children as it contained no opium or other harmful drug." Sold by J. L Harr.

Lengthening days give evidence of approaching spring time when ambitious business men, surrounded by shrewd competition in the over-crowed older towns, are looking for new homes, broader and better business advantages. The Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern Railway is extending its lines into the best portions of northwestern Iowa and southwestern Minnesota. This country is noted for its rich soil, social, educational and religious advantages. Four towns were located last fall and have made remarkable growth already. Several new towns will be located during the spring and early summer. If you desire to de a pioneer in a good new town in a well settled rich country which has long been in need of a railroad.

An Honest Medicine for La Grippe.

Geo. W. Waitt, of south Gardiner, Me., says: "I have had the worst cough, cold, chills and grippe and have taken lots of trash of no account but profit to the vendor. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the only thing that done any good whatever I have used one bottle of it and the chills, cold and grippe have all left me I congratulate the manufacturers of an honest medicine." For sale by J. L. Harr.

Under the cloak of temperance Britt people are raising a hue and cry about illegal "booze" selling in Kanawha, but what really hurts them is the country trade lost to them and now going to Kanawha. It is freely announced that one of the leaders is a retired business man who has made a nice sum of money himself at the same business. Poor old Britt! No chance of getting it or any other enterprise! No wonder they have bankrupt sales and business men endeavoring to sell out,

FOUND A GOLD MINE!

It Was in His Poultry Yard.

People in the neighborhood of Creston Iowa, are amazed at the number of eggs that this man drives to market with. When asked what was the cause of his hens being so prolific, he stated it was all in a certain compound he was using, that kept his hens in good condition and furnished them with the proper stimulus to egg production. American Poultry mixture is the name of it, and is made by American Mfg. Co. Terre Haute, Ind. Every man in the poultry business is interested in the health of his hens and their laying capacity. In the eggs lie his profits This mixture is guaranteed to increase the production of eggs 100 per cent or money refunded. It will do more than three times as much as the same amount of any other compound. It is concentrated in form and the result of years of practical experience in the poultry business. There is absolutely no doubt as to what it will do, and you are invited to try it at the expense of the company. Send $1.00 for sample package and if it doesn't do the work you get your money back. This is fair and is made to induce practical poultrymen to give it a trial. It is also a sure preventive of such diseases as the terrible cholera and roup which create such havoc in all parts of the country. It acts directly on the craw and gizzard and is a thorough scientific preparation.

The manufacturers guarantee every package or refund purchase money. If your druggist don't sell American Poultry Mixture, he's behind the age. In that case order direct from American Manufacturing Co., Terre Haute, Ind.

Mrs. Calvin Zimmerman, Milesburg, Pa., says, "As a speedy cure for coughs colds, croup and sore throat One Minute Cough Cure is unequaled. It is pleasant for children to take. I heartily recommend it to mothers." It is the only harmless remedy that produces immediate results. It cures bronchitis, pneumonia, grippe and throat and lung diseases. It will prevent consumption, J. L. Harr.

Aug. Ridder too'a a tumble from the loft of his new machinery depot, Tuesday, and in consequence is nursing a lame arm and hip. He fell about steen feet and landed on a patch of ice. It was, in spite of the sprains and bruises a lucky tumble.

The ladies of the Royal Neighbors Lodge will give a home talent play entitled "The Bachelor Club", in Woodman Hall, Saturday evening, Mar. 24. The ladies hope to give an entertainment that will be a credit to the Order and promise a rare treat to the community. Come and enjoy an evening of music and mirth.

Joe Miller returned from Algona Saturday, where he has been for the past two months visiting. He places an ad in the TIMES this week and makes a bid for the trade of those desiring painting and paper hanging. He guarantees his work and has always given good satisfaction.

Miss Floy Shafer entertained about twenty of her young friends with a house party last evening. The evening was made merry with games of various kinds, and at a late hour refreshments were served. Miss Floy is a charming hostess, and those who attended her party report a very pleasant evening.

The Klemme band, under its new organization, is forging right to the front in every way. There are few towns the size of Klemme that have so good a band. They are making an effort to get money to buy two new instruments, and we think the business men should donate a little towards that end.

Mr. and Mrs. Bloom had a fine Kimball piano placed in their elegant home last Friday, purchased of E. P. Schaefer. In the evening about a dozen young people were invited in to try the instrument, and spend the evening. A very pleasant time is reported by those who were present.

About twenty young people congregated at the home of Wm. Fuller on last Friday evening, and if all reports are true, they had a royal good time. Games of various kinds were indulged in, and at a late hour refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Fuller are just as young as they used to be and proved themselves royal entertainers.

Gilbert McGrady, the gentleman who recently purchased the M. I. Long property in east Klemme, has arrived with his family and will take possession at once. Mr. McGrady informed the TIMES man that he intended making many improvements. An addition will be built to the house and the old part made two stories. The property can easily be made to be worth three times as much as at present, both from a money point of view, and in general appearance. Mr. McGrady is a carpenter, and we hope he will find plenty to do.

School Election.

Quite a little excitement was manifested at the school election Monday. Two tickets were in the field. The People's ticket with Aug. Lau and Aug. Barz for directors, and H. C. Lau for treasurer, as against J. Gruetzmacher and Nels Palmer for directors and Wm. Becker for treasurer on the Citizens' ticket. After the smoke of battle had cleared away, under flag of truce the "People's Ticket" standers were allowed to carry off the wounded unmolested. The vote is as follows:

PEOPLES TICKET.
Aug. Lau,	22
Aug. Barz,	23
H. C. Lau,	13
CITIZENS TICKET.
John Gruetzmacher,	53
Nels Palmer,	70
Wm. Becker,	71

The vote for or against the tax was light and carried by a small majority.

TO CURE A COLD WHILE YOU SLEEP.

City Politics.

A citizens caucus was held at the TIMES office Saturday per call, and nominations made for two councilmen, and one assessor. An informal ballot was taken to get the feeling of the meeting, and the names of A. W. Schoper, C. G. Bracher, J. W. Gruetzmacher and Geo. Ell were voted upon. Schoper and Bracher having received a majority of all the votes cast, on motion the informal ballot was declared formal and they were declared the nominees. John Zoch being the only candidate for assessor, the clerk was instructed to cast the unanimous vote of the caucus for him. No other business to be transacted the meeting adjourned.

Death of Mr. Cassens.

Old Mr. Cassens, who has for many years made his home with Dr. Richter's family, was taken sick a couple of weeks ago, and although he had every care and attention passed away Tuesday, March 13. He was born in Germany in the year 1828, became a sailor at the age of 13, which occupation he followed for 24 years, including service in the navy during the civil war. He was married in 1866. Four children were born to them of which there remains one daughter living. For about 25 years or since the death of his wife, he has made his home with the Richter family. He was a faithful member of the Luthern church and a member in good standing of the Odd Fellows Lodge. The funeral occurs this afternoon, and after the preliminary service of the Church by Rev. Brenner and Rev. Paterson, the brethern of the Lodge will pay a last tribute to the departed brother, and lay him away in mother earth till the last great day. Peace be to his ashes.

With coal at $125 a ton in Alaska the man who discovers a mine of the "black diamonds" can laugh at the efforts of the gold miners to acquire wealth.

There are fewer lawyers in St. Louis than in any other large city in the country. That wouldn't be such a bad town after all, if it were not for its many disadvantages.

Those people who value things by the amount it costs to procure them are advised to go to Johannesburg in search of rooms, for there a simple shakedown for a single night, in an apartment containing five other persons, costs the modest sum of $15. The probable rent of a room and a bed all to one's self is apparently a matter to leave to the consideration of millionaires only.

A struck-jury law which provides for selection by the court of ninety-six names from those of persons qualified to serve as jurors, from which the prosecutor and defendant may each strike twenty-four, and the remainder of which shall be put in the jury box, out of which the trial jury shall be drawn in the usual way, is upheld in Brown vs. New Jersey, Advance Sheets U. S., p. 77, against the contention that it violates the constitutional provision as to due process of law.

There is ordinarily no concert of action among state legislatures. Nevertheless similar conditions produce similar results; and a comparison of the more important laws enacted in the several states makes it possible to trace certain controlling influences, and to ascertain what ideas are uppermost in the minds of legislators. The place which the "trust" issue, for example, holds in the public mind is shown by the fact that twenty-nine states and territories now have laws which are intended to restrict or prohibit trusts. Nine of the laws were enacted last year; those of Arkansas, Michigan, Missouri and Texas were especially stringent.

The committee of the Society for the Preservation of Science and Historic Places and Objects appointed to examine the Stony point battleground publishes an interesting account of that historic spot. It is illustrated with plans of the battle and photographs of the point at the present day. The battleground has been committed to the trusteeship of the society by the state of New York, which appropriated $25,000 for the purchase of the scene of operations. Nearly thirty-four acres, the major part of Stony Point peninsula, was purchased for $21,500. The society petitions that the remaining $3,500 be put in its hands for the care and preservation of the battleground.

The party of geologists, paleontologists and botanists who were invited last summer by the Union Pacific Railroad company to visit and explore the fossil fields of Wyoming, spent forty days in the rocky wilderness. Within twenty days their number had dwindled from sixty-six to fourteen men, the majority having given up the undertaking en route. About six tons of the fossil remains of ancient animals were collected and shipped eastward, but no complete skeleton of a dinosaur was discovered. Much of the exploration was in a rough country resembling the "Bad Lands" of Dakota. The bones were found cracked into innumerable pieces, and had to be bandaged and set in plaster before removal.

Here's an ingenious calculation warranted to make a man gray-headed with responsibility: "You had 2 parents, 4 grandparents, 8 great-grandparents, 16 great-great-grandparents, 32 for the fifth remove, 64 for the sixth, 128 for the seventh, 256 for the eighth, 512 for the ninth, 1,024 for the tenth, 2,048 for the eleventh, 4,096 for the twelfth, 8,192 for the thirteenth, 16,384 for the fourteenth, 32,768 for the fifteenth, 65,536 for the sixteenth, 131,072 for the seventeenth, 262,144 for the eighteenth, 524,288 for the nineteenth, 1,048,576 for the twentieth, 2,097,152 for the twenty-first, 4,194,304 for the twenty-second, 8,388,608 for the twenty-third, 16,777,216 for the twenty-fourth, 33,554,432 for the twenty-fifth, 67,108,864 for the twenty-sixth, 134,217,728 for the twenty-seventh, 268,435,456 for the twenty-eighth, 536,870,912 for the twenty-ninth, 1,073,741,824 for the thirtieth, the total of all these being 2,147,483,648. If we assume three generations to the century, it shows that 1,000 years ago our ancestors were all people then living in the civilized world. Your ancestors and mine figure just the same, and we might ask how many generations we would have to go back to find that you and I are related. This proves the brotherhood-of-man idea indisputably."

BASEBALL is to be a go in Des Mo Grounds have been finally secured manager employed and arrangeme are being made for the perfection all plans and details necessary to c rying on the enterprise.

THE coroner's jury investigating th death of little Hazel Rogers, of For Madison, who shot herself recently returned a verdict of suicide. Grave suspicions were entertained of foul play. According to the evidence, the child deliberately fired a bullet into her heart.

SECTION men going to work from Cedar Rapids found a heavy steel rail across the Northwestern track between Ehler and Ryan, removing it before the arrival of a train. It was evidently placed there with the intention of wrecking a train and the matter is being investigated.

REDFIELD was visited by a fire one night last week which destroyed half the business part of the town. The whole north side of the main street was burned, excepting the Park hotel. The loss will aggregate between $15,000 and $20,000. The fire seemed to start in three small buildings all at once.

DON STEWART, a farmer 30 years of age, residing near Albia, committed suicide a few days ago by cutting his throat with a razor. He had been brooding over imaginary troubles and was recently adjudged insane. The commissioner withdrew the information and the mother of the deceased had been entrusted with his care. Stewart leaves a wife and several small children.

A SIOUX CITY dispatch says: John Keane, archbishop of Damascus, will certainly be the successor of Rev. John Hennessey, deceased, archbishop of Dubuque. All doubt has been removed by information from an unquestionable authority received here. Another announcement which was not expected, as was the first, is that the diocese of Davenport, presided over by Bishop Cosgrove, will be divided, and Des Moines made a see. The expectation that the Dubuque diocese would be divided and Sioux City made the see city of the new diocese, was confirmed. Bishop Cosgrove will supplicate Rome to divide his diocese. The successor to Hennessey has been decided upon for some time, and the consultors, irremovable rectors and bishops will shortly ratify the choice of Archbishop Keane.

A HORRIBLE story of the finding of the dead bodies of two sisters, Mrs. Margaret McHale and Mrs. Mary Shelly, aged 90 and 80 respectively, has just come to light. For a number of years past they had lived together in a small house on a relative's farm south of Clarion. This winter they became so feeble that they were unable to work, and the neighbors went every few days to attend them. Recently some one noticed no signs of life and investigated, and found the bodies lying on the floor, having been dead a day or two. To add to the horror, a cat that had been left in the house feasted upon the remains of both to such an extent that they were hardly recognizable, the lips, eyes and tongues being almost totally devoured. The coroner's verdict said death came from old age. It is supposed that one died naturally, and the shock thus sustained proved too great for the feeble strength of the other. The remains were interred in one grave.

Des Moines dispatch: Howe & Miller, attorneys for Mark Chiesa, E. Romani, J. D. Hagerman and S. Neuderman, saloon men cited to appear and show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of court, filed demurrers to the informations that it is claimed will not only quash these four cases, which were brought by representatives of the anti-saloon people, but all the contempt proceedings instituted by J. D. Laws and will render inoperative about 6,000 injunctions granted prior to 1897. The saloon men maintain that the law, under which the old injunctions, those of 1895, were granted, was not re-enacted and provision was not made in the new code for the continuance of the old injunctions, so that in reality they have gone out of existence and no violation can be charged on their account. They are taking the ground on which the anti-saloon people fought when they attacked the old consent petition granted prior to the enactment of the old code and which they maintained and the supreme court has held was invalidated by that point. The liquor men are so confident as to their position that they propose to rest on the demurrers and to appeal to the supreme court in the event that the lower court holds against them.

A DISPATCH from Des Moines says: A compromise has been effected between the coal miners and operators in joint conference, by which the miners agree to accept an advance of 10 cents per ton for mining, with the screen basis. This is an advance of from 12½ to 15 per cent, varying between the mines of the state, according to the conditions of mining.

CLINTON county has taken another step in the good roads movement. At the March session of the board of supervisors, which has just closed, $12,000 were transferred from the county to the road fund. This, in addition to the regular road tax, will make a large sum for the improvement of the highways. The county already has several miles of macadamized roads, and the farmers are so well pleased with the condition that they are anxious to have the improvements extended. The board is backed by the voters of the county and further improvements are asked for.

THE jury in the case of John Urch, a farmer residing two miles west of Al[bia], against the Iowa Central & Western railway, in which damages were asked for the use of certain land belonging to Urch when the Iowa Central Western road was built from Hiton to Algona, decided in favor of plaintiff, awarding him $2,520 damages. The railroad was built diagonally over a 170-acre tract belong to Urch, also over a small portion of another forty, the railroad company using, however, a fraction less than ten acres for right-of-way purposes. The case will be appealed to the supreme court.

A DISPATCH from Independence says that George W. Appleby has been released from the insane asylum and that he has returned to Bristow to resume the practice of medicine. Dr. Appleby while in a fit of temporary insanity last January, took a little babe from its father's arms and dashed its brains out on furniture in the office of Dr. Hoon, whom he was visiting. Shortly afterward he said he knew what he had done, but was unable to control himself. The authorities took him to the hospital, where he remained for a little more than a month. It is probable that action will be taken against him for murder.

IN a vault lie the remains of his predecessors, Bishops Loras and Smith, at Dubuque, the remains of John Hennessey, the first archbishop of Dubuque. The obsequies occurred on the morning of the 11th and were of the simplest character. There were no flowers and no ornaments whatever, even the high altar being stripped of everything except what was necessary in celebration of mass. The same order was carried throughout the church, nothing appearing except black and purple drapery. There was also an entire absence of music, only the voices of hundreds of priests being heard in the Gregorian chant. This was in accord with the dead prelate's wishes. The ceremonies were conducted by Cardinal Gibbons.

THE strange case of a man in average good health receiving all his nourishment and food through a silver tube directly into the stomach is interesting the medical fraternity of Waterloo. Adolph Vollenweider has just returned from Chicago, where the operation of inserting the tube was performed to keep him from starving to death. The operation was entirely successful, and Mr. Vollenweider experiences little discomfort in taking his meals through the little silver tube, although the elaborate meals has no temptation for him. He is able to be about and seems to be in as good health and spirits as usual. There is no difficulty in breathing, the windpipe being apparently free. Mr. Vollenweider is a man of about years of age, is married and has a family. He is a blacksmith by trade and up to the time of his departure for Chicago was employed at the Illinois Central shops.

THE Black Hawk county grand jury is investigating the charges of embezzlement preferred against A. L. Hackbridge, late secretary of the Waterloo Perpetual Building and Loan Association, by the stockholders of the concern. At a meeting of more than 100 stockholders it was decided not to push the case, but at the same time continue the organization of the association regardless of the fact that the amount embezzled had now assumed large proportions. The report showed that the total amount of the embezzlement charged is $21,790. The operations by which this shortage in the funds of the association was brought about the report showed were begun in 1895, three years after the secretary had been installed. It was explained to the stockholders that the shortage as shown on the face of the report would amount to about 11 per cent of the entire stock in force on the installment plan, but there are bondsmen holden for $12,000, and if these bonds are paid the actual loss to the members will be only $9,790, reducing the responsibility perceptibly.

CONGRESS.

SENATE.

Washington, March 5.—Carter, of Montana, dealt vigorously with the Quay case in the senate in the course of an explanation as to why he will vote for the former senator from Pennsylvania, notwithstanding he voted against the seating of Corbett in the last congress. The near approach to the time of voting on the conference report on the financial bill brought out two speeches on that measure, one by Fairbanks, of Indiana, and the other by Butler, of North Carolina.

HOUSE.

Considerable business of a minor character was transacted.

SENATE.

Washington, March 6.—The conference report on the financial bill was agreed to, 44 to 26. Simon replied to the speech made by Carter in the Quay case. Scott of West Virginia introduced a resolution authorizing the president to govern the Philippine islands until congress shall otherwise provide.

HOUSE.

The house spent the entire day in consideration of the Aldrich-Robbins contested election case from the Fourth Alabama district.

SENATE.

Washington, March 7.—The one feature of the session was the speech of Lodge of Massachusetts, which was an eloquent address on the Philippine question, strongly upholding the policy of the administration.

HOUSE.

After adopting resolutions on the death of Congressman Harmer, of Pennsylvania, the house adjourned.

SENATE.

Washington, March 8.—Mason entered a motion to discharge the committee on foreign relations from further consideration of his resolution expressing sympathy for the Boers. Pettus delivered a carefully prepared address in opposition to the Porto Rican tariff bill. Foraker, in charge of the bill, replied. He declared it to be the most liberal and generous legislation ever proposed for a territory of the United States.

HOUSE.

House unseated Gaston A. Robbins, a democrat from the Fourth Alabama district, and seated in his stead William Aldrich, republican, by a strict party vote. House adopted a rule setting aside the second and fourth Fridays of each month for the consideration of private pension bills.

SENATE

Washington, March 9.—Lindsay of Kentucky delivered an address in opposition to the tariff feature of the Porto Rican bill. Allison reported the bill making appropriations of customs dues exacted from the island of Porto Rico from October 19, 1898, to January 1, 1900, amounting to $2,995,455, and gave notice that he would call up the measure to-morrow. In executive session Mason's motion to discharge committee from consideration of his Boer resolution was discussed.

HOUSE.

Ninety-seven private pension bills were passed by the house. Loud and Sulloway engaged in a colloquy over the policy of passing private pension bills.

SENATE.

Washington, March 10.—While the senate had the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill under consideration to-day, a lively debate was precipitated by an amendment proposed by Hoar proposing to give former Queen Liliuokalani, of Hawaii, $20,000 and an annuity of $10,000. The amendment was tabled finally without division. The pending bill was passed with a few minor amendments.

HOUSE.

The house agreed to take up the bill providing a government for Hawaii on April 3, the final vote to be taken on April 5. Consideration of the Wise-Young election contest was resumed and occupied the remainder of the session.

BOERS DIDN'T MAKE A STAND.

Entire Force, However, Succeeded in Escaping.

LONDON, March 9.—The Boers appear to have made no stand whatever, except that while in retreat they twice repulsed General French's cavalry with rifle fire. As no report has been made of the capture of prisoners, the enemy probably got away with their entire force. General French is still following them and keeping between them and Bloemfontein.

PRETORIA, March 6.—Via Lorenzo Marquez.—It is officially stated here that on Sunday last there was heavy fighting at Dordrecht, that the British were repulsed with great loss, and that the federals captured three cannon.

LADYSMITH, March 9.—The Boers are entrenching at Biggarsberg. The scouts report that all the Natal Dutch farmers have fled from the surrounding country.

The evacuation of the northern districts of Cape Colony is now nearly complete. The British are in possession of the railroad crossings. The Daily News makes the following editorial comment:

"It was rumored in London yesterday—and we have some reason for believing the rumor to be correct—that the two republics made informal and unofficial overtures for peace on the preceding day. Unfortunately, the conditions suggested were of such a character as to preclude the possibility of leading to any result. Terms which might have been gladly accepted before the war, in order to avert it, are impossible after the war, with all the sacrifices it has entailed."

KRUGER MAKES ADVANCES.

Proposes Peace Terms That Are Rejected by Salisbury.

LONDON, March 10.—It is learned that the peace rumors were founded on the fact that President Kruger has appealed to Lord Salisbury for a cessation of hostilities, offering at length by cable, the terms which he is willing to accept. These, however, are not now taken seriously, as they include practically nothing more than what the Transvaal government offered prior to the issuing of the British ultimatum. Officials here regard the proposition as merely a ruse of the Boers to gain time and do not consider that President Kruger is yet ready to consider the sweeping demands which Great Britain will make as reimbursement for the loss of life and great expenditure. It was understood that President Kruger's advances had met with an emphatic rejection at the hands of Lord Salisbury who is believed to have said that no attempt to retain the independence of the Transvaal can be considered for a moment by the British government.

She (after the proposal)—"You know papa is rich." He (philosophically)—"Oh, well, I'd rather take his chances than mine."

THE THOUSAND-DOLLAR BILL

A MYSTERY OF THE UNITED STATES TREASURY—A SHORT STORY

BY LEONARD OUTRAM

CHAPTER I.

They were out on the verandah in the cool of the evening, old Caleb Loring, in a rocking chair, smoking his corn-cob pipe; Bertha, his daughter, swinging in a low hammock, and her husband, Edmund Hackett, who was perched upon the wooden balustrade. Wilton Loring was there, too, lounging in a canvas chair and smoking a "domestic" cigar. The verandah ran round three sides of a modest frame house, all painted white, with the exception of its bright green shutters. Edmond and Bertha, recently married, lived here in the outskirts of Washington with the head of the family. Wilton had run down from Philadelphia, where he was cashier of the Rancher's National Bank. They were all grumbling over their meagre incomes.

"Uncle Sam," remarked Edmond Hackett, a quiet, steady going sort of fellow, well advanced toward middle life, "Uncle Sam is not generous to us boys and girls of the Civil service. We handle between nigh upon a million dollars every working day, and give our lives to the mill horse business for a bare subsistence."

"Since I've been cashier of the Ranchers' National," said Wilton Loring, "I've had enough money pass through my hands to make me crazy with thirst for it. It's like being—

"Don't like to hear you talk like that, Wilt, my son," remarked Old Caleb, with a quick shake of his head, as if a mosquito had settled on him. "Thoughts of that kind sometimes materialize into deeds you'd be sorry for."

"Humph! I'm not so sure I shan't one day try to pinch something," pursued Wilton, with a wink at his sister. "But big steals are the sort to succeed nowadays. To make a corner in something or other; to float a salted mine, or a bogus building society. That's the game."

"Tut, tut!" protested the elder Loring, with fierce expectoration; but Bertha mischievously took up her brother's humor.

"There's a fine chance now I've got into the counting division at the Treasury," said she. "Say now, why not make up a family combination? You, Wilton, are cashier at the 'Ranchers,' and you're constantly having old bills to send into the Treasury for redemption. You 'pinch,' as you call it, a thousand-dollar greenback, and forward the packet to the Treasury endorsed as containing one more bill than it actually does. That packet comes to me to be counted and examined. I just pass it as containing the number of greenbacks specified. On it goes to Edmond, my husband, whose duty it chances to be to check my count. Smart Edmond finds one bill short; but seeing his Bertha's initials on the wrapper, he just winks a little, and the packet, with, say ninety-nine bills instead of one hundred bills against the new ones to that value which he sends back in exchange to the Rancher's Bank through the Division of Issue. See?"

"Ha, ha, ha!" laughed Edmond Hackett, disposed to enter into any joke conceived by his adored little wife. "How we could bleed Uncle Sam and help ourselves to the salaries he ought to pay us."

"Have done! Have done!" burst out the old man. "If I believed my son and my daughter and my daughter's husband were capable of such roguery I'd fetch out my gun and fill you full of holes, every one!"

He meant it. His usually placid features were distorted and purple with indignation, and the stem of the pipe he held snapped in the angry grip of his fingers. Wilton flung himself back in a fit of hearty laughter, but Bertha, perceived that the joke had gone too far.

"Father! dear father!" she exclaimed soothingly. "You know us all better'n that, sure. We were just poking fun; weren't we, Edmond? Besides, such a combination as I figured out couldn't be anyway."

"Quite impossible!" averred Wilton, getting over his mirth.

"Well, I reckon it's improbable in the last degree," said Edmond Hackett.

"So, as opportunity makes the thief, and we shall have no opportunity," added young Loring, "the whole three of us'll have to be honest, will we, or won't we."

"You know, father," urged Bertha, to calm the old man, who muttered and protested still, and seemed to have taken fright at the very thought of a breach of trust, "there are nine ladies in the Counting Division besides myself, and Wilton's imaginary short packet might go to any one of them instead of to me."

"And if Bertha did get it and pass it," remarked Hackett, to clinch the argument, "there are plenty of fellows in the Secretary's office who check the counts beside me, and one of them would spot her 'oversight.' Even if the short packet came to me, it would be useless for me to wink, for I should have one-half the bills. They are cut longitudinally," he added for Wilton's information, turning to his brother-in-law; "one half—the lower section—comes to the Secretary, and the upper goes to the office of the Register, to be checked there."

"We should need another confederate in the Register's," put in Bertha. "The steal would be caught to a certainty in the Register's office."

"Unless—by Caesar! we've the whole bag of tricks. The combination you figured out is not only possible, it is here in our hands. Dad is the Senior Counter in the Register Division. The big bills go to him. This is marvelous. If fortune is disposed to do us a good turn, here's the method all ready, cut and dried. I nobble a thousand-dollar bill at the bank, and send a packet of ninety-nine into the Treasury endorsed as 100, Bertha passes it through the Counting Division, Edmond gets the lower half in the Secretary's office, notes his wife's initials and swallows the shortage with connubial submission; and Mr. Loring, who spots the game in the Register's, out of respect for—"

"His trust, his country's confidence, the honor of his name," burst out the old man, "reports the matter instantly. Yes, gives the lot of you away, to ruin, to disgrace, to the hulks. No words about it! That's what I would do, mind that!"

Wilton laughed lightly.

"The bundles of rubbish; ninety-nine or a hundred bills; what would it matter to Uncle Sam? And I should send each of you $250. Think it over, dad."

"Think it over? I shall never forget this talk of yours, Wilton. A crime conceived is half executed. May I never hear more of this combination of yours, in joke or in fact, will be my prayer from this day to God in Heaven."

And shaking his head angrily, the father strode into the house.

CHAPTER II.

A few days after this conversation Bertha Hackett sat in the office of the Redemption Division assisting Mrs. Lawson, the senior lady of the department, to count a packet of "big bills." Greenbacks of large denomination were allotted to the senior lady in the ordinary course, and the juniors would take it in turn to work with her for the sake of becoming accustomed to every kind of note, and by such familiarity detecting any forgery that might fall into their hands. Bertha was serving her apprenticeship in this department, and that day she sat at Mrs. Lawson's desk to learn all that this good lady could teach her.

Now among the packets of old bills sent in from all parts of America to be canceled and exchanged for new currency, it was not unusual for the Ranchers' National Bank of Philadelphia, to contribute to its quota. Bertha's bright grey eyes took a sidelong glance at the heap of parcels before her companion, wondering whether chance would so far realize their fancied combination as to bring into her hands a consignment from her brother, Wilton. Like a pestilent tune that keeps echoing in the brain, that family talk of a conspiracy to defraud Uncle Sam could not be dismissed from her thoughts. These slips of dirty paper authorizing the payment to bearer of large sums of money, what a pity they should all go to the macerating machine to be ground into pulp! One more or less would make no difference to the wealthy nation, but would work wonders for an underpaid official who found it hard to make both ends meet. She told herself it was horribly wicked to think of misappropriation, but she could not control her thoughts and they pictured for her persistently the staff of the three departments reduced to herself, her father, and her husband, and figured out the fortune they might accumulate by the aid of slick fingers. While thus musing she was startled by a remark from Mrs. Lawson, as that lady placed before her a heap of thousand-dollar bills which she had been critically examining with a magnifying glass. "That's a big charge from the Ranchers' National—a hundred bills of a thousand each. I make them right; but you go over them again one by one, count them in two packets of fifty each, and bind them with a paper band in the usual way for me to initial and pass forward."

Mrs. Lawson proceeded with another packet, so absorbed in her work that she did not notice how strangely your Mrs. Hackett stared for a moment at the task before her. With the heap of bills lay the paper band that had inclosed them when they came from the Bank at Philadelphia. It was endorsed with the number and the denomination of the notes, and bore the signature, "Wilton Loring, Cashier." Mrs. Lawson vouched for them as correct, and yet Bertha's fingers trembled as she turned them over. She counted half of them backward, from one to fifty, and made a packet of them, as instructed, and the other half she counted in the usual way, beginning one, two, three, four, and so on. When she came to the end of the count she paused, and counted this second half again backward. Then she slowly fastened a band around the packet.

"You're not very smart at present, my girl," remarked the elder lady, observing her sluggish action. "I have to hunt for counterfeits; but should never get through if I took so long as you have done with that simple cheque. But maybe you reckon to find I've passed a wrong count?" she added with a little touch of irony. "After thirty-four years at this work, my dear, the bills that have passed through Rosina Lawson's hands can be taken as right if she says so."

Mrs. Lawson was rather tetchy, had a good conceit of herself, born long infallibility. Bertha in silence wrote her own initials on the wrapper of the two packets, and this appeased the senior lady, for by taking responsibility for the correctness of the packets, Mrs. Hackett seemed to convey an impression of confidence in her. But something was in Bertha's mind, for she muttered to herself as the packets were taken away to the cutting machine to be further checked in the offices of the Secretary of the Register, "There's just a chance!"

CHEAP VIOLIN

Used by Two Smooth Men to Cheat a Pawnbroker.

The impression that pawnbrokers cannot be "worked" has been exploded by some cunning swindle. Some months ago there came to Philadelphia two musicians who had been stranded with a theatrical company in a neighboring New Jersey town. They needed money badly, so they put their wits to work and succeeded in raising a nice little stake. This is the way they worked it: One of them, who may be called John Bow, took a violin—which was a cheap instrument, worth at the utmost $25—to a Market street pawn shop and gave the proprietor a long essay on the rarity of the instrument. To prove that it was an old Cremona, he played for the pawnbroker, and finally succeeded in getting a $15 loan on it for two weeks. Before he left he urged the pawnbroker to be very careful of the violin, as he would not lose it for hundreds of dollars. The pawnbroker placed the fiddle in his safe and instructed his assistants to be very careful of it. A week later a man entered the place who said he was a collector of rare violins, and wanted to know if there were any in the shop that he might fancy. The boss showed him a number, but the fancier did not see any to his liking. Finally Bow's violin was brought out, and when the fancier drew the bow over it he became enthusiastic and said he would give $400 for it. The broker replied that he was sorry, but the violin could not be sold. The stranger then became anxious and left a $5 deposit and asked that they try to get the fiddle. A few days afterward the other, Bow, came in, and when the proprietor learned that he wanted an additional $10 on the fiddle he offered him $100 cash more for the instrument. At first Bow would not listen to it, but finally he took the additional $10 and left with a sorrowful face. The pawnbroker chuckled over such an easy way of making over $200. He waited anxiously for the fancier, but as it is now over three months since he said he would come back, the broker thinks it was a put up job. He had the violin valued last week, and it was pronounced worth, at the highest, $25.—Philadelphia Record.

Usefulness of Great Lakes.

The great lakes have become a great artery for our richest commercial blood. One-third of the population of the United States is dependent on these lakes for their export and import trade. This waterway taps the richest and most prosperous agricultural territory on this continent of ours, together with our most productive mines, and it is worth while noting that within a radius of 400 miles of Cleveland lies one-half the population of the United States. It is a well-established fact that deep-water transportation is, and necessarily must be, far below the cost of transportation by rail; indeed, it is computed that the cost of water transportation by steam, when the voyage is of any considerable length, is about one-quarter of the average cost of transportation by rail, while by sailboat it is only one-eighth of the latter. As this question of transportation determines to a great extent the existence or non-existence of a possible industry, and enhances or diminishes the value of every article of export in proportion to its efficiency and economy, the battle cry of the west for "twenty feet of water between Duluth and the sea" is no great problem to account for.—Ainslee's Magazine.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON XI, MARCH 18 — MARK 2:13-22—AT MATTHEWS.

Golden Text—"He Said Unto Him, Follow Me"—Luke V:27 — How the Savior of the World Reached the Masses of the People.

13. "And he went forth again," from the city of Capernaum, where he had been teaching and healing (see last lesson). "By the seaside," where he had often been before. He probably went to the northeast of the city toward the mouth of the Jordan. "The multitude resorted . . . he taught," i. e., by the tense of the original, The multitude kept coming to him, and he kept teaching them.—Morison.

14. "As he passed by," moving along the shore, instead of remaining all the time in one place. "He saw Levi the son of Alphaeus." Levi was his name at the time of his call. He is elswhere called Matthew. "Sitting at the receipt of custom." Toll house ("tol booth," in Edinburgh), or custom house, for the collection of the taxes on fish, or duties on the merchandise which passed along the great roads to Jerusalem, Tyre, and Damuscus, and the East, which centered at Capernaum. "Said unto him, Follow me," both in heart as his Savior, teacher and master, and literally by taking his place among our Lord's constant attendants.

15. "As Jesus sat (better, he [Matthew] was reclining) at meat in his house," at a great feast which Matthew made, according to Luke. And "many publicans (see on v. 14) and sinners." Disreputable sinners and outcasts, notorious offenders. The Pharisees were quite as great sinners, but in another way. "Sat also . . . with Jesus." They were invited by Matthew to meet Jesus, probably that they might learn more of the truth from him. It seems to have been an effort of Matthew to bring his old acquaintances and friends into the kingdom of God. "For there were many" present who were following Jesus wherever he went to learn more of him, and these were present.

16. "When the scribes and Pharisees." The strictest outward religionists and observers of the ceremonial law, the men who were like whited sepulchers and dishes washed on the outside, but full of all uncleanness within. "Saw him." The Pharisees were not guests, but freely came into the house and looked on, according to the custom of the East. "Said unto his disciples," who were probably nearer. "How is it that he eateth and drinketh with publicans and sinners?" Eating and drinking was a covenant of friendship.

17. "When Jesus heard it." He either overheard their words or the disciples reported them. "He saith unto them." He made two answers to their criticism, one from analogy, the other from the Scriptures. "They that are whole." Strong, healthy, hale, as the Pharisees imagined they were morally. It is only "they that are sick" who need a physician.

18. "The disciples of John and of the Pharisees used to fast;" better, as R. V., "were fasting" at this time. So that the banquet was held on a fast day, and the contrast between the feasting of Jesus and his disciples and the fasting of the hungry onlookers naturally called out the question, "Why do the disciples of John and of the Pharisees fast, but thy disciples fast not?" Why are your disciples less religious? Why do they not realize the evils of the time and the oppressions of the nation?

The reply was by a familiar illustration.

19. "Can the children of the bride-chamber." The bridegroom's friends, who conducted the bride from her father's house to her future home, amid festivities and rejoicings, to the marriage feast. "Fast, while the bridegroom is with them?" It was wholly incongruous, and could be only a form. It was now a time of rejoicing, and their conduct and religious life should agree thereto. It would be a moral discord to fast at the wedding feast.

20. "But the days will come," etc. At Jesus' death they will feel like mourning, so sad and troubled that fasting will be the natural expression of their hearts. Jesus continues his reply by a general principle, of which his answer to their question about fasting was one application. But many more applications were to appear in the progress of the grafting of the new kingdom of God upon the old. This principle would help the disciples in many a difficult question in the future, and all down the ages.

21. "No man also seweth a piece of new cloth," unfulled, unshrunk, rather than "undressed," as in R. V., which is an unfamiliar manufacturer's term. But the cloth, just as finished as it ever would be, would yet shrink in the wearing unless it were sponged and shrunk—a familiar experience. "On an old garment," as a patch. "Taketh away from the old," etc. The patch, exactly fitting the rent in the old garment, would shrink more and more, till the older and weaker cloth gave way under the intense strain, and the rent became much larger than before.

22. "And no man." None are so foolish. "Putteth new wine into old bottles." R. V. rightly "wine-skins," i. e., skins of animals from which the body is withdrawn leaving the skin whole, except the neck, which becomes the mouth of the bottle, and the legs, which are tied up. "Our word 'bottle' originally carried the true meaning, being a bottle of leather. In Spanish, bota means a leather bottle, a boot, and a butt. In Spain, wine is still brought to market in pig-skins. In the East, goat-skins are commonly used."—M. R. Vincent. "Else the new wine doth burst the bottles," by the pressure of the gases produced by the process of fermentation upon leather weakened and cracked by age. A prominent brewer says that the pressure of champagne in glass bottles after nine months is equal to sixty pounds to the square inch. Probably some of the gases evaporate through the wine-skins, and make the pressure less.

How the Germs Are Nurtured and the Disease Is Spread.

It would seem that people will never learn to be careful. The recent alarming spread of that dire epidemic, smallpox, throughout different sections of the country has been traced by physicians and sanitarians in many instances directly to the moldy and rotting layers of paper and paste which cover the walls of many houses. The practice of laying layer after layer of paper on a wall, using common flour paste, is especially calculated to create homes for disease germs. People could not do more to effect such a result if they tried. The rotting vegetable matter affords caves from which are ready to dart forth the infection at every opportunity. There is no excuse for this practice, as walls and ceilings can be coated with a pure, cleanly and sanitary material like Alabastine, for instance, at no greater expense. Alabastine is a rock-base cement, which incorporates itself with the wall or ceiling. It is easily applied, comes ready to mix with cold water, requires no washing or scraping before renewing or retinting, is beautiful, long-lasting and safe.

For walls that have been infected, nothing is equal to Alabastine as a disinfectant to render them pure and clean and the rooms once more habitable.

For a finger nail to reach its full length, an average of seven-tenths of an inch, from 121 to 138 days of growth are necessary.

Two passengers were in a cab in Paris when the discovery was made that the driver was apparently in a state of insensibility. A gendarme halted the rapidly moving vehicle and then learned that the driver was a corpse. He had died of heart disease.

An artisan in Lyons, France, has constructed a clock with a little platform and two doorways just under the dial. On the stroke of every hour the figure of a soldier comes out of one doorway, stands for a moment between the doors, gives a military salute, and then fires a miniature pistol. At the hour of one there is one report; at the hour of six, six reports, etc.

The above illustration shows one of the mammoth buildings occupied by the great Mail Order House of the John M. Smyth Company of Chicago.

For one-third of a century this Company has been in business. Beginning in a small way, they supplied their neighbors in the near-by towns, each year widening their field. They are now selling merchandise direct to the consumer at wholesale prices throughout the United States.

Some years ago they began supplying their customers with an illustrated catalogue. As the business expanded they were obliged to increase the size of this catalogue, until today it exceeds 1,000 illustrated pages, quoting the lowest wholesale prices on everything to Eat, Wear and Use. By a superior process of color photography they illustrate many of their goods in natural colors, bringing out the rich color value of curtains, carpets, draperies, and the latest designs in wall paper, etc., thus enabling the customer hundreds of miles distant to select goods at his own fireside, knowing by the description, illustration and price the class of goods he may expect.

This feature of their business is becoming more and more popular each year, for it not only saves long and tiresome railroad journeys but is a great time saver. It leaves out the profit of the jobbing house, the retailer, the expensive commercial traveler, the general agent, the sub-agent and thus eliminates from one to four profits, saving this amount for the consumer. In short, it is a great wholesale store brought to the home. The mammoth catalogue referred to is a 20th century dictionary of economy.

The illustration below shows the recent building added to this great enterprise.

The success of this Company seems incredible, considering the fact that they have advertised so little. Their spirit of fairness and industry is the secret of this wonderful success. The quantity of goods they require in some lines enables them to handle train loads of merchandise secured at the lowest possible cost and freight rate.

When goods in the rough are coming from the mills and factories in the East, the lake steamers are pressed into service at a freight expense which is but little in advance of the iron ore rates.

M B Smith, Butternut Mich., says. "DeWitt's Little Early Risers are the very best pills I ever used for costive ne-s, liver and bowel troubles." J. L. Harr.

With that kind of whiskers, we know just how Gen. Joubert would vote if he were in this country.

Lewis Ackerman, Gosben Ind., says, "DeWitt's Little Early Risers always bring certain relief, cure my headache and never gripe." They gently cleanse and invigorate the bowels and liver. J. L. Harr.

The more the South gets for its cotton the less it will take for its populist politicians.

Mrs. Harriet Evans, Hinsda'e, Ill., writes: "I never fail to relieve my children from croup at once by using One Minute Cough Cure. I would not feel save without it." Quickly cures coughs, colds, grippe, and all throat and lung diseases. J. L. Harr.

The next thing, we suppose, Mr. Donnelly will be proving that Babon wrote the Omaha platform.

Rev. W. E. Sitzer, W. Caton, N. Y., writes. 'I had dyspepsia over twenty years, and tried doctors and medicines without benefit.' I was persuaded to use Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and it helped me from the start. I believe it to be a panacea for all forms of indigestion." It digests what you eat. J. L. Harr.

There is always more interest in a republican caucus than in a democratic election.

Wm. Orr, Newark, O., says, "We never feel safe without One Minute Cough Cure in the house. It saved my little girl's life when he had the pneumonia. I think it is the best medicine made" It cures coughs and all lung diseases. Pleasant to take, harmless and gives immediate results. J. L. Harr.

Having received a car load of furniture and undertaking goods, I am in shape to supply you with anything in the line of furniture etc.

G. F. SCHULER, Garner, Ia.

"Used Kodol Dyspepsia Cure in my family with wonderful results. It gives immediate relief, is pleasant to take and is only the dyspeptic's best friend" says Hartgerink, Overisel, Mich. Digests what you eat. Cannot fail to cure. J. L. Harr.

Democrats are just beginning to find that Benjamin Harison is a very level-headed person. This is probably because Mr. Harrison is not now a candidate for office.

To secure the original witch hazel salve, ask for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, well known as a certain cure for piles and skin diseases. Beware of worthless counterfeits. They are dangerous. J. L. Harr.

EUROPEAN EXCURSION.

The B. C. R. & N. Ry will start an excursion from the Northeast and Northern part of Iowa to the Christian Endeavor Convention in London, England, and to the Paris Exposition.

Many business men, professional men teachers and those who wish to visit their fatherland will gladly avail themselves of this opportunity. That teachers in our schools and colleges may have the advantage of this rare educational privelege, arrangements have been made with the Anchor line Steamship Company for the party to sail on one of their finest steamers, the 'Furnessia" June 23rd. The remarkably reasonable rate of $118.00 first cabin, or $75.00 second cabin, round trip from New York is charged. For $[1]0.00 additional a round trip ticket can be purchased by those wishing to visit the Exposition, from London to Paris and return. It will be necessary to apply at once in order to secure berths as many will be going over.

Rev. D W. Fahs, D. D. of Independence, who recently crossed to Europe on the "Furnessia" and knows all about this steamer and the route contemplated will have charge of the excursion. Those who contemplate going should address him at once at Independence, Iowa. for particulars.

RECREATION POINTERS, Kansas City, Mo.

Senator Hoar didn't succeed in getting Lilioukalani's spring pension on straight.

The spring strike exhibited in Chicago is a fashion that will make trouble if generally adopted.

Going to the Klondyke on an automobile is another scheme of the plutocrats to crowd out the poor.

This country will be in a bad way indeed, if it allows New York City to set the standard of morality.

Kentuckians are again carefully inspecting their fire-arms and looking after their supply of amunition.

Advance notices of trouble in Kentucky no longer thrill the public. There has been to many of them.

New York's yellow journals exercise little influence elsewhere, but they manage to keep that town in a perpetual state of hysteria.

Thoughtless candidates are common and there are occasional brainless candidates, but the speechless candidate is a blessing yet undiscovered.

In deciding that a stockholder has the right to inspect the books of corporations, the Supreme Court, of Ohio was on all fours with common sense.

That reciprocity treaty with France is thought to be dead for a year, if not for all time. The opposition of the interests affected was too strong to be ignored.

No political party ever carried partnership into the courts without in the end injuring itself, not to mention the bad effect of lessening public respect for the courts.

Senator Depew believes in the acquisition of islands by the government He has introduced a bill in the Senate for the purchase of Constitution Island, in the Hudson river.

All the big railroads west of Chicago have entered an anti-rate cutting combine. What is the difference between this and pooling, which has been declared illegal by the courts?

The Sultan of Turkey is in for another diplomatic scrap with the powers, owing to his having increased the customs of duties from 8 to 11 per cent without due advance notice.

Senator Frye loses no opportunity to say a good work to the public for the ship-subsidy bill, which he believes will give us our old-time supremacy in the world's merchant marine.

The South is ringing for expansion. Protection has started Southern development, and business men there know that we must have foreign markets in which to sell our surplus products.

"The impending European war" is once more getting to be a familiar newspaper headline. Like the weather-bureau's predictions, this one will come true sometime, if persisted in.

In China a man has been sentenced to prison for life for having assisted in getting a railroal concession for a syndicate; in the U. S. he would have been fairly started on the road to plutocracy.

More naval officers and more ships of war are recommended by the Secretary of the Navy and Admiral Dewey, And the record which these men made in the hour of the country's emergency quite justifies the country in agreeing with them.

The public debt is decreasing at a rapid rate notwithstanding extraordinary expenses for the Philippine trouble. During the last Democratic Administration the public debt increased in time of peace, in just about the same ratio that it now decreases.

Banker Runs A Robber.

J. R Garrison, cashier of the bank of Thornville, Ohio, had been robbed of health by a serious lung trouble until he tried Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption. Then he wrote: "It is the best medicine I ever used for a severe cold or a bad case of lung trouble. I always keep a bottle on hand." Don't suffer with Coughs, Colds, or any Throat Chest or Lung trouble when you can be cured so easily. Only 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at Harr's drug store.

If Presinent Benjamin Ide Wheeler of the California State University, can convince the public of the correctness of his assertion that no political question is involved in the present extension of our boundaries he will do this country a great service.

A colored "John the Baptist" is working up a religious delirium among his race in New York. Scenes in his church are said to recall those at old fashioned darkey campmeetings in the South, where everybody got into a whirl of excitement after the services got into full swing.

Nations are so much like individuals that the continued existence of the two Dutch republics in South Africa may be set down as a practical impossibility. Nothing short of their destruction will satisfy the English, who have lost many lives and spent about $300,000,000 in the present war.

It is enough to make man and women blush to learn that a girl under 14 years of age is the mother of a babe that was born but a few days ago. This is an exceptional case to be sure, but it should be a warning to parents to guard most sacredly the welfare of their children.—Forest City Press.

Queen Victoria may be a figure-head but her recent acts have shown her to be an astute politician. She has aroused the enthusiasm of her countrymen to a higher pitch than any other individual could have done, by a few exhibitions of her august personage and a few well chosen words here and there.

The outstanding 2 per cent currency option bonds of the United States have recently been quoted at 103. The 2 per cent thirty year gold bonds, which will be issued under the currency bill, it is expected will sell at 105. These high prices are complimentary to the stability of the financial system of the country which has brought an increase of 33 per cent in our money in circulation in less than four years.

—In the year 1900 there will be three eclipses, two of the sun and one of the moon. The first is a total eclipse of the sun, May 20, and will be visible throughout the United States. The eclipse will begin about 7:28 in the morning and continue nearly two and a half hours. The second is a partial eclipse of the moon, June 12, visible throughout the United States. The third is an annual eclipse of the sun, Nov. 21, invisible in America.

There is no one criterian above another that is a better index of the characteristics of a town than the advertising columns of its favorite paper. A dead and inert town will have dead and empty makeshifts for advs. in the business departments of the paper. A lively, snappy, up-to-date town will see to it that its weekly representative abroad is full of advertising matter, that appeals to the outsider to go there to do business.

Mrs. Calvin Zimmerman, Milesburg, Pa., says, "As a speedy cure for coughs colds, croup and sore throat One Minute Cough Cure is unequaled It is pleasant for children to take. I heartily recommend it to mothers." It is the only harmless remedy that produces immediate results. It cures bronchitis pneumonia, grippe and throat and lung diseases. It will prevent consumption, J. L. Harr.

Lengthening days give evidence of approaching spring time when ambitious business men, surrounded by shrewd competition in the over-crowed older towns, are looking for new homes, broader and better business advantages. The Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern Railway is extending its lines into the best portions of northwestern Iowa and southwestern Minnesota. This country is noted for its rich soil, social, educational and religious advantages. Four towns were located last fall and have made remarkable growth already. Several new towns will be located during the spring and early summer. If you desire to de a pioneer in a good new town in a well settled rich country which has long been in need of a railroad.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble, purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c at Harr's drug store.

The Klemme Times.

G. L. WELLEMEYER, Pub.

KLEMME, - - - IOWA.

An ounce of essence is worth a gallon of fluid. A wise saw may be more valuable than a whole book, and the plain truth is better than an argument.

The man who will pay real money for the privilege of witnessing the bluff to be put up by Jeffries and Corbett need not draw upon the public for sympathy.

The remark is often made that the winter of 1899-1900 has been, in a great part of the country, bad for some branches of business because of its mildness and dryness. The statement is quite undeniable, since "business" practically means the spending of money, and not the saving of it.

In a New York hospital moving pictures have been made of epileptic patients, as well as of persons affected with locomotor ataxia. This is following the example set in Vienna, where moving pictures have been made of celebrated surgeons performing critical operations. The purpose in both cases is to enable students and practitioners to study the peculiarities of diseases and the methods of distinguished operators.

Horace Greeley, the famous editor, had thrashed over the question of women's rights with an able representative of their sex, and wound up with the contention that in times of war women were useless. "What would you do," he demanded, "in the event of a civil war?" "Just what you would do, Mr. Greeley," replied his opponent, promptly; "I should stay in my office and write articles urging other people to go and fight."

A few years ago a landowner made his neighbor tear down and rebuild a four-story block because it overreached six inches into the next lot. A still more selfish contention concerns the proprietorship of five inches of space three hundred feet above the sidewalk. The bringer of the suit declares that a neighboring cornice projects five inches over his own modest roof, and he claims large damages therefor. For once Doctor Hale's "look up and not down" seems at fault. Thackeray's irony is more apt: "If your neighbor's foot obstructs you, stamp on it; and do you suppose he won't take it away?"

Sir John Murray in a recent address drew a vivid picture of the time, in the remote future, when temperatures as low as those which Professor Dewar produces in his experiments at the Royal Institution will prevail all over the earth. The atmosphere and the oceans will then have disappeared within the rocky crust of the globe, their elements having entered into new combinations. In other words, to use Sir John Murray's expression, "the waters of the ocean will have become solid rock." But over their surface will roll the waves of a new and most wonderful sea, "an ocean of liquid air about forty feet in depth." At that time, of course, life as we know it will have vanished from the earth.

Dr. Thomas Wilson of the United States National Museum, discussing some of the problems of American anthropology, points out among the peculiarities yet unexplained, that a fringe of country lying between the coast range and the Pacific contains a greater number of stocks, or families of Indian languages than all the rest in North America combined. The arrow and spear-heads of the Pacific coast are notably different from those of other parts of the country. Pottery, although made by neighboring peoples in Mexico and in the Pueblo county, was absent from the arts of the Pacific coast, while, on the other hand, the finest specimens of basketry perhaps in the world, either in ancient or modern times, are to be found in California. Doctor Wilson regards the famous Calaveras skull as a genuine relic of ancient man on the Pacific slope.

Fuseli, an eminent historical painter, was rather fond of sarcastic remarks at the expense of his friends. Northcote, a contemporary, exhibited his "Judgment of Solomon." Fuseli looked at it with a smirk on his face. "How do you like my picture?" inquired Northcote. "Much," was the answer; "the action suits the word. Solomon holds out his fingers like a pair of open scissors at a child, and says: 'Cut it.' I like it much." Northcote remembered this when Fuseli exhibited a picture representing Hercules drawing his arrow at Pluto. "How do you like my picture?" inquired Fuseli. "Much," said Northcote; "it is clever, very clever; but he'll never hit him." "He shall hit him," exclaimed the other, "and that speedily." Away ran Fuseli with his brush, and as he labored to give the arrow the true direction he was heard to mutter: "Hit him! By Jupiter, but he shall hit him!"

Iowa News

FRANK WOODWORTH, a pupil at the state school for the deaf at Council Bluffs, was instantly killed by being buried beneath a mass of frozen cinders, under which he and some companions were digging. The life of the lad was crushed out by the mass, which weighed about two tons. He was 20 years of age and had been at the school for ten years.

CHRISTOPHER BAUER, a Plymouth County farmer, was killed by his brother-in-law, Earnest Meyers, at the latter's farm in Rutland township, Woodbury county. Meyers quarrelled with his mother-in-law, Mrs. Dora Bauer, and struck her. Bauer interfered and Meyers severed his jugular vein with a pocket knife. Meyers was arrested.

ABOUT sixty painters and paper hangers employed by the leading firms at Cedar Rapids struck recently for a new scale. Paper hangers have been getting 22½ cents an hour and painters 20 cents. Three months ago they notified the bosses that they would expect 30 cents for paper hangers and 20 cents for painters. The bosses agreed to give them an advance, but they refused to accept anything but the scale proposed.

SEVEN young men were arrested at Cedar Rapids charged with placing dynamite with intent to destroy a building. Recently, following a canvass for a new petition of consent to operate a mulct saloon law in Cedar Rapids, an empty beer keg and a stick of dynamite with a fuse and cap attached was found on the steps of St. Paul's Methodist church. The young men confessed to placing the keg on the steps but did it as a joke. They do not belong to liquor organizations.

JUDGE BLAIR made a ruling in the district court at Waterloo that agents of railroad and express companies cannot be compelled to testify regarding shipments of liquors to registered pharmacists. The question arose from an effort to secure the indictment of a Cedar Falls druggist for maintaining a nuisance. Agents refused to testify on the ground that evidence would incriminate themselves. The question has never heretofore been the subject of a decision in Iowa courts.

THE twelve-year-old son of Charles Hull, junior member of the firm of Willard & Co., of Marshalltown, lies at the point of death as a result of the accidental discharge of a rifle in the hands of his older brother. The two boys were playing and the older one pointed the rifle at his brother and accidentally pulled the trigger, exploding the cartridge. The ball passed through the hand and into the stomand at last accounts had not been found by the doctors, who give but little hope of his recovery.

THERE has been filed with the county recorder at Des Moines a mortgage or deed of trust of the entire Duluth & New Orleans Railroad company, the entire stock of the company, for a series of 2,500 bonds at $1,000 each and not to exceed $16,000 per mile of the road. They are 30-year bonds, payable in 1930. The road will connect with the Winona & Western on the north and passing through Osage, Iowa Falls and other points enter Des Moines. The names of S. N. Wardell, president and E. M. Wardall, secretary, are signed to the trust deed. Work will be commenced on the line from Osage to Des Moines at once.

A Des Moines dispatch says: A. B. Johnson was arrested by Detectives E. E. Johnson of Des Moines and E. R. Carrington of St. Louis, just as he and an alleged brother giving his name as Olaf B. Anderson were taking a Rock Island train for Omaha. Johnson is believed to be one of the most notorious swindlers in the United States. The immediate crime upon which his arrest was based was the forgery of $2,500 in checks against St. Louis banks. He apparently gave up when the great array of evidence secured by the detectives was made known to him and agreed to go to St. Louis for trial without demanding the issuance of requisition papers. He left for St. Louis in charge of Detective Carrington. If the detectives are correct, Johnson has operated in all the principal cities of the United States, working a number of games with equal facility, but so far as known he has been living here quietly with his wife and 3-year-old daughter. The various aliases under which he is said to have operated are A. B. Johnson, Olaf B. Jacobson, Henry M. Preston, Charles E. Brown, Charles W. Brown, A. I. Wood, O. B. Peterson and O. B. Anderson. His operations are supposed to have netted him hundreds of thousands of dollars, and although he is but 35 years of age he is reckoned one of the smoothest men in the profession.

A FEW days ago half a dozen of Humboldt's street urchins, led by a tough gamin who ought to be in the reform school, stole a lot of junk and were arrested before they could dispose of it. The leader of the gang had planned a hold-up of the night M. & St. L. flyer, and intended to use the proceeds of the theft in the purchase of pistols and grease for the track on a steep grade, where their work was to be done.

THE Hardin county grand jury adjourned a few days ago after being in session five days. Indictments were returned against David S. DeWitt, of New Providence, for uttering a forged instrument, and against Richard Worrell, of Audubon, for breaking and entering at Union, and against Cornelius Tobin, of Eldora, for keeping a nuisance. DeWitt and Tobin gave bonds for their appearance at court. Worrell, being unable to furnish bonds, was confined in jail. His trial will come up at the present term of court.

COUNTY ATTORNEY BARGER, of Lucas county, was shot in the head by Mrs. Geo. Pyle, at her home in Chariton, a few nights ago. Her husband secured a divorce from her several months ago, Barger being mixed into the affair. She induced him to her house and there claimed he had not kept his promises to her, when hot words were indulged in and the shooting followed. She claims she was advised to kill both him and her former husband, as they were the cause of all her trouble, and that was her intention. The wound will not prove fatal, and the woman is in custody, awaiting an examination of her mental condition, which her friends claim is not sound, from recent troubles. She confesses the crime.

AT Webster City a few days ago an encounter occurred between two school boys in which a knife was freely used by one of them and as a result Ralph Gerber, aged 13, a son of L. N. Gerber, superintendent of schools, is confined to his home with a deep, severe cut in the left ear and neck and two gashes in the head. The knife barely missed the jugular vein and the cuts in the head are clear to the skull. Lowe Pierce, 14 years old, was the boy who did the cutting. He attacked the Gerber boy while they were on their way home from school at noon. The injured boy ran home and fainted as he entered the house. A doctor was summoned and his wounds dressed. Although the cuts are severe and dangerous, the injured boy will recover.

SINCE Ernest Meyer murdered his brother-in-law, Christ Bauer, he has been locked up in the steel cage in the Woodbury county jail. He is the most miserable man seen there for years and he is getting about all the mental punishment that ordinarily falls to the lot of one man. But in addition to the scenes of his crimes before his eyes, the man has a second serious trouble. His wife has gone back on him since he slew her brother in a fit of drunken rage. The couple has four children and they are the idol of his eye, but he is not permitted by his wife to see them, and he spends nearly all his time sobbing and crying as if his heart would break. Meyer is not a criminal at heart but in fact is said to be a very fine sort of a German farmer.

A DISPATCH from Dubuque says that Archbishop Keane of Washington and Bishops Cosgrove of Davenport and Linehan of Cheyenne have been named as candidates for the archbishopric of Dubuque. Keane has been given the refusal in accord with the expressed wish of the archbishops of the country, and should he refuse, Cosgrove will be the next man. Keane may decline the Dubuque position because there is almost a certainty of his being made coadjutor bishop of Chicago. It has been practically settled that the Dubuque and Davenport diocese will be divided and Des Moines and Sioux City made sees, with Dr. Carroll of Dubuque and Rev. McLaughlin of Clinton as bishops. If Cosgrove should be made archbishop, Linehan will be transferred to Davenport and a new bishop sent to Cheyenne.

ONE night last week someone entered the general store of N. E. Stone, of Swea City, and appropriated silks, shoes, gloves, underwear and numerous other articles, in all to the value of $400 or $500. The parties who did the job entered the building by the front door, to which they must have had a key, as the door was locked as usual in the morning when the store was opened up for the day's business. Part of the goods taken, including a cap that belonged to one of the parties who did the job, was found by some section men about a mile west of town. It is thought by some that there were two of them and that they went west and then took a course toward Whittemore. There is no doubt but that the guilty parties will be apprehended, as two parties tallying with the description of the parties suspected were seen in the vicinity of Whittemore and Cylinder. This is the third time within the past three years that stores in Swea City have been robbed.

ENGLAND DEFIED.

Boers Are Determined to Fight to the End.

LONDON, March 19.—Intense excitement rules at Pretoria, say dispatches from there. The Boers and their leaders are wild with resentment at Lord Salisbury's plainly expressed intention to wipe out the two republics. All classes say they are determined to fight to the bitter end to preserve the Transvaal's independence. Secretary of State Reitz declares the war will now be fought to the bitter end. The Boers say that England's task is greater than she dreams of, and that tactics not dreamed of will be resorted to. President Kruger and his advisers are preparing a defiant reply to Lord Salisbury. It will deny that the Boers have made any annexations. It will declare that British territory was occupied for purely strategical purposes. It will practically defy England to do her worst, and express a determination to fight to the last ditch for independence. The Boers are tremendously incensed at the Orange Free Staters who gave up the keys of Bloemfontein's public offices to Lord Roberts. The lives of Fraser and Kelner, who gave up the town and welcomed the English, would not be safe in the Transvaal capital. They are regarded as traitors. Another thing that excites the ire of the burghers is the shipment of Cronje and his army to St. Helena and the refusal of Great Britain to exchange prisoners. The Boers claim the reason the British would not exchange prisoners is because one Boer is worth fifteen Britishers.

READY TO MARCH ON PRETORIA.

Lord Roberts's Forces Will Push Forward as Soon as Possible.

LONDON, March 17.—It is officially announced that the British casualties at Dreifontein March 10, were sixty-two men killed and 321 wounded, including one Canadian wounded.

LONDON, March 17.—With the railway communication to the Cape intact, Lord Roberts will in a very few days be in a position to begin the advance on Pretoria. His deep political intuition, combined with his bold strategy, is having the result desired in the southern sections of the Orange Free State, which are rapidly calming down. Mafeking is now the only point for anxiety, and as it is known that a force has left Kimberley its relief may be announced before many days pass. The efficiency of the relieving force is heightened by the fact that it is partly composed of regulars. It is understood that all the continental powers, with one exception, uncompromisingly refused to intervene. The exception was Russia, whose reply was couched in less firm language, although, like the others, she refused to interfere. It is said that the pope wa also applied to, but that he declined to do anything beyond writing a letter to the queen, appealing to her to stop the further effusion of blood. Dr. Leyds's efforts with King Leopold were quite futile.

OPEN DOOR POLICY IN DANGER.

Attitude of the Empress Dowager Detrimental to Reforms.

SHANGHAI, March 17.—The American Association has telegraphed to the United States government that the attitude of the empress dowager towards reforms will upset the "open door" policy. They also say rebellion and anarchy is expected to the detriment of foreign interests and advocate prompt and concerted action on the part of the powers. The Chinese association will appeal to the British minister, Sir Claude MacDonald, on the same subject.

Kentucky Prisoners Arraigned.

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 17.—Caleb Powers, John Davis, W. H. Coulton and Parland Whittaker were brought here from Louisville in charge of Sheriff Suter and deputies. A special detail of police and deputy sheriffs met them at the train, and they were marched to jail through streets lined with people who had anticipated their coming. There was no disorder. They were, with W. L. Hazlip, arraigned before County Judge Moore, and after some argument between the attorneys, Hazlip was released on $10,000 bail.

Topeka Capital Remains Religious.

TOPEKA, Kansas, March 19.—F. A. Papenoe, the banker-owner of the Capital, makes the announcement that the paper will be continued permanently along the Sheldon lines. He says the paper will pay a little more attention to the current news and some other things may be modified, but that as the only religious daily in the country it ought to succeed. Thus is Mr. Sheldon's experiment to be put upon permanent trial.

Boers Will Be Sent to St. Helena.

CAPE TOWN, March 19.—The departure of the transport with the Boer prisonors for St. Helena has been delayed on account of the fact that several Boers have been sick, including many infectious cases.

Slavery in Guam Prohibited.

Once at a dinner party, where Gen N. B. Forrest, commanding the confederate cavalry, had been invited as the guest of honor, a loquacious widow, with hair of raven black, rudely interrupted the conversation by asking General Forrest why it was that his beard was still black while his hair was turning gray. With great politeness Forrest turned toward her. "I fear I can not give you a satisfactory answer," said he, "unless, possibly, the reason is that I have used my brain more than my jaw."

THE THOUSAND-DOLLAR BILL

A MYSTERY OF THE UNITED STATES TREASURY—A SHORT STORY

BY LEONARD OUTRAM

(Conclusion.)

An hour later Edmond Hackett sat a this desk in the department of the Secretary of the Treasury, counting and recounting a packet of 1,000-dollar bills. They were old and frayed, ragged and discolored, and belonged to the issues of long ago. They were only half notes, moreover—the lower halves; and each fragment of paper had two big holes punched in it by a blunt instrument, totally destroying the signatures which had made it money, and at the same time reducing the half-note to the merest remnant.

One by one Edmond turned over these morsels of dirty paper, counting them most carefully.

"Forty-one, forty-two, forty-three, forty-four, forty-five, forty-six, forty-seven, forty-eight, forty-nine! There are not fifty here! And yet they've been passed as fifty in the Redemption Office. Humph! Awkward for one of those clever ladies. A thousand-dollar bill missing. Poor Mrs. Lawson. Infallible Mrs. Lawson! It must be she who's in for this."

Taking up his pen to make out the report, he glanced at the wrapper upon which appeared the number of bills it was supposed to contain and the initials of the lady-examiner who in the Redemption Office had counted and made herself responsible for the packet's accuracy. "What!" The pen dropped from his fingers. "B. H. Great Heaven!" That was the signature of his own wife.

CHAPTER III.

Now this error would mean more than discredit and a consequent check in Bertha's future promotion. It was a rule that the examiner who overlooked a counterfeit or missing bill should make good the value of it. To make good a thousand dollars would pretty well ruin the Hacketts and old father Caleb into the bargain. But it was his duty to make his report instantly to the Secretary, and with painful reluctance he filled up the prescribed but seldom requisitioned form. With slow, dragging steps, he proceeded with it to the Secretary's private room, but halted with his hand on the door. Suddenly that frivolous gossip on the veranda rushed into his memory. Had Wilton Loring—had Bertha herself stole the missing bill? What then? Should he turn conspirator and cover the fraud? No, no, his duty was clear. He would not allow himself to hesitate, but knocked at the door and entered.

But there was no respite for him and for his wife. The Treasurer himself was closeted with the Secretary.

"One moment, Mr. Hackett! I'm engaged," was the sharp peremptory dismissal, and he perforce withdrew postponing the declaration. As he returned stupefied to his desk a clock struck the hour of his luncheon interval. It was the custom of the family to meet at home for their midday meal. He locked up the report and rushed out of the Treasury. Flying home on a cable car, he found his wife there before him. Bertha sat at the table like one in a dream. She did not raise her eyes from the food that stood untouched before her. Edmond himself could not swallow a morsel, but furtively watched his wife while the negress who waited on them tarried in the room. The moment they were alone he leant across the table and whispered hoarsely:

"You passed a packet today—a packet of Thousands."

The young wife looked up with a start of surprise. The fear that was written in her troubled face gave way to a flash of desperate hope.

"It came to you?"

"One bill is missing."

"Thank God you can pass it!"

No word of denial. She caught his recoiling hand across the table.

"For my sake—for your Bertha's sake—you will, you will!"

"Impossible, child—impossible! You must be saved another way—if it be not too late. Find the missing bill among some papers, as if an accident had placed it there. But, whatever you do, put it forward instantly, instantly!"

"I cannot, Edmond. I haven't the bill."

"You did not steal it? Oh, forgive me! Heaven be thanked for that! It's an oversight, then? Bad enough, but not beyond repair. Make out your report at once, and send it in. You are a novice, the delay may be overlooked."

"I cannot do that, Edmond. It would be to cast suspicion upon the cashier who forwarded the bills to the Treasury."

"That is his affair. If the packet was short when you counted it—"

"Edmond, why will you not ignore the shortage? By a miracle it is in your power to prevent the discovery."

"It is not in my power."

"How not in your power? The packet will go from your hands to the committee, who do not count it again; and by them it will be deposited in the macerator, to be ground into pulp. It would never be known that forty-nine instead of fifty bills had been destroyed."

"Bertha, you forget the other half. I have only a portion of the bills. The upper section of your packet went to the Register's office to be counted there."

Bertha Hackett grew white as death, and hot tears sprang in her eyes.

"We are ruined!" she cried, "unless, unless—" Her glance from the window perceived Caleb Loring entering the house. "Here is father! He will find out who had the count at the Register's."

But the old man knew already. They read it in his face as he confronted them, closing the door. Whatever hope he had cherished on his homeward way that he might find Bertha unconscious of the storm that threatened was dashed to the ground the moment he perceived her and her husband's agitation. The memory of that evening on the veranda burned in his mind, and in a fury of rage he demanded, fiercely:

"Daughter, what infernal thing is this you've been doing? Are you mad? Have you turned thief? Is Edmond in it? Or has Wilton—No, no. For God's sake don't tell me it is my son!"

Then Bertha, to her husband's amazement and dismay, fell down at her father's feet and confessed that she, she had yielded to temptation and stolen the missing bill. She hurriedly stated the miraculous chance that had put Edmond in a position to save her, and inferring from her father's knowledge of the affair, that the man who had detected the shortage had confided to him his daughter's responsibility with a view of screening her, besought him to accept the friendly overture.

"I would permit no man's dishonor for the sake of me or mine," he declared. "For what you have done, you must pay the penalty. Your impossible combination has actually come to pass. As the counter-check came to your husband in his department, so it has come to me in the Register's. It was I myself who caught the short packet which you had signed for.

Bertha clasped her hands in thanksgiving.

"Then, father, you alone know?"

"I—and one other."

"One other?" repeated Bertha, aghast. "Who in your department should know besides yourself?"

"My chief," replied the old man, with a face of adamant.

"You have reported it, knowing that your own child—"

"Certainly. Fraud or oversight; yours or your brother's; it was not for me to consider. I am, first of all, a servant of the State."

They went back to the Treasury, where Edmond at once delivered his report.

Bertha found Mrs. Lawson impatiently awaiting her. The Treasurer had sent for the Head of the Redemption Division to investigate an error in one of the packets which Bertha had made up. Mrs. Lawson was highly indignant.

"I counted the Ranchers' packet myself,' 'said she. "I am positive there were exactly a hundred bills."

"If one is missing," began Bertha, but the senior lady interrupted her.

"Missing? No, nothing is missing at all. There is said to have been one too many."

So many miracles had happened that day that poor Bertha could only gape at her in astonishment. It was an anomaly in arithmetic that one taken from one hundred should leave one hundred and one. There came another summons to the Treasurer. Another report had come in of an error from Mrs. Lawson's desk. The old lady was almost in tears but she carried it off with a show of jocosity.

"Either there must be some conscience money knocking about, or Mrs. Bertha Hackett brings a mascot to the treasury," said she. "Is this another surplus thousand-dollar bill, sir?"

But this was the shortage which Edmond and Mr. Loring had reported, and it was happily met by the excess in the other packet. So, beyond an admonition tempered in mercy for the manifest distress of the girl, Bertha got into no trouble. She held stoutly to a theory of the intervention of providence when discussing the matter at home, and her husband swept the pious fancy away.

"I reckon Providence don't supply cheating clerks with thousand-dollar bills," said he. "You divided the packet of 100 in two of 50, as you thought. But you counted the first backward, from 100 to 50 inclusive, and that left only forty-nine for the second packet. But why didn't you tell Mrs. Lawson you made one short?"

"Fact is, Edmond, that combination chatter of ours had got into my brain. I thought Wilton had pinched a bill, and I reckoned to do more for my brother than Daddy would do for his little girl."

"Ha!" observed old Caleb, filling his pipe. 'Duty first, family afterwards, and roguery never at any time, under any circumstances."

(The end.)

A WAR CLOUD.

German and United States Officials Consult as to Situation in China.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—The German ambassador, Dr. Von Holleben, had a long conference with Acting Secretary of State Hill, in which the latter was presumably informed that a demonstration in China might be expected from Russia shortly. The chief of the navigation bureau, Rear Admiral Crowninshield, sought Secretary of State Hay and found him at the Hay residence, after which the navy department announced that a Chinese squadron will be established and that Rear Admiral Kempff, now commandant at Mare Island navy yard, will be sent to Manila to take this squadron for cruising the Chinese and Japanese coasts. Also that Rear Admiral Raomey, in charge of the Asiatic station, will maintain a naval base at Manila. It is understood that Kempff's squadron will consist of the Oregon and Baltimore, now at Manila, the Iowa, Philadelphia and Philadelphia, now on the Pacific coast, and the Montgomery, now attached to the South Atlantic station. It is believed here that the formation of the Chinese squadron by the United States is to be a spectacular warning to Russia and France that American interests are involved in any change in the conditions in China. Presumably Germany will make a similar demonstration.

PEACE CORRESPONDENCE.

Appeal for Peace by Afrikanders and Britain's Answer Thereto.

LONDON, March 15.—Following are extracts from the peace correspondence:

Presidents Kruger and Steyn to Premier Salisbury: This war was undertaken solely as a defensive measure to maintain the threatened independence of the South African republics and is only continued in order to secure and maintain the incontestible independence of both republics as sovereign international states and to obtain the assurance that those of her majesty's subjects who have taken a part with us in this war shall suffer no harm whatever in person or property. On these conditions, but on these conditions alone, are we now, as in the past, desirous of seeing peace re-established in South Africa; while, if her majesty's government is determined to destroy the independence of the republics, there is nothing left to us and to our people but to persevere to the end in the course already begun.

Premier Salisbury to Presidents Kruger and Steyn: At two days' notice, after issuing the insulting ultimatum, the South African republics declared war upon her majesty's government. * * * A large portion of her majesty's dominions were overrun, with great destruction of property and life. * * * This great calamity has been the penalty Great Britain has suffered for having, of recent years, acquiesced to the existence of the two republics. In view of the uses to which the two republics have put the position which was given them, and the calamities their unprovoked attacks have inflicted on her majesty's dominions, her majesty's government can only answer your honor's telegram by saying they are not prepared to assent to the independence of the South African Republic or the Orange Free State.

LOOKS LIKE WAR.

French Government Listing Her Entire Military Strength.

NEW YORK, March 16.—The Journal and Advertiser's London special says a private cablegram from an unimpeachable source in Paris says that the minister for the colonies sent cipher cables to the governor of every French colony, asking almost in the words of Mr. Chamberlain to the British colonial governors how many soldiers were available for immediate service. Decrais asked for a detailed statement from each governor of the number of reservists and colonial forces, lists of officers, non-commissioned officers and men. The minister's cables were long and in cipher and sent to every French colony on earth. It is also said that cables of a similar tenor were sent to French consuls, asking for lists of French soldiers in foreign countries who could return to France in the event of their services being needed. This highly important news is not known to any of the London papers and probably not to any of those in France. It will cause a sensation here when it becomes known, for England is watching with eyes of wonder the preparations that her neighbor is making for war. Coming as it does right after the announcement that the autumn manœuvers will be a demonstration by 200,000 men on the English channel, it will cause the British war office and admiralty to bestir themselves in anticipation of hostilities, for it really does begin to look as if France meant war. France and Russia are working hand in hand and Salisbury's diplomacy may be called upon for supreme efforts if he desires to avoid the greatest war the world has ever seen.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON XII, MARCH 25—REVIEW OF THE QUARTER.

Golden Text—The Son of Man Came Not to Be Ministered Unto but to Minister—The Life of the Savior of Mankind.

One of the most important things in our study for this year is to gain a distinct and vivid idea of the life of Christ as a whole and to keep it ever in mind while we are engaged upon the details as furnished with each lesson.

Matthew Arnold, in his epilogue to Lessing's Laocoon, writes:

"But ah! then comes his sorest spell
Of toil—he must life's movement tell!
The thread which binds it all in one,
And not its separate parts alone.

"The movement he must tell of life,
Its pain and pleasure, rest and strife;
His eye must travel down at full
The long, unpausing spectacle."

For this purpose we should study the two charts of the life of Christ, and learn by heart the main epochs or divisions of his life, and the relation of each part to those which follow and to the whole. To make this as easy and simple as possible, the accompanying table is presented:

Ancestry—On one side God himself. On the other every phase of character, every human tendency represented in his genealogy.

PREPARATIONS FOR HIS COMING.

1. Universal peace.
2. One empire.
3. One language generally known.
4. The Jews with the Scriptures in all lands.
5. A general awakening and unrest.

CHILDHOOD AND YOUTH.

1. Home training.
2. Bible study.
3. Schooling.
4. Different languages.
5. Travel to Jerusalem.
6. Great religious meetings.
7. Village life.
8. Work at a trade.
9. Knowledge of his country's history and hopes.
10. A perfect and beautiful character.

PREPARATIONS FOR HIS MINISTRY.

1. John the Baptist.
2. Baptism.
3. The Holy Spirit.
4. The voice from God.
5. Temptation.

John's ministry of preparation began six months before Jesus began to preach, continued through the first year and three months into the second year.

FIRST YEAR.

1. First disciples.
2. First miracle.
3. First reform.
4. First discourse.
5. First tour.
6. First Samaritan disciple.
7. First work of Galilean ministry.

SECOND YEAR.

The year in which Jesus laid down and worked out many of the fundamental principles and truths of his kingdom.

1. The water of life.
2. Organization. Choosing apostles.
3. Sermon on the Mount.
4. Miracles proving his authority and illustrating his work.
5. Forgiveness of sins.
6. Seeking the lost.
7. Life from the dead.
8. The light of the world.
9. Warnings and invitations.
10. Parables.
11. Training of the twelve.
12. The bread of life.

(Early in the next year.)

A. Imprisonment of John the Baptist, March.

THIRD YEAR.

1. Rejection at Nazareth.
2. The twelve sent forth. Training.
3. Feeding of the five thousand.
4. Discourses.
5. Miracles.
6. The transfiguration.
7. The children.

B. The death of John the Baptist in March.

Opposition began early in the first year and increased gradually till the crucifixion.

It is always helpful to travel with Jesus over Palestine by means of a map, large or small. Follow his movements from the beginning. Stop at each place and recall the events and the teachings connected with it.

A Twice Fallen Idol.

There are to be seen in Munich and Vienna, and probably in many other places, fragments of a meteorite that has had a rather curious history during its comparatively brief residence on this planet. It fell in 1853, at Duruma, in East Africa. The natives regarded it as a message from heaven and hastened to pay it appropriate honors. With great solemnity it was anointed with oil, wrapped in costly fabrics, adorned with pearls and installed in a temple which had been specially constructed for it. Thenceforth it was looked upon as the palladium of the tribe, lent to it by heaven, according to the priests. In vain did European missionaries offer tempting sums for the stone. It was not to be had at any price. But three years later the tribe was attacked, and almost wiped out, by the warlike Massai. Thereupon the eyes of the survivors were opened to the impotence of their idol, they lost faith in its divinity and soon parted with it for cash. Its fate was identical with that of a great many gods and idols which have been promptly deserted by their worshipers as soon as their uselessness was proved.

New Skating Jump Record.

Frank McDaniels, holder of the world's championship for the running broad jump on skates, 21 feet 7 inches, established a record for a standing jump at Loring park, in Minneapolis, the other day, making 6 feet 4 inches, says Kansas City Times. McDaniels' jump was measured from toe to heel of the skates, which were seventeen inches long.

STORYETTES.

Henry James was once praising a fellow-author. "You are very kind to him," said some one present, "for he says very unpleasant things about your work." "Ah," said Mr. James, "but then both of us may be wrong!"

A war correspondent writes from South Africa to the London Daily Mail: "A certain gallant corps at Chieveley Camp provided the guard that should protect our precious beer till Christmas day. In the morning two dozen bottles were missing. 'Disgraceful!' said the authorities; 'double the guard.' And they doubled it. Next day four dozen were missing."

"Bruddren and sistahs," sternly said good old Parson Woolimon, after the collection had been taken up on a recent Sabbath morning, "before the hat was done parsed I expounded the request dat de congregashun contribute accawdin' to deir means, an' I sho expectorated dat yo all would chip in magnanimously. But now, upon examinin' de collection, I finds dat de concocted amount contributed by de whole entire posse ob yo' am only the significant and pusillanimous sum ob sixty-free cents. An' at dis junction dar ain't no 'casion for yo' all to look at Brudder Slewfoot, what done circumambulated de hat around, in no sich auspicious manner; for, in de fust place, Brudder Slewfoot ain't dat kind ob a man, an', in de second place, I done watched him like a hawk all de time myself. No, siqty-free cents was all dat was flung in; an' I dess wants to say dat, in my humble opinion, instead of contributin' accawdin' to yo' means, yo' all contributed accawdin' to yo' meanness. De choir will now favor us wid deir reg'lar melodiousness."

GOOD NIGHT!

Sweet Soothing Slumber Man's Greatest Blessing.

Nothing Kills so Quickly as Loss of Sleep. Rest Needed for Repairs. How to Obtain it Without Fail.

When you don't sleep well, look out for yourself.

Nothing breaks down a person so quickly as loss of sleep, that boon of mankind which gives the exhausted system rest for repairs.

No time for repairs means destruction of the machinery. It is so with the human body.

You are nervous, have a load on your chest, are troubled with unaccountable anxiety and forebodings of evil, and roll and toss all night.

Towards morning you have fitful naps from sheer exhaustion, awake in a cold sweat, unrefreshed, pallid, trembling, with a bad taste in your mouth and a feeling of great weakness.

It's your stomach, your liver, your bowels.

Keep your digestive organs all on the move properly and your sleep will be restful and refreshing and all repairs will be attended to.

The way to do it is to use a mild, positive, harmless, vegetable laxative and liver stimulant—Cascarets Candy Cathartic. They make the liver lively, prevent sour stomach, purify the blood, regulate the bowels perfectly, make all things right as they should be.

Go buy and try Cascarets to-day. It's what they do, not what we say they'll do, that will please you. All druggists, 10c, 25c, or 50c, or mailed for price. Send for booklet and free sample. Address, Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago; Montreal, Can.; or New York.

This is the CASCARET tablet. Every tablet of the only genuine Cascarets bears the magic letters "C C C." Look at the tablet before you buy, and beware of frauds, imitations and substitutes.

Vetsch-Fiegenbaum.

On Wednesday, March 14th, occurred another of those happy events, that links two more bright young lives together, the occasion being the marriage of Mr. Fred J. Vetsch, with the wholesale firm of Chas. E. Faet & Co., of Sioux City, Iowa, and Miss Adelaide Katherine, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. H. R. Fiegenbaum, of this city. The ceremony was witnessed by a large company of relatives and friends of both the high contracting parties, from Garner and vicinity and also from abroad. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. Fiegenbaum, father of the bride, and was rendered in German and took place in the church where Rev. Fiegenbaum is the pastor. The decorations consisted of palms, ferns and roses, and were very beautiful and chaste.

The wedding March was rendered in an appropriate manner, by Mrs. John Schuler as organist, assisted by Alfred Schneider and Lafayette Schneider as accompanists on the 1st and 2nd violins, respectively.

The wedding party was led by Rev. Fiegenbaum, accompanied by Miss Hattie Vetsch carrying the ring, followed by the Misses Viola Wellemeyer and Ethel Schneider as flower girls. Then followed the bride and groom, who placed themselves before the altar, where the beautiful and impressive words were uttered by the venerable father of the bride, that made them one for life.

The bride was dressed in cream colored nun's veiling, with trimmings of white satin and chiffon. She carried an elegant bouquet of American Beauty roses. The groom was attired in conventional black.

As soon as the ceremony was concluded, the guests repaired to the home of the bride, where the happy couple were the recipients of a shower of sincere congratulations from the delighted throng. Following came a splendid spread of toothsome viands, soon after which Mr. and Mrs. Vetsch peparted over the Milwaukee to Sioux City, where a reception is tendered them by the parents of the groom. They will reside at Pipestone, Minn., where they will be at home after the 26th inst.—Garner Herald.

GERMANTOWN.

Grandfather Ell is very sick.

Carl Wellemeyer spent Sunday with his parents.

Jake Bloomer's baby received a bad burn last week.

Chris Schaefer Jr. is visiting old friends in Watertown, Wisconsin.

There was a 'rag bee' at the home of Mrs. Henry Grieve last Thursday

There was a directors meeting in Center school last Monday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Ell, of Klemme, visited Mrs. H. Grieve one day last week.

Ernest and Fletcher Wellemeyer who have attended the Garner high school for the last five months, returned home last week.

We neglected to state last week that Mrs Wm. Greiman gave a party on the evening of March 10th, in honor of her daughter Nellie's eighteenth birthday. It was in all respects a most enjoyable affair.

German school started in the Reform church Monday and has consequently taken a good number of pupils from some of the district schools. Leaving the public school to attend German school seems like robbing Peter to pay Paul.

We noticed in last week's Garner Herald that on Saturday the farmers came to town in large numbers and that both sides of State Street was lined from end to end with big fat teams. We would like to inform the editor that if he were to visit the Germantown M. E. church some Sunday he would find the most of those big fat teams tied to the hitching posts, with horse blankets on, made to order to cover their huge frames.

1,000,000 DEATHS!

From Cholera During the Past Year.

The Germs of this Fatal Disease are Lurking Everywhere! Thousands of Dollars Saved by this Wonderful Discovery.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars has been lost in the poultry business on account of the devastation among the flocks, caused by cholera, roup, gape and other fatal diseases. There have been many remedies advanced but none seem to be so successful as the American Poultry Mixture. This will cure chickens in the last stages of cholera or roup, and is excellent for gapes. Do your fowls suffer from violent diarrhea, dropping of the wings, stupor or excessive thirst? These are the first symptoms of cholera. Cholera is a germ disease and being infectious spreads rapidly through the entire flock. Take time by the forelock; don't stop to experiment with unreliable or untried remedies. Use this mixture at once and the sanitary measures they recommend in connection. Don't give the fowls up. Cholera is a terrible disease but this remedy cures it every time. It is also guaranteed for roup, which can be told by hoarse breathing, swelled eyes, discharge at the nostrils resembling catarrh. Fifty dollars is offered for any case the mixture will not cure. If some of your fowls are diseased it will prevent the rest from catching it. Try it. It is cheap, reliable and effective; a scientific preparation; goes more than three times as far as any other remedy; does more good than all of them combined. It is used and indorsed by the most experienced and largest breeders of plain and fancy poultry in all parts of the world. The manufacturers guarantee every package or refund purchase money. If your druggist don't sell American Poultry mixture, he's behind the age. In that case send $1.00 for sample box to American Manufacturing Co., Terre Haute, Indiana,

NEW CHAIR CAR SERVICE.

Between Watertown, Ellsworth and Chicago via. B. C. R. & N. Ry. Commencing Sunday Nov. 19th, a free reclining chair car will be placed on trains Nos. 608 and 605 between Watertown and Chicago by the Burlington Cedar Rapids & Northern Ry. This car leaves Watertown daily, except Sunday at 11:15 a. m. arriving at Chicago 7:59 the following morning. This car runs to and from Sioux Falls Sundays, thus giving daily chair car service between Ellsworth and Chicago. Passengers going east from Chicago will have ample time to make any transfers to connect with all morning eastern trains.

These trains are very fast, and, with this new additional service, passengers can feel assured of first class accommodations. JNO. G. FARMER, Cedar Rapids, Ia.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

W. R. Bloom and wife were at Estherville over Sunday.

H. W. Schoper transacted business at Garner Friday last.

Hogs wanted six days in the week at W. R. Bloom's yards.

A. Arnold was looking after business matters at Garner Friday.

J. C. Forest, of Garner, was transacting business in Klemme Tuesday.

Germania will vote a five per cent tax for the B., C. R. & N. extension.

Wm. J. Mundt, of Garner, was transacting business in town Tuesday.

Wm. Lau, Lew Lewis and ye editor were transacting business at Garner, Monday afternoon.

S. W. Merten and Mr. Simcox were in Klemme on business wednesday. They drove down from Garner.

Mrs. J. C. Forest, of Garner, visited Friday and Saturday with relatives and friends in Klemme the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Bloom.

J. L. Harr is out with a new advertisement for spring trade. It is the season for cleaning house and you can find all the necessary requisites at his drug store.

There is no one thing that is doing more to keep up the reputation of Klemme as a business point than our grain and stock buyers. Messrs. W. R. Bloom and Aug. Lau & Son are all right.

The south bound passenger train was delayed several hours Monday evening all on account of the engine bursting a cylinder head and blowing out of a flue, a few miles out of Thompson.

With Kanawha, Goodell, Garner, Crystal Lake, Woden and Klemme in favor of Garner for the county seat, we wonder where poor old Britt expects to get her support.

W. H. Potter, the life insurance fiend, of Britt, was rustling up business in Klemme a couple of days last week. For a radiator of thought, and rapid manipulator of the English language he is "the whole thing."

The morning service of the quarterly meeting services was well attended last Sabbath in Klemme. Rev. Paterson gave an excellent address. Three accessions were made to the church with a promise of more in the future.

Henry Lau has the agency for the Hartfelder patent buggy top protector which we mentioned in these columns a few weeks ago. When you are in town, if you have a top buggy, call at the store and examine the sample. It is simple, yet effective, and well worth the prices asked.

Lee O. Wolf, who for the past half year has had charge of the Titonka Topic, announces in last week's issue that he has purchased the Topic of Mrs. Salisbury and will 'go it' on his own hook. Editor Wolf is giving Titonka people a good paper, and they seem to appreciate it.

There is just a possible chance that the business men of surrounding towns are better ad writers—at least they are putting out every inducement for trade. The home paper is the index of the town,—is your name written there.

Rolla Steele, of Garner was in Klemme last evening exhibiting his new gas lights for house or street lighting. The street lamp is a beauty and believe it would be money well spent if the town would purchase a few for our streets.

Geo. H. Ray, who was arrested last October at the home of Fran'k Schuldt and taken to Mo. to be tried for murder, has had his trial and was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary and to pay a fine of $1000.

Three tickots in the field. Two caucuses were held last Friday night. At the first H. Swartz and W. Klomforth were nominated for councilmen and Fred Ridder for assessor. At the 2d Nels Palmer for councilman and Fred Ridder having withdrawn from the first ticket was nominated for assessor on the third ticket. Let the best man win.

Klemme is keeping up her reputation as a shipping station as the shipment of Tuesday morning will prove. Thirteen cars of cattle and one of hogs in one train load is not so bad. Those who had cars in the shipment are as follows:

Aug. Barz, two cars
Marion Elder, one car
R. M. Day, three cars
J. Hartfelder, one car
Fred Bock, one car
Fred Arnold, one car
Fred Greiman, four cars
W. R. Bloom, one car hogs.

About a dozen of the members of the I. O. O. F. Lodge, of Goodell, came up Thursday to assist at the funeral of Mr. Cassens. Many people scoff at the three-link brethern, and in fact are down on all lodge organizations, but if they knew the feelings which prompts these many little kind acts, they would hold their counsel. No church will do more, or be so prompt in cases of sickness or death as members of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Editor Wolfe of the Titonka Topic, was on the south bound train Monday evening headed for Kentucky. While in conversation with him he kept humming "She was bred in old Kentucky," and appeared a bit nervous. We questioned him as to the wherefore of that far away whichness. Blushing—yes, actually blushing, he reached into his inside pocket and showed us a return trip pass, good for two. He was on his way to Kentucky for his bride. Mr. and Mrs. Wolfe will be at home Saturday and the TIMES wishes them joy and prosperity.

Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Butterfield of Goodell, were greeting friends in Klemme Tuesday.

A year ago last Saturday the Klemme Creamery Co., were paying 13 cts. for cream. At the last meeting the checks were drawn at 17cts. The company have out as many teams now as they had last June, and are doing a third moae business. The patrons of the creamery are satisfied and new ones are being added every week.

Grandfather Ell is lying at the point of death, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. Griewe in German township. A bad cold developed bronchitis, together with his age, which is 84, will probably be more than his constitution will stand, although the relatives hope against hope that he will be spared to them yet a little while.

School Entertainment.

Come one, come all,
Both great and small,
To see both soldier and fairy;
Don't be rash, for we need some cash
For books for our 'library.'
On March twenty-nine,
Be it rain or shine,
We'll do our best,
And with you it will rest
If oou wish with us to tarry.
We have pieces and song
To help us along,
Also, 'just before taking and after,'
That itself will cause lots of laughter.
Your interest will not lag
When you see the drill with the flag
And other numbers to numerous to mention,
So please give this your undivided attention.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.

GARNER.

Court still grinds out justice.

Sam Sturgeon has left our city and become a resident of Clarion.

J. J. Upton has returned from Missouri to attend to business affairs hereabouts.

C. P. Munger of Algona, was working insurance among our people the first of the week.

A number of teachers are in the city taking examination at the Co., Superintendent's office.

Rev. F. L. Hanscom and family have returned from Blue Earth, Minn., where they have been visiting the reverend gentleman's father.

S. S. Williamson returned from Oklahoma, last week, where he had been with purchasers for land. All those who have been there report a very fine country and climate.

Judge Clyde came over to hear arguments on a motion for decree of injunction on the pleadings in the court house case Saturday. Britt motion for injunc was overruled.

Clarence Chase expects to start for New York City about April 5, at which place he will join his uncle whose private secretary he will be at the former's mining interests in Arizona.

At the school election last Monday there were two tickets in the field. The fatal number of 278 votes were cast and E. C. Abbey and H. M. Hoag were elected directors and M. B. Coo per treasurer.

Great opportunity offered to good, reliable men. Salary of $15 per week and expenses for man with rig to introduce our Poultry Mixture and Insect Destroyer in the country. Send stamp, American Mfg. Co., Terre Haute, Ind.

It is said that Doctor Brackett is contemplating writing a book on parliamentary law. If the worthy doctor's rulings on motions and questions before him at the democratic caucuses are a sample of what his book would be, the volume would contain many new and startling doctrines of parliamentary usages.

Miss Maidie Barnes, who for the past five years has been deputy postmistress at the Garner post office, has resigned her position. All the patrons of the post office will regret this very much as Miss Barnes was the most courteous, affable and well qualified official Garner ever had in the post office. She expects to visit relatives in Indiana.

The democratic caucus held at the City Hall Wednesday night placed in nomination the following candidates for city offices.

Mayor, C. H. Burke.
Clerk, W. J. Mundt.
Councilmen, John Murray and William Tierney.
Assessor, Frank DeGraff.
Treasurer, Geo Schuler.

All of the candidates nominated except Schuler, refused to run and filed their withdrawal with the city clerk. The committee filled the vacancies as follows: Mayor, Frank DeGraff; Clerk, A. Malleck; Councilmen, R. Lovell and Martin Papousek; Assessor, Rob't Elder.

The republicans held their city caucus Tuesday evening at Bell hall. It was the largest caucus ever held in Garner says the old wheel horses who have been in politics in Hancock county for years There was considerable of a rivalry between two factions, and that accounts for the unprecedented number of voters present. The number of votes cast for Mayor was 143, W. H. Ramsey receiving 77 and M. B. Cooper 66. The balance of the ticket is as follows: For clerk, D. J. Strauss; councilmen, Jas. Bohen and Ed. Schuler; Treasurer, C. Knoop; Assessor, Thos. Fotherinfham. It is a good ticket.

GOODELL

Bert Smith is at Emmettsburg.

Corydon Butterfield is at work for George Mickish this week.

Mrs. Wm. Cashman returned home from Illinois. Her health is some better.

E. J. Bauman has rented the Parker building to store machinery in for the ensuing year.

A sale at the Ellwood farm on March 22nd. All kinds of farm machinery and live stock will be sold.

Miss Belle Smith returned from her visit to her parents at Grover the latter part of last week.

Miss Forrest will conduct her millinery and dress making business in the Butterfield building this summer.

The dance Friday evening at the Opera house was quite a pleasant affair. About twenty-seven numbers were sold.

Mrs. Frank Ruka is improving. At one time her life was despaired of. Dr. Gilbert is in attendance, and Mrs. Eskew is nurse.

Quite a number of the brethern of the Odd Fellows Lodge of this place paid the last tribute to the memory of the departed brother Cassens, of Klemme.

Mrs. Sandry, who has been ailing for a long time, died Sunday morning, making three deaths in the family in about one year. They are sadly afflicted. The remains will be taken to Clear Lake for burial.

A. J. Weddle took a trip to Des Moines Wednesday. He sold his blacksmith shop to Wm. Christie. In about three weeks A. J. Weddle and father-in-law, O. P. Butterfield, will remove to their new home in Canada.

ELL CENTER.

The weather is changeable these days.

Fred Meyers and Valentine Josten are building an addition to their houses.

Miss Calison closed a very successful term of school in the Gilbert district last Saturday.

Miss Mabel Christie, of Garner, gave her sister, Mrs. Rice, a very pleasant call last Thursday.

Miss Belt closed her school in the Grosbeck district Friday and spent Sunday with friends in Goodell.

The township 'dads' met at the Center school house to transact such business as is brought up for hearing.

James Gilbert and Eddie Haskens who have been attending school in Garner have returned home for vacation.

Frank Meter is building a new house on his farm. We wonder what young lady Frank will choose to occupy it.

Solon Van Hoosen of Clear Lake visited his sister, Mrs. Holmes, last Saturday and returned Sunday afternoon.

Rev. Paterson preached an excellent sermon at Beulah last Sabbath and he was greeted with a large and appreciative audience.

Henry Richards is about the busiest man around here these days. He has to shell corn every day, no matter how stormy the weather, and then can not shell for all that want him.

Miss Monaghen closed her school at Ell Center Friday. A good time is reported by all. The pupils presented the teacher with a beautiful and costly rocking chair as a slight token of the great esteem in which she is held by her pupils.

The sociable Thursday night was well attended and an excellent program was well rendered. The teachers and pupils received great praise for their careful training. Ernest Braund was chosen as auctioneer and the way he sold the baskets would do justice to a professional. It seemed that certain young men desired certain young ladies' baskets and were willing to pay good prices for them and the library fund is $10.25 better off.

MY BEAUTIFUL BABY BOY

Weak Women Made Happy by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound — Letters from Two Who Now Have Children.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It was my ardent desire to have a child. I had been married three years and was childless, so wrote to you to find out the reason. After following your kind advice and taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I became the mother of a beautiful baby boy, the joy of our home. He is a fat, healthy baby, thanks to your medicine."—MRS. MINDA FINKLE, Roscoe, N. Y.

From Grateful Mrs. Lane

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: — I wrote you a letter some time ago, stating my case to you.

"I had pains through my bowels, headache, and backache, felt tired and sleepy all the time, was troubled with the whites. I followed your advice, took your Vegetable Compound, and it did me lots of good. I now have a baby girl. I certainly believe I would have miscarried had it not been for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had a very easy time; was sick only a short time. I think your medicine is a godsend to women in the condition in which I was. I recommend it to all as the best medicine for women."—MRS. MARY LANE, Coytee, Tenn.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

"HOW HAPPY I AM to be able to say that I am free from pain after five years of severe suffering from neuralgia," writes Mrs. Archie Young, 1817 Oaks avenue, West Superior, Wis. "I am so thankful to be able to say that your '5 Drops' is the best medicine I ever got in my life. When I received it from you last November, I used some of it right away. The first dose helped me. It is impossible to explain how I was suffering from neuralgia. I thought no one could get worse and that death would soon come. I was very weak, and I hardly thought I could live to see my husband come back from his daily labor. Now I can say that I am free from pain, my cheeks are red, my appetite is good and I sleep well all night. Many of my friends are surprised, and say they will send for some '5 Drops.'" NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 12.—Senate passed the bill for improvement of Des Moines river banks within limits of the city of Des Moines. The senate also passed the substitute for Lyons's bill which prevents county and municipal corporations from incurring an indebtedness for an amount in excess of one and one-fourth per cent on the actual value of the property within such corporation. Hobart's bill, making it a misdemeanor for any person to practice law who is not a member of the bar, was tabled.

HOUSE.

The house killed the bill providing that the possession of any of the fish or birds named in the bill should be evidence of violation of the law.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 13.—Blanchard's bill increasing the salary of the state mine inspector from $1,200 to $1,500 annually was passed. The senate also passed a bill which provides that any lamps which have been inspected and tested by the state board of health and declared safe for public use, may be used in burning the lighter products of petroleum for illuminating purposes. The bill providing that returns of sales under execution must be made not only in the county where the property is situated, but in which the sale is made was passed. The bill providing that saloons cannot be maintained within five miles of any state educational institution was considered at length, but a vote was not reached.

HOUSE.

House reconsidered the vote by which the committee substitute for the Byers bill on fish and game was lost yesterday afternoon and passed it by a vote of 67 to 20. The house also passed the bill by Cowles for state examination and aid of high schools adopting a course of study meeting the entrance requirements of the State University. Such schools are to receive $400 yearly. The Dows joint resolution for a joint convention Thursday to elect state printer and state binder was adopted.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 14.—The bill prohibiting saloons within five miles of any state educational institution in Iowa, passed the senate by a vote of 29 to 18.

HOUSE

The Ayers bill legalizing petitions of consent in force before October, 1897, came up as a special order in the house this morning and after considerable discussion was referred to the judiciary committee. The senate bill providing for a state library commission was passed, as was also the bill by Dows to allow state and savings banks and loan and trust companies to act as administrators. Jenkins's bill requiring railroad companies to make report of sleeping and dining cars by divisions instead of by the entire line in order to affect better equalization of taxation was passed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 15.—The senate spent all of Thursday in discussion of essentials and non-essentials connected with the Cheshire bills. The first fight was over the question of precedence and the express bill was victorious. Cheshire then spoke in advocacy of the bill.

HOUSE.

The house concurred in the senate resolution for a joint convention at 11:30 to-day to elect state printer and binder, and at that hour the convention assembled in the hall of the house. Bernard Murphy, of Vinton, was elected printer and Howard Tedford was elected state binder, the vote being 110 to 5. The senate bill to create a department of agriculture passed the house. All the committee amendments were defeated. The bill is as passed by the senate, excepting that the year book is to be printed in some Iowa office paying the union scale of wages.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 16.—The senate concurred in the house amendment to the bill for the establishment of a state department of agriculture providing that the year book shall be printed in Iowa offices which pay union wages. Bills were introduced in both houses legalizing drug store permits to sell intoxicating liquors. The Cheshire bill for taxation of express companies was again before the senate nearly all day. On a final vote the bill passed, 43 to 1.

HOUSE.

The house killed the bill by Black of Mills to provide for the election of members of the board of supervisors by the county at large and not by districts, this only to apply in counties having a population of more than 15,000 or less than 40,000. The bill by Temple for the creation of an appellate court to relieve the supreme court was passed, 67 to 22. After the building and loan association bill had been considered for some time a motion to refer it back to the committee was carried. The senate bill for inspection of passenger boats was passed. The bill providing that savings banks may receive on deposits money equal to ten times the amount of their paid up capital and surplus was passed.

SENATE

Des Moines, March 17.—Eight bills were passed at the morning session. Perhaps the most important is the measure by Mullan increasing the law course in the Iowa schools from two to three years. Among others were the following: Increasing the penalty for attempted or accomplished train robbery to life imprisonment; increasing the salaries of the assistants of the state library; the house Soldiers' Home bill, which provides that hereafter soldiers who are inmates of the home may retain all of the pension money paid them monthly, except two classes of inmates. Those having dependent wives or children are to give up half the pension money for their support, and those who have twice been convicted of crime or of breach of rules of the home are to forfeit the entire sum, half of which goes to dependent relatives if any exist. Kendall's bill requiring that superintendents and engineers at coal mines shall pass an examination and hold certificates of competency was passed, as was also Garst's bill to require that on the face of every state warrant there shall be indicated the section of the code under whose authority it is drawn.

HOUSE.

The house passed the bill by Cowles to provide for the appointment of a third appraiser by a judge of the district court when the appraiser of the insurance company and the policy holder sustaining a loss cannot agree within a period of five days. The bill by Shambough to give owners of real estate jurisdiction over game and bees found thereon was defeated.

TAYLOR APPEALS TO PRESIDENT.

Will Send a Committee to Washington to Ask for Intervention.

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 18.—Governor Taylor is said to have prepared a statement making a second appeal to President McKinley. John W. Yerkes, of Danville, and other republican leaders, were called in conference at the executive mansion and the paper was submitted to them. A committee to be headed by Mr. Yerkes is to be sent to Washington to lay before the president whatever message was agreed on by the conference.

Warship for China.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Secretary Long has cabled instructions to Admiral Watson, at Cavite, to send a warship to Taku, China, at the mouth of the Tieho river, to look after American missionary interests that are threatened

DES MOINES, March 19, 1900.

Governor Shaw has sent to the house of representatives his answer to the inquiry regarding his relations with building and loan business and insurance companies of the state. He states that he has no connection whatever with the building and loan interests of the state nor with any other institution over which the governor or executive council has jurisdiction. He states that he is a stockholder and director in the National Life and Trust company, but that his position as a member of the executive council in no way affects this association, as the council has nothing to do with the insurance business of the state.

The house judiciary committee has killed the senate bill by Bishop, providing that when, to avoid prosecution for seduction, a man marries a woman and then deserts her in five years, he shall be imprisoned not more than five years or fined $1,000 and imprisoned not more than a year in the county jail.

Representative Temple, of Clarke county, in an address before the Grant club at its regular monthly meeting, declared that imperialism is here and is here to stay. He advised his republican friends to frankly make this avowal in the coming campaign.

Secretary Ward, of the Commercial Exchange, is in receipt of a letter from Congressman Hull, in which the latter assures the secretary the Des Moines army post bill will pass the senate without any material objection. Mr. Hull will look after the Washington end of the matter, and the committee on location, of which D. B. Lyons is chairman, are diligently looking after a suitable locality. A number of places are in view, but no definite announcement is made. The chairman of the committee has in mind three very desirable tracts of land accessible to the city, any of which can be secured at reasonable figures. It is thought a contract will be closed within the next few months with one of the owners, so that the matter of location will be settled.

Temple's appellate court bill, which has passed the house, provides for an appellate court of three members to have exclusive jurisdiction in all civil cases where the amount in controversy does not exceed $3,000, except in causes where real estate title is involved or the constitutionality of a statute, the validity of an act of a municipal corporation, the construction or validity of a law, divorce suits or proceedings where no money judgment is demanded. No appeal is to be allowed to the supreme court. The judges are to be appointed by the governor as soon as the bill goes into effect and elected at the general election.

A pardon has been issued by Governor Shaw for Ollie Blair, who is at present serving an eight-year sentence for breaking and entering a railroad car. He was sentenced in 1896 by Judge Holmes, of Polk county, and was given the limit on account of previous bad behavior. The pardon given him is good only during good behavior and the pursuance of a proper path in his future life.

The Cheshire bill for the taxation of express companies upon the mileage unit plan, now in force in Ohio and Indiana, passed the senate with but a single opposing vote, although a number of senators filed explanation of their votes, saying they did not approve of the principle of the bill or the method of taxation proposed, but they voted for it because it was absolutely necessary to devise some system of taxing express companies, inasmuch as the present law is inoperative and inadequate. All amendments proposed on the floor were voted down. Senator Lewis sought to amend the bill so that mortgages or bonds of express companies should not be considered in estimating their value for taxation. His position was that the bill proposed to tax not only the stocks and bonds but the property which the stocks and bonds represented, and was therefore double taxation. Senators Cheshire and Junkin opposed this amendment on the ground that the companies would escape taxation by covering their property with mortgages, thus depreciating the value of the stock. Senator Ball moved an amendment to require that the intangible part of the companies' valuation in the state should be considered the same proportion of the entire intangible value that the tangible value in the state was to the tangible value outside the state. Both these amendments were rejected almost unanimously.

France Will Not Intervene.

PARIS, March 14.—A responsible mouthpiece of the French government says:

"As far as France is concerned, she certainly will not take the initiative in offering England mediation, nor will Russia, for the dual alliance is naturally working together in this question. We feel that in the present excited state of public feeling in England and especially as regards ourselves, any step taken by the French government would defeat its own object and instead of opening a way to honorable peace would act as oil on flames and probably only create fresh complications."

THE MORMONS DID IT.

WHAT WE OWE TO BRIGHAM YOUNG'S FOLLOWERS.

They Were the First to Put Into Operation the Idea of Irrigating Arid Regions—Has Grown Into Vast Proportions.

(Boise, Idaho, Letter.)

Criticise the Mormons as you will, they must be credited with the wonderful system of irrigation by which the wastes of the western states have been redeemed. On July 24, 1847, Brigham Young and his little band of pioneers began the construction of the first irrigation canal ever built in the United States.

Irrigation made of Utah's desert wilderness the garden spot of America. It is doing as much for Idaho, where the mountains are so located that ample valleys, and plains of millions of acres, may be easily and economically watered. On the Nile, in Italy, Spain and elsewhere in Europe, irrigation has prevailed for centuries. Indeed, 60 per cent of the world's breadstuffs and cereals are grown by irrigation.

Where "the vine-clad hills and citron groves" around Vesuvius in sunny Italy are found, a great population has been sustained for many thousand years—and the land has never worn out—its wonderful vitality being due to underlying strata of lava which by some curious chemistry renders the soil immortal.

Idaho's wonderfully productive soil covers lava strata deposited by volcanoes long ago extinct. The rejuvenation of the land results not alone from this lava, but from rich fertilizers annually brought to it by the irrigation waters. It is almost an aphorism that land is good where sage brush grows. Marvelous must therefore be the fertility of Idaho, for everywhere the green of the sage is seen. Wheat, corn, oats, barley, alfalfa, timothy, rye, flax, tobacco, broom corn, sorghum, sweet and Irish potatoes, beets, cabbages, hops, and fruits, such as prunes, apples, pears, plums, peaches, cherries, apricots, nectarines, grapes and all of the small bush products, grow profusely. Particularly do the apple, pear and prune attain to perfection in size and flavor.

Alex. McPherson of Boise City realized $600 per acre from apples. Geo. L. Hall of Mountain Home sold $800 worth of peaches from one acre. T. J. Phifer of Boise City realized $900 from two acres of Italian prunes. Instances like these can be multiplied ad infinitum.

But Idaho does not depend entirely upon agriculture. Its mountains are filled with mining camps which furnish a home market for far more agricultural products than the state is now able to produce.

Snake River Valley contains about 3,000,000 acres and some of the finest pastoral scenes there presented are in the midst of gold placer mining operations. Many farmers there realize handsomely for work during spare hours—washing shining powdered gold from the river's bed.

In a state having so many productive portions to select from it is hard to suggest particular locations, but settlers will find room for any number of new homes.

Different state and private agencies are sending out printed information about Idaho. Perhaps the most conservatively prepared matter is that now emanating from the general passenger agent of the Oregon Short Line at Salt Lake City, Utah. This railroad permeates almost every agricultural region in the state and stands ready to furnish to homeseekers every courtesy in the power of its officers.

At the present rate Idaho will soon be as thickly populated as Utah. It is in the same latitude as France, Switzerland, Portugal, Spain and Italy, and its climate is incomparable.

Vast timber areas furnish lumber of excellent quality. Cyclones and destructive storms never occur. The winters are short and people work out doors all the year. The annual death rate is the lowest of any state in the Union.

Verily Idaho is a wonderful state and destined to become the home place of many times its present population.

During the Franco-Prussian War a well-known English correspondent was sent to the front by his paper, and on one occasion Von Moltke sent for him and said: "Mr.——, on such and such a day the German army will perform such and such a movement. If that appears in the—— (naming the paper,) you will be shot." The news did not appear.

President John Quincy Adams once asserted that he would not give fifty cents for all the works of Phidias and Praxiteles, adding: "I hope America will not think of sculpture for two centuries to come." When some one quoted this to William Morris Hunt, he asked, dryly: "Does that sum of money really represent Mr. Adams's estimate of the sculpture of those artists, or the value which he places upon fifty cents?"

CONGRESS.

SENATE.

Washington, March 12.—A resolution by Allen enquiring as to whether request for mediation had been received from the Transvaal and what action had been taken, was adopted. Eighty-six private pension bills were passed. Rawlins of Utah occupied almost the entire time of the session with a legal argument against holding the Philippines.

HOUSE.

Today, for the second time within a week a democrat was unseated in the house and a republican seated in his place. R. A. Wise was given the seat hitherto occupied by W. A. Young, from the Second Virginia district. The urgent deficiency bill, carrying $1,439,000 was passed. A bill extending the placer mining laws, with certain modifications, to Alaska, was passed.

SENATE.

Washington, March 13.—Personal explanations were made today in the senate by Allen of Nebraska and Butler of North Carolina of their positions on the financial question. Both announced their belief in the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1. Turner made an argument against the Porto Rican tariff bill, declaring it unconstitutional.

HOUSE.

The last legislative step in the enactment of the financial bill was taken by the house of representatives to-day, when the conference report on the bill was adopted by a vote of yeas 166, nays 120: present and not voting, 10.

SENATE.

Washington, March 14.—Two arguments were presented to the senate to-day in which almost antipodal positions were taken by the two senators. Teller in a brief speech maintained that the constitution could not extend over territory acquired by the United States, while Turner elaborately contended that the constitution embraced the acquired territory the very moment the United States took permanent possession of it.

HOUSE.

The district of Columbia appropriation bill was taken up in the house to-day and under the latitude allowed members discussed tde Philippine, "open door" and other questions.

SENATE.

Washington, March 15.—The debate on the bill appropriating $2,095,000 for the benefit of the people of Porto Rico, developed a decided difference of opinion, as Jones of Arkansas offered as a substitute for the measure a bill to return the duties to those who had paid them and providing for absolute free trade between the United States and Porto Rico. The bill had not been disposed of when the Quay case was called up. Wellington presented an argument against seating Quay.

HOUSE.

The District of Columbia appropriation bill, carrying $6,608,378, was passed by the house today, and also a bill granting the abandoned Fort Hays military reservation to the state of Kansas for experimental station and normal school purposes.

SENATE.

Washington, March 16.—After a debate, at times spirited, extending over parts of two days, the senate passed the Porto Rican relief appropriation bill. As passed the measure carries $2,095,000, the president being authorized to use that sum "for public education, public works and other governmental and public purposes" in Porto Rico. Allen offered an amendment to the bill declaring that the constitution extends over Porto Rico by its own force, but it was lost by the decisive vote of 36 to 17.

HOUSE.

Only business of minor importance was transacted.

HOUSE.

Washington, March 17.—House adopted a resolution to the memory of the late Senator Hayward of Nebraska, and as a further mark of respect adjourned

BLOEMFONTEIN OCCUPIED

President Steyn Evacuated Free State Capital.

NEW YORK, March 15.—Montagu White confirms the rumors that the Boers will utterly destroy Johannesburg if forced to do so. Pretoria could not be defended, he says, if Johannesburg were permitted to remain.

LONDON, March 15.—The first half of the campaign is over. Lord Roberts arrived at Modder River on February 9. He entered Bloomfontein on March 13. Thus in a little over a month he affected the relief of Kimberly and Ladysmith, the capture of General Cronje and the hoisting of the British flag over the capital of the Free State. All this has been accomplished with apparently trifling losses.

A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Bloemfontein, dated Tuesday evening, says:

"We surprised and outflanked the enemy with irresistible force over night. General French held the enemy north and south of Bloemfontein, while Lord Boberts dispatched a prisoner on parole, threatening to bombard unless the city surrendered. The townsmen became alarmed. President Steyn and the chief members of the executive council fled and proclaimed Kroonstadt to be the capital.

"Steyn fled to Winburg. At last only 3,000 fighting men remained and in the morning many finding themselves so weakened broke their guns. Others fled. The remxant still shelled General French at dawn, but the opposition soon collapsed.

"Eight locomotives and much rolling stock were captured. The Boer organization is collapsing and the breach between the Free Staters and Transvaalers is widening.

"Major General Prettyman has been appointed military governor of Bloemfontein."

To Secure Control of Trusts.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Representative Ray, of New York, chairman of the house committee on judiciary, and at the head of the special sub-committee on trusts, has introduced the following joint resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution:

"Resolved, that the following article be proposed to the legislatures of the several states as an amendment to the constitution of the United States:

"Article XVI. Congress shall have power to regulate and repress monopolies and combinations, to create and dissolve corporations and dispose of their property and to make all the laws necessary and proper for the execution of the foregoing powers. Such powers may be exercised by the several states in any manner not in conflict with the laws of the United States."

HE L'KES WESTERN CANADA.

Duhamel, Jan. 24, 1900.

Dear Sir and Friend—We had a lucky trip, made good connections and got to Wetaskiwin Monday afternoon; stayed there all night, bought a pony and saddle for the boy and hired a three-seated rig for the balance of us, and got home to dinner next day; caught the boys cleaning up and getting ready to come after us. Wednesday the snow was all gone and we had bare ground and bright sunshine for a month, and it has been pleasant weather ever since. The ground is frozen about two feet and about six inches of snow—just enough for good sleighing. We had one cold spell in December. The thermometer went down to 32 below zero, but we did not suffer with the cold at all. We have worked every day all winter, are all well and feeling well; have built a log house 18x18, two log stables 16x18, and are now busy on a well. We have 10 cows, three other cattle and six head of horses. The boys send their best respects to Mr. Huchison, and say they will talk to him enough to pay for not writing when he gets up here; will write you again next spring and tell you all about the winter. We all unite in sending you and family our best wishes and respects and hope this will find you all well.

Yours very respectfully,
(Signed) THOMAS TATE,

There is always more interest in a republican caucus than in a democratic election.

Wm. Orr, Newark, O, says, "We never feel safe without One Minute Cough Cure in the house. It saved my little boy's life when he had the pneumonia. We think it is the best medicine made." It cures coughs and all lung diseases. Pleasant to take, harmless and gives immediate results. J. L. Harr.

EUROPEAN EXCURSION.

The B., C. R. & N. Ry. will start an excursion from the Northeast and Northern part of Iowa to the Christian Endeavor Convention in London, England, and to the Paris Exposition.

Many business men, professional men teachers and those who wish to visit their fatherland will gladly avail themselves of this opportunity. That teachers in our schools and colleges may have the advantage of this rare educational privelege, arrangements have been made with the fine Dominion and Allan Line of steamers. The steamers selected on these lines are the 'Cambroman' of the Dominion, and the 'Tunisian' of the Allan. Both are elegant new steamers and sail direct from Montreal to Liverpool.

The remarkably reasonable rate of $75.00, second cabin, from Montral to London and return, is charged. It is to be remembered that the second cabin on these steamers is equal to first cabin on some other lines, and that the very best people will travel this way. Those desiring to sail from New York can take the 'Furnessia of the Anchor Line On this steamer a rate of $119.84, first cabin, and $74 82, second cabin, from New York to London and return is charged. The 'Cambroman' and 'Furnessia' sail on June 23rd, and the 'Tunisian' on June 30th.

For about $14.00 additional a round trip ticket can be purchased by those wishing to visit the Exposition, from London to Paris and return. It will be necessary to apply at once in order to secure berths, as many will be going over.

Rev. D W. Fahs, D. D. of Independence, who has had experience in excursion work, will have charge of the excursion. Those who contemplate going should address him at once at Independence, Iowa, for particulars

The man who handles the local department of a newspaper learns after due experience not to expect very many expressed thanks for a colum of pleasant things, but he knows as surely as come the seasons that a single line in which there is an unintentional mistake will cause some one to be heard. Also that when he has made pleasant mention 999 times of some person, place or thing, but on the thousandth time he fails to do so, he must not expect to be forgiven. The omission may have been from accident, inadvertence, or even an entire lack of knowledge, it matters not. The simple fact remains that he will be judged on that. He may say good things adout some business man for weeks, but let him make sme mistake and the good things said are forgotten, and that man's businnss is denied him. He may give willing support to a politician for years 'for the good of the party,' and then if instant defense is not made in the most trivial matter, the politician becomes an unrelenting enemy. There may be a column of news and every one but the last one be true, but some one sees the last line only, forgets that printers and editors are like the rest of mankind, liable to make mistakes, and first thing we know fur is flying. Such are facts the public should profit by. Look at and admire the ninety and nine lines, but let the hundredth alone, trusting that it was unintentional.—Clear Lake Mirror.

The editor who can please everyone is not fit for this earth, remarks an exchange, but is entitled to wings. Humane nature is so constituted that some like scandal, some don't; some like to see others ripped up the back, others don't; some like to see fakes exposed, others don't; some like the truth told about them, others dont; some like to take their paper seven or eight years and never miss an issue or pay a cent and get mad and stop when they get a statement of their account, others don't. It is some consolation to know that the Lord himself failed to please everybody while on earth.

The man who invented a perfect method for the culture of memory, forgot his hat. The man who wrote a book instructing mankind how to live a hundred years, died at the age of thirty-eight. The woman who wrote a book to prove there is no death, buried three husbands, and the man who wrote the greatest book on finance died in the poor house. We might add that the man who knew how to run a newspaper better than the editor bought a paper and felt in the sheriff's clutches in nine months by the clock.

W. W. Mayhew, Merton, Wis., says: "I consider One Minute Cough Cure a myst wonderful medicine, quick and safe." It is the only harmless remedy that gives immediate results It cures coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis, grippe whooping cough, pneumonia and all throat and lung diseases. Its early use prevents consumption. Children always like it and mothers endorse it. J. L. Harr.

The ancestral bulbs af the tulips, which give our flower-gardens of today such graceful form aod suqerb color, once came near over-turning the little kingdom of Holland. The national fad for tulips reached the stage of madness, and nearly all other business was neglected in consequence. Everybody was frenzied with the fever to speculate in tulips, and as much as three thousand dollars was paid for a single bulb—the equivalent of many times that sum to-day. "The Flower that Set a Nation Mad," recalling the tulip craze in Holland, will be one of the features in the May Ladies' Home Journal.

John Dillon Coming To Garner.

It is a pleasure te make the above announcement. John Dillon has been before the public a good many years and his great success as a natural comedian has become a matter of history. This name is indelibly impressed upon the minds of those who have witnessed his triumphs in the days gone by. and will always turn out to extend a hearty welcome to him as long as he chooses to appear. This year he has a new play that is meeting with remarkable snccess. It was written by a young author unknown to fame, and is entitled 'Bartlett's Road to Seltzerville.' Mr. Dillon appears as Hiram Jolly, a genial old bachelor. The date of his appearance is fixed for Tuesday, April 10th. He is assisted by a clever company, and will doubtless attract a large attendance, as good amusements have been scarce this winter.

"No family can afford to be without One Minute Cough Cure. It will stop a cough and cure a cold quicker than any other medicine", writes C. W. Williams Sterling Run, Pa. It cures croup, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles and prevents consumption. Pleasant and harmless. J. L. Harr.

The Sirdar's Charm.

The story goes that the Sidar possesses a charm which comes from India, and which brings him luck wherever he tours. That he is one of the luckiest men in Europe goes without saying. Lord Kitchener received a telegram of congratulation from the queen on the fact that Mahdism has now been given its final blow. The Sidar replied, "Your most gracious majesty, the man who does not accomplish his aim is a failure. I have lived to overthrow Mahdism, and the nineteen years I have struggled for its abolition have now been crowned with success. My mission is accomplished."

Library for Children.

Unexpected success has followed the opening in Philadelphia of a children's branch of the public library. It is the first library of the kind in the city, and the children have availed themselves eagerly of the opportunities it offers. Although it has been in existence only three months, there are about 2,400 names registered in its books as regular readers.

NEWS FROM THE CAPITAL

DES MOINES, April 2, 1900.

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 26.—The most important feature of the senate sessions was the passage of the bill by Trewin for the establishment of a municipal code commission for Iowa. The commission is empowered to recodify the laws and report to the next general assembly a bill making needed changes, together with an explanatory report and an analysis of the bill. Among other bills passed were these: Prohibiting future employment of convict labor in this state in making pearl buttons and butter tubs; relinquishing to the federal government real estate hereafter to be ceded for the army post whose location at Des Moines has just been voted by congress; to require coroners and other persons in possession of the bodies of dead people who are unclaimed by friends to report to the state board of health and deliver the bodies to medical colleges, physicians, etc., per the board's order.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 27.—The question of transporting school children to and from the rural schools was discussed by the senate and a bill passed which increases the per capita contingent fund for this purpose from five to ten dollars. The senate then took up as a special order the valued policy law by Brighton. The entire morning session was spent on the measure and in the afternoon it was passed 32 to 13. The ways and means committee measure for the taxation of insurance companies was discussed at length without final action being taken.

HOUSE.

The house passed a bill relinquishing to the government the title of the state to such lands as may be selected for the Des Moines army post, and transacted a considerable amount of routine business.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 28.—The Lister anti-prize fight bill was passed by the senate this morning. Other bills passed were these: Authorizing the executive council to re-assess and relevy taxes held to be invalid; requiring all district and county agricultural societies to make reports according to law on or before the first day of November. The senate also passed the tax bill for state insurance companies by a practically unanimous vote. The bill provides for local taxation of such companies, but affords an opportunity to offset the greater amount of this taxation, and prescribes a 1 per cent state tax on the gross premium receipts, to be considered as an occupation tax. The bill was a committee measure. The new measure, if enacted, will raise about $30,000 taxes, an increase of $12,000.

HOUSE.

Hasselquist's bill, re-enacting the present law relating to representative districts, was passed. Stuckslager's bill, appropriating $50,000 for the erection of monuments to Iowa regiments on the battlefield of Shiloh, came up and after the adoption of amendments providing that the commission may use the unexpended balance of the appropriation, if any, on the state monument, and may cause the regimental monuments to be constructed of granite and bronze, the bill passed. The resolution for final adjournment was reconsidered and Thursday, April 5, was named as the date. Among other bills passed were the following: Appropriating $1,000 for printing the proceedings of the Farmers' Congress; allowing $2,275 for the support of the home for the blind at Knoxville; providing that in counties having a population of 45,000 and over the board of supervisors may fix the salary of deputy sheriffs; requiring the submission of constitutional amendments on separate ballots; providing that the writing of a name on a ballot without marking a cross opposite a blank without writing a name therein, or the unnecessary marking of a cross in a square below a marked circle, shall not affect the validity of the vote.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 29.—The senate passed, by a vote of 40 to 0, the collateral inheritance bill, as suggested by Treasurer Herriott. The reform bill preventing the solicitation of campaign funds from state employes was passed. Hayward introduced a bill which provides for an additional judge in the Seventh judicial district. A bill changing the special assessment laws to conform to the federal and state court decision was passed. The senate, by a vote of 13 to 30, declined to take up the normal school bill out of its order on the calendar, which is equivalent to defeat of the bill.

HOUSE.

Anderson introduced a resolution requesting the senate to return the Porto Rican resolution to the house. It was introduced in hope the house will recede from its action. Hawk's bill to provide for the use of voting machines in Iowa was passed. Bennett introduced a concurrent resolution as a remedy for the five mile limit bill. A resolution for a sifting committee was adopted.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 30.—The senate passed the bill to govern stipulated premium insurance companies. It enables them to reorganize on an old line basis. The house defeated it but a motion to reconsider was filed. The Shiloh monument bill passed without opposition.

HOUSE.

Mr. Bennett called up his resolution requiring the regents of the university and the trustees of the state normal school and state agricultural college to impose a penalty of expulsion for the use of intoxicating liquors, and to report to the next general assembly the number of students, if any, so expelled. Consideration was postponed till Wednesday. A concurrent resolution by Nicolas, asking our members in congress to aid in removing the tariff on all goods handled by trusts was tabled by a party vote. The senate insurance tax bill was passed without amendment. This levies a 1 per cent state occupation tax and practically exempts Iowa companies from local taxation. It will produce about $30,000 annual revenue for the state. The bill giving the dairy commissioner another deputy was also passed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 31.—The senate passed the house bill to legalize saloon petitions in operation since October, 1897, up to February 1, 1900, and legalizing manufacture petitions up to July 1, 1900. The normal school bill was taken up and the report of the committee for its indefinite postponement adopted. This settles the normal school proposition for the Twenty-eighth general assembly. The senate passed the bill to make placing obstructions on the track of street car lines subject to life imprisonment.

HOUSE.

The house was largely occupied with routine business. The most important measure to pass was the Carr bill, to provide for registration prior to school elections, and to apply the Australian ballot to school elections. AcAleer's bill for the regulation of primary elections and caucuses was also passed. Theophilus introduced a bill to prohibit the forming of trusts, pools and conspiracies.

MACHINISTS' STRIKE OVER.

Work to Be Resumed in Chicago and Elsewhere.

CHICAGO, March 31.—A settlement of the strike in the machine shops of Chicago was reached at a conference between the officials of the unions and representatives of the employers. It is a settlement which is to be national in its scope, and under its terms the general strike timed to involve the 150,000 machinists of the country will be averted. Work is to be resumed Monday here as well as in Cleveland, Paterson, N. J., and Philadelphia. The men agreed to return to work pending arbitration of the issues in the controversy.

A dispatch from Lincoln, Neb., says: After the banquet of the Abraham Lincoln club of this city, at which he spoke on the political situation of the country, Governor Shaw of Iowa in an interview called attention to an effort now being made to force a national issue out of the details of an economic measure for supplying revenue for Porto Rico. He did not commit himself as to the wisdom of the details of the bill, but he said it seems likely to be settled speedily and for all time, that the United States can, if it chooses, acquire territory, and congress can legislate for it as it pleases. "The question pending in congress," he said, "is not whether the tobacco and sugar merchants, who now hold the products of Porto Rico in warehouses, shall pay 15 per cent of the Dingley tariff, the same to be appropriated for the relief of the farmers of Porto Rico, who have been compelled to sell at prices dictated by these speculators, but whether, in fact, the United States possesses the inherent power to do whatever it deems wise and expedient, and to manage its newly acquired possessions for the interest of the people thereof in any manner not expressly prohibited by the constitution."

J. F. Vincent, proprietor of the Des Moines Union Stock Yards, has filed a complaint with the Iowa railway commission against the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railway, charging that that railway refuses to receive freight by the car load consigned to the Des Moines Union Stock Yards. Mr. Vincent says that the Rock Island does not desire to have freight brought in from non-competing points to a competing point, here to be redistributed, with the possibility that the Rock Island may lose the remainder of the haul. Mr. Vincent says that stock yards companies have had these contests with railroads in every city where an effort has been made to establish union stock yards, the railroads wanting as few of them as possible.

The settlement of the contest for the federal judgeship to succeed the late John S. Woolson having resulted in the agreement by the Iowa delegation in congress to recommend the appointment of Congressman Smith McPherson of the Ninth district, nearly a dozen candidates for the republican nomination for congress have been proposed to succeed him. The list at present consists of Colonel C. G. Saunders, Judge Walter I. Smith and Ernest E. Hart, Council Bluffs; John W. Foster, of Guthrie county; Senator J. M. Junkin, Red Oak; Lieutenant-Governor Milliman, Harrison county; Representatives H. W. Byers, Shelby county; T. B. Swan, Cass county, and ex-Congressman A. L. Hager, Adair county. Ex-Speaker Byers is the leading candidate.

The house committee on the compensation of public officers reported for passage the bill intended to cut off the salary of the Hon. John Cownie, member of the board of control, as government crop reporter. The bill merely strikes out three words in the present statute. These words are "in the state," and are found in the provision which prohibits members of the board from holding any other lucrative office in the state. The office of state crop reporter is a federal office and so the law would have to be amended to prohibit the holding of it by a member of the board.

The army post committee will commence soliciting funds at once for the purpose of purchasing the ground which it is necessary to present in fee simple to the government before the proposed post will be established in Des Moines. The cost of suitable grounds will be considerable, but there is little question but that the people of the city will respond liberally to the solicitations of the members of the committee for subscriptions. It is the desire of the people of the city that the post shall be established this year, if possible, and to this end the committee will hasten the work of soliciting. After the ground is donated to the government, nothing can be done toward improving it for the purposes of a post until a suitable appropriation is made by congress. The present session of congress is likely to continue until well along in the summer, and the members of the committee are anticipating the possibility of having the title to the ground reposed in the government in time to have an appropriation made by congress this year.

Mrs. Eldora A. Kirscher has brought suit in the district court to break the will of her father, Elijah Jones, late of Polk county, which has been probated. The estate of the deceased is valued at about $22,500 and Mrs. Kirscher seeks to have it properly divided between herself and her sister, Mrs. Cornelia Todd, and the widow of the deceased, Mrs. Eliza Anna Jones. The suit is entitled Eldora A. Kirscher vs. Mrs. Eliza Anna Jones, administratrix, Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Cornelia Todd. The will which has been probated as the last will and testament of the deceased bequeaths all of the property of Elijah Jones to his widow. It is claimed by the plaintiff in the suit which has been commenced that the will is not the last will and testament, that it has not been properly signed nor witnessed and that it was secured through the machinations of the widow.

The town of Marshfield, in Massachusetts, does not believe in prohibition, so it has placed the fee for a liquor license at $1,000,000.

The kaiser's request of the reichstag for an increased personal allowance recalls the fact that King William I. saved about $250,000 a year on a stipend of $2,000,000.

Senator Hoar's jokes take a classic turn. He recently declined a dinner invitation on the ground that after dining he spoke only Greek, while he knew his host understood only Persian.

"It is a disgrace to die rich," said the sociological student. "Maybe so," answered his chum, "but I'd be willing to take chances on being able to exonerate myself."

Horses used for pleasure in Russia have around the neck a stout thin cord with a running noose. When the animal starts to run away a jerk on the cord halts him like magic, as the horse instantly stops when the cord presses his windpipe.

Competent authorities assert that South America has greater undeveloped resources than any other section of the world. Any crop grown elsewhere can be duplicated there, and the country abounds in mines of coal, silver and gold; most of which have been only slightly developed.

A novel cure for corns has been tested by L. L. Johnson, a retired merchant, of Winsted Depot, Conn. For years he had been troubled with corns, and all the remedies he had tried had failed to give relief. With a chisel and mallet he cut off three of the afflicted toes.

Squirrels are numerous in Madison, Wis. They are so tame that they sit on the park benches beside the human sojourners, and are often seen dodging the trolley cars. There is an unwritten law that they must not be harmed by any one, and even the boys respect this law.

Evans Weed, a wealthy farmer of Newfield, Conn., will petition the legislature to change his name to Adam, after which he will transform his large farm into a duplication, as far as may be, of the garden of Eden. Then he will advertise for some woman, named Eve, to be his consort.
